Blood supply dangerously low; Red Cross appeals

The American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Blood Service Region, has issued an emergency blood appeal, citing dangerously low supplies of blood in the Detroit area and across the country. The quantities of certain blood products will be depleted in less than one day.

"Our region's blood inventories are rapidly approaching zero level," said Greg Vasse, American Red Cross CEO for Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region. "We have more demand than blood on the shelf with no sign of relief. Without a community-wide response to increase our local blood supply, some hospitals may have to cancel elective surgeries. The need for O type and B type in particular is urgent." In southeastern Michigan, the Red Cross distributes an average 136 units of B type blood, and 400 units of O type blood a day. As of this writing, the Red Cross had 50 units of B type and just 31 units of O type.

"As quickly as we collect, we are shipping the units to area hospitals. Under normal circumstances we can rely on other Red Cross regions around the county to help meet the demands here in southeastern Michigan, but at this time there are seven other Red Cross regions in similar situations. Shipments of O and B type blood has been cut back," Vasse said. "These imports are critical in meeting the needs of patients in our area hospitals."

The Red Cross is asking people in the community to call (800) GIVELIFE to donate blood. Help maintain an adequate blood supply for Michigan residents. Your donation could mean a lifetime of memories to someone in need. Donating blood takes less than an hour and is relatively painless. You must be at least 17 years old and in good health.

Log cabin dedication

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society invites the community to celebrate Log Cabin Day by attending an open house and dedication of its newly restored circa-1940 log cabin on Sunday, June 25, at 1 p.m. The cabin is located on the grounds of the society's Provencal-Weir house at 376 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms.

City wants county funds for Jefferson

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe, a year ahead of schedule, will receive funding for the purpose of making much-needed repairs on Jefferson.

While Jefferson is one of the busiest streets in the City of Grosse Pointe, it's also a county road, meaning Wayne County is responsible for its upkeep. But it's just one of many county roads. That meant when it came to funding, there were a lot of roads in other Wayne County communities ahead of Jefferson.

Grosse Pointe's representative on the County Commission is Chris Cavanagh, who also serves on the commission's road committee. Pressure was placed on Cavanagh by officials in the Pointes to come up with money for Jefferson and Lakeshore.

When Cavanagh appeared before the City's council on Monday, June 19, he said he might have a way to get Jefferson paved a year early.

Cavanagh said that the federal government has a program that provides 80 percent of the funding needed to repair roads. The county provides an additional 10 percent, with the municipality in question providing the final 10 percent of funding.

Roads are repaired on the basis of a federal formula that determines which roads are in most need of repair. According to this formula, said Cavanagh, the City's portion of Jefferson is scheduled to be repaired in the summer of 2002. But Cavanagh said that he has come up with a way to get the work done in 2001.

By agreeing to what is called an advanced construction program, the City can move up the timetable on road work. The City would pay for 100 percent of the construction costs for work done in 2001 and would receive 90 percent of the costs in the year 2002, said Cavanagh.

The deadline for agreeing to participate in the program, Cavanagh said, is the end of July. In order to be ready for spring 2001 construction, engineers must come up with construction plans. Grosse Pointe Park will receive funding from the county to fix Jefferson and money could be saved by both cities working together.

Mayor Susan Wheeler said she was not very happy with Cavanagh's suggestion. She said the Park is getting money for 2001 construction, why should the City wait.

"This makes me feel like a poor relation," Wheeler said. "Also, we are a small city that has to watch its pennies very carefully. You said the cost of repairing the 7 miles of Jefferson in the City would be around $350,000. That's a lot of money for us. We would lose a lot of money in terms of interest we could make by keeping that money in the bank."

Cavanagh, when asked, said he didn't know when the City would be reimbursed. Nor did he know when, if the City agreed to the plan, they would have to make payments. He said he would have to explore the details and get back to City officials about deadlines and what the City would have to do to participate in the program.

Councilman Peter LaFond said he would feel more comfortable with Cavanagh's statements about protecting the Pointes from the problems created by riverfront casinos if he could take care of the 7 mile stretch of Jefferson in the City.

Cavanagh said it wasn't a matter of clout. If it were, Jefferson would be paved. The problem was the rigid federal formula that determines priorities.

Other councilmembers expressed the opinion that Grosse Pointers pay a lot in county taxes and don't seem to get a lot of county service back.

That was unfair, said Cavanagh, because while other communities do get county money for parks and such, every time the county makes an improvement to the airport, Grosse Pointers benefit. Money doesn't have to be spent in Grosse Pointe for Grosse Pointers to benefit.

The City council meets in July and Wheeler asked Cavanagh to work with City staffer Brian Vic and communicate all the relevant details of the advanced construction plan so the council could make an informed decision on participating.

Farms teens honored by G.P. Lawyers Auxiliary

The 1999-2000 Grosse Pointe Lawyers Auxiliary Concerned Citizen Award was recently presented to four teens who helped rescue a senior citizen who had fallen and couldn't get up.

Farms public safety Detective Michael D. McCarthy nominated the youths, calling their judgment and quick action "outstanding and mature."

Their efforts in helping and calming the victim, as well as calling 9-1-1, were truly com-

Jefferson in Grosse Pointe Park to be fixed in spring

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Engineering designs are being drawn for the repair of East Jefferson in Grosse Pointe Park. Work should begin in the spring of next year.

The Park will pay $90,200 toward the project's anticipated $1,037,000 cost. The bulk of construction will be paid by the federal government.

John Roach, a spokesman for the Wayne County department of public services, said the street will remain open during three to four months of construction.

Park Mayor Palmer Heenan considered holding off the work until 2002, when Jefferson in the City of Grosse Pointe is scheduled for a makeover.

"We want to work in concert with our sister city," he said. "It's more efficient."

County officials felt the same way. Roach said his department "offered the City to advance construction (of Jefferson from Cadieux to Fisher) one year. They didn't bite."

The deal hinged on the City fronting the county a few hundred thousand dollars. The funds would be paid back, less interest, by the federal government in 2002 according to the regular construction schedule.

Like Heenan, Roach said combining projects would save money while being less of a bother to motorists. Either way, the cost to the Park would be the same.

Park councilman Greg Theokas wanted construction to start whether the City joined in or not.

"Fix it (Jefferson) now," he said. "Strike when you can."

Councilman Daniel Clark echoed his colleague. He wanted construction finished "as quickly as possible."

The council persisted and, with members Stephen Safranek and Margo Parker absent, convinced Heenan to move forward on the project.

Christopher Cavanagh, the Grosse Pointes' representative on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, said roads are repaired according to riding condition, from rough to smooth.

The county classifies road surfaces according to a five-color code system. Purple is very good, green is good, yellow is fair, red is worse and orange poor.

Cameron Priebe, Wayne County director of public service, said Jefferson in the Park and City is an orange, or poor, road. The rating changes to purple, or very good, in the Farms.

In 1997, according to Roach, the county offered to repave Jefferson in the Park and City ahead of schedule.

Terms called for the cities to advance 50 percent of construction costs interest-free, with the promise of reimbursement from Washington according to the original construction timetable.

"No one accepted the offer," said Roach. "Jefferson could have been done by now if the cities were willing to essentially loan the federal government money for a year or two."

In another local road project, the county in late August will start repaving Moross from Mack to Ridge. Work should be finished by the end of the year. The job was moved ahead from next year.

"We bent over backwards to make sure we got to it this year," said Roach.

If the county can repave Jefferson from Alter to Moross next year, "the only county road that would be in poor condition would be a small piece of Mack south of Moross, and Kelly from Seven to Eight Mile," said Roach. "Everything else would be in very good condition."

Woods Fireworks on Sunday, June 25

Fireworks company will blast off 2,700 shots

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Organizers are continuing to fine-tune preparations for the annual Fourth of July fireworks display in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The event is scheduled to begin shortly after 10 p.m. on Sunday, June 25, on the field of Parcels Middle School.

The event kicks off at 7 p.m. with Master of Ceremonies Mark "Doc" Andrews calling the shots. The Sun Messengers will play big band music.

Vendors licenses have been issued to the Grosse Pointe Woods/Shores Little League, Kiwanis Club and Grosse Pointe Rotary Club. The groups will be on hand to sell food and refreshments at Parcels field.

Melrose Pyrotechnics of Indiana has been retained for the show.

The company plans to shoot off about 2,700 shells ranging in diameter from 2 1/2 inches to 10 inches.

The company has provided Woods officials with proof of a multimillion dollar insurance policy in case of an accident.

Sponsors of the 2000 fireworks celebration include the Edmund T. Ahee Jewelry Company, Chicken Shack, Comerica, Curis Brothers Big Boy, Farmer Jack, Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue, Grosse Pointe Park, Grosse Pointe Woods, the Little Blue Book, Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth Jeep Inc., the Lochmoor Club, Mr. C's Car Wash, the Jim Saros Agency, St. John Health System and Supreme Heating and Supply Company.

Additional sponsors have hung banners on the Parcels fence.

The fireworks' rain date is Monday, June 26, after 10 p.m.

Weather causes power outage, Edison causes water break

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

As a result of bad weather, some residents along Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores lost power during the afternoon of Tuesday, June 13. As a result of Detroit Edison's repair efforts, many of those same residents lost water service as well.

Grosse Pointe Shores director of public works Brett Smith said the village received a call at 4:10 p.m. on June 13 concerning a downed wire. The public safety department secured the scene until a Detroit Edison crew arrived to repair the damage.

"They decided to replace the utility pole," said Smith. "That's unusual. I've seen them put a splint on the pole and come back later, sometimes weeks later, to put in a new pole."

The department received its next call at 12:50 a.m. Wednesday morning, said Smith. This time it was about a water main break.

"Normally Detroit Edison crews call MISS-DIG, which is an organization that keeps a record of where all the underground utilities are, so that when they dig they don't hit a water main or cut through a phone or cable line," Smith said. "This time, for some reason, they didn't do it. As a result, they cut a hole in the water main."

"Once we received the call, we called MISS-DIG and brought in the Shores water department to make the needed repairs."

Smith said that water main breaks aren't that unusual and as a result, the department keeps extra pipe around to speed up repairs. Unfortunately, the department had to wait for Edison to provide a special clamp truck that could hold up the utility pole while the Shores water workers repaired the pipe.

"It could have been worse," said Smith. "We only had about four households to notify. Before you can repair a water main, you have to turn off the water. Before you turn off the water, you have to notify the affected parties. It's a lot easier to notify four households instead of an entire subdivision."

The department didn't shut off the water main until they were ready to repair the pipe, Smith said.

So affected residents weren't without water for much more than an hour or two.

Local attorney raises funds, awareness for safety issues

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

In jest, Ronald Gilbert says his involvement with the Foundation for Aquatic Injury Prevention (FAIP) and the Foundation for Spinal Cord Injury Prevention Care and Cure (FSCIPCC), both of which he is chairman of, is designed to put himself out of business.

Gilbert is a litigation attorney.

But despite the seven-figure settlements most litigation attorneys would salivate over, Gilbert talks about some of his clients with profound sadness.

There's the University of Georgia freshman who was a starting lineman for the school's football team and can no longer shrug his shoulders after playfully lunging after his girlfriend at the side of a pool.

Or the man who suffered burns over 80 percent of his body in a motorcycle accident, then broke his neck in an airplane accident.

Or the brain injured woman in Cleveland who is cognizant of everything going on around her, but lives in a nursing home and is fed through a stomach tube and is on a respirator.

The saddest thing, he says, is "most of these accidents are preventable."

Gilbert, who has specialized in drowning and spinal cord injury cases since the late 1970s, was a founding member and chairman of the Aquatic Injury Safety Group, an attorney litigation association. He parted ways after six years after he claimed he wanted to advocate prevention while the other attorneys felt such a stance would take business away from them.

In 1988 he started the FAIP. The FAIP focuses on education of water safety through signs, public information and publications; was instrumental in the creation of a registry of aquatic injuries in Michigan, and provides informational exchange for families struck by aquatic injury tragedies.

In the past year, Gilbert has created the FSCIPCC, an expansion from the original Foundation for Spinal Cord Injury Prevention established in 1988.

Like the FAIP, the FSCIPCC's focus is on public awareness and education programs. The Care component is dedicated to provide improved care and care-related information for persons disabled by spinal cord injuries. The FSCIPCC's web site (www.fscip.org) has a comprehensive care page that provides information on a wide variety of topics from accepting help, medical and mental health issues to driving and clothing adaptations. The Cure component's goal is to raise $1 million for spinal cord injury research. The FSCIPCC also provides access to free consultations by various professionals.

Right now, a cure for spinal cord injuries is far from sight ("I don't believe spinal cord injury people will walk in the foreseeable future," Gilbert said.) and so is the $1 million research fundraising goal. But as he tells spinal cord and aquatic injury patients, "You need to set goals and try to accomplish something. You need to break it down into baby steps."

Gilbert spends much of his time with the foundations granting interviews, publishing articles and speaking on safety issues with groups like the American Red Cross, the National Recreation and Parks Association and the National Safety Council.

A walking atlas of aquatic and spinal cord injury facts, Gilbert can rattle off statistics off the top of his head like:

- Eighty percent of diving accident victims are young males between the ages of 16 and 31.

- The No. 1 cause of spinal cord injuries is auto accidents. Falls are the No. 2 cause, followed by gunshots and athletic events.

- Most backyard diving pool accidents occur while hitting the side slope of the pool. "It's not that they're not deep enough, they're not long enough," Gilbert said.

For fun, Gilbert says he doesn't care for swimming, but prefers bike riding. He bikes about 60 minutes a day, seven days a week. He also power boats and sails during the summer and plays platform tennis in the winter.

As a newly single man, Gilbert has jumped back into the dating pool. Coincidentally, he said he has plans to meet a woman who enjoys swimming with dolphins in the Caribbean.

Hopefully, they're both making a splash, safely.

Safe diving rules

Never dive head-first into five feet of water or less.

Always jump feet-first on your initial plunge, even if you think it's safe to dive.

Never dive head-first into an above-ground pool.

Never dive off the sides of diving boards, ladders or pool equipment.

Always swim with a buddy.

Never drink and dive or swim.

Myths and facts about drowning

Myth: Children can be "drown proofed" or be made "water safe."

Fact: No person, especially a child, is ever totally safe around the water. Supervision around the water is essential.

Myth: My child is safe for a few minutes while I answer the phone, cook dinner, read the newspaper, etc..

Fact: Permanent brain damage and death occur within four to six minutes of loss of oxygen to the brain as in water submersion.

Myth: Most child drownings occur in public pools.

Fact: Drownings occur in a variety of water settings such as bathtubs, toilets, backyard pools, canals and streams. Most are unsupervised.

Myth: My child is safe at the public pool. The lifeguards will watch him/her.

Fact: Lifeguards are responsible for maintaining safety in and around a water facility and for responding to emergencies. They cannot babysit.

But I already have a couch!

By Kelly Fordon

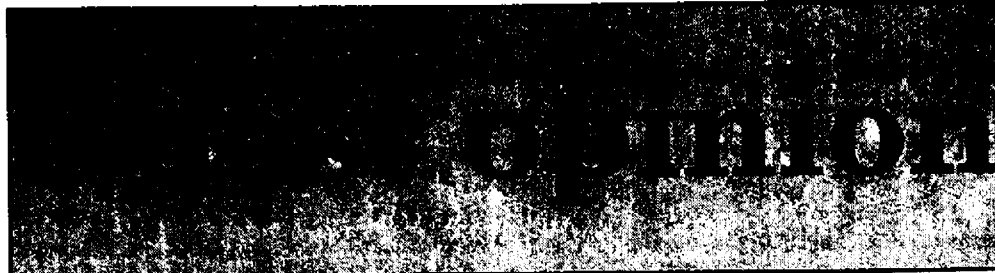

Last week Purple Heart called me and asked whether I had any donations to make. I said, "Sure," and decided that this was just the kick in the pants I needed to clear out all of the old books and clothes that have been clogging up the house.

But as the piles grew and the book boxes threatened to take over the living room, it occurred to me that I could probably rake it in if I had a garage sale. I started tallying up the goods, but before I had finished, Purple Heart arrived.

After they had carted it all out, one man turned to me and said, "We appreciate your help."

My help? It struck me then: Until he said that, I had not considered the fact that someone might actually need my old green cardigan. I was spending too much time calculating how much my old stuff was worth so I could make money, run to the store and buy myself some more.

