Marine heads Corps' top unit

Karl S. Day award honors father of Park resident

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A Marine from the Pointes is proud to command the best unit of its type in the Corps.

Maj. Thomas Rose, a combat veteran living in Grosse Pointe Woods, learned recently that his 200-man air support outfit has won the Karl S. Day award.

Rose said his unit was rated tops in community service, military deployments and performance "across the board." The unit provides engineering support to Marine air wings deployed whenever and wherever.

Rose commands Marine Wing Support Squadron 472 stationed at Selfridge Air National Guard Base in Mount Clemens. The squadron is part of Marine Wing Support Group 47 of the 4th Marine Division.

"We have engineering assets all over the world," said Rose, who credited his men's work ethic for winning the honor. "They do stuff they're not required to do," he said.

By coincidence, the Day award has another Grosse Pointe connection.

Lt. Gen. Karl S. Day, the first three-star general in the Marine Corps Reserves, was the father of Nancy Trowern of Grosse Pointe Park.

Day was an early Marine pilot who won the Navy Cross in World War I, an honor second only to the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Trowern said her father "didn't brag about it. I learned it from other people."

On his last mission over Germany in 1918, Day, at the stick of a DeHavilland-9, targeted a railroad yard. A large bomb slung beneath the cloth-covered aircraft blocked his view through what passed for a bombsight during the early days of military aviation — a hole cut through the floor of the fuselage.

Flying over the rail yard, Day peered out the cockpit to drop a bomb on what turned out to be an enemy ammunition train. The resulting explosion obliterated a troop train reating on adjoining rails. The German troops were taken out by their own ammunition.

After the war, Day became a test pilot for the Curtiss Wright aircraft company.

"He worked with Jimmy Doolittle," said Trowern. Day was also the first pilot for American Airlines.

As a Marine aviator, Day wrote the book, literally, on radio and instrument flying. He was buried with honors at Arlington National Cemetery in 1973.

"Day is a legend in the Marine Corps," said Rose, who will return to the Pointes soon from desert training in California.

Rose and his unit will be on hand at the Selfridge Air Show on July 22-23.

City of Grosse Pointe manager Tom Kressbach was awarded the Grosse Pointe Village Association's second Jerry Valente Village Visionary Award at the City council meeting on Monday, June 19.

Presenting Kressbach with the award was Beverly Leinweber, the first recipient of the honor. Kressbach was honored for his over 30 years of outstanding service to the community as well as for his tireless dedication to the beautification and improvement of the City.

The Jerry Valente Village Visionary Award was established by the Village Association's board of directors as a memorial to Jerald Valente, who died two years ago.

MEAP results on even keel in G.P. schools

Social studies test remains a challenge for district students

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

MEAP scores in the Grosse Pointe public schools increased slightly, but remained well above the state average.

"They're high and stable and continue to improve," said assistant superintendent for administrative services Marjorie Parsons.

Scores on average rose 1.25 percent in the math, reading, science, writing and social studies tests given to students in grades 4, 5, 7 and 8, keeping the Pointes about 17.5 percent above state average scores.

However, scores at Poupard Elementary School, which has had a history of scores running below state averages, saw significant increases. Scores rose 33.7 percent in science, 24.8 percent in writing, 14.4 percent in reading, 12.8 percent in math and 1.7 percent in social studies.

Poupard principal Glenn Croydon said he and his staff took a multi-angled approach to improving student performance at the school. He said his staff called other schools in and out of the district to see what they were doing, reviewed tests and developed individual plans for certain students, held parent conferences for low-achieving students and encouraged them to get tutorial help and made recommendations of how parents could help kids at home, put students in smaller groups to take the tests and employed

Availability of beach uncertain as 4th nears

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Heavy rains between 10:40 p.m. Saturday, June 24 and 12:05 a.m. Sunday, June 25, caused a combined sewage overflow into Lake St. Clair from Grosse Pointe Farms.

Darrel Schuurman of the Farms water department said he estimates that approximately 15,000 cubic feet of combined storm and sanitary sewage was discharged into the lake from seven outflow points in the Farms.

Richard Huhn, director of parks and recreation for the Farms, said that Wayne County tests the water along the Pier Park beach once a week. The last test taken was on Monday, June 26.

Huhn did not have the results by the time the Grosse Pointe News went to press, but he said that the samples taken on June 20 produced excellent results.

"The cutoff point for allowing people to go into the lake is a count of 300 parts per million of E. coli bacteria," Huhn said. "When we test our water, we take four samples from four locations just to be sure. Our June 20 samples came back 34 parts per million, 57 parts per million, 59 parts per million and 84 parts per million, which is very good."

Once they take their samples, county officials take them to a private laboratory where the water is tested for E. coli bacteria, Huhn said. Farms staff also take samples and they are tested at a facility at 9 Mile and Jefferson. The county has to test a lot of samples, so the Farms gets results back quicker, usually within a day. The latest samples that were tested were taken on the morning of Tuesday, June 27.

Huhn said that the Farms is located closer to the Detroit River than other spots in Macomb County, where beaches have been closed. As a result

■ Grosse Pointe residents are not responding meaningfully to pleas by the War Memorial Association for badly needed additions to help maintain the center on Lakeshore Road.

Although 65 people have recently contributed $4,098 to the center, the effort is dismal considering it came on the heels of a request for funds mailed to nearly 8,000 Pointe households. The center is operating at a loss of about $14,000 per year.

■ Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers and dive team members Michael Kenyon and Archie Grieve helped locate the body of a drowning victim in 11 feet of water south of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Shores resident and local businessman Leon Sehoyan assisted with officers from the Farms, Wayne County and U.S. Coast Guard.

A five-hour search, which included being dragged back and forth through the water by the Coast Guard, located the body of a 24-year-old woman from Pontiac.

Witnesses said the woman dove off a boat to cool off. Struggling to stay afloat, the woman was unable to be kept afloat by a 34-year-old male companion who dived in for the rescue. The death was rated accidental.

■ A trial testing the constitutionality of an ordinance prohibiting pit bulls in Grosse Pointe Woods is back in the courtroom.

The ordinance bans bull terriers, pit bull terriers, Staffordshire bull terriers, American pit bull terriers or any related breeds.

The attorney for a Woods woman who was cited under the ordinance said pit bulls can't be singled out as more dangerous than any other type of dog.

the help of the building reading and math specialists.

"This year's fourth graders were one of the first grades to get support from the reading specialists when they were brought in four years ago," said Croydon. "Until we get to 100 percent proficiency, there's still more to do."

Even though scores on the social studies tests ran 60-65 percent above the state average scores, students in the district brought in less than stellar scores. While eighth graders made substantial improvements on the social studies test, 12.6 percent of them scored non-proficient. Fifth graders showed little increase in proficiency with 27.8 percent scoring non-proficient on the test.

Recently, the district made revisions to the K-12 social studies curriculum (see story, page 12A). Parsons said the MEAP results were a major factor in the revision.

"Economics and geography are now being taught as early as grade 2," said Parsons. "The MEAP has had a big influence on that inclusion. Also, writing is included in the test. They have to know how to solve problems as well as know the facts."

Parsons said it may take several years for social studies scores to show noticeable improvements.

In addition to measuring individual ability and knowledge, the district uses the MEAP results in part of its curriculum development. Parsons said tests would be reviewed over the summer with recommendations being forwarded to building principals and staff in September.

Shops on Fisher burgled

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

City of Grosse Pointe public safety officers, while on routine patrol, discovered early on the morning of Sunday, June 25, that a number of shops along Fisher Road had been broken into.

According to the police reports, the break-ins were discovered at 8:07 a.m. when a patrol officer noticed that the glass doors of three Fisher businesses were missing. A closer inspection of the crime scenes revealed that the thief or thieves had broken the glass in the door frames and then carefully removed any remaining shards of glass stuck in the frames.

Police believe that was done to prevent cuts while entering the stores. Blood was found on one of the doors, leading police to believe that the thief was unsuccessful in the attempt to avoid being cut.

After contacting the store owners, police searched the three stores. According to the owners, not a whole lot was missing. Two of the stores did not keep any money in the cash registers and the third store only kept about $50 in the cash box, which was later found on the front lawn of a home in the 300 block of Lincoln.

The inside of the cash box was wet, which leads police to believe that the thief opened it up between 2 and 5 a.m. Sunday morning, the hours in which it was raining.

More books, possibly more room, scheduled for libraries

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

More books are in the budget for the Grosse Pointe Public Library, but a recommended higher millage rate may mean more money on the books for library expansion and/or renovation.

The Grosse Pointe Library Board approved a $2,993,721 budget for the 2000-01 fiscal year, up $101,846 from the 1999-00 budget.

Among the expenditure highlights is an 11.6 percent, or $52,030, increase in library materials and program expenditures, including the addition of e-books to the library's collection. Other increases, such as temporary salaries, fringe benefits, phones and supplies and postage were set to accommodate normal increases.

Most of the increase in revenues, $110,000, will come from donations and gifts. There is an anticipated $5,000 decrease in state and county aid and $7,000 decrease in fines and rentals due to more proposed fine-free days and rental-free days being planned at the three branches.

While revenues from local taxes have remained about the same, board treasurer James Fausone advised the board to consider increasing the library's millage rate, currently set at 1.14 mills, when the board sets the millage rate in September. The board has a voted authority limit of 1.674 mills.

Library board president John Bruce said two of the library branches need more room, but did not elaborate on what expansion or new building sites would be proposed.

the water current is stronger, resulting in greater water circulation and less water stagnation and a lower chance of a high bacteria count.

With the Fourth of July weekend coming up, Huhn and his department are going to everything in their power to ensure a safe and enjoyable weekend.

"We have a combined sewer system," Schuurman said. "That means storm water and sanitary sewage travel along the same pipe system to Detroit for processing. When there are heavy rains, like what we experienced Saturday night, the system can become overwhelmed. The sewage has to go somewhere, so it's discharged into the lake."

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency have been working to end such discharges by communities like the Farms. To that end, the city was mandated to separate its sewer system. So for the past several months, construction crews have been digging up streets in the Farms to install a separate sewer line for storm water. Once completed, the system will no longer need to discharge into the lake.

DSO holiday concert features 'cannon' by Pointer

By Margie Reins Smith
Assistant Editor

Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" is the traditional selection for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's Fourth of July concert at Greenfield Village. It's always the last piece on the program and in addition to the usual church bells, augmented brass and cannon fire, the holiday version includes a fireworks display.

This year, Holly Baughman of Grosse Pointe Park will fire the cannons.

"This is my chance to play with the DSO," Baughman said, with a smile.

She plays the viola, the piano and the organ. Someday she'd like to play the viola with a symphony orchestra like the DSO or the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

For now, she is executive assistant to Emil Kang, the new president of the DSO.

Baughman is responsible for managing Kang's schedule and correspondence and she also organizes board meetings.

"The full board consists of 75 people," she said. "They meet four times a year. "The executive committee of 27 people meets five times a year. The 12 officers meet every three weeks."

Baughman grew up in Dayton, Ohio. She started playing the piano when she was 5; the viola at age 8; the organ when she was in college.

Holly Baughman of Grosse Pointe Park earned a bachelor's degree in viola performance. She plays the viola, the piano and the organ.

"I started playing the viola in the school system," Baughman said. "I chose it because it was the least common instrument. I wanted to be different."

She earned a bachelor of arts degree in viola performance from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y. She also took courses in management studies from the Simon School of Business, which is part of the University of Rochester.

She also studied organ in college and is currently the organist at the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"As part of my program at Eastman I was required to do an internship," she said. "I got a job as an intern with the DSO. I had to move to the Detroit area and I didn't have a lot of time to look for a place to live, so I lived in Farmington Hills. I always loved Grosse Pointe, however."

She moved to Grosse Pointe Park two years ago after she got a full time job working with the DSO.

"I like the quaintness of the Grosse Pointe area. I love the Village. I like to walk and ride my bike near the water. The people here are friendly. A lot of DSO musicians and staff live here. I feel surrounded by friends."

Baughman will fire the cannon for four outdoor concerts which will be presented at Greenfield Village July 1-4. "Usually a staff member does it," she said, "because you must know how to read a score. Last year I was the page-turner when someone else fired the cannon.

"The cannons fire 16 times," she said. "I sit about 200 feet from the stage and wear an earpiece because of the time delay.

Baughman doesn't actually fire a muzzle-loaded bronze cannon like Napoleon used in his 1812 Russian campaign — or a 12-pound French siege cannon sometimes used for performances of the Tchaikovsky classic.