Two days later a friend complained to me about some "scary-looking" people she saw searching through the garbage cans outside of Kroger in the Village. She said she went right in to the manager and asked him to get rid of those people, whom she saw as a threat to the neighborhood.

The manager said, "Oh, they're here everyday. They don't mean any harm. They're just hungry." This woman went on to say that Kroger should chase them away because she had read the statistics, and the statistics show the majority of homeless in America choose to be homeless.

"You've got to be kidding me!" I said. I couldn't believe that anyone could be so callous, and I was especially perturbed because this is a woman I really like and admire. Then I realized that she grew up in this area and has never been exposed to homeless people on a daily basis.

I grew up in Washington, D.C., where you could never walk more than a block without seeing a homeless person. There were homeless people who were no more than children, homeless people so old you couldn't make out their eyes through their wrinkles, bands of homeless who lived under the bridges.

There was a homeless man who called himself "Sky King" and walked the streets of Georgetown singing show tunes. One time I even saw a woman sitting on a street corner who bore an uncanny resemblance to my mother, and who had penned a sign which read, "My husband beat me, and then he threw me out."

Who knows whether that was true. The point is that whether a person accepts or rejects shelter, whether they accept or reject medication, whether they are on the street because they are frightened of the shelters or simply their own abusive parents, they are often still hungry enough to search the garbage for food. In my opinion, we ought to feel bad about that, not disgusted.

We're lucky to live in such a nice neighborhood. Our children are safe; we are all blessed with decent housing; for the most part, people are extremely caring and friendly.

But I think I've learned a lesson from this woman's comment and I'm glad she made it. I'm not going to forget the less fortunate just because I'm not confronted with them every day. When I look back on it, I think we probably should have discussed how to make sanitary food donations, rather than reproach hungry people for garbage picking.

That day that I tallied all my potential earnings, I was just as self-centered as the woman who railed on the hungry people at Kroger. I wasn't thinking about anyone but myself and whether I could earn enough for a new couch.

Now I try to remind myself that I have a couch! I have food, clothing and a nice, warm house. It's about time I gave something back.

As my sports-detesting roommate said, "All you have to be is breathing to have heard of Tiger Woods."

Under his Nike swoosh shirt may well be a Superman costume, for Woods is rapidly closing in on a career grand slam at the age of 24. Woods took the U.S. Open by a record 15 strokes Sunday.

He is the first player to lead that tournament wire-to-wire since Tony Jacklin of Great Britain did the trick in 1970, well before Woods was born.

Winning by 15, he obliterated the old record of 11 set by Willie Smith in 1899. 1899!

The margin of victory is the biggest in the history of golf majors - Old Tom Morris won the 1862 British Open by a mere 13 shots.

His 272 total also tied the lowest score ever in a U.S. Open, also done by Jack Nicklaus in 1980 and Lee Janzen in 1993.

All Woods has to do now is win the British Open to complete his career grand slam.

If he wins at St. Andrews, Scotland July 20-23, he will become the youngest, and just the fifth in history, to collect the Grand Slam of winning all four professional majors in a career.

Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Nicklaus and Gary Player are the other four players to win the Grand Slam.

Fans and amateur golfers are not alone in their awe of what Woods has accomplished in his young career.

It speaks volumes that the top golfers in the world are actually admitting that if Woods is playing well, it's just a battle for second.

"He's certainly out there in a league of his own in pretty much every aspect of the game now," said John Huston, who finished a distant fourth Sunday.

"Tiger Woods is the man, plain and simple," said Rocco Mediate.

Ernie Els, who has won majors and is considered one of the best golfers in the world, said, "You want those four Grand Slam titles and that's my goal in life. But with Tiger Woods to contend with, I've got a pretty tough job ahead of me for the next 10 years."

Huston, Mediate and Els have figured out that trying to catch a Tiger by the tail is no easy task.

That may not make the other golfers happy but it does please NBC executives.

Sunday's 8.8 big market overnight rating was the highest for the U.S. Open since Nielsen started recording ratings in 1975.

When Woods won the 1997 Masters, he had the highest overnight rating ever for that event with a 15.8.

What is perhaps the most frightening thing for those hoping to beat Woods at what is right now, his game, is the fact that Woods thinks he can improve.

"I am going to try and get better," said Woods. "You're always trying to work on things in this game trying to get a little better...new equipment, new techniques, something. I know there are a few things I'll continue to work on."

Footnotes on Mariners' Church

To the Editor:

The Pointer of Interest article (June 1) on the executive director of Mariners Inn states that it "opened 158 years ago to provide services for working seamen temporarily docked in the port of Detroit." That statement is incorrect.

The organization known as Mariners Inn was founded in 1925 by the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan and called the Detroit Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. The Diocese rented space in a building on Griswold at Woodbridge, streets owned by the board of trustees of Mariners' Church of Detroit, and for several decades the rector of Mariners' Church also served as superintendent of the society's work — the providing of food and shelter to the city's unfortunate and homeless.

It is Mariners' Church of Detroit which was founded in 1842 by the will of Julia Anderson, and the beautiful Gothic stone church, which now stands at the edge of Detroit's civic center, was built in 1849.

Even before the Episcopal Bishop sued the Trustees of Mariners' Church in 1990 in his unsuccessful effort to take over the Church, the Mission Society now called Mariners Inn was trying to take the history of Mariners' Church as its own and also sow confusion in the general public by using "Mariners" in its name.

Copies of legal documents stating the facts of the founding of Mariners' Church of Detroit (1842), its incorporation by the State of Michigan (1848), and judgments entered in Bishop Wood vs. Trustees of Mariners' in the Wayne County Circuit Court (1991) and Michigan Court of Appeals (1994) are available to anyone on request.

All Night Party another success

To the Editor:

Last Thursday, June 15, on a perfect summer evening, we witnessed the passage of 371 young men and women as the Class of 2000 graduated from Grosse Pointe South High School. These extraordinary students have been a credit to themselves and their community.

The celebration continued with the All Night Graduation Party held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. On behalf of the Grosse Pointe South Class of 2000, we sincerely thank the parents, teachers and community businesses who so generously contributed to make the evening a night to remember. The party was a huge success because of all of your efforts, and we could not have done it without you! A special thank you is extended to the staff of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The theme of this year's Sunrise Service was, "The sun shines not on us, but in us." All of the parents, teachers, and community friends have helped to make that true for this class.

Thank you for helping to send these students off in their various directions in a safe, fun-filled way. It was a marvelous ending to their high school years.

Good grads

To the editor:

I've read about the sex scandal and hazing of middle schoolers along with the weekly crime columns of unsupervised, unruly teens.

Let's give a little newsprint to the 95 percent of teenagers we don't read about weekly.

I'm one of 14 class sponsors for Grosse Pointe South's Class of 2000 and I have worked with these fine students for a full year.

I have seen first hand all the hard work and dedication these kids put into all the senior activities. I was there when they made the decision to donate half of their Jingle Bell Fun Run money to Mr. Moebus' son who was in need of a transplant. I was at the Christmas party that was given for the Tutoring Tree which touched many children's hearts. These students were always polite, caring and enthusiastic.

I am so proud of these wonderful young men and women. Thank you for letting me work alongside of you, Grosse Pointe South Class of 2000. It's been a real pleasure.

Pros and cons of camp

There are no cons.

Well, that may sound a bit extreme, but in my humble opinion there are very few circumstances where a child would NOT benefit from some sort of camp experience. The most important reason not to send a child off to camp is the age factor. If a child is sent away at a very young age, he will not be able to adjust and will never want to try camp again. Around age ten is a good time to start, but day camps are a great way to interest youngsters in camping and overnights are an option.

My husband is still devoted to his boyhood camp after 50 years. We visited this hallowed ground in Maine a few years ago and he walked slowly through his old haunts, running his fingers across the initials he had carved on the wall of the dining cabin. He found his signature in the award book and found tired pictures of his fellow campers on the walls. We walked the shoreline where he learned to sail and swim and save lives and for a few hours time stood still. It was a time of reflection and reverence. The years he spent in Maine and the bonds shared there were clearly happy ones.

My brother still speaks of the summers he spent on a ranch in Colorado and of the friendships cemented there for a lifetime. I remember laughing at my mother as she sang her old camp songs well into her 80's.

The youth of today are fortunate to have many differing camp opportunities. There are countless specialty camps where certain skills are taught and honed to near perfection. One can attend a riding camp, a survival skills camp, a sports camp and camps for sick children. There are professionals to guide parents and campers in their choices.

These people can be extremely beneficial in helping us to lead our children down intelligent paths. Not all children are meant for an Outward Bound experience, even though it might please a parent. Perhaps a child would be happier at a music camp. These days individual needs can be met.

The reasons for a child to attend a camp should be fully explored by both the parents and the children before reaching a final decision. It is imperative that a child not feel he is being sent to camp as a convenience for his parents. Certainly there have been cases where a child has been removed from an unhealthy home environment, but this is more often the exception. Many inner-city children who have had no exposure to rural settings, nature walks and the camaraderie experienced in mutual group participation will certainly profit from the camp experience.

It is that time of year when we will be asked to do our part to help those children less fortunate than most in our community. There are many opportunities for us to offer a hand in making a child's dream a reality. A good camp experience can be a gift to last a lifetime.

'I'll punch you later'

Contratulations, graduates.

When I graduated from high school — 42 years ago — we thought we knew it all.

We didn't know diddley.

How could we — the June class of 1958 at Grosse Pointe High School — ever imagine that the following changes would occur during our lifetimes?

- The Leaning Tower of Pisa wouldn't lean anymore.

- Automatic clothes dryers would have a "fluff" cycle.

- Something called voice mail would change the way we plan our lives.

- We would learn to dial telephones with our thumbs.

This week I finally heard about a use for that enigmatic fluff cycle — a mystery that has baffled me for more than 30 years.

I learned that if I am one who frets about serving wet lettuce (I do), and if I don't have a salad spinner (I don't), I'm supposed to put my freshly washed salad greens into a clean pillowcase and throw them in the dryer for a spin around the fluff cycle.

When I was in high school — where I completed the major portion of my lifetime dialing ration — the procedure involved a forefinger and a heavy black desk or wall-mounted telephone equipped with a rotary dial and 10 slightly-larger-than-forefinger-

I Say

sized holes. Eight of the holes were devoted to letters of the alphabet (no q or z); one was for the number 1; one was for the operator.

Judging by Year 2000 standards, the procedure. Took. Forever.

Today's technology lets us dial in one-tenth the time. With automated dialing and redial and automatic callback features, it's probably down to 1/100th the time.

Technically, today's procedure isn't even dialing.

It's punching.

Cell phones are so small, we can hold them in the palm of one hand. We're forced to dial with one thumb, using our sense of touch and memory, so we can keep the other hand on the steering wheel and our eyes on the road.

I can punch out an 11-digit number with one thumb while I'm in the basement, for instance, putting my iceberg and romaine and spinach in the dryer. Or I can punch someone while I'm in my car on the way to visit the Formerly Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Not only can I make a call, but I can carry out a complicated series of arrangements for a dinner party or a wedding reception or the purchase of a new car without ever talking to an actual living person.

Voice mail will relay messages to whomever we punched.

The caller leaves a message on the caterer's voice mail, for example. The caterer returns the call by leaving a message on the caller's cell phone, along with the callee's caller ID and phone number, so the original caller can call back in a split second, by punching the redial button to leave yet another message on the caterer's voice mail.

"Don't send any hors d'oeuvres made with feta cheese," I could say emphatically, for example, or "be sure to include Hollandaise sauce for the asparagus" or "no soggy salad greens, please."

What should the class of 2000 expect in the next 42 years?

Will there still be a Pisa? A Tower?

Dryers?

Lettuce?

Thumbs?

Will there be any actual living persons who answer telephones?

THE POWER AND WEAKNESS OF REVENGE

A visit to Stratford this past weekend helped me to better appreciate a rather protracted and sometimes heated e-mail discussion I recently had with two good old friends, friends which go back to high school and college.

They were concerned that the general mood in Israel was desultory and war-weary. The conflict with Israel's Arab neighbors continues over fifty years since the UN partition, and despite repeated Israeli military victories, the indigenous and neighboring Arabs continue to treat the thriving, technologically-advanced, militarily superior young nation like a thorn in its side.

The Arabs will not concede an inch of territory lost in wars and continue to pledge the total destruction of the Jewish state.

My friends think Israel needs more moral and military support from the US, more pressure from the Diaspora to hold the fort, and should not continue to give up land for peace.

These lands in question were won by the Israelis, kept and settled for strategic purposes. But continual pressure from the Arabs and their friends in the United Nations, along with unceasing terrorist attacks and American presidents pursuing the "peace process," have led to withdrawal of Jewish settlements, the surrender of Palestinian prisoners, and most recently a pullback of Israeli military from south Lebanon.

Hardline Israeli prime ministers have given way to a dovish leader who appears, with popular support, to be ready to surrender ever more land for peace.

One of the topics of debate was the awareness of a growing mood in Israel to give up the fight for a Jewish state, and to give up the symbol of Zionism, that Israel is the biblical homeland of the Jewish people.

Passover seders, year after year for three thousand years, have recounted the story of the Exodus, and how the Jews with the help of God, drove out the Egyptians, freeing themselves from the bonds of slavery, ultimately to return them to the Promised Land.

If the Israelis ever gave up the principle of Zionism, Israel would become just another multicultural democracy, with its citizens having varied ethnic, racial and national backgrounds, in which the Jews would be a minority.

It would no longer be a Jewish state. Most Jews are adherents of Zionism and reject the growing mood of anti-Zionism, led by left-wing intellectuals, revisionists and those rejecting the Law of Return in which any Jew can claim first class citizenship.

This law was once considered a basis for a UN proclamation that Zionism is racism, a principle which has since been renounced after much objection by nations sympathetic to the Jewish cause after the Holocaust.

Anti-Zionists don't want Israel to be a Jewish state if it means continual military conscription, a never-ending drain on the economy and endless heartaches of oldiers killed in never-ending clashes with Palestinian teenagers hurling rocks and curses and terrorists blowing up buses of tourists and school children.

The rocks are answered with tear gas and rubber bullets, the terrorist strikes with raids on guerilla strongholds and refugee camps.

Iraq rains Scud missiles on Tel Aviv while Clinton warns Israel to refrain from retaliation. These exchanges of violence have blocked Arab-Jewish understanding, tolerance and cooperation, and are fueled by the powerful force of revenge. For every Jew killed, an Arab must suffer. For every Arab killed, a Jew must pay the price.

It is the Mosaic Law—"an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." The Old Testament itself seems to encourage it. The idea seems to be that if I don't punish my neighbor for his trespasses, he will continue to trespass, and I will lose ground.

To maintain my ground, my livelihood, my life, I must retaliate so strongly, that my neighbor's suffering will prevent him from trying to take advantage again, and his weakness will prevent further action.

If I succeed in making my neighbor suffer, he (or his children or grandchildren) will want to retaliate, and so the vicious cycle goes on and on. I feel justified and righteous. He feels justified and righteous.

Which brings us back to Stratford. Two great classic plays dramatized the power and consequences of revenge, "Titus Andronicus" and "Medea."

Without going into detail, both plays were about uncaring and unfair violation of another person's comfort and security, which led inevitably to sweet (cold, bitter) revenge. Even though in each case the victim was considered to be weak and helpless, human cunning led to a turning of the tables, in which those in power were reduced to misery and shambles, and to unimaginable suffering.

Those who operate from the principle that might makes right, will in time learn that might can crumble.

I argued to my friends, who advocated renewed military and moral strength, that this is a flawed principle, amply demonstrated by history and Shakespeare, but they argued back that there is no other way, that history constantly shows that eternal vigilance (and winning wars) is the price of liberty.

And that means the good guys must win, or we are lost. But in truth, neither the hawks nor the doves have the answer, and none is provided by history, the bible or Shakespeare, but I continue to maintain that a way must be found to resolve conflict without violence. We must never give up searching for a better answer.

As I write this, North and South Korea are coming together, and there are hopeful signs that China and Taiwan are seeking reconciliation.

By Lawrence W. Reed

To hear the talk from Washington, the country faces a "crisis" of some kind about once a month and the "answer" is almost always more government, even when government is the source of the problem.

The latest concerns the cost of prescription drugs for senior citizens, an issue that shows every sign of becoming a major election-year battle.

But if proposals to impose price controls prevail, this "crisis" will surely become a disaster.

There's one proposition with which nearly everyone can agree: the elderly need coverage for prescription drugs. Dr. John Goodman of the Dallas-based National Center for Policy Analysis reveals that "Medicare violates almost all principles of sound insurance. It pays too many small bills the elderly could easily afford on their own, while leaving them exposed to thousands of dollars of potential out-of-pocket expenses, including the cost of their drugs."

Goodman and many other health policy analysts recommend that we solve this problem by dramatically expanding "Medical Savings Accounts," or MSAs.

Those accounts, now severely limited by law, would allow all citizens to set aside savings tax-free for the purpose of paying their smaller medical bills. As those savings grow, individuals could purchase health insurance with ever higher deductibles (which makes those policies ever less expensive).

Senior citizens could also be permitted to tap into their Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) to help cover medical expenses that are not now paid for by either Medicare or the "Medigap" policies many seniors buy to supplement Medicare.

In addition to MSAs, it's likely that other reforms, including changes in Medicare, would be required to give the elderly the peace of mind they need, but under no circumstances are price controls a solution.

Price controls would inevitably stifle innovation in the pharmaceutical industry, just as they have done every time they have been applied to any business. When bringing a new drug to market, manufacturers encounter countless failures, an essential part of the process that ensures the quality of the final product. Frequently, the profit gained on a particular drug is used to finance the research and development of another.

One prominent bill in Congress (HB 664), introduced by Tom Allen of Maine and supported by many members of Michigan's congressional delegation, would effectively fix prescription drug prices by federal decree. It would cripple the industry's ability to attract capital and cover the costs of innovation and meeting the government's new drug approval requirements.

Anyone interested in access to life-saving medicines should also understand that price controls boost demand and stifle supply, which always lead to rationing.

Do we really want bureaucrats deciding who gets what drug?

The push for price controls comes from a misreading of the marketplace. Critics rarely cite the fact that more than 70 percent of Medicare beneficiaries spent less than $500 from their own pockets for prescriptions last year.

Instead, those critics point to the fact that the total of money spent on drugs last year rose by roughly 18 percent. But that's not the same as saying the cost of any one drug rose by 18 percent.

In fact, most of the increase in money spent on drugs came from a big increase in demand as people utilized new drugs in place of more expensive and traditional medical procedures. For example, surgery for ulcers was once commonplace but now because of new and better drugs it has almost disappeared.

A recent study found that every dollar spent on medical drugs translates into a decline of four dollars in spending on care in hospitals.

Price control advocates point out that people can buy certain drugs for less in Canada, where the government fixes prices, than they can get the same drugs for in America.

They fail to notice that Canadians are routinely denied access to newer and better medicines, and often travel to America to purchase them. Canadians are often forced to wait up to a year longer than Americans for more advanced medicines, as these drugs move through the price-controlled system of Canadian bureaucracy.

The fact is that Canada produces far fewer new drugs than does the United States — in large part because Canada has price controls and America does not.

Whether we have a crisis or not, senior citizens won't get more or better or cheaper prescription drugs if Washington waves its wand and fixes prices.

Members of Congress who say otherwise are either ignorant of history and economics, or simply making foolish promises to score political points.

Big, but little fluctuations in 2000-01 public school budget

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Despite projected enrollment figures being flatlined for the 2000-01 school year, the budget for the Grosse Pointe Public School System has increased by 2.4 percent, or $1.9 million, for the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

A projected increase of $170 per pupil in state aid should offset a 1 percent net salary increase for teachers and other staff, a 12 percent increase in health care costs and a 3 percent increase in retirement costs in the district's $88 million 2000-01 budget.

While assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction Susan Allan said, "We're not experiencing cuts in existing programs," the new budget reflects the layoff of 10 probationary classroom assistants and a $412,171 or 26.7 percent decrease in supply expenditures.

Board president Steve Matthews said the layoff decision was derived from the site budgeting process. Director of personnel and labor relations Eugene Washchuk said that two new teaching positions were added in the new budget.

Board member Joe Brennan raised concerns about the supply cut, noting that it was one of the biggest complaints from building budget committees and administrators. Assistant superintendent for business affairs and support services Chris Fenton said that supply expenditures were down

Edmund Ross Ahlgrim

Edmund Ross Ahlgrim

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Edmund Ross Ahlgrim died after a lengthy illness on Friday, June 16, 2000, at Bon Secours Hospital. He was 76.

Mr. Ahlgrim was retired from the Lakeview School District where he devoted much of his life in service to children. He took great pride in his work with the school and his children.

Crude oil hikes slow economy; Greenspan off hook

The contract for 1,000 barrels of Light Sweet Crude Oil closed last Friday at $32.33/bbl on the N.Y. Mercantile Exchange, up $2.13/bbl, or 7.1 percent for the week.

But crude is more than just gasoline and residential heating oil (most Michigan homes are heated by natural gas, unlike the New England area).

Crude is the raw material of many industrial and consumer products, including plastics, synthetic fibers (carpets and clothing), synthetic rubber (tires), asphalt (paving and roof shingles), and a whole host of others.

By Joseph Mengden

The OPEC oil ministers met yesterday in Vienna.

As of press time last Monday, petroleum analysts were about evenly divided that:

1) OPEC would authorize an increase of 1 million barrels per day; or

2) there would be no change from present levels, but review at the July meeting.

Here and there, one hears the beginnings of rumblings about why the Clinton administration hasn't taken a hard line on the rising cost of oil.

Why all this flying around the world instead of face-to-face talks with the Saudis and the Iranians?

The next meeting of the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee is next week, June 27-28, although Chairman Greenspan testified in Congress yesterday.

Up until about two weeks ago, analysts were leaning toward another bump in rates

Let's talk...STOCKS

on June 28, a least 1/4 of 1 percent, with some urging 1/2 of 1 percent.

But signals began to deteriorate last week, indicating that the economy, or at least certain sectors, indeed, had begun "slowing down." Maybe the "fuzz" is coming off the peach?

Last Friday, June 9, the Commerce Department reported that construction starts nationally for new homes and apartments tumbled 3.9 percent during May, to the lowest level in nearly a year.

"Recreational-vehicle maker Winnebago says rising fuel prices and interest rates are hobbling its business." (USA Today, June 16)

"Champion Enterprises, the largest U.S. maker of manufactured housing closed factories in Talladega, AL and Gulfport, MS because of slipping sales."

Revenues in this June quarter are expected to decline to $520 million from $665 million a year ago.

Analysts estimate this quarter's earnings at 5 cents/share vs. 59 cents/share a year ago. (Detroit Free Press, June 17).

"Ford Motor Co. plans to close its Avon Lake, Ohio, plant for an extra week, starting June 26, in an attempt to trim inventories." (The New York Times, June 17.)

"Kaiser Aluminum, the third-largest U.S. aluminum maker, is dismissing 400 temporary employees in Washington state because energy costs are forcing it to cut production." (USA Today, June 16)

"Bank One has already indicated in a regulatory filing that it expects to see more problems." (Barron's, June 19)

"High oil prices will curb road repairs this year in Grosse Pointe Park. Street construction will be curtailed somewhat due to high costs of petroleum products and increased construction costs," said Dale Krajniak, the city manager." (Grosse Pointe News, June 15)

Maybe the crude oil price increases are slowing the economy a bit, which may take Chairman Greenspan off the hook, so the Fed can "stand pat" on June 28, and look again at its July meeting?

Market stalled

The stock market charts all portray a see-saw, sideways motion since Memorial Day.

The DJI broke down 265 points last Friday to close at 10,449, its lowest level since late May.

The NASDAQ Composite, after that spiral ascent of 600 points from its late-May low of 3,200, has done nothing but meander around 3,800 since then.

NYSE volume has traded in the 700 million to 800 million share daily range all month, very good compared to years ago, but off from the heady 1 billion shares per day last spring.

Most traders are marking time until the Fed announcement (or lack thereof) on June 28th. Then comes the long holiday absence of five days to observe the Fourth of July.

Ethanol

What is it? Some say it's a liquid you add to your gas tank, like "Pep-O," to increase power. Farmers love it! Most of the petroleum industry hates it!

What is it? Ethanol — also called ethyl alcohol, grain alcohol, or ETOH — is a clear, colorless liquid with a characteristic, agreeable odor.

Its chemical ID is CH<sub>3</sub>CH<sub>2</sub>OH, and it belongs to the alcohol family, a group of chemical compounds whose molecules contain a hydroxyl group, "-OH," bonded to a carbon atom.

You're probably better acquainted with ethanol by its other names: "Old Grand Dad," "Jack Daniels" or "Walker's 10 High," to name a few.

These bourbon whiskeys are all made from corn.

Beverage ethanol, called grain alcohol, has been made since ancient times by fermentation of sugars and starches.

Fermented ethanol is distilled to 95 percent ethanol and 5 percent water.

Beverage ethanol is then diluted with pure water back to 50 percent ("100 proof") or 40 percent ("80 proof").

Industrial ethanol is denatured with 1 or 2 percent unpleasant or poisonous substances to prevent its use as a beverage.

The principal commercial use of ethanol is as a fuel. Many racing cars burn pure ethanol.

"Gasohol" is a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol.

When tetraethyl lead was banned from use in gasoline (it eliminated the "knock" from unleaded gas), the petroleum industry introduced "methyl tertiary butyl ether" (MTBE) as a substitute.

MTBE contains oxygen, which makes the gasoline more clean burning. But MTBE residues are not removed by the catalytic converter.

It contaminates ground water quickly and biodegrades very slowly.

Ethanol, as an alternative to MTBE, also supplies the oxygen for cleaner burning the gasoline, without the health and environmental concerns presently associated with MTBE.

Ethanol is a renewable, organic, non-toxic substance, which, some say, is cost effective with MTBE/gasoline.

Next week, LTS will investigate the availability of ethanol in Michigan.

Ways to take the 'bait' out of rebates

Rebate offers can be irresistible to consumers, slashing the price of consumer goods at the time of purchase or promising partial or full reimbursements after the purchase.

Some manufacturers and retailers entice shoppers with instant cash rebates that can be redeemed immediately at the checkout counter.

But most rebates are of the mail-in variety.

They require consumers to pay the full cost of an item at the time of purchase, then send documentation to the manufacturer or retailer to receive a rebate by mail.

The documentation required generally includes the original sales receipt, UPC code, rebate slip, and the customer's name, address and telephone number.

In most cases, this paperwork must be sent to the manufacturer or retailer within 30 days of the purchase. Consumers generally receive their rebates up to 12 weeks later.

But the Federal Trade Commission cautions consumers against being "baited" by rebates that never arrive or arrive far later than promised.

By law, companies are required to send rebates within the time frame promised, or if no time is specified, within 30 days.

When purchasing a product that offers a rebate, the FTC encourages consumers to:

- Follow the instructions on the rebate form and enclose all required documentation in the envelope when filing for a rebate.

- Make a copy of all paperwork to be mailed when applying for a rebate. It's the only record a consumer will have of the transaction if anything goes wrong.

- Contact the company if the rebate doesn't arrive within the time promised.

- If the rebate never arrives or arrives late, file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission, the state attorney general or the local Better Business Bureau.

Call the FTC's Consumer Response Center help line toll-free at 1-877-FTC-HELP (382-4357) or write: Consumer Response Center, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20580.

Consumers also may file a complaint online at www.ftc.gov. Click on "complaint form."

Know your phone services and costs

by Lori Z. Bahnmueller

A reader recently mailed me a copy of his telephone bill, peppered with editorial marks.

Redundant red and black ink circles segregated various charges, while question marks demanded answers from others.

In an apparent sign of approval or surrender, some charges had earned check marks or a simple "OK" notation.

Anyone who's ever attempted to reconcile a telephone bill must understand this reader's frustration.

Telephone bills have become more complex and sometimes may include unfamiliar and even inappropriate or incorrect charges — often obscured by jargon.

What's a linebacker doing in a phone bill anyway?

Like your financial and credit card statements, telephone bills should be carefully scrutinized to ensure that charges appear only for the service you ordered.

A monthly bill will always include charges for basic local exchange service. Other charges may include:

- Costs for optional services, such as a second telephone line;

- Long-distance charges from other companies;

- Voice messaging services;

- Inside-the-home wire maintenance contracts (a.k.a. linebacker);

- Customer calling features (the specific names for these services can vary from company to company).

If a charge does not appear to be correct, call your local telephone company and request an explanation.

Upon request, the company must provide a complimentary copy of the rate schedule applicable to your usage.

Unfamiliar charges that may appear on your monthly local and long distance bills and are required by state or federal laws include:

- Federal/State Subscriber Line Charges — covers the cost of the local telephone network, with a maximum charge of $3.50 each for a single line and $6.07 for additional residential lines (business line charges are higher).

- Universal Service Fund, or School/Library Internet Charge — helps provide technology to libraries and public schools, and varies by telephone company.

- 9-1-1 Surcharge — covers the cost of operating the local emergency phone system.

State and federal taxes

- Cellular Phone and Paging Charge — allows cellular phone companies to assess long-distance charges for calls made to cellular phones and pagers; these charges may include long-distance charges and airtime.

- Primary Interexchange Carrier Charge (PICC) — covers the costs of long-distance, interstate, and intrastate telephone networks for use of the local telephone company's network.

Charges may vary between telephone companies.

- Local Number Portability Charge — covers the cost for customers to keep the same telephone number under certain conditions.

Because of the changing nature of the telecommunications industry, there may be charges for other telephone services on your bill that are not addressed above — such as returned check fees and minimum long-distance call charges.

Beyond the grocery list of miscellaneous fees, charges and taxes, carefully review the summary of long-distance calls for errors.

If you have questions about other service charges appearing on your bill, contact the telephone company. Always follow up with a letter and keep a copy for your records.

Middle schools get TV production class

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

After a year of students at Pierce Middle School coming in on their own time before school to write, direct and produce morning video announcements, they now can take credit for their work.

Students at Pierce, as well as at Brownell and Parcels middle schools, will be able to take a video production and broadcasting pilot course as an elective for either a semester or a year. The class will be open to 30 seventh and eighth grade students at each school each semester.

While the class will be an elective course under the technology program, the class will focus on skills in video production, computers, announcing, research, writing and social studies in order to produce a five-minute broadcast of daily school news and current events. Students will rotate responsibilities through the semester.

The video announcements, which originated at Pierce in October and then were implemented at the high schools in the spring, have been successful and popular with the production teams and viewers alike.

"It was exciting at Pierce to watch this broadcast," said assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction Susan Allan. "It was amazing how students fell silent and became mesmerized. The students paid more attention to a television screen as opposed to a PA announcement. The production students were developing some magnificent teamwork skills and the teachers took a lot of care to tie into other aspects of the curriculum like English and social studies. I think a proposal to make this a regular elective is most appropriate."

Students will be notified by mail in August before school begins regarding openings for the class.

"I'm really excited about this," said Parcels principal Mark Mulholland, who was also on the pilot course committee. "I came from a school that did this and I'm excited about the potential for it here. It's a nice opportunity and a good learning experience for the kids."

District plans more technology updates

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

By September, computer usage at the Grosse Pointe public schools will be more accessible and more efficient.

In addition to the purchase of new servers and laptop computers for use in the high schools that were approved by the Board of Education in May, the district will upgrade its 1.5 Mbs T1 Wide Area Network (WAN) connection with a 30 Mbs ATM fiber WAN connection and purchase 360 portable keyboards for the elementary schools.

The new WAN, with lines leased through Comcast, will increase Internet data speed. The current WAN is plagued with slow speed and is running at peak capacity. The new WAN will also allow the district to transmit video for distance learning classes and audio for a new proposed phone system that will include phones in each classroom plus voice mail for all teachers.

The cost of leasing the WAN lines over the next five years is $1,050,000. The district is also looking into establishing a private WAN it hopes to have in place when the current lease expires.

The portable keyboards will primarily be used for the fifth grade keyboarding classes. Currently, the keyboarding classes almost exclusively consume lab time in the elementary schools and most buildings lack the space to expand labs.

The portable keyboards have limited capabilities and run on a Windows CE platform, a slimmed-down version of Windows 98, and will support the keyboarding software. They are built more ruggedly to withstand use by younger children. They run just under $1,000 apiece, about half the cost of an average laptop computer.