"They're not actually cannons, but 6-inch tall stakes in the ground. Usually people gather around to watch them go off."

Music is part of Baughman's daily life. She takes viola lessons and plays daily, as well as practicing the piano and the organ.

She plays the viola in two community symphony orchestras — the Dearborn Symphony and the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony. Each orchestra gives five or six concerts each season.

"Some day I would like to be a member of the Detroit Symphony or the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra," she said. "The DSO has 10 regular violists. The positions are very competitive. For each opening there may be 40 to 100 musicians who audition."

Baughman said Neeme Järvi, DSO music director, brings out the best in the orchestra's musicians.

"He is world renowned. He's energetic; enthusiastic; incredible to watch; inspiring when portraying what the music is all about. And I believe he likes Michigan very much."

One of the perks of working for the DSO is free concerts. "I go to as many concerts as possible," she said. "If there is a space, I usually sit in the box level seats."

Baughman is enthusiastic about the revitalization of downtown Detroit. She points proudly to the stadium, downtown theaters, the opera house and the music hall.

"I hope our project, the renovation expansion of Orchestra Hall and Orchestra Place, will do its part in the revitalization of downtown. Orchestra Place is being designed and developed right now. We'll probably break ground for the project at the beginning of next year."

The four Greenfield Village concerts will be held on Saturday through Tuesday, July 1-4. Doors open at 7 p.m. and people are encouraged to bring blankets or chairs and sit on the lawn.

A prelude concert by the Jazz Ambassadors will be from 7:30 to 8 p.m. and the main concert begins at 8:30 p.m. Advance tickets are $19 for adults and $10 for children. On the days of the concerts, tickets are $21 and $12.

AAA, ATPA team to fight auto theft

AAA Michigan, in partnership with the Michigan Auto Theft Prevention Authority (ATPA), is fighting auto theft by offering free vehicle window etching on Friday, June 9, at the downtown Detroit office, 1501 Washington Blvd. Etching will take place from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (weather permitting). This community service is available to everyone.

"Etching a vehicle's glass is a simple, effective way to help continue to cut auto theft in Michigan," stated Jerry Hinton, manager of AAA Michigan's claims investigations unit. "This is one of the most worthwhile community relations and theft prevention programs we know. Last year, nearly 6,000 cars were etched statewide during the program."

In 1998, the last full year for which figures are available, auto thefts in Michigan fell 4 percent, from 59,826 in 1997, to 57,228. Between 1986 and 1998, Michigan thefts have dropped 21 percent. At the same time, thefts nationally have increased 1 percent.

"While the rate fell slightly, an average 157 auto owners in Michigan each day were impacted by the crime of car theft. Our etching program aims to lower that rate," Hinton said.

Etching is a simple process. A miniature copy of each vehicle's identification number (or VIN) is acid-stenciled into the windshield, side windows and rear window. The process does not harm the window or detract from the vehicle's appearance. Stickers are also placed on each front side window, identifying the vehicle to would-be thieves that it has been protected.

"Etching is designed to make it hard for chop-shop operators to sell the glass for use in other vehicles, and it means they must replace the identified glass before any etched vehicle can be resold illegally," Hinton added.

Vehicle etching is offered only in dry weather and at temperatures above 50 degrees. Owners interested in this free service must bring their state vehicle registration, which lists the VIN number.

Along with etching, other steps motorists can take to prevent theft include:

• Lock your car and take the key every time, even at your home. Park in well-lighted areas. Place packages out of sight. Leaving portable CD players, cellular phones and other expensive items in view is inviting theft.

• Keep driver license, vehicle registration and any other identification with your address in your wallet or purse, never in your car. Thieves use this information to find your home. Never keep your title in your vehicle.

• Install an approved anti-theft device, such as an alarm or kill-switch, which may qualify for a discount on the comprehensive portion of your auto insurance. For example, AAA Michigan offers a 5 percent discount for etched vehicles and up to 10 percent for other anti-theft devices.

• Auto theft tipsters can earn rewards. Call H.E.A.T. (Help Eliminate Auto Theft) at (800) 242-HEAT. Since October 1985, the hotline has received more than 6,170 calls, resulting in the arrest and prosecution of 2,320 car thieves and the recovery of 2,825 stolen vehicles valued at $32 million. The program has paid nearly $2.2 million to more than 1,400 tipsters.

In addition, AAA Michigan is strongly committed to fighting auto theft fraud. Since 1984, when AAA Michigan's claims investigation unit was established, the company has successfully worked with law enforcement and community groups to deter fraud and save policyholders millions of dollars.

• Michigan's auto theft rate ranked eighth nationally in 1998, down from first place in 1994.

• The top five counties for vehicle theft, based on 1998 figures, are Wayne, 36,109; Genesee, 3,503; Oakland, 3,696; Macomb, 3,472; and Kent, 1,915. The record total for vehicle theft in Michigan was 78,006 in 1984.

• The top 10 most stolen cars in Michigan in 1999, according to AAA Michigan records: Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera, Chevrolet Caprice, Ford Mustang, Buick Regal, Ford Escort, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Ford Taurus, Pontiac Grand Am, Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme and Cadillac Deville.

Don't have to melt down over a summer breakdown, AAA says

Even the best-planned vacation with the best-maintained vehicle can go awry because of a mechanical problem, and motorists must know how to safely deal with a breakdown, says AAA Michigan.

First, if your vehicle begins to malfunction, stay calm. Use your turn signals to smoothly pull off, preferably onto the right side of the road, as far onto the shoulder as possible. A vehicle on or too close to the roadway endangers you and your occupants and sets the scene for a potential accident.

AAA members can dial Emergency Road Service directly on their AAA Connect cellular phone with a special logoed button, or call (800) AAA-MICH and follow the prompts.

Once at the side of the road, turn on your emergency flashers. If you must exit the vehicle, use the door away from traffic. Set up reflectors, flares or other signals to alert other drivers.

Return to your vehicle and lock all doors and roll up windows.

If someone other than a uniformed police officer stops, roll down the window only enough to ask them to telephone the police, your auto club or a service station.

If stranded in the Detroit area, special Courtesy Patrol vans operated by AAA Michigan for the Alliance for a Safer Greater Detroit are available to help motorists between 6:30 and 9 a.m. and 3 to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday on select metro Detroit freeways. Just call 911 for assistance.

Lowering prescription drug prices will save lives

By John Freeman

I often thought my cat Sobo had the best drug coverage available — my wallet, but little did I know just how better off pets are if they need prescription drugs than humans!

There is a health crisis sweeping this country — the soaring prices of prescription drugs. Drug prices are rising twice as fast as the inflation rate, even as the number of people with prescription drug insurance continues to decline. Approximately 70 million Americans have little or no prescription drug coverage.

Uninsured people are grossly overcharged for prescription drugs. The prices uninsured individuals and families pay for prescriptions is about twice what the federal government pays for the same drugs under the Federal Supply Schedule. In many cases, uninsured families are charged two or three times more than their insured neighbors, even in the same pharmacy. Similarly, uninsured people pay 30 percent to 70 percent more than Canadians for the identical prescriptions.

Even my cat, Sobo, gets a better deal than uninsured families. Veterinary medications often sell for less than half of what the pet owners pay for the exact same drug for themselves. If you purchase Lanoxin for heart failure, you will pay $25.65 to treat yourself, but only $6.36 to treat pets!

People are risking their health when they have to decide between purchasing food or medicine for themselves or their children.

Seniors are especially vulnerable to high drug prices because they consume one-third of all prescriptions and many live on low fixed incomes. According to studies by the National Council for Senior Citizens and the AARP, those who cannot afford exorbitant drug prices cope by sharing drugs, skipping doses or simply doing without medicine altogether.

Michigan must act to address this problem.

While the federal government has been deadlocked over prescription drug reform, states have taken the lead to ensure that uninsured families and seniors are not left to bear the brunt of inflated prescription drug prices.

Maine recently enacted a law to make prescription drugs affordable that can serve as a model for Michigan. The Fair Drug Pricing law, passed with near unanimous bipartisan support, directs the Maine state government to use its bulk purchasing power to negotiate rebates and steep discounts from drug manufacturers and retail pharmacies and pass the savings on to those who have no prescription drug insurance. The program doesn't cost taxpayers a single penny because the administrative costs are paid out of the rebates from the drug companies.

Drug companies assert that laws like Maine's will hurt their ability to research and develop new drugs. But this claim is absurd because the pharmaceutical industry is the most profitable in the world, according to the latest report from Fortune 500 magazine, reporting a profit of 18 percent compared to 5 percent for other industries. Drug companies spend twice as much money on marketing and advertising than research and development. They spent nearly $2 billion on direct advertisements to consumers. And if prescription drug prices were reduced, a Merrill Lynch study finds that there would be an increase in the volume of sales that would offset any loss from reducing prices.

Medicine is not a luxury. Medicine should be affordable and thus available to fight disease. Michigan should act to bring down the high cost of prescription drugs for all individuals and families. In the end, it's about saving lives.

John Freeman is a former Michigan state legislator (1992-98) and is now with the Center for Policy Alternatives, a bipartisan policy organization.

Time for a July 4 rebellion?

Grosse Pointe News cartoonist Phil Hands has captured the mood of the people in his adjacent editorial cartoon in this week's paper.

Even though we probably are among the most spoiled in the world when it comes to taxes and gas prices, we are nevertheless angry and suspicious.

We suspect the gas companies of collusion and accuse the gas station owners of gouging. We notice that when it's announced the price of crude will go up in the near future, gas prices at the pump go up immediately. But when crude costs go down, we don't see prices at the pumps go down with the same alacrity.

But if we were to stage a protest, engage in "civil disobedience," how would we do it?

As far as gas is concerned, we couldn't dump it overboard as our forebears did when they protested tariffs by dumping tea into Boston Harbor. We don't need another Valdez incident. Besides, the pipeline break in Jackson showed all that would do is cause prices to go up even faster!

We recall seeing on a gas pump in Michigan a placard stating that 33 cents of the cost of every gallon of gas goes to taxes. If we reduced the tax we could get the price of gas below $2 a gallon.

But Washington and Lansing are unwilling to do that. Gov. John Engler points out that government cannot legislate demand.

Oh no? Raise the tax on any product or commodity high enough and we guarantee you'll see demand go down. (That's called "elasticity" for you economics fans out there. See, we took ECON 101, too!)

We could protest by simply driving less, by taking public transportation, by carpooling, by dumping our semi-tractor size SUVs. We could, but we won't.

Besides, it's a holiday weekend. We gotta travel. Heaven forbid we stay home and enjoy our community and the company of our neighbors, family and friends.

At any rate, while you're pumping $50 worth of gas in your tank this weekend, take time to reflect on our freedoms. Despite our self-centered politicians and robber-baron corporations (just kidding, mostly), we still have it pretty good in America. Happy Independence Day!

Offering from the loft

Releasing our best friends

If you are not an animal lover, reading this column will be a waste of your time this week. There is no way you can relate to the pain of losing a pet until you have walked down this very difficult road.

To be an animal lover is to feel unconditional love. It is to experience the warm pressure of a furry body tucked next to yours when you go to sleep. It is the unconscious ego boost we feel knowing another being is totally devoted and dependent upon us. There is the gratifying feeling of being welcomed with abandon each time we return home, even if we have only stepped outside to empty the garbage.

Our pets provide companionship and a friend to talk to, whom you know will agree with every ingenious thought you utter and will never argue with you. He is your wholly accepting friend for the duration of his life. He never questions your motives, or stays out past his curfew, or forgets to return your car keys, your scissors or dress. There is not a creature in this world as forgiving and understanding as your domestic pet. The trusting eyes, wagging tails, soft nuzzle or contented purr are there to share with us at the end of a frantic day. The constancy of this love is immeasurable.

Sure, there are a few downsides to being owned by an animal, but these are almost too trivial to mention. There are tricks to dealing with muddy paws (a bowl of water and an old towel kept at the door), and stray hairs from shedding, (daily brushing) and an occasional upset tummy (soda water or ammonia). The tradeoffs are worth it. The time spent throwing the ball or toy are good exercise for both of us. The lift of spirit as we watch a kitten play with a ball of yarn, bat a toy around or play hide and seek in a grocery bag are beneficial to our emotional health. We can't help but laugh as the sheer silliness of some of our pets. They provide many hours of entertainment for us as they entertain themselves chasing their tails or rolling in the grass.