Budget

because the district had already made some major supply purchases and few new projects are being proposed for the upcoming school year.

Some of the most significant fluctuations in the budget can be seen in two of the district's six funds. The capital projects fund of $1,000,000, or 1.1 percent of the district's expenditures, will see a 41.2 percent decrease while the Durant fund which makes up $1,600,000, or 1.8 percent of the district's expenditures, will see a 326.7 percent increase. However, the Durant fund, the district's "rainy day fund" established to hold $3.3 million in a 1997-98 settlement with the State of Michigan, is being used to install elevators at Mair, Trombly and Barnes schools. In years past, Americans with Disabilities Act compliance project costs have been normally paid for with the district's capital funds.

However, an impending teacher contract renewal and the uncertainty of the required number of instructional hours and amount of state aid still being determined by the state legislature will probably mean some adjustments to the district's budget in the upcoming months. Other areas of concern are funding for large, long-term capital improvement projects, the financial impact of space needs at some of the schools, rising health costs, rising energy costs, uncertainty of a statewide voucher program and the impact of special education cost chargebacks.

G.P. Garden Center's 9th annual tour is July 7, 8, 9

By Margie Reins Smith
Assistant Editor

Diane Yordy is crazy about flamingos.

Her sense of whimsy spills out onto a new brick patio, breezeway and garden behind the Grosse Pointe Woods home she has shared with her husband, Bill, for the last 15 years.

"My yard is about flamingos," Yordy said. "And it's about fun. The "flamingo X-ing" signs, colorful flags, painted pots and trellises.

Plantings are lush and well-groomed. They include everything from ornamental grasses, ever-blooming daylilies, hostas, a wide variety of annuals and perennials, a rare catalpa tree that promises to bloom this year and a large maple tree that is ailing.

"It's not doing well," Yordy said, referring to the maple in the center of the yard. "We're trying to save it." If it dies, she said, the environment of the entire back yard will change drastically.

The Yordys also have built large raised bed herb and vegetable gardens — with convenient seating. "The tomato bar is one you can really belly up to," Yordy said.

Mike and Marcia Geibel of Grosse Pointe Woods are crazy about hostas. Their front and back yard is home to about 250 hostas, Mike said. "I think we have about 100 different varieties," he said. Both Mike and Marcia are retired Detroit school teachers who love working in their garden.

"Marcia often works in the yard from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., until it's too dark to see," Mike said. "I usually put in about three house a day of solid work."

They are members of the Metro Detroit Hosta Society and often travel around the state attending the society's events and looking for new varieties of hostas to take home.

"I look for slug-resistant varieties," Mike said. "I'm also the first man to be a member of the Grosse Pointe Park Garden Club. They created a special 'family membership' classification for me."

In addition to their hostas, the Geibels have found compatible plants for every corner of their approximately 50-by-120-foot lot.

Behind the garage, they've nurtured Meiland roses, which grow and bloom in shady areas, as well as ginger, ferns, wild geraniums, Jack-in-the-pulpits, Solomon's seal and woodruff.

The front yard is shaded by a large sycamore that is recovering from a case of anthracnose.

"It will come back," Mike said, with confidence. "We just trimmed it."

"In spite of all these hostas, I still like my spring garden best," he said. "From March to May we have several thousand blooming crocuses, hyacinths, allium, snowdrops, narcissi, and tulips."

Four more private gardens in Grosse Pointe Woods, Shores and Farms — and three public and semi-public gardens — will be ready for guests during the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's ninth annual Summer Garden Tour on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 7, 8 and color.

The herb garden in the back yard includes rue, tansy, lovage, fennel, mint, horehound, thyme, chamomile, oregano, St. John's wort and more.

The Flynn Garden in Grosse Pointe Farms features two trees grown from the seeds of great historic tricerian Forestry Association. One is Brandywine Goldenrain Tree, from the Pennsylvania scene of a Revolutionary War battle in which the British were defeated.

back garden has existed for only the last two years. We always planted things in front, but now — since I took a buyout from my job — I have time to work in the back yard."

The Yordys tend their own gardens, which are filled with a variety of plants, shrubs, trees, herbs and vegetables, as well as hundreds of interpretations of the flamingo theme. Bright bespectacled whirligigs vie for attention with rows of pink plastic flamingo figures and carved wooden flamingos and delicate flamingo mobiles, copper statues, Scholar Tree is from one of the oldest trees in Philadelphia. The original tree was alive in the year the Declaration of Independence was signed.

The Flynn garden also incorporates art objects in the design. Adorning the landscape are Jason the Argonaut, various gargoyles, angels, a Siamese cat from Thailand sunning itself on top of pink granite from Detroit's Michigan Central Depots outdoor wall.

A bathtub from the 1920s is an antique saved from the owner's childhood home. It's filled with ivy. Interspersed throughout the garden are rocks collected on family trips and bricks collected from razed Detroit landmarks such as Hudson's, Stroh's brewery and the Parke-Davis building.

The Moti Garden in Grosse Pointe Farms features rhododendrons, flowering crab apple trees, clematis and hyacinth bean vines in its front yard landscape.

The flagstone walkway to the back yard is bordered by blooming perennials and flowering shrubs such as bee balm, cranesbill, spiderwort, Russian sage, yarrow and several ornamental grasses.

A brookside is the focal point of the back yard, framed by arborvitae, hemlocks, azaleas, redbuds and highlighted by astilbe, crocosmia, violets and gaura.

The garden also includes a brick terrace, a hosta garden and a flagstone patio.

The McKean Garden in Grosse Pointe Shores features a swimming pool, bathhouse and two greenhouses. One of the greenhouses is devoted exclusively to orchids. The hand-painted tiles that decorate the front edges of the greenhouse tables were created by Grosse Pointer Kathy Kaess. Each tile is a different variety of orchid, painted on a black background.

"I have about 40 blooming orchids inside the house right now," Joan McKean said. She likes the 19th century stone urns that were part of Grosse Pointe's Dodge Estate, now planted with cascades of colorful blooming flowers.

"I like window boxes, too," she said, pointing to the second-story boxes that are filled with colorful annuals.

McKean said she maintains the garden with the help of one person who works about one day a week.

The three public and semi-public gardens on the tour are:

• The Grosse Pointe Garden Center's Trial Gardens, located at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, are centered around an 18th century Windmill Pointe millstone.

Individual plots that form the wheel design around the millstone are planted and maintained by local garden clubs according to a theme.

This year's theme is New Century. An award is presented at the end of the season to the garden club that has best interpreted the theme. The winner chooses the next season's theme.

• The Grace Adams Harrison Garden for Children is also located at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore in the Farms.

The five-year-old garden is named in honor of the woman who spearheaded the project and is sponsored and supervised by Harrison and the Grosse Pointe Garden Center.

Children age 3 and older plant and nurture the annuals and perennials as part of the Seeds to Grow On program co-sponsored by the center and the War Memorial. This year the garden includes a new colony of ladybugs.

• The Children's Home of Detroit, 900 Cook, is celebrating its 50th anniversary at the Grosse Pointe Woods facility this year.

Since 1997, CHD has sponsored a Gathering of Gardeners program to help resident children get involved with beautification of the grounds.

Each of the six residential cottages is responsible for its own garden and each works with a local garden club with the design, planting and maintenance.

The Grosse Pointe Garden Center is also celebrating its 50th anniversary. It was founded in 1950 as a non-profit organization to promote education, beautification, horticulture and conservation in the community.

The center offers grants for local beautification projects, awards scholarships, conducts workshops and sponsors lectures. It maintains the Trial Gardens and the children's Garden at the War Memorial.

The center, located on the second floor of the War Memorial, is open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesdays through Thursdays. New members are welcome. Annual dues are $15 and include admission to center-sponsored events.

Tickets for the annual tour are $8 in advance; $10 on the days of the tour. For more information, call (313) 881-4594 Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays during business hours.

Tradition continues for annual soup kitchen fundraiser

Edmund T. Ahee Sr.

Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers is proud to announce its 19th annual Capuchin Souper Summer "Singing and Swinging" Celebration, Friday, July 7, at Hillcrest Banquet Center in Mount Clemens at 7:30 p.m.

This year's event will honor the memory of the gala's founder and underwriter, Edmund T. Ahee Sr. The tradition will continue this year as the Edmund Ahee family will again underwrite the entire event to raise funds and awareness for the Capuchin Soup Kitchen.

Everyone is invited to attend an enjoyable evening of music and dancing with 11 different bands, including The Johnny Trudell Orchestra, Johnny Rodriguez and the Fireballs, Royce, Starlight Drifters, Company of Strangers, Anthony Birchett & Co., David Bennett and Sunny Girl, as well as interactive performances by The Dueling Pianos.

There is no admission charge. Complimentary snacks and hors d'oeuvres with a cash bar will be provided. Over $28,000 worth of jewelry donated by Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers will be raffled. Raffle tickets are $1 each.

One hundred percent of the proceeds from the raffle go directly to the Capuchin Soup Kitchen to provide food, clothing, education and counseling services to Detroit's less fortunate. Last year the Capuchin Souper Summer Celebration raised more than $250,000. To date, the fundraiser has raised more than $3 million for the Capuchin Soup Kitchen.

In 1929, the Capuchins opened their soup kitchen in Detroit. It was the first soup kitchen in the country. Today the soup kitchen feeds thousands daily. Edmund T. Ahee grew up near the soup kitchen and watched many of the less fortunate stand in line for food and shelter provided by the Capuchins. He wanted to give back to the community and felt that a fundraiser was the best way to achieve his goal. In 1981, Ahee started the Capuchin Souper Summer Celebration.

"We are proud to continue my husband's legacy. Our entire family is committed to this most worthy cause," says Bettejean Ahee.

Raffle tickets can be purchased in advance. For more information, contact Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers at (313) 886-4600.

Fireworks downtown:

One of the world's most spectacular and largest fireworks displays will light up the international skyline over the Detroit River. Hudson's and The Parade Company recently announced the Hudson's Fireworks — a favorite summertime family tradition — will take place on the evening of Wednesday, June 28, at 10:06 p.m. In the event of rain, the display will be held the following evening, Thursday, June 29.

The 42nd annual celebration will highlight "Sizzling Summer Sounds" as both the sights and sounds of the fireworks spectacular light up the waterfront. More than 1 million people gather each year for the Hudson's Fireworks — the flagship event of the International Freedom Festival.

Commenting on the announcement, Hank Lorant, Hudson's regional director said, "As America's oldest fireworks company, Zambelli Fireworks Internationale, continues to create bigger and better displays of light and sound for each celebration in Detroit. This year's fireworks are a gift we are happy to bring to the community!"

Susie Gross, president of The Parade Company, is excited about the surprises in store for Detroit. "I was delighted to have had the opportunity to view the Zambelli's fireworks displays around the U.S. and hand-pick exciting new fireworks choreography to bring back home to the families of Detroit. This year's display is outstanding."

Established in 1984, The Parade Company is a Detroit-based not-for-profit organization responsible for production of America's Thanksgiving Parade and the International Freedom Festival. The organization also choreographed the 1997 U-M Championship Parade in January and the Detroit Red Wings Stanley Cup Victory Parades. Such productions have earned the organization the reputation as the international authority on celebration and victory parades.

As a part of the Target Corp., Dayton's Marshall Field's Hudson's is one of the largest individual department store operations in the United States. The company has annual sales of $3.1 billion, generated from more than 14 million square feet of retail space at 64 stores in eight states. The company employs approximately 39,000 people and operates 19 Dayton's, 21 Hudson's and 24 Marshall Field's stores.

Hot Saunders:

Cornetist Tom Saunders of Grosse Pointe Park was honored as emperor of the 27th Sacramento Jazz Jubilee on Memorial Day weekend. He also led the Midwest All-Stars for six sets and played in The Emperors with former "royalty" at the jubilee.

Saunders has led bands and been a guest star many times at the jubilee, the world's largest traditional jazz festival, which drew over 100,000 fans for 1,248 performances by 138 bands this year. He also has played all 25 Central Illinois Jazz Festivals at Decatur and has been its musical director since 1994.

He has led the Wild Bill Davison Legacy Band on U.S. and European tours since the famous cornetist, who was his idol and close friend, died in 1989. Davison's widow, Anne, donated his memorabilia to Bowling Green State University, and Saunders' Detroit All-Stars played at the dedication last March.

Saunders, a Detroit native, has led his Surf Side Six since 1983, at the former Surf Side Lounge and Presidential Inn for about a decade each. It played the one-time Windsor-Detroit Jazz Festival in 1974 and many jazz society events. His Detroit All-Stars have played Montreux-Detroit festivals and often at Marge's Bar in Grosse Pointe Park in the past five years.

His duties as emperor at Sacramento included riding in the parade and announcing the start and close of the event. Jubilee director Roger Krum noted Saunders' ebullient personality and said he had behaved well as emperor, because his wife, Tillie, was with him. Saunders said that he did not have emperor's privileges at home and thanked jubilee producers for the honor.

Fame: OmniArts in Education hosted its first fundraiser on June 6 at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

OmniArts has been providing fine and performing arts programs to students in the Metro Detroit area for over 30 years. The OmniArts in Education programs currently service about 50 schools in Wayne and Oakland counties. The roster of talent exceeds 100 of the finest artists in visual, vocal, instrumental, dance and related art forms.

The evening included a tribute to the late William Mobley, who with his wife, Shirley, began this unique educational program as "In Person" in the early 1970s. The Mobleys youngest son, Tom, serves on the OmniArts board as vice president.

Karen DiChiera, community education director of the Michigan Opera Theatre, and Detroit Free Press columnist Desiree Cooper served as honorary co-chairs of the event. Teresa Tomeo, television and radio reporter, was the emcee for the evening.

Is Prepared: The Boy Scouts of America awarded City of Grosse Pointe resident Alfred S. Warren the Silver Buffalo Award for distinguished service to youth on May 27 in Nashville, Tenn. This award is Scouting's highest commendation for the contributions outstanding Americans make to youth on a national level.

As a retired vice president for General Motors and current owner of Warren Investment Co., Warren has been a major contributor to the advancement of Scouting and the Exploring program.

From left at OmniArts' first fundraiser are the Rev. and Mrs. Gustav Kopka of Grosse Pointe Farms, Dr. Robert Mobley of the City of Grosse Pointe and Mrs. Sharlene Gage of Detroit.

During his tenure at General Motors, he energetically promoted the programs within the corporation. His efforts paid off, resulting in a record growth in Exploring that has yet to be matched.

Well known for his spirit of volunteerism, Warren has devoted time and energy as board president and member of the Detroit Boys and Girls Club and as a board of directors member for the United Way of Southeast Michigan. He is a trustee of the McCormick Theological Seminary and has served as chair of the Muskingum College board of trustees and on the business advisory board at the University of Detroit.

He currently serves as chairman for the Boy Scouts of America's National Relationships Committee. He was the Exploring Division chairman, vice president, and president for the Detroit Area Council.

For more than 90 years the Boy Scouts of America has been the nation's foremost youth program of character development and values-based leadership training. The result is a program of exciting and meaningful activities that encourages youth to pursue their special interests, make new friends, develop leadership skills, and give back to the community. Scouting annually serves the needs of close to 5 million children.

A Goodfellow: The Old Newsboy's Goodfellow Fund of Detroit has announced it will hold its 11th annual Tribute Breakfast at 8 a.m. on Friday, Sept. 15, in the Ambassador Dining Room at Cobo Center.

The Goodfellows will honor George "Sparky" Anderson with the Goodfellow of the Year Award for his extraordinary efforts on behalf of the Detroit community.

Tickets for the event are $150 or $1,500 for a table of 10. The Goodfellows' fundraising goal this year is $1.6 million to provide 43,500 holiday gift packages containing clothing, books, candy and toys to needy Detroit area children.

For more information or to purchase tickets to the Tribute Breakfast, contact Sari Klok at (313) 873-6000.

Founded in 1914, the Goodfellows also fund an emergency dental program, provide free shoes to those in need and send hundreds of needy children to camp each summer.

Promising breast cancer diagnostic procedure at Henry Ford Hospital

A procedure being performed at Henry Ford Hospital shows promise for diagnosing the spread of breast cancer.

S. David Nathanson, M.D., a surgical oncologist with the Josephine Ford Cancer Center, is one of only two surgeons in Michigan trained to perform a procedure called sentinel node biopsy as part of a national clinical trial.