But, oh the pain of separation! When we lose our pets there is a wrench so deep it is impossible to define. Our pets are our soulmates and best friends. They are our perfect children, ever kind and obedient, always loyal and loving. Small wonder we continue to hear the jingle of a collar, imagine a form lying in its accustomed place, hear a familiar bark for weeks and months after they are gone.

There is no way or reason to diminish the emotions we feel at the death of our pets. The grieving is as real as it is with any other family member, for they were an integral part of our families, though granted a briefer stay with us.

In time most of us will allow a new friend into the empty space, however we can never replace the uniqueness of a particular animal. Feel empathy for those who have lost their pets. The pain they are experiencing is very real and those of us who have suffered similar losses know that only time will be their best accomplice.

Keep kids safe from fireworks

Fireworks and the Fourth of July holiday go together like baseball and hot dogs. Unfortunately, fireworks also go hand in hand with injuries.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that an estimated 6,300 people ended up in emergency rooms with fireworks-related injuries during the month-long period that ran from June 23 to July 23, 1999.

Nearly half of all fireworks injuries involve children, particularly young boys.

"According to the Centers for Disease Control, children ages 5 to 14 account for 40 percent of all fireworks-related injuries and boys between the ages of 10 and 14 have the highest rate of injury," said Thomas Simmer, M.D., Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan corporate medical director.

Nearly two-thirds of fireworks-related injuries are caused by "Consumer" or Class C fireworks, which are legal in Michigan. Class C fireworks include firecrackers, bottle rockets, Roman candles, fountains and sparklers. Fifty-one percent of injuries are caused by firecrackers.

The most severe injuries are caused by Class B fireworks, which are banned in all states under federal law. Class B fireworks include M-80s, cherry bombs and any firecrackers containing more than 50 milligrams of powder (that's equivalent to about one-sixth the weight of a typical aspirin tablet).

The best way to prevent fireworks-related injuries is to leave the fireworks to trained professionals. However, if you decide to ignite fireworks allowed under the law. consider the following tips from Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan for keeping safe this Fourth of July holiday:

- Don't allow children younger than 14 years old to use fireworks and supervise older children.
- Only use fireworks outside and keep them away from houses and flammable materials.
- When using fireworks, keep a bucket of water nearby. Never relight or handle malfunctioning fireworks. Soak them in water and throw them away.
- Be sure other people are a safe distance away before lighting fireworks.
- Never ignite fireworks in a container, especially a glass or metal container.

"Never give fireworks to young children. Even sparklers can be unsafe if used improperly," said Simmer. "Sparklers are the second-highest cause of fireworks injuries, because they burn at about 1,800 degrees, which is hot enough to melt gold."

Fireworks-related injuries most frequently involve face, hands, fingers and eyes. Burns were the most common injury.

Be safe this Fourth of July and leave the fireworks to the professionals.

Tigers' No. 1 fan (& cutest!)

I Say

John Minnis

The Detroit Tigers are the best ballplayers in the world. They can do no wrong.

Huh?

You mean the 30-42 Tigers 16 1/2 games back? Those Detroit Tigers.

If you're a true fan, the won-loss record is less important than the team. At least that's the case with an 8-year-old fan we had the pleasure of going to a couple of games with.

She's my niece, Lindsay, who has to be the world's best (and cutest!) Detroit Tiger fan.

After having taken Lindsay's older sister, Lauren, to Disney World earlier this year, we promised Lindsay, a diehard baseball fan, we'd take her to Toronto when the Tigers were there to face the Blue Jays, which was last week.

Over the Internet, I purchased Skydome tickets back in December. Consequently, we had fabulous tickets in the second row off the field along the right field side. The weather was great and the retractable dome roof was open.

When we drove into downtown Toronto early Tuesday afternoon, we pointed out the CN Tower, the principal landmark. Exiting at the York, Bay and Yonge exit, we took Bay Street south to the waterfront.

We had reservations at the Westin Harbour Castle where, it so happens, the Tigers stay when they're in Toronto.

It was fun to watch Lindsay's eyes get big with each new big-city sight. You don't see too many skyscrapers, taxis and streetcars in Sterling Heights.

After getting our bags in our room, we set off on a Tiger hunt. But as it was getting on in the afternoon, all our game was at the Skydome getting ready for the game.

Undaunted, we sauntered down Queens Quay toward the Skydome. It's not hard to find. You can see it and the CN Tower the whole way.

Getting past the scalpers, we made our way into the impressive ballpark. I have to admit, even I was impressed with our seats and how close they were to the field. We could almost reach out and touch the players.

Lindsay was in heaven.

I'm a sunny day fan. If they're in contention, I'm interested. If not, I watch golf. So much to my chagrin, I had to rely on an 8-year-old to tell me who the players were and whether they were any good or not. She knew her ballplayers!

The game turned out to be a blast — literally. The Tigers won 18-6, which surprised even Lindsay.

After the game, we strolled up to King Street, then over to Bay and then back down to the Harbour Castle.

Once back in the hotel lobby, Lindsay ran into a group of Tigers, including her favorite, Bobby Higginson, walking toward the elevators to go up to their rooms. However, it being here first autograph safari, she froze and they got away before she got their signatures on her program.

As a footnote for Toronto travelers, we have to say the beds at the Westin are the best. I think they call them "Heavenly Beds" or something. It's trademarked — and it should be. They're great.

Anyway, we're enjoying a great sleep when at 6:30 a.m. the hotel PA system announces that the power is out at the hotel and in a large section of downtown due to a transformer that caught on fire under King Street between Bay and Yonge.

Not to fear, though, the hotel generators were able to power emergency lighting and at least two elevators.

Comforted, we went happily back to sleep, only to be woken up two more times within an hour by the same announcement. Reluctantly, we got up.

After quick, cold ablutions, we went downstairs to discover there was no coffee. This would never do.

Fortunately, Eaton Centre was only a $5 cab ride away, where we found courts and great coffee. (Lindsay enjoyed the cab ride more than anything. It was her first one, she said.)

While at the downtown mall, we hunted for a real autograph book. They're harder to find than you would imagine. We finally found one for $18, which seemed expensive even with Canadian dollars.

Jumping on the Yonge Street subway and transferring to the Bay/Queens Quay car at Union Station, we made it back to the hotel shortly after noon and power was restored, thank God.

Of course, you can't take an 8-year-old anywhere on vacation and not use the pool. So we soaked in the Westin's pool until it was time to go to Wednesday night's game.

Cleaned and refreshed, we resumed our autograph hunt in the lobby. We immediately ran into Hall of Fame broadcaster Ernie Harwell, who as always was more than happy to accommodate an 8-year-old fan, especially as she was decked out in her Tiger cap and shirt (cute!).

We then saw Luis Polonia walking out the lobby's revolving doors. Lindsay took after him, but he was too fast. But during her pursuit, she ran smack into Japanese pitcher Hideo Nomo, who graciously signed her book.

We got to the ballpark in time to catch the Tigers' batting practice. Lindsay was standing along the right field barrier in front of our seats, when along came Doug Brocail — the Tigers' "meanest" player, according to Lindsay.

While she was struggling to get a page open in her autograph book, Brocail simply set a ball down on the barrier in front of her and walked away. So much for being "mean." Maybe it was just her (cute!).

A little while later, she was able to capture Jose Macias' signature, thus filling out her catch. It wasn't bad for her first autograph hunting trip and she seemed pleased.

The Tigers were true to form that night and were shut out. To cheer up, we walked up to Movenpick's on York for a Swiss Chocolate Doodle. Then we walked up to the Sheraton Centre to catch a cab back to the room.

In the morning before leaving town, we went to the lobby for a buffet breakfast and in hopes of maybe getting one more autograph. But the only player was saw was Juan Gonzalez. But he was holding up the buffet line while watching a news report about his pending deal with the Yankees, so we left him alone.

Lindsay now tells her mom she wants to move to Toronto when she grows up. Guess she had a good time.

We had fun, and maybe I'll watch a few more ball games this year.

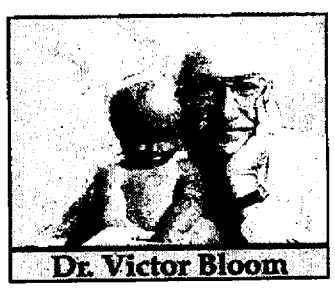
Unconscious guilt, self-punishment



Dr. Victor Bloom

The example of a famous scientist ending up with a fatal accident got me to thinking about what could have caused it.

It will be cited at the end of this column, and you may wish see what it is before you read any further. I will try to explain how these things can happen. You can use your own judgment to decide if my explanation makes sense to you.

What happened could be described as gallows humor, but it is also quite tragic. Such are the consequences of unconscious guilt.

We are all aware of conscious guilt, when we have done something wrong, something we are not proud of, done something against the rules. Sometimes it is testing limits or pushing the envelope.

When we have done something wrong, we may wonder if anyone is going to find out, and maybe think less of us or even punish us.

Sometimes it's something we did that makes us feel guilty and sometimes it's something we just thought, or it could be an unacceptable feeling, like anger.

In the case of anger, the feeling may even be quite natural and justified, but some of us have been taught as a child that feeling anger or thinking angry thoughts is bad, or a sin, in and of itself.

There are everyday things that we could conceivably feel guilty about that would be conscious. We could have pangs of conscience, or even lose sleep about them. We are very aware of guilt feelings that are conscious, but most people don't realize that there can be guilt feelings that are unconscious.

Feelings get buried if the conscious thought is painful. We may rationalize the guilt, but that does not mean it goes away. Some people, depending on their hereditary makeup and/or their upbringing, may be walking around with a guilt-complex, even to the point of getting depressed and being chronically worried.

People with unresolved, unconscious guilt may inadvertently fall prey to unconscious mechanisms of self-punishment.

In simple terms, guilt requires punishment, and if there is no external, tangible punishment, which becomes "justice," and in extreme cases, paying one's debt to society, we are quite capable of punishing ourselves, without even realizing it. For example, a person who has committed an act of petty theft, such as shoplifting, might then lose a piece of jewelry, more valuable than the object stolen.

In mild cases, a person might be accident-prone and dent a fender or break a foot. We have heard of people who shoot themselves in the foot, some figuratively, some actually. Certainly not all accidents are unconsciously determined, but many are. More severe cases of guilt may end up with a fatal overdose, which may be considered a tragic accident, or an unconscious suicide.

Sometimes people feel so guilty that they feel they do not deserve to live. Some die by reckless driving while drunk, others by bungee jumping or skydiving. And others die climbing Mount Everest.

Here's the example I was talking about. It was described in a book review of "Something New Under the Sun (An Environmental History of the Twentieth Century World)" by J.R. McNeill. The review in the Sunday New York Times Book Review section of June 25 is by Dick Teresi. He calls this "an entertaining story."

"Thomas Midgley was a chemical engineer who in 1921 figured out that adding lead to gasoline would allow it to burn better. By the '70s most Americans had elevated lead levels in their blood. In 1930-31, Midgley went on to invent Freon, which eats ozone molecules. He eventually contracted polio, and built a system of ropes and pulleys to help him in and out of bed. Midgley, perhaps the most politically incorrect man of the century, strangled himself in the contraption and died suspended in mid-air."

Interestingly, during a recent expedition to climb Mount Everest, climbers had to pass a frozen body suspended by a cable, a man who died the year before. It is well known that there is a significant mortality rate for Western climbers and Sherpas as well, on this by now well-traveled path. Nevertheless, adventurers, some with young children at home, tempt fate and needlessly risk their lives.

Why do people climb Mount Everest? Because it is there? Could it be unconscious guilt?

Where are the omelettes?

By Lawrence W. Reed

"On ne saurait faire une omelette sans casser des oeufs." Translation: "One cannot expect to make an omelette without breaking eggs."

With those words in 1790, Maximilian Robespierre welcomed the horrific French Revolution that had begun the year before. A firm believer in using government to plan the lives of others, he would become the architect of the Revolution's bloodiest phase — The Reign of Terror of 1793-94. Robespierre and his guillotine broke "eggs" by the thousands in a vain effort to impose a centrally planned, utopian, "omelette" society.

But, alas, Robespierre never made a single omelette. Nor did any of the other thugs who held power in the decade after 1789. They left France in moral, political and economic ruin, and ripe for the dictatorship of Napoleon Bonaparte.

The French experience is one example in a disturbingly familiar pattern. Call them what you will — utopian socialists, radical interventionists, collectivists, or statists — history is littered with their presumptuous plans for rearranging society to fit their vision of "the common good," plans that always fail as they kill or impoverish other people in the process. If socialism ever earns a final epitaph, it will be this: "Here lies a contrivance engineered by know-it-alls and busybodies who broke eggs with abandon but never ever created an omelette."