"This is one of the most significant surgical and diagnostic advances developed for treating breast cancer," Nathanson said.

The procedure involves injecting a blue dye and a radioactive solution near the breast tumor and tracking the path of the dye and solution through the lymph nodes in the armpit. The dye accumulates in the sentinel node, which is the first lymph node where a tumor drains and the likely place the cancer would first spread.

Only the sentinel node is removed for analysis when a patient has either a mastectomy or lumpectomy. If the analysis shows no cancer cells spread to the sentinel node, it is unlikely that other nodes are cancerous, Nathanson said.

The procedure is less invasive than the standard treatment, which usually involves removing a tumor either by a mastectomy or lumpectomy and removing most of the lymph nodes in the armpit. Each armpit has 10 to 70 lymph nodes. Removing most of the lymph nodes can cause permanent side effects, including arm swelling, a burning sensation, infection and restricted shoulder movement.

William C. Rands III, of Grosse Pointe, a breast cancer patient who underwent the procedure, says he has not experienced any post-operative complications.

"Last week I spent an hour and a half shining a steam locomotive at the Henry Ford Museum. I also helped build a train layout for an auction at the Grosse Pointe Academy," says Rands. "The benefit of sentinel node biopsy is real."

Henry Ford is performing the procedure as part of a national clinical trial sponsored by the National Cancer Institute and American College of Surgeon Oncology Group. It will compare the long-term results of sentinel node biopsy with the standard treatment.

Prior to the clinical trial, Henry Ford conducted its own three-year study involving nearly 300 patients who underwent sentinel node biopsy. The procedure correctly identified the sentinel node in 91 percent of the patients. Lab analysis showed that the sentinel node was cancer-free in 70 percent of the patients.

While breast cancer afflicts mostly women, men are diagnosed with the disease in one of every 100 cases. In fact, all types of breast cancer found in women can be found in men.

Rands, 57, married and the father of two adult children, felt a lump in his breast while taking a shower in August 1999. He underwent a mastectomy two months later.

Prior to Rands' surgery, Nathanson performed a sentinel node biopsy, during which the sentinel node and two other nodes were removed. The sentinel node contained some cancer, while the other nodes were cancer-free. Rands is now undergoing chemotherapy and radiation treatments.

Rands credits his survival to the early detection and swift care by his team of physicians.

"Sentinel node biopsy is another evolving step in the treatment of breast cancer," he says. "It's more humane and more sparing than the conventional procedure. And I certainly can relate to how a woman would feel about losing a part of herself."

Advanced radiation treatment available at St. John Hospital and Medical Center

Life-saving radiation treatments for prostate, lung, cervical and esophageal cancer are allowing doctors at St. John Hospital and Medical Center to treat these diseases with greater precision and less trauma for the patient than ever before.

Radiation oncologists at St. John Hospital are utilizing a device called the microSelectron-High Dose Remote Afterloading System for high dose rate (HDR) brachytherapy treatment. With HDR brachytherapy, doctors can apply a high dose of radiation directly to the treatment area, a technique that spares healthy tissue and surrounding organs. In addition, the course of treatment is much shorter and more comfortable than other treatments for prostate cancer. It also can be performed on an outpatient basis, and according to Amr Aref, MD, chief of radiation oncology at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, most patients can return to normal activity following their treatment.

For prostate cancer, the procedure is performed under spinal anesthesia and/or general sedation. Using both ultrasound and fluoroscopy, which is a type of x-ray, surgeons implant needles into the prostate gland. These needles are then connected to the HDR machine, which delivers the radioactive treatment. The procedure itself is painless and takes just minutes. The patient is not radioactive during or after the treatment.

"Another advantage of this technique is that the equipment can more precisely deliver the amount of radiation necessary based on needle placement," Dr. Aref said. "The equipment is also safer to use than previous technology, because the radiation source is fully contained so there's less risk of exposure for both medical personnel and the patient."

Relaxin shows promise in treating scleroderma, new WSU study shows

Those who suffer from scleroderma, a chronic autoimmune disease, may have hope in a new drug being tested at Wayne State University School of Medicine.

Phase II clinical studies of relaxin, a naturally occurring hormone, show that the drug may reverse skin thickening, which is a clinical measure of the progression of scleroderma. The study, sponsored by California-based Connetics Corp., was tested at the WSU School of Medicine by Maureen Mayes, M.D., a WSU rheumatologist at Hutzel Hospital, in addition to 12 other sites nationally.

About 300,000 people in the United States have a form of scleroderma, a disease that causes a wide range of symptoms, including thickening of the skin. Up to one-third of those with scleroderma have a form called "systemic scleroderma," which causes scarring of the internal organs; only 50 percent of systemic scleroderma patients survive as long as 10 years.

"The cure part is hard because we have no idea what causes it," Mayes said.

The relaxin study involved

68 patients who had had moderate to severe scleroderma for less than five years. Three groups of patients were treated with a placebo or 25 or 100 microgram per kilogram per day of the recombinant human form of relaxin by continuous subcutaneous infusion over six months.

Those treated with the lower dose of relaxin demonstrated significant improvement at four, 12 and 24 weeks compared with the placebo group, showing reduced skin thickening, improved mobility and improved lung function.

"The reversal of skin thickening is by itself an important finding," said James R. Seibold, M.D., lead investigator and director of the Scleroderma Program of the University of Medicine & Dentistry of New Jersey. "Skin involvement is our best clinical measure of overall disease progression. Our data also show that reversal of skin thickening improves patient functional status and well-being."

Findings of the study will be published in the Annals of Internal Medicine, the primary scientific journal of the American College of Physicians.

Be a hero, take part in a clinical trial

By Dr. Robert Leonard
Special Writer

Imagine being a part of something so significant, so important, that it has the potential to change many people's lives for the better. It's something that could not only make people healthier and stronger, it could even save their lives.

Believe it or not, you have the power to make miracles happen when you participate in a clinical trial as part of your cancer care.

Clinical trials are conducted by leading medical institutions around the world to study the effect of a wide variety of medical treatments on people just like you. At any given time at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, there are dozens of clinical trials underway, all conducted in the pursuit of knowledge that can help people heal or overcome an illness.

If you read the paper or watch the news, you've probably heard about some of these trials. One recent study, for instance, involved the use of the drug Tamoxifen for the prevention of breast cancer in high-risk, postmenopausal women. Another study tested an old drug, Effexor, given in a new way for women who were experiencing hot flashes as a result of their breast cancer treatment.

That particular study was a rousing success. We studied the drug's effect on women over a period of four weeks and learned that it could dramatically ease their hot flash symptoms. As a result, we now have many grateful women on Effexor, and that would not have happened if courageous women around the country had not agreed to take part in that clinical trial.

Although successful clinical trials can sometimes result in giant strides in the treatment of many diseases and medical conditions, it's actually difficult to find enough people to participate in trials. Some are concerned about being "guinea pigs" in what they consider to be medical experiments. Others are shattered by their diagnosis — especially when it comes to cancer — and have a difficult enough time dealing with it without thinking about doing something benevolent for someone else.

As a result, the sad fact is that the number of people who agree to participate in clinical trials is shockingly low. In my field of expertise, which is oncology, just two percent of adult patients enroll in clinical trials. Two percent! That's way too low, particularly when you realize how much further along we might be in the treatment of cancer if more people did agree to participate. All you have to do is to look at the research that's been done in pediatric cancer to know how much of an impact clinical trials can make. About 60 percent of pediatric patients are enrolled in clinical trials, which begs the question: Is this why we're having more success in the treatment of childhood cancers? It's a good possibility.

A clinical trial can provide top quality state-of-the-art care for patients. Clinical protocols are designed by nationally recognized cancer experts. So how do doctors and researchers determine what should be studied in a clinical trial? Sometimes, a trial is ordered based on their personal observations, as in the case of when it becomes known that a particular drug has the potential to treat a condition other than the one for which it is intended. For instance, Effexor is actually an anti-depressant. But when a growing body of evidence indicated that women who took it for depression were experiencing fewer hot flashes, a clinical trial was launched to test that hypothesis.

Clinical trials can differ in scope. One of the most common types is the randomized trial in which patients are assigned to take one of several treatment options. Some participants receive standard treatment for the condition being studied and they become the control group against which all other results are compared while another group or perhaps more than one group may receive the promising new treatment. Then once the trial is over, researchers examine the data and determine whether the new treatment stood up under scrutiny and should be the new treatment standard.

One day, you may find yourself confronted with the decision of whether to participate in a clinical trial. I hope you will weigh that decision very carefully. Your choice to participate literally can provide top quality cancer care for yourself as well as affect the lives of countless people in a positive way. And if that's not the definition of heroic, then I don't know what is.

Robert Leonard, MD, is an oncologist on staff at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Keys to AA fellowship lie in Twelve Steps

Daniel Anderson, president emeritus of Hazelden, likes the old story about a drunk who says, "I'm an egomaniac with an inferiority complex."

"I think that's just beautiful," Anderson says, "because addicts can demonstrate massive inadequacy and massive grandiosity all at the same time."

Alcoholics Anonymous' answer to both inadequacy and grandiosity is simple: Join our fellowship and walk the path of recovery with us as an equal.

Understanding the fellowship of AA starts with learning about the Twelve Steps. Twelve Steps might sound like a lot of work. To keep it simple, take a suggestion from the Hazelden book, "A Program for You: A Guide to the Big Book's Design for Living," and group the Steps into three basic categories: problem, solution and plan of action. Step one teaches us to understand the problem of alcoholism: "We admitted we were powerless over alcohol — that our lives had become unmanageable." Simply put, once alcoholics start drinking, they cannot stop.

Step two follows immediately with a solution: "Came to believe that a power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity." The beauty of this step is that we get to choose our own concept of a higher power — any source of help to keep us from taking that first drink. For some people, this entails a traditional concept of God. For others, a higher power could be a friend, nature, a book, or an AA group.

Step three expands on this solution by asking us to make a clear, conscious choice to let a higher power guide our thinking and behavior: "Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God as we understood Him."

With this understanding of the problem and the suggested solution, we can move on AA's plan of action — the subject of the remaining steps. The key goals are to:

- List "character defects," including resentments, fears, and ways we've harmed other people while drinking (step four).
- Share our lists with our higher power and another human being (step five).
- Be willing to release these defects and ask for help in doing so (steps six and seven).
- Be willing to make amends to the people we've harmed, and follow through on this intention (steps eight and nine).

- Take a personal inventory each day and promptly admit when we're wrong (step ten).
- Get daily direction from a higher power through prayer and meditation (step eleven).
- Apply the steps to all areas of our lives and share them with others (step twelve).

During a primary treatment program for alcoholism, people typically get an intense orientation to steps one through five. However, other people start practicing these steps outside any formal treatment program, simply by joining AA. Both groups of people can take advantage of many options for continuing their step work.

"A large number of people go into a halfway house, where they can gain further education on the Steps," says Russell Forrest, supervisor of an extended care unit at Hazelden in Center City, Minn. "Hopefully more education comes through AA meetings, a sponsor, and literature on the Steps. And nothing prohibits people from picking up the Big Book (AA's basic text) once they leave treatment or a meeting."

AA meetings, the backbone of the fellowship, come in several forms. Some are "open" speaker meetings that welcome anyone. These offer an excellent introduction to AA. Closed meetings are attended only by people with a drinking problem and by prospective and current members of AA. Some closed meetings involve intense discussion of a simple step.

In any case, people who join the fellowship share the experience, strength, and hope they've gained by practicing the steps. An AA pamphlet for newcomers sums it up beautifully: "Regardless of the road we follow, we all head for the same destination, recovery of the alcoholic person. Together, we can do what none of us could accomplish alone."

To find out about an AA meeting near you or to receive an introductory pamphlet about AA, call AA in your community or call the AA general services office in New York City at (212) 870-3400.

Recovering students need supportive, sober environment

The first days at college are anxious ones for any new student but for young people struggling to maintain sobriety, they can be especially unnerving. No matter how good your intentions might be, it's hard to escape the party atmosphere that permeates many college campuses. How can new students in the early days of recovery from drug and alcohol addiction stay clean and sober when so many of their classmates are getting drunk?

It appears that Don Warren, director of the StepUP program at Augsburg College in Minneapolis, has come up with one good idea. About four years ago when Warren worked at Augsburg's learning center, he started meeting more and more students who were graduates of Hazelden Center for Youth and Families, a chemical dependency treatment facility for adolescents and young adults in Plymouth, Minn., a suburb of Minneapolis. These students told Warren how hard it was to live on campus, because their only recovery support system was their AA group and their sponsor.

Warren designed a program to help these students succeed and then linked up with Dave Hadden, the educational/vocational liaison for Hazelden Center for Youth and Families. With the help of others at both Augsburg and Hazelden, the StepUP program was born.

"When I discovered that they [Augsburg] understood recovery, I was sold," said Hadden. "I knew there was someone over there who would watch over my kids when they left here."

In 1997, Augsburg administrators told Warren that if he could find 25 students who wanted to be in StepUP, they'd give him two drug-free floors in their newest residence hall. Warren designed a contract in which students agreed to commit to sobriety, the learning process both inside and outside the classroom, and AA. The first StepUP program had 23 students, and it is going strong today. StepUP is getting a third floor this fall, when they hope to serve 45 students. Only two of last year's participants had relapses.

Most students enter the StepUP program from the halfway houses they attend after treatment. Students must be sober for six months before they can join StepUP. Warren meets with students weekly to monitor their academic progress and to see how they're doing in other areas of their lives. He works with them to develop good study, time management and test-taking strategies and refers them to appropriate therapists or counselors if they need further emotional support. Students hold weekly floor meetings, and Warren meets with the entire StepUP community once a month. Each floor has a floor manager who is trained in relapse prevention, conflict management and communication.

"Without StepUP, I wouldn't be sober today," said Clarke, who dropped out of two colleges because of his drug and alcohol dependencies before coming to Augsburg. "At first I was really nervous and isolated myself, but everyone in the StepUP community was dealing with the same problems of trying to balance school work and recovery. Now I see students getting drunk and I think, 'been there, done that.' This is working."

Clarke isn't only succeeding at sobriety. Like the other StepUP students, he's been able to pull his grades up dramatically, going from a D to an A average in just one year. StepUP students do so well that Augsburg faculty say "send us more," said Warren. StepUP students are frequently asked to speak to classes about addiction and recovery, and they participate in Augsburg's Judicial Council as well. If a student commits an alcohol- or drug-related offense, they are teamed up with a StepUP representative for peer interaction.

Warren said the goal is to replicate the StepUP program at select colleges throughout the country. Rutgers University has designated two apartment buildings for students in recovery, and Texas Tech has a wonderful non-residential program for recovering students. It's Warren's dream to also establish a transition house, where students who are clearly college material could stay until they maintain the requisite six months of sobriety to enter StepUP.

The high-energy cast of "West Side Story" helped push attendance last season at the Grosse Pointe Theatre to 8 percent above the year before.

GPT heads to awards night on the up-tick

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

"West Side Story" is expected to dominate the field this Saturday night at the Grosse Pointe Theatre's annual awards banquet.

The popular musical's eight sold out performances pushed GPT theater attendance to 6 percent above the year before.

Until the young and energetic cast of "West Side" hit the boards in the GPT's final production of the 1999-2000 season, attendance loitered slightly below the year before.

All told, 13,689 people attended the GPT's four shows last year.

"It was an exceptional season," said Gwen Bashara Samuel, head of the GPT theater box office. "We're on our way back up."

"West Side" closed a season that opened with standing ovations to "Forever Plaid."

"Plaid" sold to rafters," said Samuel. "Musicals usually do." In between, she added, the mystery-comedy "Seven Keys to Baldpate" did "OK," while "Prelude to a Kiss" brought up the rear with 2,681.

The GPT's 2,700 season ticket holders represents a steady climb from the doldrums of the mid-1990s.

"The number had been eroding little by little due to changes in people's habits," said Samuel. "Moms are working, people spend time on the Internet and watch cable television. In the last five to six years, however, we've started to reverse the trend."

The organization has brought back its audience through marketing and "picking shows that audiences will like."

Samuel said the theater group is "charging full speed ahead" on next year's shows. "We're poised to make some thunder this coming year."

The 2000-2001 season includes:

- "She Loves Me," a musical,
- "Communicating Doors,"
- "You Can't Take It With You," and
- "Oliver," another musical.