Every collectivist experiment of the 20th century was heralded by socialists as the Promised Land. "I have seen the future and it works," the intellectual Lincoln Steffens said after a visit to Stalin's Soviet Union. In The New Yorker in 1984, John Kenneth Galbraith argued that the Soviet Union was making great economic progress in part because the socialist system made "full use" of its manpower, in contrast to the less efficient, capitalist West. But an 846-page authoritative study published in 1997, "The Black Book of Communism," estimated that the communist ideology claimed 20 million lives in the "workers' paradise." Millions more died in places like China, Cambodia and North Korea.

Additionally, all of those murderous regimes were economic basketcases. They squandered resources on the police and military, built vast and incompetent bureaucracies, and produced almost nothing for which there was a market beyond their borders. They did not make "full use" of anything except police power. In every single communist country the world over, the story has been the same: lots of broken eggs, no omelettes. No exceptions.

For a time, socialist intellectuals embraced "the Swedish way" as a peaceful, prosperous and democratic alternative to the harsh brutality of the communist state. Then Sweden, after exhausting the incentives and resources of the creative class through redistributive welfarism, fell prey to high rates of brain drain, unemployment, inflation and suicide. Once again, lots of broken eggs but no Swedish omelette. Nobody today thinks Sweden produced much of a model for anyone to emulate.

"Yugoslavian worker socialism" had its day in the sun as well. Planners everywhere thought Tito had found the Promised Land through a kind of decentralized central planning. But then it too fell apart like the "Yugo," the celebrated lemon on wheels that Tito's factories dumped in Western markets. A Yugoslavian omelette has yet to appear on the menu of nations and recent events suggest it never will.

The list is endless: Canadian health care, European welfarism, Argentine Peronism, African post-colonial socialism, Cuban communism, and so on. Nowhere in the world has the socialist impulse produced an omelette. Everywhere, it yields the same: eggs beaten, fried, and scrambled. People worse off than before, impoverished and looking elsewhere for answers and escape. Economies ruined. Freedoms extinguished. Lives taken.

Socialists have no successful model to point to, no omelette they can present as the "piece de resistance" of their cuisine. Not so for those of us who believe in freedom and free markets. Indeed, economists James Gwartney, Robert Lawson and Walter Block in their survey, "Economic Freedom of the World: 1975-1995," conclude that "No country with a persistently high economic freedom rating during the two decades failed to achieve a high level of income. In contrast, no country with a persistently low rating was able to achieve even middle income status...The countries with the largest increases in economic freedom during the period achieved impressive growth rates."

Freedom works. Socialism does not. It is as simple as that. What a tragedy that so many people have had to lose their lives or fortunes to prove what ought to be taught as common sense in every fifth-grade classroom.

Circle of Friends grows at Pointe elementary schools

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

For some children, being left out and teased by others can make school a dreadful experience.

But at Mason, Richard, Trombly, Ferry and Poupard elementary schools, those children are finding a growing Circle of Friends.

The aptly-named program started in the Grosse Pointe Public School System in the 1998-99 school year with special education students. It is based on a program carried out in the Holland Public Schools since 1989. The program has grown to 18 circles with about 130 students, mostly comprised of regular education students in grades 3-5.

"The concept provides a group of peers for students who need help with appropriate behaviors, problem solving and getting along with other people," said district social worker Grace Rising.

Rising said the students meet once a week with one of five social workers during non-instructional time. Activities vary from serious problem solving to playing games.

"Regardless of the weekly activity, the results seem similar," said Rising. "The students learn to help each other and truly reach out to others in a positive way."

Rising told of one child who joined a circle late in the school year after being invited by the students of that circle. She spoke of another child who would not stay for lunch last year but would not go home this year because he has so many friends he wants to play with.

Elaine, the parent of the child who didn't want to stay for lunch, said Circle of Friends has benefited her child in many ways.

"His whole person really grew," said Elaine, whose son's social skills were affected by problems with language processing. "It really affected everything. He was elected to student council, he even played his instrument in front of other kids. The kids respond to him in a different way. This program made him feel like he had friends and had something to offer."

Rising also said that the circles have heightened awareness of differences and allowed students to get to know each other in a different way.

Mason fifth grade teacher Rebecca Golus said benefits of the program have spilled into the classroom.

"This program has helped children become more accepting of other children," said Golus. "Students in the program developed more of a community feeling, but indirectly all of the students benefited from the program."

District revises social studies curriculum

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Public School System has done some tweaking and revising of the latest incarnation of its social studies curriculum.

Two years after the current curriculum was implemented, district social studies specialist Jeannie Johnson and other teachers did some fine tuning with the program. An expedited review brought forth changes in format and content.

Format changes include integrating discourse, inquiry and citizen involvement with geography, civics, economics and history; integrating social studies with language arts and technology; check-off lists of grade-level benchmarks for teachers and creating grade-level focused documents that include cross-grade summaries of concepts and skills.

Johnson talked about the importance of active learning and critical thinking in the classroom.

"You can see all kinds of opportunities for embracing controversy in guided discussion," said Johnson. "Students need to experience understanding conflict and controversy. We have put some structured features in place to help teachers do that. They also need to critique judgment and construct information. We hope this will put learners into the social context in which they live."

The revisions also include shifts in content at various grade levels. There were several items dropped from grade 4 to alleviate crowding in the curriculum at that grade level. Instead, fourth grade students will concentrate on Michigan for a full year, including Grosse Pointe history and Michigan in modern times. U.S. regions were dropped from the fourth grade curriculum and added to the third grade curriculum. The five themes of geography — place, movement, human and environment interaction, region and location — were also added to the third grade curriculum.

The subject of neighborhoods was changed to neighborhoods and communities in the second grade to reflect some of the grade 3 benchmarks that were added. Information and benchmarks on transportation were also added to the second grade curriculum.

In U.S. history, grade 8 will focus on units from the Revolutionary War through Reconstruction. In grade 11, students will focus on units from Reconstruction through modern times.

Also, specific economics benchmarks were added at grades 6, 7, 8 and high school civics as well as in high school geography and world history; the five themes of geography were formally stated for all grade levels and specific concepts were added to the civics strand at all grade levels.

"This curriculum is designed with the educator in mind," Johnson told the Board of Education at a recent meeting. She said that the current curriculum, which has been referred to as a model among other educators around the state, was difficult for teachers to follow, particularly at the elementary school level where the teachers are teaching so many different things.

One of the improved teacher assistance models are learning and scoring guides and inquiry-based based sample lessons and materials for each grade.

"It's a series of continuous improvements," said Johnson. "Because social studies is very diverse, teachers need a lot of support."

"We are getting enormous accolades from around the state," said assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction Susan Allan. "I'm very excited about the improvements that have been made. It's a very teacher-friendly document. It will make it easier for teachers to know what needs to be happening."

Pierce music students play Music in the Park

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Seventh- and eighth-grade music students from Pierce Middle School took their performances on the road to perform in Music in the Park festivals in Chicago and Oak Harbor, Ohio.

The Pierce seventh- and eighth-grade string orchestra, under the direction of Joe Bauer, received a rating of excellent and placed second among the four groups competing in Chicago on Friday, May 12. Bauer said the orchestra "did an outstanding job."

The eighth-grade concert band, under the direction of Paul Miller, also received an excellent rating in Chicago, placing first among two groups participating. The band performed "The Cowboys" by John Williams and themes from the "1812 Overture" by Tchaikovsky. One adjudicator said the band's greatest strength was "its sense of rhythm."

The Pierce girls treble choir, directed by Heather Albrecht, received a good rating, placing second out of three groups competing in their May 12 performance.

On Sunday, May 20, the seventh-grade cadet band received a superior rating and a trophy for their performance at Oak Harbor High School.

Miller described the band's experience as a beneficial and motivational one.

The trophy is on display in the school office.

Music in the Parks is a division of Educational Programs Network based in Douglassville, Pa. The mission of the program is to provide a positive learning experience for students, parents and all those involved in music programs.

What a grand day!

It was the Grosse Pointe News that found itself on the answering end of an interview session when Karen Aldrich's second-graders from Richard Elementary School came to visit the paper's offices to learn about goods and services. Some of the questions were easy ("Where do you find your stories?") while others were more challenging ("What kind of ink do you use?"). The reporting team consisted of Mitchell Markas, Dorothy Caramango, Katherine Steen and Ian Ashbury, standing; and Catherine Cislo, seated.

Psychoneuroimmunology — it can't hurt and may help

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

"It can't hurt."

This is the opinion a doctor gave a cancer patient who asked about the benefits of group therapy.

He might have given a more positive answer except that physicians have reservations about the question.

They are concerned that patients might abandon proven methods, such as chemotherapy, in favor of psychological intervention.

The point is well taken. Who wants to endure the side effects of medical treatment if they could cure cancer by willing it away?

There is also the danger that patients who believe they can will their cancer away may feel they have failed if their condition worsens.

Dr. David Spiegel of Stanford University presents a different view. He says, "We expected to improve the quality of life without affecting its quantity. We intended to examine the overstated claims made by those who teach cancer patients that the right mental attitude will help conquer the disease."

Spiegel is careful to point out that all patients in the study received standard cancer treatment and suggests that one possible reason the psychotherapy group did better is that the support in some way enhanced the effectiveness of the medical treatment.

Other possibilities are that the support may have lessened depression and thereby improved patients' appetites, leading to better nutrition, or that controlling pain allowed patients to maintain a greater degree of normal activity. The connection between mental processes and illness is being evaluated by an emerging discipline called psychoneuroimmunology, which draws on the fields of psychology, neurology and immunology.

In "Health After 50," a recent study from UCLA is cited. It explores how support groups might enhance immune system functions, particularly in cancer patients. The study followed patients who had melanoma, the most serious form of skin cancer, after they had undergone surgery to remove the tumors.

All of the patients in the study had a good prognosis; nevertheless, they were experiencing the distress expected of those confronted by the illness.

The patients were divided into a control group and a group that participated in a six-week therapy program.

After six weeks, the group receiving support was more vigorous and was coping better than the control group.

At the six-month follow-up, the mood and outlook of the therapy group had continued to improve significantly. Members were less depressed or fatigued and were actively coping better than those in the control group.

To be helpful, a support group must be the right kind. A report from Stanford recommends the emphasis in its program was living as fully as possible, improving communication with family members and doctors and controlling pain and other symptoms.

To the extent that this intervention influenced the course of the disease, it did not do so because of an expectation on the part of the therapists or the patients that their participation would affect survival time.

Experts in the field agreed that this sort of promise should not be made.

It is important patients steer clear of groups that claim to actually increase survival time or improve their prognosis.

Patients should also make sure the group leader is experienced in working with cancer patients and familiar with such treatments as chemotherapy and radiation.

While research still isn't at a point where every doctor should recommend a support group as part of cancer treatment, recent studies make it safe to say: "It can't hurt — and it may well help."

I hope those reading this column won't need this recent development in the treatment of cancer.

However, it can't hurt to know all there is to know about possible treatments, not only for our own protection, but also for anyone close to us who might benefit from knowing.

Number of travelers staying in state is up 41 percent, says AAA Michigan July 4 survey

More Michiganians have Fourth of July travel plans this year than last — an estimated 2 million state residents will travel during the Independence Day holiday — and a lot more will keep their travel dollars in state, says a recent AAA Michigan survey of 500 state residents.

In 1999, 41 percent of those surveyed said they would remain in Michigan during the Independence Day holiday. This year, 70 percent of respondents indicated they would remain in Michigan — a 41-percent increase. High gas prices may be a factor in the decision.

More than one-third (35 percent) of those surveyed said higher gas prices would affect their summer travel plans in some way. The average reported trip length is six days.

Some motorists will travel this summer despite high gas prices — AAA's Regional Routing Center in Milwaukee reports a 15-percent overall increase in June TripTik routings requested for 16 states, including Michigan.

The trend to spend travel dollars in state mirrors survey results first reported by AAA Michigan during the Memorial Day weekend, when 65 percent of state residents said they would keep closer to home this year.

According to the auto club survey, conducted in late May, most of the Michigan travel destinations will be in the lower peninsula (78 percent), while 20 percent will visit the upper peninsula.

Of those planning to leave the state over the Independence Day holiday, 86 percent will stay within the United States; 17 percent will visit Ohio. Virginia, New York, Wisconsin, Illinois and Colorado are also popular out-of-state destinations.

The majority, 84 percent, will travel by car, truck or van, while another 7 percent will use a recreational vehicle. Twenty-two percent of those surveyed said they will extend their vacation beyond the extended Fourth of July weekend, while 16 percent said they will work the entire week, including the Fourth of July holiday.

On average (as of June 12), motorists will pay $2.011, about 87 cents more than last year for a gallon of self-serve, regular unleaded gas.

Based on requests received for AAA TourBook guides, TripTik routings and maps, the top five summer destinations in Michigan are: 1) Metro Detroit, 2) Mackinac Island, 3) Mackinaw City, 4) Traverse City and 5) Sault Ste. Marie.

Tourism in Michigan is a $9.5-billion-a-year industry, and the state remains one of the best travel values.

This year, says AAA, the average family of four will spend $206 daily for food and lodging in Michigan — $11 more than last year.

The official 102-hour holiday period begins at 6 p.m. Friday (June 30), and runs to midnight Tuesday (July 4).

During last year's 78-hour July Fourth holiday period, 15 people died in 15 seperate crashes on roads across the state. That's unchanged from the 78-hour holiday in 1998, when 15 people died in 14 fatal crashes. Four (26.7 percent) of last year's fatal crashes were alcohol-related.

Four of eight victim occupants did not wear their safety belts.

Michigan's last 102-hour Fourth of July holiday (1996) was one of the most tragic on record, when 27 persons died on Michigan roadways.

AAA Michigan urges motorists to keep their mind on the drive, buckle up, maintain a safe following distance, avoid alcohol and be well-rested to help keep the extended holiday safe.

For the 36th year, AAA Michigan's "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" Holiday News Service will help steer holiday travelers to their destinations throughout the Fourth of July holiday period with traffic, safety and tourism bulletins airing on 100 radio stations statewide.

City fixes Carriage House parking garage

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Patrons of the Village shopping district may have noticed some work taking place at the Carriage House parking garage next to Jacobson's — part of a $56,000 effort by City officials to maintain, repair and waterproof the structure.

In a memorandum to the City council, City manager Tom Kressbach stated that Western Waterproofing of Detroit would "be engaged to perform repair and renovation work at the parking structure at ... a cost of $56,655, which will be charged to the Parking System."

In a memo to the City, Western officials detailed what work would be done.

This includes removing all delaminated and unsound concrete, removing exposed and abandoned conduit within the confines of delamination, epoxy coat all exposed reinforcement (rebar), apply a bonding agent consisting of a slurry of sand and cement, install sited batched latex concrete and wet cure with burlap and visqueen.

Western officials also stated that there are numerous areas within the structure where cracks in the slab surface occur.

The areas will be routed and sealed to prevent any further water, salt and chloride infiltration.

In addition to this work, there are 11 locations in the garage where the ledger beams show signs of cracking. The beams will be repaired by removing all cracked and unbounded concrete within the confines of the distressed areas.

There will then be a saw-cut around the perimiter of the distressed area. Workers will then sandblast the surface area clean to include any exposed steel reinforcement.

The steel will be coated with epoxy and structural repair mortar will be installed as needed.

Woman attacked

Grosse Pointe Woods police responded last week to a report of a woman who said she was attacked in the north parking lot of a hospital on Mack and Moross.

On Thursday, June 15, at about 8:20 a.m., the woman was making her way from her car to a medical building when an unknown man "sprang out from between parked cars," police said. The man grabbed the woman's arm and pulled her toward him.

"Come here, baby," the man was reported to have said.

The woman fought back. She hit her assailant. He released his grip and she ran away. Hospital security officers took her to the emergency room where doctors determined she was not injured.

The suspect was described as a short-haired black man in his mid-30s, about 5-foot-6, and medium build. At the time of the alleged attack, he was described as wearing a black shirt and blue jeans.

Fireworks show

A resident on the 1700 block of Hampton in Grosse Pointe Woods is suspected of not being able to wait for his hometown fireworks celebration scheduled for Sunday, June 25, shortly after 10 p.m.

Police were sent to the home on a report of bottle rockets on Friday, June 16.

Cherokee theft

The owner of a 1999 Jeep Cherokee reported the vehicle stolen last week from a municipal parking lot in Grosse Pointe Park.

The theft took place on Monday, June 12, between 7 p.m. and midnight in the 15000 block of Kercheval.

House break-in Numerous items were taken from a house in the 1400 block of Balfour during a break-in on Thursday, June 15, between the hours of 12:10 and 9:40 a.m.

The victim reported an unknown person broke a front door window before entering the house.

Quiet party

The host of a roaring party turned out to be a pussycat last weekend in the Woods.

Dispatched to a loud house in the 2100 block of Roslyn at 1:50 a.m. on Saturday, June 17, a Woods officer reported that the polite resident wasn't having a bash, just listening to tunes.

Burning bridges

The former employee of a Grosse Pointe Woods business threatened to blow the place up when told her paycheck would be mailed to her Detroit address and there was no reason for her to return to the company.

The threat was lodged on the morning of Friday, June 16.

Gasoline bill

A woman drove off from a Woods gasoline station without paying her $9.99 bill.

Unlike other reports from throughout southeastern Michigan, however, the woman simply made a mistake. When contacted by police, the woman's husband said he'd send his wife to the service station to take care of the oversight.

Storm damage

High winds knocked down trees, limbs, power lines and telephone cables last week in the Woods.

Numerous reports of weather-related problems were sent to the police on Wednesday, June 15, shortly after 4 p.m.

Drunken soda pop drinker

An 18-year-old man from the Woods was arrested for drunken driving on Friday, June 16, at 12:52 a.m.

A Woods public safety officer pulled the man over after seeing him remove bottles of soft drinks from outside a store on Mack. While searching the man's 1998 Buick Regal for the pop, the officer found an open 40-ounce bottle of malt liquor.

The subject was arrested after police learned he had a blood alcohol level of .144 percent. He spent the night in jail before being released on bond.

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

Bike thefts

On Monday, June 12, at 4:30 p.m., Park police detained four subjects who witnesses said were seen stealing a bicycle from a garage on Grand Marais.

The subjects were released because no positive identification could be made. Officers located the stolen bike in bushes one block away.

In another daytime bike theft, on Tuesday, June 13, a 17-inch Trek mountain bike was taken from the bicycle racks at Pierce Middle School.

Vehicles entered

Two vehicles were broken into on the night of Tuesday, June 13 in Grosse Pointe Park.

In an incident in the 1200 block of Maryland, a victim lost a cellular telephone. In the second case, a resident lost a pair of sunglasses.

Troubled youth?

A 15-year-old Woods boy who has been accused by fellow residents of threatening two families and has alleged links to drug use cried foul last week when a Woods adult slapped him on the cheek.

On Saturday, June 24, at about 6 p.m., the 42-year-old man told police that the youth was one of many who had been blocking traffic.

As the man drove around the crowd, the youth made an obscene gesture.

When confronted, the youth screamed a string of obscenity-laden insults.

The boy raised his hand, the man said, as though preparing to strike. In a preemptive move, the man slapped the boy in front of witnesses.

In another incident involving the same youth two days earlier, parents of another Woods youth implicated the slapped boy in the matter of a few marijuana cigarettes.

Big blast a bust

A herd of partying teenagers bolted over a backyard fence like gazelles last weekend as Grosse Pointe Woods police tried to stop them.

While most of the kids filtered into the dark neighborhood, police questioned and administered Breathalyzer tests to a handful who remained. The escape capped an eventful evening for nearly 20 youths.

On Saturday, June 24, at about 12:30 a.m., Woods police were sent to the scene of a rowdy party in the 600 block of Canterbury. Officers discovered the underage revelers inside the home amid spent cans of beer strewn on the floor.

Many of the partiers tried to hide. Some were seen skulking on the roof.

After the break, officers issued tickets to many of remaining subjects for being minors in possession of alcohol. Officers drove a Harper Woods teenager home because he was too drunk to drive.

Blow to the nose

On Saturday, June 24, at 4 p.m., a 17-year-old man from Grosse Pointe Woods walked into his hometown police station to report being victimized.

According to police, the subject said he had been sleeping in his vehicle parked behind a building in the 20400 block of Mack. "Someone opened the (car) door and punched him in the nose," said police.

The man refused medical attention. There was no description of the assailant.

School theft

Two juveniles from the Woods reported seeing two unknown boys, approximately 13 years old, slip through a first floor window at Ferry Elementary School on Roslyn and Morningside. The boys reappeared carrying a $200 Super Nintendo system.

The thieves were last seen riding bicycles north on Morningside.

More bad kids

Three juvenile hub cap thieves from the Woods will serve penance for their crimes by doing miscellaneous work in the parking lot in which they were caught stealing wheel covers on the afternoon of Wednesday, June 21.

While one of the boys served as a lookout, the other two 13-year-olds stole hubcaps from two cars parked behind a structure in the 20100 block of Mack.

Equipment taken

At 12:45 p.m. on Thursday, June 22, a thief drove up and snatched a leaf blower that a member of a landscape crew had set on the ground while working in the 1000 block of Three Mile in the Park.

Bike roundup

Four bicycles were reported stolen within two days last week in Grosse Pointe Park.

On Thursday, June 22, between the hours of 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., a Red Magna mountain bike was stolen from bike racks in the 16000 block of Charlevoix.

At 9:10 p.m., a licensed Rhino mountain bike was taken from in front of a store in the 14000 block of Kercheval. Five minutes later, a girl's 26-inch Gran Titan mountain bike was stolen from the front of a house in the 1200 block of Audubon.

The next day between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 10:15 p.m., a man's 21-inch KHS mountain bike was stolen from a yard in the 1300 block of Whittier.

Neon taken

During the night of Wednesday, June 21, thieves stole a 1996 Dodge Neon from behind a house in the 1100 block of Lakeland.

Church thief

Park police recovered a purse near the corner of Jefferson an Alter on Monday, June 26, at 12:40 p.m.

The purse had been stolen from a woman who was in a church in the 15000 block of Hampton. The unknown thief got away.

Under the influence

A Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officer was on patrol at 12:43 a.m. on Friday, June 15, when he clocked a car traveling 68 mph in a 35 mph zone along Lakeshore. The vehicle was finally pulled over in the 700 block of Lakeshore.

The officer asked the 39-year-old St. Clair Shores woman if she had been drinking and she admitted to having "three glasses of wine." She failed her field sobriety test and blew a .142 percent on her preliminary breath test (PBT). She is free on $100 bond after being charged with driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

A rocket man

A family in the 100 block of Merriweather in Grosse Pointe Farms reported hearing a loud noise coming from downstairs at about 5 a.m. on Friday, June 16. When residents went downstairs, they found the remains of what appeared to be bottle rockets.

The police were called. They believe someone lit the bottle rockets and shoved them through the mail slot in the front door before the rockets exploded. There were signs of damage on the carpet and the ceiling in the hallway by the front door. Police are continuing to investigate.

Eyes on Design a crowd pleaser on Father's Day

Despite threatening weather, the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology again came through with its annual automotive Father's Day gift, Eyes on Design.

Autos

By Richard Wright

This is the 13th annual event, which began as Eyes on the Classics in the parking lot of the Grosse Pointe Academy, moved out to the more spacious grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, evolved into Eyes on Classic Design and is now simply Eyes on Design.

The event, which raises funds for the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology's program of education, research and aid to the visually impaired, has been a winner from the start and has become one of the major automotive events in this area.

Dr. Philip C. Hessburg, DIO president, said the group is focusing its research in two areas — development of an electronic biochip which would restore vision to some who are blind and research into the role vision plays in the safe operation of motor vehicles.

The 13th edition of the classic show again brings together in a meaningful way automobiles spanning the history of the industry and illustrating factors in its development. An unusually rich assortment of cars were present from as far away as California, including as always, a number from the Grosse Pointes.

Although national in its scope, Eyes on Design began as a local effort and the Pointes have played a major role from the beginning, both in organizational support and

Amazon.com causes tech wreck, but Dow is steady

Let's talk...STOCKS

By Joseph Mengden

Bookseller amazon.com (AMZN, about 33 7/8, off 12 1/8 last week) dropped an encyclopedia on its big toe last week. Ouch!

Long one of the Internet's largest balloons, AMZN let out a lot of hot air last week, with its stock closing down 25.4 percent, thanks to a negative credit report from its lead underwriter, Lehman Brothers.

To continually fund its catastrophic cash flow losses, Amazon has floated two issues of 10-year convertible debentures, totaling $2.2 billion, during the past 15 months.

The 4 3/4 percent debs due 2009 were dollar denominated (sold in the U.S.), while the 6 3/4s due 2010 were Euro denominated (sold in Europe).