Bashara, a 30-year veteran of the GPT who has acted, directed and produced, said, "She Loves Me" is a darling show. It has the best musical book of any play done in 30 years. "You Can't Take It With You" is a classic, a chestnut."

The dark horse is "Communicating Doors," a little-known comedy.

"Nobody's heard of it," said Bashara. She saw the play in London, Ontario and "couldn't stop laughing. It was absolutely one of the most hilarious things I've ever seen."

The season will end on a traditionally musical note with "Oliver."

"We've already added an extra show," said Samuel.

"If our audience had their way, we'd do four musicals a year," she said. But musicals are expensive. The GPT pays up to $10,000 in royalties for a musical as opposed to about $600 for a non-musical, or "straight" show.

"They're not producing good musicals that are good for community theater the way they used to," said Samuel.

Recent classics like "Les Miserables" and "Miss Saigon" are still in production and therefore unavailable for community groups, according to Samuel.

The dwindling supply of good musicals has allowed play owners to hike the price of their shows.

Robert Maniscalco, a GPT actor and spokesman, said, "The GPT's spring musical is another opportunity to incorporate more kids into the organization. Bringing kids into the theater is an objective of the board of directors."

The youth factor played a large role in "West's" season-topping attendance. The play's young cast drew a lot of walk-ins, according to Samuel.

"A lot of those people asked to be put on our permanent mailing list," said Samuel. "People have finally found out who we are."

GPT revenue pays rent on the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Fries Auditorium and maintains the group's headquarters on Fisher Road.

"The upkeep is tremendous," said Samuel. "Money that comes in goes out."

Profits are being set aside for "eventualities," said Samuel.

Ralphe Armstrong at Music on Plaza

Ralphe Armstrong and the International Detroiters will perform at the Bon Secours Cottage Health Services Music on The Plaza concert series on Thursday, June 29, beginning at 7 p.m. The plaza is located at the intersection of Kercheval and St. Clair, two blocks east of Cadieux, in the City of Grosse Pointe's Village shopping district.

Internationally known master jazz bassist Ralphe Armstrong has selected the cream of Detroit's jazz virtuosi for this very special Music on The Plaza performance. Having toured the world with the likes of John McLaughlin and his legendary father, blues guitarist Howard Armstrong, Ralphe Armstrong will be performing a wide variety of jazz forms ranging from straight-ahead be-bop to fusion and even a touch of Motown. Armstrong is currently anchoring the band for the Gem Theatre's hit production of "Always, Patsy," a musical tribute to country legend Patsy Cline.

These weekly concerts are free and presented, in part, by Bon Secours Cottage Health System, the City of Grosse Pointe and the Grosse Pointe Village Association in cooperation with WDET, FM 101.9, Detroit's Public Radio station.

'Three Musketeers' at Stratford true to original story

When Alexander Dumas first published his all-time best-seller "The Three Musketeers" as a book, it came out in eight volumes, probably enough material for a record-setting TV series. In fact, there have been a record number of movie adaptations. Little wonder then that the Stratford Festival has compressed it into one of the most dynamic, action-packed stage adaptations ever to appear in live theater.

Reduced to its essentials, the plot is a clear combat between good and evil. As the hero, D'Artagnan, Graham Abbey is a dashing, idealistically appealing and indestructible youth. Thanks to a recipe for a magic salve that his mother was given by a gypsy, he can recover from any injury except "a wound to the heart." Excitingly enough, he almost succumbs in the romantic sense when he falls in love with his evil counterpart, Kate Trotter as this ruthless villain is a Milady DeWinter of incredible beauty and charm and diabolical evil.

The attraction and contrast between them is starkly exciting. D'Artagnan's sword play is brilliant and heroic. His survival of every combat is little short of miraculous and a continuing thrill. (There are more than a dozen sword fights plus a brief war with star-burst shells and musket fire.) She is irresistibly charming and disarming and their romantic intrigue is exciting. As he is tempted by her and then discovers her true character, his honor is threatened but remains intact. Meanwhile, although the contest between them is confused by the mutual attraction, her guile and duplicity are gradually revealed.

Before long it is apparent that in spite of the 17th century French costumes and props, there is a distinct suggestion of a comic book hero-villain pair like Batman and Catwoman and the impression is even more fun since this Superman is a living, breathing, handsome hero in action only a few arms lengths away on the Festival arena stage.

The pace of the show is dizzying. Scenes change so fast that subtitles (as at the opera) are projected above the sets to help the audience keep up on locations. They move from Paris to Calais to London and back or between the Gilded Lily and Black Lion inns and the Duke of Buckingham's and Cardinal Richelieu's palaces in seamless succession.

In spite of the condensation, the basic story is remarkably true to the original. The young D'Artagnan is sent from his home in proud Gascony to join the Kings Musketeers in Paris. There he falls in with the trio of Porthos, Aramis and Athos with whom he adopts their famous motto, All for One and One for All.

As Kings men they are in regular confrontation, both friendly and deadly, with the men of Cardinal Richelieu, the king's chief minister, a sinister and manipulative figure. D'Artagnan's leadership is quickly apparent as he gets embroiled in international intrigue between France's Cardinal and Queen, and England's Duke of Buckingham. Distinguishing himself in sword play, the young Musketeer cadet wins the admiration of King Louis XIII, a funny, fuddy-duddy caricature of a king, entertainingly performed by Ian Deakin.

D'Artagnan almost meets his downfall with Milady DeWinter who serves as spy, agent, seductress and hit-woman for the Cardinal. But with the help of his fellow Musketeers his righteousness triumphs over DeWinter's evil. Her true character is gradually revealed, culminating in the final exposure as she casts off her cloak of disguise to appear in tight-fitting black leather with a bullwhip in each hand. It is her last ditch stand. The restrained burlesque of both the classic and the comic book adventure styles is clear and managed with good taste and humor.

If there is one overwhelming impression of this show it is the excitement of flashing sword play, boundless bravado and incredibly lively action. The sword play is swift, sure and impressive and the overall spirit is of limitless adventure.

In an opening pantomime, a boy comes out to sit on stage where he opens and begins to read the book. The suggestion is obvious and valid. This is an experience for adventurers of all ages and if they haven't read the book before they come to experience it on stage, they will want to afterwards.

"The Three Musketeers" plays in repertory at the Festival Theater through November 4. For reservations, a Visitors Guide and a schedule, call (800) 567-1600.

Ambleside to host Watercolor Society exhibition in July

By Tom Mayshark

President, Grosse Pointe Arts Council

Another opening! Another show! And this one is not to be missed! On Sunday, July 9, the new face of Ambleside Galleries will glow at 17116 Kercheval (across from Damman Hardware).

During the Galleries' grand opening, from noon to 4 p.m., the Michigan Watercolor Society will present its annual juried exhibit of watercolor masterpieces.

Robert Lee Mejer, professor and chair of the art department of Quincy University, Quincy, Illinois, will be on hand as juror. Mejer is a signature member of the Watercolor USA Honor Society and an associate of the Midwest Watercolor Society.

The classically handsome Ambleside Galleries, with its overall space of 2,100 square feet (almost double the size of the Fisher Road site), is the perfect locale for this major watercolor event.

Unlike the former gallery, the front area of the new galleries will carry an exquisite enticement for those of you in search of that very special gift or home furnishing accent piece — including superb jewelry finds, hand-blown glass objects and selective household items.

A prestigious potpourri of objets d'art. The Galleries' two center rooms, actually transplanted from the Fisher Road location, will showcase wonderful works of art, including originals, prints, sculptures, serigraphs, limited editions, and much more.

The rear workroom will handle custom framing and reproduction work. Ambleside Galleries, displaying fine art on Fisher Road in Grosse Pointe for over six years, invites everyone to visit its new distinguished site — browse, absorb, enjoy — and don't miss the gala grand opening and reception on Sunday, July 9, noon to 4 p.m. Call (313) 885-8999 for more information.

Kudos, lauds, and a BIG thank you to Bill Damman, Damman Hardware, for inviting GPAC to use one of his store windows to display arts and artifacts for our "Window on the Arts" exhibit.

His idea of using ultraviolet (UV) film on the window is terrific — very protective for the artwork on display. With the new film, UV rays will be reduced more than 99 percent and the heat is decreased by about 40 percent. Thanks, Bill.

Not to miss! Classics in the Courtyard, a Grosse Pointe War Memorial summertime special, will present "Facade Entertainment" by the Emerald Sinfonietta on Thursdays June 29, at 7:30 p.m.

Maestro Felix Resnick, with Alex Suczek narrating the poetry of Edith Sitwell, will conduct this unique chamber musicale, composed by British composer, Sir William Walton. A 6:30 p.m. buffet will precede the concert. Call the War Memorial, (313) 881-7511, for further details and reservations.

Hurrah for the red, white, and blue! Celebrate your country's independence by joining the Grosse Pointe Symphony at the G.P. War Memorial on Wednesday, July 5, at 7:30 p.m. for a "Patriotic and Pops" family concert. Bring a blanket or chair, pack a picnic, make a memory.

Have a fun and festive evening at this melodic Fourth of July celebration. Advance reservations: $8 for provided seating; $6 if you bring your own. Grounds open at 6:30 p.m.

In case of rain, concert will be held in Crystal Ballroom. Tickets available at War Memorial. Call Laurie Strachan, (313) 882-0077, for more information.

You'll have one special shoppers' savings time at the annual Village Sidewalk Sale, Friday and Saturday, July 28, 29. Bargains! Bargains! Bargains! Plus food and entertainment for all. Shop until you drop on Friday from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. and on Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Composition, aperture, depth-of-field, filters, film, and much more will be the areas of photographic instruction at the Eleanor & Edsel Ford House, Saturday, July 29, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Using their own 35 mm cameras, participants can capture the scenic landscape of Ford House grounds in photographs of their own.

Instructor Monte Nagler, whose work may be found in many private and public collections including the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Center for Creative Photography in Tucson, Ford Motor Company, and Daimler-Chrysler Corporation, will be on hand to teach, advise, and assist with questions and techniques. The $40 fee includes lunch. Reservations necessary. Call (313) 884-4222 for more information.

More macaroni and four cheese, please

The modern day convenience of boxed macaroni and cheese leaves little reason to think about taking this household staple to another level. I recently ventured into the world of scratch macaroni and cheese for a graduation party, with much success. While I've prepared such cheesy casseroles in my own kitchen several times, I rarely measure the amount of the cheeses or cream.

This week's feature offers my best guideline for a terrific tasting macaroni and cheese. Fat and calorie counters will wave a shameful finger at the ingredient list. However, I've experimented with the mac and cheese recipes that are lower in fat and found they are not worth the effort.

Macaroni and Four Cheese

1/4 cup water
1 lb. elbow macaroni, shells or your favorite bite-sized pasta
1 1/2 lb. block Velveeta cheese, cut into quarters
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1/2 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1/2 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
1 1/2-2 cups heavy cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Cook pasta according to package directions. Rinse, drain and set aside.

In a medium saucepan over low heat, melt the Velveeta cheese with the water, stirring often (the water will help keep the Velveeta from sticking). When the Velveeta is almost completely melted, stir in the cheddar and the Monterey Jack cheeses while maintaining a low heat. Add one cup of the heavy cream and the Parmesan cheese. Continue stirring until all of the cheese and cream have met a smooth consistency.

Place the drained pasta in a large mixing bowl and pour the hot cheese mixture on top. Toss the pasta and the cheese mix until all of the noodles are evenly coated.

Turn the cheese noodles into a four quart (or 2x2 quart) dish(es) that have been coated with cooking spray. Drizzle another 1/2 cup of cream over the pasta. Bake covered at 350 for 25 minutes and then uncovered for an additional 20 minutes.

When you uncover the casserole halfway through baking, check the pasta and if it appears to be dry, pour some more heavy cream on top. Serve your rich and cheesy noodles as a main course with salad or a side dish to complement grilled pork, steak or chicken.

Velveeta is used as the base cheese because of its melting abilities. It basically holds the cheese sauce together. This dish can be prepared up to two days before baking.

I gave my homemade macaroni and cheese to my favorite hair designer and good friend Jim Caruso (of Leon's on the Hill). Jim and his wife Kim both enjoyed this home-baked version of an American classic. A far cry from the powdered stuff that comes in a box.

EDWIN PAUL
20327 Mack Avenue - Grosse Pointe Woods

Edwin Paul is pleased to announce that construction has begun at our new day spa. After 15 years of hearing clients tell me that they had just been to various spas in Bloomfield Hills I decided to do some research.

For two years I traveled from Palm Springs to Palm Beach looking at spas from a client's point of view.

I asked owners which services were most popular while studying architecture and design. During this time I learned a true spa must be separate from a salon environment. They are two completely different things that require unique styles. A salon should be fun like a good party, a spa quiet, private and luxurious, not an afterthought in the back of a salon. Clients should smell flowers and beautiful fragrances in a spa, not hair color and perms.

So I got together with the best designers around and came up with Grosse Pointe's only luxury day spa.

Together we gave attention to detail and atmosphere that is uncommon most anywhere.

Here's just a few of the things you'll find inside. Soundproof treatment rooms, separate lounges for men and women, showers, steam room, Wolff tanning equipment, thick embroidered robes, massage, facials, micro dermabrasion, Aveda skin care and make up, makeup lessons, nail care and pedicures in a $5,000 chair that heats and massages, a spa menu created for us by Andiamos, custom wall fountains, imported Italian marble, custom-made furniture from Italy, full retail with gifts for the bath and home, the full line of Edwin Paul hair care, a private outdoor veranda and on and on.

All with the attention to service, education and cleanliness Edwin Paul is famous for.

We'll begin booking appointments the first week of July for our opening July 17th.

Treat yourself to the best at Grosse Pointe's only luxury day spa. You deserve the best. Edwin Paul spa (313) 885-9002. Visit our web site at www.EdwinPaul.com

ULS softball team bows in district championship game

University Liggett School's softball season ended at the hands of an offensive-minded Center Line St. Clement squad in the Division III district tournament hosted by the Crusaders.

St. Clement collected 10 hits and 13 walks on the way to a 14-3 victory over the Knights.

Doubles by Suzanne McGoey and Erin Galvin produced two of the ULS runs. Maggie Dillon had two hits and Maria Lewis picked up one.

ULS finished with a 14-9 record. Team most valuable player honors went to Dillon, who led the Knights with a .524 batting average and a .643 on-base percentage.

Courtney Wudcoski was the RBI leader with 35 and she also posted an 11-4 record on the mound. McGoey led in runs scored with 35. First baseman Tracey Greene received the team's Gold Glove award with only three errors in 76 chances.

ULS advanced to the district championship game with a 10-7 win over Hamtramck St. Florian.

McGoey collected three walks and a single and scored four times. Wudcoski pitched a three-hitter and struck out eight as ULS made its eighth straight appearance in the district championship game.

Wudcoski held the Lancers hitless and scoreless until the fourth inning when St. Florian picked up two unearned runs to cut the Knights' lead to 6-2.

ULS had only a single by Rasheedia Aigoro through the first three innings but the Knights picked up nine walks.

McGoey walked to start the fourth inning and Dillon, Galvin, Wudcoski and Lewis followed with singles to produce a pair of runs.

ULS added two more runs in the fifth, while St. Florian picked up single runs in the fifth and sixth frames. The Lancers rallied for three runs in the seventh before Wudcoski struck out the last two batters.

The game marked the return to action of ULS senior Lesley Greene, who suffered a foot injury in the season opener. She handled seven chances flawlessly.

ULS beat Lutheran East 14-3 in a district qualifying game.

A nine-run first inning was all the Knights needed. After the first three batters walked, Wudcoski followed with a two-run single. Tracey Greene walked ahead of RBI singles by Lewis, Katie Maurer and Christina Sylvester.

McGoey drew her second walk of the inning and Dillon and Galvin followed with RBI singles. The final run scored on Wudcoski's sacrifice.

ULS completed double plays in the second and third innings to hold the Eagles scoreless. The Knights added three more runs in the third. Sylvester walked, Dillon hit a triple to drive her in and Dillon scored on Galvin's double. Galvin scored after three straight walks. Sylvester and Dillon scored runs in the fourth — the third of the game for each — to wrap up the ULS scoring.

Check out your air conditioner before she blows

Q. Mr. Hardware, my central air unit has blown its fuse twice this year. What maintenance should I do to prevent this situation?