Lehman Brothers bond analyst Ravi Suria recently conducted an in-depth credit analysis and concluded that AMZN had a weak balance sheet, poor working capital management and considerable negative operating cash flow.

Suria summarized the credit status of the convertibles as "extremely weak and deteriorating" and a risk that had not yet been priced into the bonds, which should be avoided.

Suria's report and comments by Mary Meeker, Internet analyst at Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, sent Amazon's dollar-bonds to new lows last Friday. The 4 3/4s tanked more than 10 points to close at 57 bid, 58 offered, to yield 8.20 percent, with a 37 percent conversion premium.

AMZN common was weak all week, sinking 8 1/8 points on Friday, leading the NASDAQ tech-wreck to a 91-point loss on Friday, wiping out all the gains from earlier in the week.

The NASDAQ closed at 3,845, 15 points less than where it started the week.

Meanwhile, it was almost "business as usual" for the 30 Dow Jones Industrial stocks. The DJI is heavily weighted with manufacturing stocks, some of which hit new lows last week.

For last week, the DJI declined 44 points to close at 10,404, on moderate-to-low volume. The stock market has been marking time, awaiting the Federal Reserve's action or no action on interest rates by its Open Market Committee at its meeting Wednesday.

Morgan Stanley's Index of 30 cyclical stocks (different from the Dow Jones 30 stocks) are off over 20 percent since the beginning of 2000.

Byron Wien, chief domestic strategist at Morgan Stanley Dean Witter thinks some of these cyclicals are attractive, with many trading at less than 10 times projected 2000 earnings.

Federal Reserve

As of press time Monday, the consensus of economists, bond analysts and portfolio managers was that the Fed would "stand pat" with no increase in short-term rates at Wednesday's meeting.

The glide approach to an economic "soft landing" appears to be on track.

This week's economic news is not expected to produce any surprises:

- May Existing Home Sales (Monday), off a whisker;
- Consumer Confidence (Tuesday), down very slightly;
- May Durable Goods Orders (Wednesday), up 2.5 percent is OK;
- First Quarter Gross Domestic Product (Thursday), unchanged from last quarter; and
- May Personal Income (Friday), up only 0.3 percent, which is down from up 0.7 percent last month.

June data, to be released next month, will have an upward bias caused by the greatly increased fuel costs.

The Fed Committee meets again in late July, before summer vacation.

If the economy builds back steam before then, the Fed might give it another 1/4 of 1 percent boost in short-term interest rates.

Fall meetings of the committee are scheduled in October and November, but knowledgeable commentators say Alan Greenspan would prefer to pass in October, and not be accused of electioneering.

Ethanol, continued

Will we ever know what caused the Midwest's recent spike in gasoline prices? How much did it cost us, the motorists?

Detroit and southeast Michigan (SEM) were victims of the pipeline leak near Jackson, which shut down 30 percent of our gasoline imports for about 10 days.

Now reopened, that pipeline is pumping 273,000 gallons per hour at 70 percent capacity, according to newspaper reports. That equates to about 390,000 gallons per hour at full capacity, or 9.36 million gallons per 24-hour day.

If that pipeline normally delivers 30 percent of SEM's consumption, then total SEM demand approximates 31.2 million gallons per day.

Crain's Detroit Business recently reported that the AAA Michigan weekly gas price survey showed that Michigan gasoline prices were up 27.1 cents per gallon that week, the largest weekly increase since the survey was started in 1973.

That 27.1 cents increase per gallon applied to SEM's estimated consumption of 31.2 million gallons per day amounts to a dollar increase of $8,455,200 per day, just for southeast Michigan! Who's to blame?

The New York Times Op-Ed page (June 25), hosted by Paul Krugman, reports that the Congressional Research Service attributes about half of the present 50-cent differential between gasoline prices in the Midwest and elsewhere to pipeline troubles (a fire in one and the leak in Michigan).

So who gets the other $4.2 million per day from SEM motorists? What a bonanza for the lobby groups!

"Big Oil" has always boasted that they had the best politicians that money could buy. And the "po farmers" have always had the Grange, the Farm Bureau and ADM (Archer-Daniels-Midland) on their side.

Do you think that some politicians might accept contributions from both sides?

New bank opens on Kercheval in Village

Northern Trust Bank offers 'personalized' services

A Grosse Pointe banker has been named president of the community's newest financial institution.

City resident Bruce Fralick is scheduled to oversee this week's opening of Northern Trust's Grosse Pointe office. The branch is located on the corner of Kercheval and Notre Dame in the Village.

According to Fralick, who is transferring from Northern's office in Bloomfield Hills, the bank is entering the Pointes "to cultivate the kind of face-to-face, personalized banking relationships that have virtually disappeared with the recent outbreak of merger-fever that has engulfed the banking industry."

Fred Adams, president of Northern's Michigan subsidiary, added, "Our focus for the Grosse Pointe office is to meet the banking needs of area residents who have achieved success in their lives and need reliable, personalized service to assist them in managing their finances."

Northern's Grosse Pointe office will be stocked with trust officers and portfolio managers, including Cathy Zehnpfenning, a 25-year veteran of the banking industry.

Zehnpfenning has been appointed branch vice president and senior portfolio manager.

Before joining Northern last year, she was first vice president and senior portfolio manager at NBD Bank.

Fralick, who has strong ties to the Pointes through an interest in boating and memberships in many charitable organizations, said Northern takes a personal approach to the banking business.

"Continuity and trust are high priorities," said Fralick. "Our team (will) work one-on-one with each of our clients to develop a plan that meets their financial objectives."

Northern Trust Bank is a subsidiary of Northern Trust Corp., based in Chicago. The parent company has $1.5 trillion in assets.

Crime

Home invaded

A resident of the 100 block of Clovery reported on Wednesday, June 14, that over the past couple of days someone entered his master bedroom and stole several thousand dollars in jewelry. The victim said he works in the basement and may not have heard when someone entered the home. He and his wife were also away from the house on Monday.

Police believe the theft may be the work of a crew that has hit the Pointes in previous years. The crew enters unlocked homes during the day, often when someone is home or perhaps outside gardening.

If confronted, the thieves immediately flee to a car waiting nearby. Police urge residents to be cautious and to be on the lookout for anything out of the ordinary.

Not fenced in

An employee of an Eastpointe fence company reported to Farms public safety that his truck was stolen from a gas station in the 19000 block of Mack at 5:14 a.m. on Wednesday, June 14. It seems the fence man stopped at the station to use the restroom. When he came out, his truck was missing.

Foul ball

A Grosse Pointe Farms resident reported that the rear window of her station wagon was smashed between 6 and 9 p.m. on Wednesday, June 14. The car was parked in the 200 block of Fisher Road at the time. Police found a baseball in the rear seat and believe that to be the cause of the broken window.

Shoplifting

City of Grosse Pointe public safety officers were called to a store in the 17000 block of Kercheval in the Village at 7:20 p.m. on Tuesday, June 13. Store security had caught two 16-year-old girls from Detroit in the act of shoplifting.

When police searched their bags they discovered several other pieces of clothing with tags from other stores in the Village. A check on the merchandise revealed that it was also stolen.

The two girls are juveniles and their cases are before judges in the juvenile court system.

Surprise, surprise

A Grosse Pointe Farms resident reported that his bicycle, worth an estimated $1,000, was stolen from in front of a store in the Village. The bike was unlocked and unregistered and left alone between 2 and 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 14.

Lawn larceny

Witnesses reported seeing two men drive a truck onto the driveway of a home in the 600 block of Lakeland in the City of Grosse Pointe at 12:30 p.m. on Friday, June 16. They said two men got out of the truck, opened the gate to the backyard and grabbed a lawn mower, put it in the truck and drove off.

It turns out they were not the owners of the lawn appliance. Police were given a license plate number and are investigating the incident.

School out, purse gone

A Farms resident attending the Grosse Pointe South High School graduation ceremony on the evening of Thursday, June 15, said her purse was stolen from her car, which was parked in a lot on the City side of Fisher.

The victim later found her wallet in a Fisher alley, but her cellular telephone, which was in her purse, was still gone. The victim said her car was locked, but police could find no sign of forced entry.

City drunk

A City of Grosse Pointe public safety officer was on patrol on Mack at 3:15 a.m. on Sunday, when he clocked a 23-year-old Harper Woods man in a Corvette.

The car was traveling 10 miles an hour over the speed limit and was pulled over at the intersection of Mack and Calvin.

When questioned, the driver admitted to having "three beers" at an area boat club. Unfortunately, he failed his field sobriety tests and blew a .13 on his PBT. He is currently free on $100 bond.

Shores arrest

A Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officer, while heading toward Lakeshore from Vernier at 1:45 a.m. on Tuesday, June 20, spotted a 1992 Ford Explorer run a red light.

When the officer pulled the vehicle over the driver, a 47-year-old Farms woman, admitted to having "a few wines."

She also failed her field sobriety tests and initially refused to take a preliminary breath test (PBT).

The driver was taken into custody and while at the Shores public safety building, took a PBT. She blew a .13 percent. She is currently free on $100 bond.

Farms drinker

A Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officer was patrolling Mack at 1:20 a.m. on Sunday, June 25, when he noticed a 1998 Ford Explorer weaving between the center line on Mack. He pulled the vehicle over and asked the driver if had been drinking. The driver, a 38-year-old Woods resident, said, "yes, downtown." He failed his field sobriety tests, but refused to take a PBT. He was taken into custody and still refused to take a PBT. He is free on bond.

Dried out

Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers were called to a hair salon on the Hill at 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 24. When firefighters arrived at the scene, they were confronted with smoke coming from a clothes dryer on the premises.

While it had been unplugged by the time firefighters arrived on the scene, they had to disconnect the dryer from its natural gas connections.

The dryer was then taken outside to the alley and doused with water. The salon owner said the lint filter had been cleaned prior to the dryer's use, but she could not say when the dryer vent had last been cleaned.

Once the dryer was out of the building, firefighters used the Farms thermal camera to look for hidden trouble. They found none.

Car swiped

An 18-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods woman reported that her 1990 Ford Tempo had been stolen from the War Memorial parking lot at about 2 p.m. on Saturday, June 24. The victim's purse was also stolen and it contained her car keys and wallet.

The victim and several witnesses reported seeing a young man with blond hair walking around the theater area of the southwest portion of the building where the victim kept her purse.

The suspect had a green shirt and many people assumed he worked for the War Memorial. Others questioned him and he said he was looking at having a wedding reception.

Tailgater trouble

A Grosse Pointe Farms patrol officer spotted a car tailgating another car on Mack at 12:50 a.m. on Saturday, June 24. When the officer pulled the vehicle over, the driver, a 26-year-old St. Clair Shores woman, said she had a few glasses of wine. She failed her field sobriety tests and blew a .256 on her PBT. She was taken into custody and later freed on bond.

Car trouble

A resident of the first block of Stanton Lane parked his car on Grosse Pointe Boulevard overnight because of street work being done on his street. On the morning of Thursday, June 22, the man discovered that someone smashed a tail light and broke a driver's side window.

Trash trouble

A resident of the 400 block of Roland in Grosse Pointe Farms reported that a green plastic trash can that had been put out on the curb for pickup was stolen between late Thursday, June 22 and early Friday, June 23.

The victim said she was afraid that the can may have been stolen by identity thieves who wanted any credit card or bank statements in the trash.

Purloined purse

An employee of a church in the first block of Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms said her purse was stolen from an upstairs office between 12:30 and 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, June 20.

Witnesses reported seeing "a strange blonde woman" upstairs during those hours. When confronted, the woman said she was looking for information on Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

Groceries gone

Witnesses reported seeing a man shoplift some groceries from a store in the 16900 block of Kercheval at 9:21 a.m. on Monday, June 19.

The suspect, described as being 5 feet, 10 inches tall with a mustache, was seen quickly exiting the store and getting into a waiting late-model, dark-colored Mercury, which had three men inside.

The car was last seen heading toward Cadieux on Kercheval.

Numberless

A resident of the first block of Fisher on the City of Grosse Pointe side of the border reported on the morning of Monday, June 19, that the night before a number plate was stolen from a brick wall that faces the street.

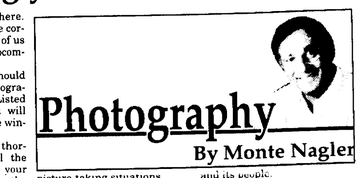
Capturing your vacation on film



Photography

By Monte Nagler

Warm weather is here. Summer is just around the corner. Now is the time most of us begin planning for that upcoming vacation.