A. Keep the compressor coils on the outside of the central air unit clean. The coils contain warmth from the house and need to "dump" the heat outside. Airflow through the coils is important for efficient operation of the compressor. Use a garden hose to blow all the "dogwood fuzzies" — and all other debris — out of the coils. There is a coil cleaner that you can spray on the coils. Let it sit for five minutes and then hose off the coils. This method works when the hose doesn't do a good enough job.

Also, be sure to maintain sufficient free area around the compressor. Don't let shrubs, plants or fencing hinder airflow to the compressor. The less airflow around the unit, the hotter the compressor will get.

Q. I can't tell if the fuses are bad in the basement or in the disconnect outside. There are cardboard tubes with copper ends and I can't see inside. How do I check to see if they are good or not?

A. The best way to check this kind of fuse is with either a continuity tester or an ohmmeter. An inexpensive continuity tester costs around $5. Both instruments will verify if the fuse is good or not. Fuses don't necessarily wear out, either they are good or not. It's a good idea to replace both of them and save the old "good one" as a spare.

Use time delay fuses for the air conditioner and other motor operated appliances. A time-delay fuse allows for a second delay before it "blows." A fuse usually blows during that short space of time when the motor first comes up to speed.

Q. After checking the circuit breakers in the basement what do I do next before calling in a service man?

A. The basement fuses are only half of the story for an exterior air conditioner compressor. There should also be an electrical disconnect outside, which usually has fuses. Pull those fuses out and check them with a continuity tester. If they are good your next hope is possibly the furnace fuse. When the switch on the thermostat is set to "fan on," does the fan on the furnace run? If it does, but the compressor outside is still quiet, bummer. The solution may now lie in the hands of the service man.

For those of you with good outside fuses and an interruptible air conditioner service, you may just be "being interrupted." Check the light in the gray box next to the electric meter. If the red light is on, then you are off. Jump in the pool, if you have one, because you may be without an air conditioner for the next 20 minutes or so.

Q. I have a window air conditioner and the cord is too short.

A. When using an extension cord on any appliance be sure the rating of the cord equals or exceeds the electrical rating on the unit. All appliances should have an ID plate that has the model number and power requirements, including wattage or amperage.

Don't let wattage or amperage scare or confuse you. Both basically state electrical consumption. The more power an appliance requires, the larger the feed line should be. Undersized cords heat up and can cause fire. Now there is no excuse for using an extension cord less than the size it should be. Saving a buck or three is not a good idea when hooking up a unit that will be working when you are asleep.

To determine wattage, multiply voltage by amperage. 115 volts by 10 amps equal 1150 watts. To determine amperage, divide watts by voltage. 1150/115 volts equals 10 amps.

Transform your bedroom into a suite retreat

With today's hectic family schedules, the bedroom has become our haven from the stresses of the day. The average person spends one-third of their lives in bed. So decorate with care and choose furnishings that surround you in comfort.

Begin with the bed. It's usually the focal point of the room so a small change can have a big impact. Splurge on a set of lush linens. One of the most popular choices is cotton percale — the higher the thread count the softer and smoother they will be. Top off luxury sheets with a stylish duvet. Duvets are versatile and often easier to care for. Or, pile on the pillows. Elegant accent pillows can transform an ordinary looking bed into a centerpiece.

Mattress matters

Soft-as-silk sheets won't do you any good if you're sleeping on a hard, lumpy mattress. A comfortable mattress is an important, but often overlooked, part of creating a restful environment. Look for a mattress that provides proper support. Can't decide on firmness? One solution is sleeping on a mattress that adjusts. A Select Comfort bed comes with a digital remote control that allows the firmness level of each side of the bed to be adjusted independently — for personalized comfort and support. Inside the Select Comfort bed, "pillows" of air conform to your body reducing uncomfortable pressure points — making your bed an oasis of comfort.

Improve your bedside manner

Give the top of your nightstand a makeover. Cast a critical eye at clutter, and rearrange your bedside table using a vase of fresh flowers, scented candles and a decorative lamp. Add your favorite family photos for a personal touch.

Floor decor

Add interest to your carpet or hardwood floors by adding layers. Use a soft wool area rug angled next to the bed for a splash of color and comfort. Other popular choices are sisal and sea grass. These natural fiber rugs come in a variety of styles and sizes. Sisal floor coverings are static free and do not attract dirt and dust particles. Sea grass area rugs are a wonderful choice for a bedroom where the warm hues of the grass will accent furniture beautifully.

Dress up your dresser

Group your favorite collectibles atop a dresser for instant impact. Change the collection with the change of seasons and the look won't become stale. In the winter, choose accessories that add texture and warmth like wicker baskets or pottery. Come summer, sooth your senses with pieces that have smooth, clean lines like glassware or silver.

The key to creating your own relaxing retreat is a few, simple steps away. So set the scene for a more serene environment — and get a better night's rest.

Discount service can save or cost you money

Michigan consumers are offered a variety of choices in discount long distance telephone service. Cut-rate calling plans offered by long distance companies and low-cost 10-10 "dial-around" services are promoted in prime-time television commercials, national newspaper and magazine ad campaigns, and direct mail promotions.

The Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) continues to encourage you to consider your long distance calling options carefully. There are many service providers competing for your business — offering a variety of rates and plans. Depending on your individual calling patterns, some deals may save you money, while others could cost you more than you are paying now. Long distance rates are not regulated and can change without notice.

Discount calling plans

Discount calling plans are offered by most long distance carriers. A typical ad for a discount calling plan often shows its low per-minute rate in its headline and in smaller print states its monthly fee for the service. When the service fee is added, the total bill will be higher than the cost for the calls made at the low per-minute rate. For example, a discount calling plan offering state-to-state calls at 7 cents per minute all day, every day, may seem like a good deal until you factor in the monthly service fee.

Remember, the service fee is charged each month even if you do not make any long distance calls. Each company determines its cost-per-minute and monthly service fees and they vary by company. Plans with a low per-minute cost and a sizable monthly service fee may be a bargain for high-volume customers. However, average or low-volume users could pay more than they would on a plan that charges more per minute but less per month. Also, the advertised rate may only apply to calls made to other states during specific times of the day. Higher rates may apply to long distance calls within the state or to other countries.

10-10 'dial-arounds'

As the term implies, when you use a dial-around number, you are "dialing around," or bypassing, the long distance carrier that normally serves you. Advertisements for dial-around numbers usually highlight the low per-minute rate offered while other related costs and requirements are stated in the fine print.

The MPSC urges you to carefully consider the following conditions of service and costs when using dial-around numbers. These conditions vary among companies.

- Minimum talk time requires that your conversation last a minimum length of time (e.g., 10 minutes) before discounted rates apply. If your call lasts less than the required minimum, higher rates apply.

- Full minute billing increments occur when charges for each call are rounded up to the next minute. A call lasting one minute and five seconds is rounded to two minutes. This may be costly if you only make short calls.

- Block rates offer one flat price for a call that lasts up to a specified length of time. For example, with a 20-minute block rate, a call lasting 20 minutes will cost 99 cents — a good deal at 5 cents per minute if you talk for the full 20 minutes. But if you talk less than 20 minutes, or if you reach an answering machine, you will still be charged 99 cents for the call.

- Universal service fee (USF) is assessed to help fund telephone service in rural areas, assist low-income customers, and provide Internet connections for some libraries and schools. You are charged the fee each month by your regular long distance carrier. If you use a dial-around number that assesses the fee, you will pay it twice.

- Monthly and per-call service fees are assessed in addition to per-minute charges. These fees could make your calls expensive if you make short calls or few calls each month.

Some 10-10 dial-around services, like discount calling plans, can save you money. It is essential to read and understand the fine print of dial-around ads for their conditions of service. If you find one that appears to meet your needs, call and request a printed rate card. Review it thoroughly before using the service.

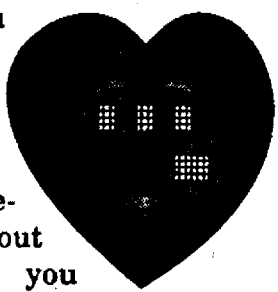

Discount calling plans and dial-around services can change without notice. Review your telephone bill carefully each month for all charges and changes. Call the company and ask for an explanation of any charges you do not understand. Also, shop around for offers that fit your calling pattern that may save you money.

Electric fireplaces: warm, real and efficient

When you want the ambience and warmth of a traditional fireplace, without the hassles, you should consider an electric fireplace.

With electric fireplaces, according to the Edison Electric Institute, you don't have to worry about ventilation requirements or carbon monoxide detectors, chopping wood, storing wood, cleaning up all of the ashes, drafts from chimney flues, and the heat lost going up the chimney. And many now come with a hot air blower for optional heat.

Another advantage — electric fireplaces are 100-percent efficient. And since there is no flue and indoor air is not lost, no chilly indoor drafts are created.

For more information about electric fireplaces, or any innovative electric technology, contact your electric company.

Drywall repair kit makes fixing wallboard easy

HIT — If your home is like most there's probably at least one damaged section of drywall — a hole or small dent — that never seems to get fixed. Caused by the kids, a furniture move or some other minor incident, the damaged drywall is bothersome, but it still hasn't been fixed.

Sound familiar? Given today's frequently hectic schedules, repairing small dents and holes in drywall is a job that's easy to put off until tomorrow.

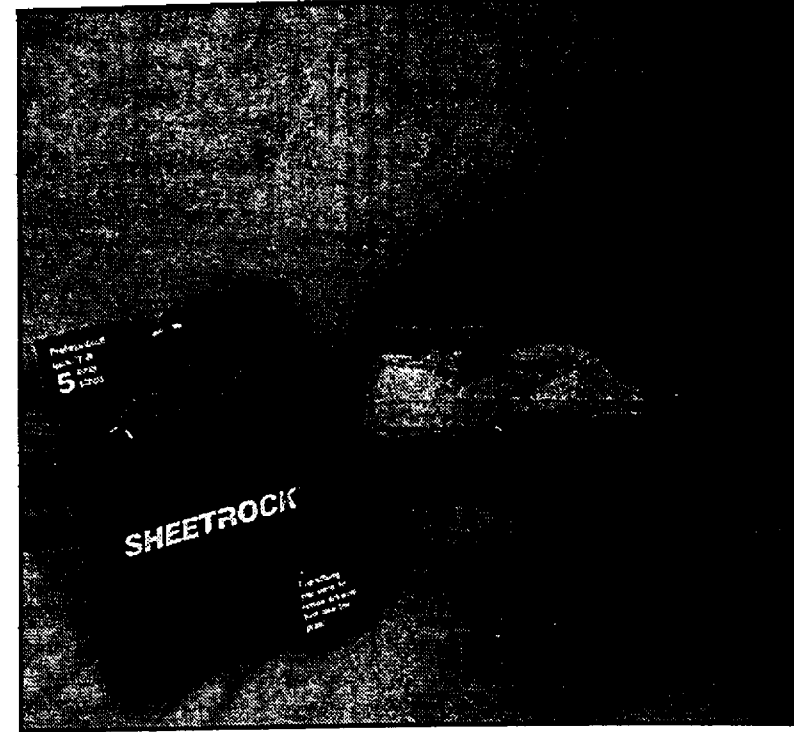

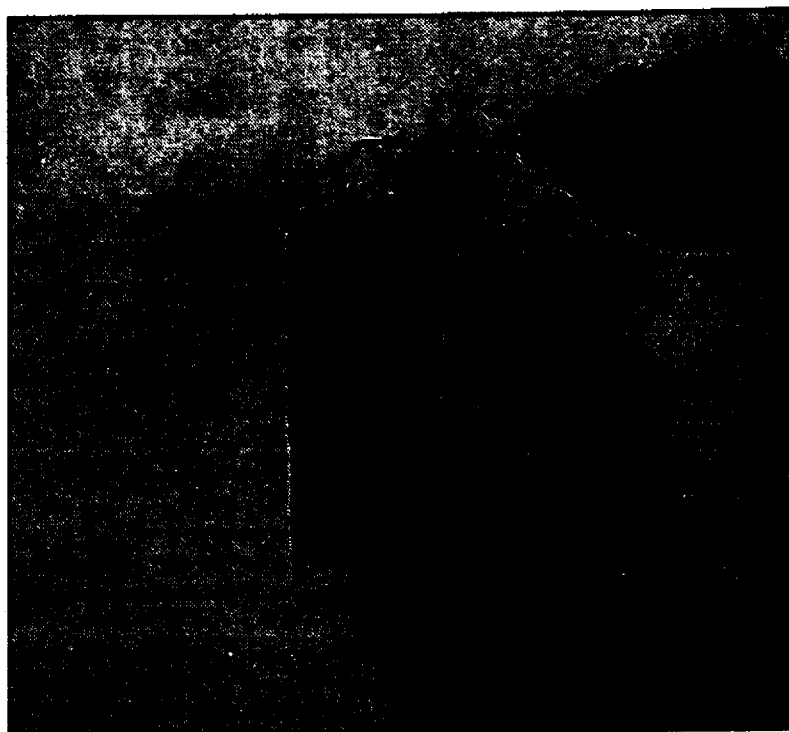

"Drywall repairs are one of those 'in-between' type projects," said Van Perrine, product manager with USG Corp., a leading drywall manufacturer. "On one hand, the job seems too minor to call in a contractor. But on the other hand, many homeowners are a little intimidated by the process. Repairing a damaged section of drywall seems like something they should be able to do, but they're not quite sure exactly how."

According to Perrine, however, there is a helpful resource for do-it-yourselfers — a drywall repair kit.

The kits, available at most home centers, hardware stores and paint retailers, provide basic materials and tools needed to complete simple drywall repairs. They typically include joint compound, tape, application tools and a sanding pad.

One kit — USG's SHEETROCK brand All-In-One Drywall Repair Kit — is especially useful for repairing holes and dents. Besides the basic materials and tools, the kit includes a replacement piece of drywall and a set of drywall repair clips. The clips provide an easy means of attaching a new piece of drywall over mid-to large-size holes in existing wallboard.

Using a replacement section of drywall to repair large holes or water-damaged areas ensures that the repair will be as solid as the surrounding wall.

Drywall clips, included in USG's All-in-One Drywall Repair Kit, facilitate drywall repairs. Simply cut a square around the damaged area, attach the clips to all four edges, insert a new piece of drywall, mix the joint compound, and tape and finish the edges of the repair.

Here's where the drywall clips included in USG's drywall repair kit come in handy. Insert the clips over the edges of all four sides of the cut-out area. Screw the clips in place approximately 3/4-inch from the edge and centered between the tabs on either side of each clip.

Position the replacement section of drywall in place over the cut-out area. Attach the new drywall by fastening screws through the drywall and into the clips. (The clips feature a series of perforated holes for screw attachment). Position the screw approximately 3/4-inch from the edge and align to the screw holding the same clip onto the existing wall surface. Finally, remove the tabs on each clip.

With the new drywall section in place, apply joint compound and tape to all four sides of the repair. Do not overlap tape. Apply the second and third coats of joint compound, allowing each coat to harden before applying the next coat. Feather each new layer of compound out from the previous coat. When the final coat is dry, sand, prime and paint the repair.

USG offers an illustrated step-by-step guide to repairing drywall. For a free copy, write United States Gypsum Co., P.O. Box 806278, Chicago, IL 60680. An online version of the brochure is also available at www.usg.com.

New cabinet latches deter kids, allow moms and dads hands-free operation

HIT — A child's natural curiosity can put him or her at risk for poisoning and injury. Last year, some 125,000 children either drank from or were found with an open container of a household cleaning chemical.

The American Academy of Pediatrics' No. 1 safety recommendation is that you keep harmful products out of your child's sight and reach.

In lieu of that extra pair of eyes or hands that would make a parent's job easier, Amerock introduces its Safety Latch, a specialty catch for kitchen and bathroom base cabinets where cleansers, polishes, toiletries and other potentially hazardous materials are often kept.