Part of the planning should be preparing for your photography while on the trip. Listed here are some tips that will help you bring home those winning shots.

• Make sure you're thoroughly familiar with all the features and controls on your camera. Even reread the instruction manual. Practice with a roll of film before you leave and become an expert at changing lenses and film quickly.

• And speaking about film, take enough to get you through the trip, usually a roll per day. Decide in advance if you want slide or print film and select a medium speed that will enable you to cope with a variety of lighting situations. But also take along a few rolls of fast film for those low light shots you're bound to encounter. Important: If traveling by air, either request a visual inspection of your film at security stations or use a lead-lined film pouch.

• Travel light, but don't leave an important piece of equipment home. In addition to your camera and normal lens, a wide angle and moderate telephoto will cover most picture-taking situations.

You'll find zoom lenses very useful on a trip, too. A small flash unit and collapsible tripod will come in handy and a polarizer filter will add important impact to your scenic shots.

• Do some planning before you leave. If going abroad, study the people, locales and customs. If staying in the United States, read up on the national parks or other points of interest you'll be visiting to get some photographic ideas.

• Include people in some of your shots. People at work or play are an integral part of any environment, especially when engaged in traditional crafts and events.

• Go beyond staged events. Real people and real places are far better subjects than staged events for the tourists' benefit. "Real" photographs will better help to understand a country and its people.

• Look for the unusual. An obscure street scene or other out of the way image should be part of your vacation portfolio. Try to show a familiar, frequently photographed subject from a different point of view, too.

• Don't pass up pictures on the way. Many good photographic opportunities are missed by ignoring interesting things en route because it's felt better pictures are waiting at the final destination. Taking pictures along the way also helps to make your trip coverage complete.

Most importantly, become involved in your travel photography. Immerse yourself in the places you visit.

Try to bring home the essence of your vacation by getting off the "tourist path" and always keeping your traveler's vision in high gear.

Grosse Pointe Shores renews its recycling contract with Tringali

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Shores board of trustees recently approved spending $86,000 over the next three years on recycling.

"The board approved the contract with Tringali Sanitation," said village manager Mike Kenyon. "That's the same people who have been doing our recycling for the past six years."

Kenyon said the Shores decided to stick with Tringali for a couple of reasons. One is that the other bidder, Great Lakes Waste, had no experience with residential recycling. The Shores contract of $86,000 for three years, or $29,000 a year, isn't such a large amount because the Shores is a small community with a relatively small number of houses, when compared to the other Pointes.

"One of the bid specs was having at least three to five years experience in resident recycling," said Kenyon. "Also, changing recyclers would have been a major disruption of service. Residents are very used to having trash pickup and recycling pickup on the same day. Breaking in a new company and having them shift their resources around to match the schedule of the old company would have been very difficult."

The Shores, along with the City of Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Farms, all use Tringali Sanitation. All the city governments came to the conclusion that Tringali's record of excellent service and their experience in providing service in the Pointes was worth paying a little extra for, especially when the lowest bidder has no experience in providing the kind of service needed in the Pointes.

"Recycling has become very popular in Grosse Pointe Shores," said Kenyon. "I would estimated that between 60 and 70 percent of the households participate. It's especially popular with the younger families. I think the kids look around and ask why they aren't recycling."

Keep kids and pets cool in the car this summer

Parking a car in summer heat without ventilation is an invitation to tragedy for animals and children left inside, warns AAA Michigan.

"With the windows rolled up, interior temperatures in a car can quickly climb to nearly 200 degrees," says AAA Michigan Director of Automotive Services Robert Kaczor. "That is why we stress that a sealed car is no place for unattended children and pets, even for a short time."

If your car has been parked in the sun all day, Kaczor recommends opening the vehicle's doors to let the interior cool off before entering or placing children inside.

Using a sun shield to cover the windshield helps keep heat buildup to a minimum and protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on safety belts and child safety seats to prevent burns, and if possible, find shaded areas to park on hot days. Don't forget sunglasses to reduce highway glare.

If you can, leave a window partially open to help dissipate interior heat. One cautionary note: This could make your vehicle an easy target for car thieves.

Be sure air conditioning and cooling systems are working properly as well. If your air conditioning is weak, have it serviced by a qualified technician.

Calls to AAA Michigan's Emergency Road Service to unlock cars increase in summer, Kaczor added. "That's because many motorists also leave their vehicles running to keep the interior cool. Take extra precautions to keep from locking yourself out, including carrying an emergency key."

Have your vehicle's cooling system checked, including coolant strength and all hoses. Engine coolant deteriorates with age. Follow recommendations in your owner's manual for coolant replacement timetables.

This is especially important on cars with aluminum engine parts and radiators. Chemical reactions between iron and aluminum can affect coolant.

If your car starts to overheat in traffic, turn on your heater and fan to "high." It may get uncomfortable, but it will pull heat away from the engine. If possible, pull onto a less-crowded road to allow more airflow through the radiator. If that doesn't help, pull over and open the hood to cool the engine, but DO NOT remove the radiator cap. You run the risk of being burned, and losing your coolant.

Books—a low-tech solution for summer blahs

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Summer is officially here. The kids are out of school.

Families are going on vacation and one of the great pleasures of a vacation, for many, is catching up with their reading.

"Reading" can mean different things to different people.

Diana Howbert of the Grosse Pointe Public Library and Christie Hickcox of Borders Books and Music in the Village both say that audio books are becoming popular.

"Books on tape are very popular during the summer," Howbert said. "People like to listen to them when they go on long car trips. June is also audio book month."

Hickcox said her store also does well with audio books during the summer. They have special promotions on audio books.

Howbert said that during the summer more books are taken out, but they tend to be children's books.

"Adults read all year long," Howbert said. "But during the summer, kids' books are very popular, especially the series books. These days there are a lot of those."

Gloria Forsyth, children's librarian at the central branch of the Grosse Pointe Library, said they have a popular summer reading program for kids.

"Kids of any age can sign up," Forsyth said. "They fill out a registration card and color a name tag. They receive a bookmark and stickers. They then read books and create a record of what they read during the summer.

"After reading 10 books, they get a prize book. For every 50 pages they read they receive a 'read-a-lottery' ticket. At the end of the summer we draw names for prize books. The grand prize winner receives a puppet and a gift certificate from Borders."

The age of children who participate in the program ranges from kindergarten to the seventh or eighth grade, Forsyth said. For older kids there is a "teen read" program.

"Once kids get past the fifth grade, it suddenly becomes 'uncool' to be in a reading program," Forsyth said.

"This is the first year of the program. The way it works is that kids don't have to sign up. They pick up a pack of report sheets, read the books that are related to the sheets, answer the questions on the sheet and turn in the whole packet when they are finished.

"At the end of the summer we will have a drawing for gift certificates from Borders. This is the first year, so we don't know how successful this will be."

Nanette D. Poole of Grosse Pointe Woods is the mother of two boys, ages 7 and 9. She said her kids are challenged by reading and she encourages them to read.

"They love it at the library," Poole said. "They come here. My 7-year-old, Max, heads for the fish tank and my 9-year-old, Jack, heads for the computers."

Poole admits to being something of a computer novice and is amazed at how her children just accept them as an everyday part of life.

"The librarians are the ones who end up getting the workout when my kids come," Poole said. "They have to use every bit of their knowledge to help us. Jack seems to be interested in everything mobile, and my Max just took out a book on mummies that he loved."

Caitlin Morath, 8, and her friend Holly Roseborough, 8, are enjoying some of the fine books at the central branch of the Grosse Pointe Public Library.

Morath is reading "The Adventures of the Bailey School Kids: Wolfmen Don't Hula," and Roseborough is reading "Snakes and Salamanders."

"I like reading everything," Roseborough said.

Morath said she enjoys reading mystery books, like "Encyclopedia Brown."

Poole said she enjoys taking her boys to the library because she has the joy of sharing books that she loved as a girl.

"Jack just read 'Sounder,' a book about a boy and his dog," Poole said. "It was a book that I read when I was a girl. It's a wonderful thing to share with your children the books you loved as a child. I just got 'Charlotte's Web.' He's already seen the movie, so now he can read the book. There are so many movies and videos out these days, we're seeing the kids read the book because they saw the movie. That's a switch."

Poole herself says that between her work at her office and being a mother of two boys, she doesn't have a lot of time to read. Her family is going on vacation and she's bringing some magazines and a book her sister-in-law gave her.

Hickcox said the most popular book this summer is expected to the be the new Harry Potter book coming out on Saturday, July 8. The series by J.K. Rowling has proven to be popular with both adults and children. The Village store will be open at midnight on July 8 so parents and kids can be the first in line to get the latest Potter book.

"It should be a great summer read for kids," Hickcox said. "Adults like genre books, like mysteries. Robert Ludlum just came out with a book the day after Father's Day. Since he's so popular with men, I have to wonder why they didn't put it out before Father's Day.

"A popular summer book for women is called 'Saving Graces' by Patricia Gaffney. It's a fictional story about a group of women who meet once a week and talk about their lives. I'm in the middle of reading it and it's pretty good."

"In these electronic entertainment days, I would have thought that books and libraries were something quaint," Poole said. "But that's not true.

"Reading books and sharing brings us together. My dad is a voracious reader and he gives me his books. My son Jack loves to show his uncle Joe his books on tanks and planes and submarines. It's nice to know there's still a place for books."

Sing, sing, sing

By a member of the Christian Science Church

"Sing! The devil hates music," Martin Luther once said. Often the words of a hymn can comfort and help us when all else seems, at least momentarily, ineffectual.

For instance, the great, enduring inspiration that the Psalms have afforded countless individuals through the centuries points to the unique power of spiritual thoughts expressed through poetry and song.

Mary Baker Eddy, the discoverer of Christian Science, wrote many poems, seven of which are set to music and appear in "The Christian Science Hymnal," along with many traditional hymns.

One of Mrs. Eddy's hymns, "Feed My Sheep," emphasizes our need to quietly listen to God when we need guidance and reassurance. In order to hear what God is revealing to us as we earnestly pray, we must, the hymn brings out, silence human will, self-righteousness, a callous attitude.

How often have all of us seemed lonely and afraid, needing spiritual reassurance. These words in this hymn recognize this need and God's response:

So, when day grows dark and cold
Tear or triumph harms,
Lead Thy lambkins to the fold,
Take them in Thine arms.

In our human experience, we can, at times, be "harmed" either by "tear" or "triumph." In either case, our answer is to turn to God, whom Jesus himself designated as a "shepherd," and find protection, perspective and gratitude to God rather than a personal sense of success or failure.

Moses, near the end of his career and in spite of his tremendous accomplishments, sang a song of praise to God, the One who had made it all possible. This "Song of Moses" contains these words:

Who is like unto thee,
O Lord, among the gods?
Who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?
(Exodus 15:11)

Martin Luther wrote a stirring hymn which brings out that God is a "mighty fortress," a concept which gives us courage and strength to this day.

A hymn by the American poet, John Greenleaf Whittier, imparts peace and order in the midst of pressured lives:

Drop Thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from us now the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace.
(Christian Science Hymnal No. 49)

For centuries, many such songs have comforted, healed and blessed mankind. Singing, whether silently or aloud, unites our thought with God.

As Mary Baker Eddy wrote: "Whatever inspires with wisdom, truth or love — be it song, sermon or science — blesses the human family with crumbs of comfort from Christ's table, feeding the hungry and giving living waters to the thirsty." (Science and Health 234:4)

"To win without risk is to triumph without glory"
— Corneille

What a wonder this game we play is. Here are two fine hands from this year's Gatlinburg Regional you will thoroughly enjoy.

On this one, the field from a stratified open event (128 tables) played four hearts, making a dozen. Only nine N/S played slam which required precise bidding and careful play.

BOTH VUL.

NORMA: ♠ 9 8 7 3 ♥ A K J 4 ♦ A 10 8 ♣ A 5
PETER: ♠ K Q 10 5 ♥ 3 2 ♦ Q 9 6 5 4 2 ♣ 4
W E
EAST: ♠ J 6 4 2 ♥ Q 8 5 ♦ J 7 ♣ Q J 7 3
SOUTH: ♠ A ♥ 10 9 8 7 ♦ K 3 ♣ K 10 9 6 5 2

West led spade K

Here is a reasonable summary of how the slam might have been bid.

N	E	S	W
1 NT	—	2C	—
2 H	—	3 C	—
3 D	—	3 S	—
4 C	—	4 D	—
4 H	—	6 H	P.O.