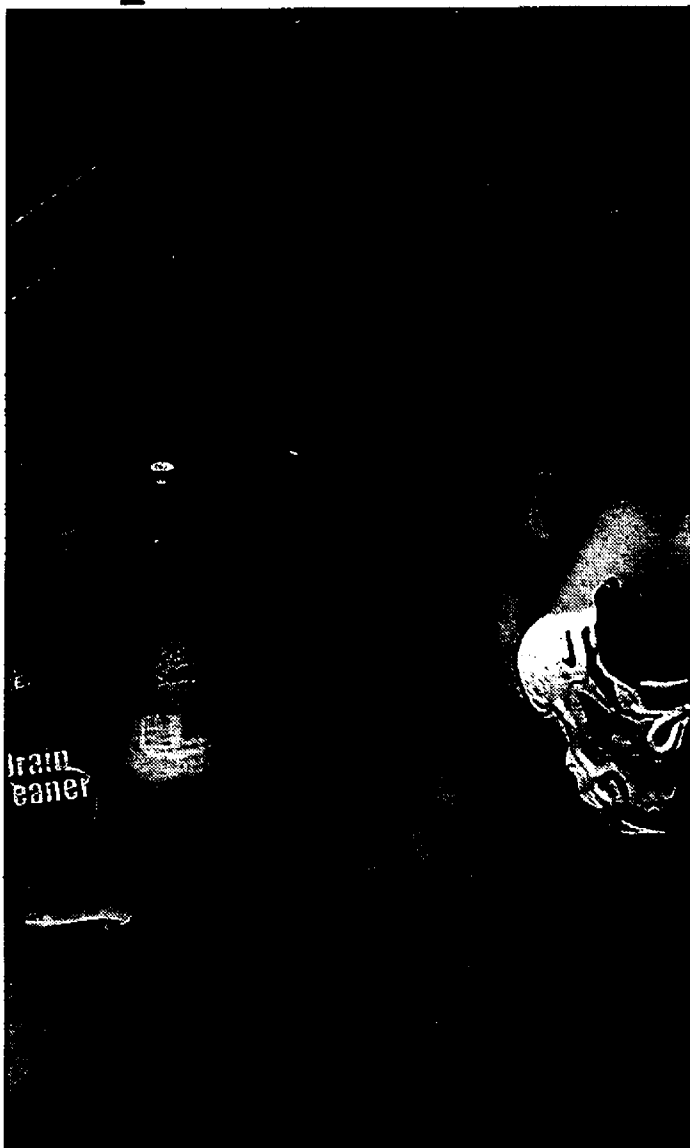

Designed to be hidden from view, the "hands-free" Safety Latch does not arouse a child's curiosity or interfere with a room's decor. The latch cannot be pried open to any degree — so there is no danger of pinched fingers — but it can be easily released by pressing upward with a toe. When the cabinet door is closed, the latch engages again automatically.

Because of the way the release is positioned, there is no danger of scratching the cabinet, even after repeated use. Safety Latch can be mounted on both framed and frameless cabinets as well as cabinets with center stiles. Installation requires just four Phillips-head screws.

Safety Latch is sold at home centers and hardware stores in packages that contain two cabinet door toe latches and two drawer latches to fully child-proof one cabinet unit. The cost is around $4.99 per package.

Made of solid steel and polymers, Safety Latch is cycle tested over 250,000 times to make sure component parts will not wear down after extended use. The product is manufactured to exceed Builders Hardware Manufacturer's Assoc. industry standards and comes with a full lifetime guarantee.

The "hands-free" Safety Latch is the latest product in Amerock's line of cabinet accessories that also includes shelving, storage and organizer systems. The company is the world's largest manufacturer of decorative cabinet hardware, with exclusive new designs added every year. Many products carry the Guardian guaranteed lifetime finish and all are warranted against defects in material and workmanship for as long as the original consumer owns the product. Amerock Corp., based in Rockford, Ill., has been in business since 1929.

Please don't bury me!

A hole dug too deep is a sure way to kill a tree

Spring is prime planting season in most areas of the country. Too often, however, consumers waste hundreds of dollars on trees that will die because they were planted too deep.

"Proper planting is absolutely essential in the failure or success of a transplanted tree," says Robert Rouse, staff arborist for the National Arborist Association. "Using quality plants and following up with good tree care practices, such as watering, pruning and fertilizing, will not save a poorly planted tree. The most common mistake is planting the root ball too deep."

Homeowners can purchase trees packaged in three common forms:

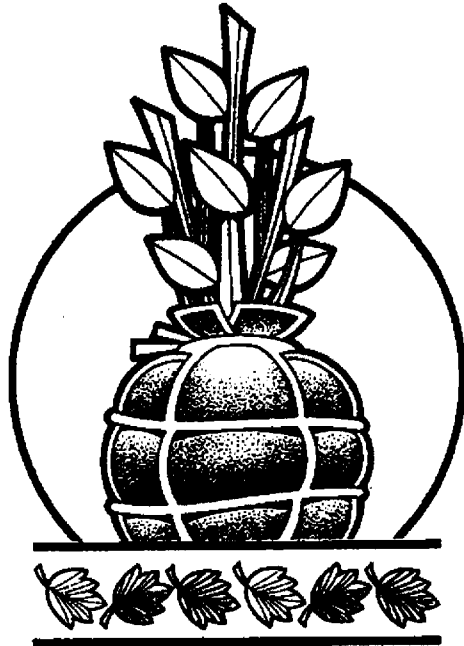

1. Bare-root plants may be sold with the roots tightly packed in a moisture-retaining medium that is wrapped with paper or plastic, or with roots loosely covered by a moist packing medium. Roots must be adequately moistened prior to planting. Roots are spread out evenly in the hole when planting.

2. Balled and burlapped (B&B) trees are moved with a ball of soil protecting their root system. Soil balls are heavy, so professional arborists who have proper equipment should be hired to plant large trees. Smaller B&B trees should be carried with a hand under the ball. Carrying a B&B tree by the stem or branches can result in serious root damage. When planting, set the root ball in the hole, position the tree, then remove twine and nails. Remove or fold back burlap from the upper third of the root ball.

3. Container-grown trees have the advantage of a root system that is relatively undisturbed at planting, but beware of "pot-bound" container trees. Do not buy container trees that have a large amount of roots completely circling the inside of the pot. These trees will take a long time to get established after planting because the roots have difficulty growing beyond the thick ring of circling roots.

Immediately before planting container trees, prune the roots. Root pruning can cut up to 50 percent of the roots in container trees, but this is still sufficient to permit plant establishment. This compares with about 10 percent or less of the root system being transplanted with B&B trees. Always remove the container prior to planting.

Rouse advises consumers to follow these planting guidelines:

- Measure the height and diameter of the root ball or root spread.
- Dig the hole 1 to 3 inches shallower than root ball or root depth. The hole's diameter should be two to three times the diameter of the root ball or root spread.
- Set the tree on undisturbed solid ground in the center of the area. The tree should be planted so that the root flare, the base of the tree trunk where the roots begin to "flare-out," is visible and above grade.
- Backfill with soil from the planting hole, using water to pack or settle the soil around the root ball.
- Mulch the planting area with 2 to 4 inches of an organic mulch such as wood chips. Do not mulch up to or against the trunk.
- Trees should be pruned after planting to remove broken, damaged, diseased or dead branches.
- Stake and/or protect the trunk of the tree if there is a real potential for wind damage or lawn mower injury. Remove the guy wires when the staking is no longer needed or the tree could be injured or even killed from girdling by the wire.
- Prune to develop a good branch structure once the tree has become established in its new home, usually one to three years after planting. Never remove more than 25 percent of total foliage in one year.
- Fertilizing is not recommended at the time of planting.

What've you heard? Manufactured home myths

We've all heard the skinny on manufactured homes — they have shoddy workmanship, they depreciate in value and offer homeowners so few options that they all end up looking alike. But is what we've heard accurate?

Manufactured homes have come a long way since their "trailer" days — and what you read here may surprise you. By the time you've finished, you may find yourself considering purchasing a manufactured home in the future. You would be in good company since over 19 million people across the country have already discovered the comfort and convenience a manufactured home lifestyle has to offer. In their quest to find their dream home, these people cut through the manufactured home myths and found a beautiful, affordable reality. And now, it is time to bury these myths forever.

1. Site-built homes appreciate, manufactured homes depreciate. Studies have shown that it is the land on which the home stands, not the home itself nor the method by which it was built, that determines whether its value rises or falls. The housing market affects both site-built and manufactured homes, and when the market is good, both types of housing appreciate. If you are looking for a solid investment, manufactured homes may be a good option for you.

Own your own home

2. Manufactured homes are poor quality versions of site-built homes. Manufactured homes, unlike site-built homes, are regulated by the U.S. government under the HUD code. This means design, construction, durability, strength, fire resistance, energy efficiency, and more, are all federal matters. The manufactured home is the only form of housing routinely inspected for building code compliance before the homeowner moves in. Plus, the building process is designed to be efficient! Instead of subjecting top quality materials and equipment to the elements, manufactured homes are built in factories, saving time and money. The factory-building process also allows craftsmen to build walls and floors on fixtures that ensure each home comes together perfectly.

3. All manufactured homes look the same. No way! With all of the options available to the consumer, manufactured homes allow for great diversity in home design. You can choose the size of your home, decide on the layout of your floor plan and pick from a huge list of options. Looking for a 3-bedroom, 2-bath home with a jacuzzi tub and skylights? What about cathedral ceilings or bay windows? The choices are yours — from the pitch of the roof to the optional site-built garage, your home was made for you.

4. Manufactured homes are cold in the winter and hot in the summer. The insulation in today's manufactured home is similar to that in a site-built home — sometimes even better. With R-values of 21 in the roof and 11 in the side walls and floor, a manufactured home is cozy the whole year through.

5. Manufactured home walls are too thin. You can practically listen to your neighbor's radio, right? Wrong! Today's manufactured homes have interior walls three to four inches thick, covered with 5/16-inch or 1/2-inch gypsum. You won't hear any more through those walls than you will in site-built homes, considering they both use the same materials. Exterior walls are often built using 2-by-6 construction.

6. Manufactured home roofs are unsafe. The roofing structure of a modern manufactured home is more precisely engineered, and monitored more closely, than that of site-built homes. Trusses are certified and are regularly tested. Manufactured homes offer a higher grade vinyl siding on their homes, and they have the same shingles as their site-built coun-

Antiques and Collectibles

Be careful when buying an antique bed. The size may fool you. It was not until the 1920s that the sizes were standardized by manufacturers, so early beds often require special mattresses and sheets. Take the measurement from the inside of the bed, side-to-side between the rails and head-to-foot. If the footboard or headboard is curved, as it sometimes was in Victorian times, you may need a custom-made mattress. Standard beds today are: single (39 inches by 74 inches), three-quarter (48 inches by 74 inches), double (54 inches by 74 inches), queen (60 inches wide or larger), and king (78 inches wide, which is the size of two singles).

An old bed can sometimes use a standard box spring and mattress, but today it is also possible to get a special polyurethane foam mattress cut to fit. But don't forget the problem of today's fitted bottom sheets. Special mattresses may require a 4-inch-deep "pocket," and these special sheets are hard to find.

An antique dining room table is one of the most expensive pieces of furniture needed in a house. A good shopper can often find an old table at a bargain price. But there are pitfalls to be avoided when choosing a table.

The table has evolved in the past 300 years as dining styles have changed. In the 17th century, the table was long and narrow, made to be used in a hall. Then came the gate-leg table that could be used on a round or oval table sized for the special room meant for dining. The gate leg swung shut, and the table could be moved to the side of the room.

By the 18th century, the table was often three tables, a center rectangle and two drop-leaf tables that could be added to the center table. All the legs on the three tables created a seating problem, so designers created the center pedestal table.

When buying a table, decide how many people will use the table and check the size of the table and room space. Be sure the table is not too wide for the room.

The average rectangular table is 30 inches to 44 inches wide. There must be space to pull the chair away from the table to sit down. A chair is at least 24 inches wide.

Notice the position of the table legs. Be sure they will not make a seated guest uncomfortable. Check the number of inches from the floor to the bottom of the tabletop or apron. It must be high enough so you can sit in the chair without bumping your knees.

Look underneath the table to see if all of the leaves are original. Small tables are often made larger with added leaves. Prices are determined by the style, the type of wood and the age. An all-original table that seats more than eight is desirable. If it is large enough for 12 to 16, it sells for a very high price.

For Thanksgiving dinner, fill the table with guests and be sure you own a tablecloth that is long enough to hang at least 12 inches over at each end. Cloths over four yards long are hard to find.

Q. I have a set of four cobalt-blue glass cruets. I received them several years ago as two separate gift sets. All four cruets have the same etched leaf-and-flower design. Recently I found a silver castor that holds all four cruets. The castor is marked "Meriden B. Company" in a circle. The design on the platform of the castor is very similar to the design on the cruets. Have I accidentally assembled an original set?

A. Your castor is pictured in the Meriden Britannia Silver-Plate Treasury catalog of 1886-87. It was one of several silver-plate castor sets available from the company. The mark you describe was used until the 1930s, although the Meriden Britannia Co. became part of the International Silver Co. in 1898. Your glass cruets, on the other hand, are 1970s reproductions. We found them pictured in a wholesale catalog, where they were offered in blue or ruby.

Enormous bedrooms

Creative angular rooms

Large rooms and eye-catching details are a major highlight of this home. Wide open spaces greet your visitors as they enter the front door. The living room, dining room and foyer are all open to each other. The living room ceiling is 16 feet high and built-in shelves bank a fireplace.

The heart of the home kitchen and keeping room include abundant space for sitting and relaxing, as well as cooking and eating. An additional fireplace contributes to the coziness of this area.

Between the kitchen and double garage is an oversized laundry room, half bath and coat closet. The basement stairs are here as well.

The bedroom wing of the home includes graciously spacious bedrooms and luxurious baths. The interconnecting bath between the two family bedrooms includes double sinks and linen storage.

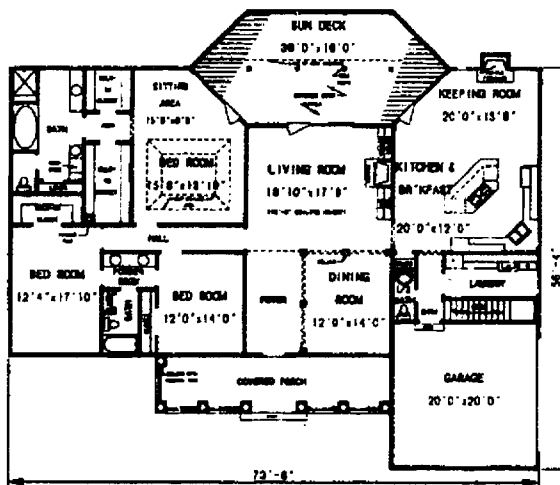

The master suite is the ultimate in luxury and livability. A romantic sitting area and designer bath, along with enormous his and hers walk-in closets provide unsurpassed elegance for the homeowner.

The attached double garage, which is pulled forward under its own gable, flows together with the steeply pitched roof lines to give this home a solid look of permanence. The house is drawn for siding with covered porches front and back as well as rear sun deck.

Manufactured

terparts. Your manufactured home is just as sturdy, inside and out.

7. Manufactured homes have weak floors. Worried your waterbed is going to fall through the floor in a manufactured home? Well, worry no more. The flooring materials used in manufactured homes are the same as those used in site-built homes. Your floors are just as comfortable, too; manufactured homes have the same 18- to 30-ounce carpeting as new site-built homes. You can rest easy in a manufactured home.

8. Manufactured homes have safety issues. People tend to assume that manufactured homes are more prone to fires and other problems than are site-built homes. However, insurance companies have found that manufactured homes, in many ways, are safer than their site-built cousins. The University of Michigan, in fact, found that manufactured homes in this region have a lower rate of fires than site-built homes. Both manufactured and site-built homes have the same copper wiring, but as for the rest, the HUD codes are actually tougher than the national electrical code that governs most site-built homes. Manufactured homes are safe for you and your family.

9. Manufactured homes aren't quality homes. Manufactured home makers are so confident in their materials and workmanship, most homes are covered by warranties of up to five years, with three years on interior features. What other type of home can offer you a commitment like that?

10. The manufactured housing industry is only interested in the short term. Industry members are continually working to improve their businesses. Many companies even sponsor homeowner surveys to assess the overall satisfaction with manufactured homes, including workmanship, customer service and quality. How many local contractors have that kind of commitment to their customers?

The manufactured housing industry has worked diligently to provide consumers with the best possible home. These homes have become attractive, affordable, quality options available to anyone interested in finding the perfect home for their future. Living in today's manufactured home — what a beautiful choice.