At our table, N/S went through Stayman and settled in the heart game without so much as a try for more.

The play for 12 tricks does require a wee bit of experienced technique.

T. 1	win spade ace	T. 8	win diamond king
T. 2	win heart ace	T. 9	ruff club
T. 3	win heart king	T. 10	ruff diamond
T. 4	win club ace	T. 11	lose club to west trump Q
T. 5	win club king	T. 12	ruff spade return
T. 6	ruff club	T. 13	win 13th club
T. 7	win diamond ace

Admittedly, this line of play won't work if West has a singleton club and heart queen protected, but it is a most reasonable line for victory.

Two days later this one, an identical event, but 148 tables and the field played four spades, making 13 tricks. Some 30 N/S pairs played the slam when North made the fine third call of five diamonds.

NEITHER VUL.

NORMA: ♠ A K Q 7 5 3 ♥ A 10 ♦ A K 2 ♣ A 10

Historical Society presents 3 plaques, 3 scholarships

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society awarded three plaques to the owners of historically significant Grosse Pointe houses and three scholarships to local graduating seniors at its annual meeting May 9.

Alexander Keim of Grosse Pointe South High School, Kristen Lingemann of University Liggett School and Christopher Mancik of Grosse Pointe North High School were selected to receive the society's Clayton Walker Evans Educational Scholarships.

The Lynn McNaughton House in Grosse Pointe Farms, the Victor Heftler House-Coin de France in Grosse Pointe Park, and the Herbert Lord House in Grosse Pointe Farms were awarded historical plaques for the year 2000.

The McNaughton House, an 18,000-square-foot English tudor, was built in 1929 for Lynn McNaughton, vice president of Cadillac Motors. It was designed by George Mason, the first licensed Michigan architect. Mason's works include the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island and the Masonic Temple in Detroit.

The house was owned at one time by Benson Ford and his wife, Edith, McNaughton's daughter. It was also previously owned by Cecil Fielder of the Detroit Tigers. Current owners Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vallecorsa have made extensive renovations after a fire in 1995 destroyed much of the roof, attic and second floor.

The Herbert Lord House (Three Willows) was designed in 1928 by Robert O. Derrick, whose other works include the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, the Moross water pumping station and the Punch and Judy Theatre building in Grosse Pointe Farms. The house's architecture is a blend of French and English styles with a steeped roof and gables. It was was built for Herbert Lord, who lived there until 1935. W. Ernest Kanzler owned the home for the next 19 years. It was bought by John Lord, Herbert Lord's son, in 1954. Current owners are Mr. and Mrs. James Thayer McMillan III.

Coin de Frence was built for Victor R. Heftler, an engineer and inventor, in 1929. The architectural firm was Donaldson & Meier, known for its design of St. Alyosis Church in Detroit and St. Ambrose Church in Grosse Pointe Park. The home resembles a chateau that Heftler had admired while visiting France, the country of his birth. The French Norman theme is evident in the central turrett, slate roof and stucco and stone facade. Heftler's son, Pierre, became a prominent Detroit attorney who worked for the Ford family. Current owners of the house are Dyan and Robert Manion.

Practice water safety

By The Community Health Status Advisory Board

As the mercury rises, Michigan's beaches, swimming pools and waterways come alive with activity. While cooling off in the water or relaxing on the boat are great family activities, it is important to be aware that potential for danger is present.

Every year, 2,000 children die as a result of drowning. In fact, for children under age 14, drowning is the second leading cause of death from accidental injuries.

Although children account for a large number of drowning victims, water and boating safety are important concerns for everyone.

The backyard pool

The family swimming pool brings the fun of the beach to your own backyard, but for parents of young children, it means constant vigilance to maintain safety.

Swimming pools and hot tubs must be completely fenced in to protect unsupervised children from wandering in. Make sure fences are at least four feet high and that the gates lock automatically. Fences are not foolproof, so it is important to keep the pool covered when not in use.

There are pool covers available that can be opened and closed electronically. Don't forget that the cover must be able to support the weight of your child. Equipment such as lifesaving rings, a pole and rope should be kept at the pool side in plain sight for rescues that anyone can perform without getting in the water.

Teach children to swim at an early age, and learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and the Heimlich maneuver so that you will be prepared in an emergency. Classes are offered at various locations throughout the Grosse Pointes. If you are not certified, call a local hospital and ask when the next CPR class is offered.

Alarm systems also can provide safety and peace of mind. Until recently, alarms alerted parents only when the child came in contact with the water. New systems, known as Prevent and Pool Watch, are activated when a child walks within a few feet of the pool's edge. While these alarms are costly, they can provide a measure of security for parents.

Beach rules

When the family outing is to the beach or community swimming pool, don't count entirely on lifeguards to watch your children. Lifeguards are trained to rescue a swimmer in an emergency and that is their role. They are not hired to supervise children, so keep your eyes on your children at all times to prevent accidents from happening.

Better yet, get in the water and swim with your child, and if you have to leave the pool or beach for any reason, take your child with you.

At the beach, dangers exist for adults as well as children. Riptides and unexpected waves are present at Michigan beaches, which can catch teenagers and adults by surprise and result in fatal mishaps.

To steer clear of these dangers, swim only in designated areas. Do not disobey "no swimming" and "no diving" signs.

When vacationing by the ocean, be even more cautious as you head out to swim. Currents can be quite strong and Michigan residents are generally less accustomed to swimming in the ocean. And if you've been drinking alcohol, stay out of the water completely.

Safe boating

Operating a boat safely takes knowledge and practice. If you have a boat, be sure to take a course in boating safety through the Coast Guard or a yacht club. When boating, some basic guidelines to keep in mind include:

Never drive drunk. A boat is like a car; results can be deadly.

All passengers should wear flotation devices at all times.

Water skiers should be supervised constantly.

Do not start the boat with the engine in gear.

Be aware of the rules in the area, and stay away from swimming areas.

Remember to vent the bilges if you have a carbureted or EFI gasoline-powered engine. Built-up fuel and fumes can result in an explosion.

Keep a fire extinguisher, flares, communication and navigation equipment and lifesaving equipment on hand. Know how to use them.

Do not leave a capsized boat in an attempt to swim to shore. You will be spotted more easily if you stay near the boat.

There is no need for the dangers of swimming and boating to stop you from having fun during the summer, but it is important to be aware of how to keep you and your family safe while you're having fun. Keep your summer memories positive by preventing the heartbreak of accidents and injuries.

Bon Secours Cottage breaks new ground for Cancer Care Center

Friends and supporters celebrated with the leadership of Bon Secours Cottage Health Services, Bon Secours Health System Inc. and Henry Ford Health System as they broke ground at the Cottage Hospital campus on June 14, opening up a new dimension of cancer care for the east side communities.

Construction is underway on a first-floor addition along the north driveway of the hospital, and new and existing interior space is being reconfigured to allow for installation of a linear accelerator for radiation oncology.

A separate entrance will be constructed at the north end of the Kercheval driveway, allowing easy patient access to hospital-based cancer care, the Women's Diagnostic Center and other diagnostic and treatment services, as well as ambulatory surgical services.

When the project is complete in early 2001, east side residents will have access to the most advanced cancer diagnosis and treatment protocols available — without leaving their neighborhoods — through a collaborative association between BSCHS and the Josephine Ford Cancer Center (JFCC) of Henry Ford Health System.

With the support of local private-practice physicians and a research affiliation between the University of Michigan and JFCC cancer programs, BSCHS will offer a major benefit to the community it serves, expanding on its existing cancer care to provide expanded, comprehensive oncology services. These include radiation therapy, medical oncology and chemotherapy, surgical oncology, breast diagnostic services, patient education, counseling and nutrition support and hospice care, to name a few.

"It's an important and exciting new venture," said Dr. Raymond Demers, director of the JFCC. "We are consolidating the community strengths in oncology care already provided in this community by members of the Bon Secours Cottage medical staff, including a team of outstanding medical and surgical oncologists. It closely integrates this expertise with the expanded services of the Josephine Ford Cancer Center."

"Our community physicians will lead us to a new level in cancer care and offer a service that is unparalleled in access and quality in our area," said Bon Secours Cottage Trustee Dr. Victoria Segura. "This groundbreaking represents a significant link in the continuum of cancer care we offer, from diagnostic specialties to hospice. It also marks a vital turning point in the ongoing advances that have occurred during the 90 years the Sisters of Bon Secours have lived our mission of providing 'good help to those in need' in the Grosse Pointe area," she added.

"While the ultimate cure for all cancers may be just beyond the horizon, the expert care our neighbors need today is right around their corner," said Rick Van Lith, chief executive officer of BSCHS. "Bon Secours Cottage Cancer Care gives our families and neighbors access to the expertise of one of the top cancer centers in the nation and puts us at the cutting edge of lifesaving research."

Joining together to break new ground for cancer care on the east side of Detroit are, from left: Dr. Thomas Mertz, co-chairman of the Cancer Steering Committee for Bon Secours Cottage Health Services; Michael J. FitzSimons, chairman of the board of trustees; Richard M. Van Lith, chief executive officer; Dr. Victoria Segura, member of the board of trustees; Nancy Schlichting, chief operating officer of Henry Ford Health System; David M. Hempstead, chairman of the Joint Venture Committee; and Theodore Mecke, co-chairman of the Cancer Steering Committee.

"By Word of MOUTH"

Dr. Kevin Prush, D.D.S.

Choices, Choices, Choices! We are faced with all kinds of decisions, including cosmetic dentistry. We have yet another option: Microabrasion.

Many of us have white or brownish blotchy colorations on our teeth. If these permanent stains are contained on the surface, they can be eliminated with microabrasion. If the stains are deeper into the enamel, then microabrasion will not work. If microabrasion does not improve the staining, then other options are available.

Microabrasion involves removing small layers of stained enamel with a polishing compound. This procedure is limited to surface staining and once again, will not help with deeper discolorations. But if your type of staining is a candidate for microabrasion, then you can improve your smile with this conservative procedure!

Know Your Skin

by Lisa A. Manz-Dulac, MD

Swimmer's skin. Summer's warm days draw many of us to local pools, lakes and beaches. Beyond the absolute need to apply sunscreens before and during these wet adventures, additional skin issues also need to be considered.

One interesting result of excessive time being wet is that our skin tends to become dry! This dryness is caused by several factors - such as the chlorine in pool water, and a chapping effect from the regular evaporation of water off the skin.

In addition, many of us, after lounging poolside, are tempted by a luxurious hot shower, slathering ourselves with harsh soaps in the process. The result, dry itching skin.

The solution to dry, itching skin requires several changes in our routines. First, it is important to moisturize, before and after swimming. When showering, use lukewarm water and bring along a mild soap to pamper your skin. And pat, don't rub yourself dry with a towel before you again moisturize.

To learn more about caring for dry, itching skin contact your dermatologist or call us at Eastside Dermatology, Dr. Lisa A Manz-Dulac and Associates (313)884-3380.

Eating enroute

By Susanne Consiglio
Special Writer

Are you constantly busy and pressed for time to the point that eating in the car is becoming a daily routine?

Does the fast food "Drive Thru" or a candy bar at the gas station food court seem like an easy meal or quick "pick me up?"

Using your car for extended commutes or vacation travel can lead you down the fast food lane. Fast food is OK in moderation, but it's not the healthiest option when trying to consume less cholesterol, saturated fat and sodium.

Take a look in the back seat of your car. Are there sandwich or candy bar wrappers or empty potato chip bags? Maybe it's time to pack a cooler.

Bringing food from home can be quicker, cheaper and healthier for you. The greatest challenge is becoming organized and disciplined enough to do it. Once you get into the habit, you'll wonder why you didn't bring food with you sooner.

Your first investment should be a good sized cooler with a "freezer ice bag." Try to arrive earlier to your destination so you can enjoy your meal instead of driving and eating. The following ideas are suitable for individuals or families who are constantly eating in the car.

- Water — 16 oz. bottles are conveniently sold everywhere, including gas station food courts. They are also easy to bring from home. Drinking water is a great way to reduce the soda pop habit.
- Milk — fill up your own water bottles with skim, 1 percent or low-fat chocolate milk. Pints are also sold in many stores. Non-dairy soy beverages are another convenient 8 oz. packaged item. Make sure all beverages remain chilled.
- Fresh fruit juice or juice boxes — a 6-oz. serving of 100 percent juice is another refreshing liquid.
- Quick and easy sandwiches — lean ham, roast beef or turkey are easy to manage. Make sure they are completely chilled or kept on ice.
- Bagel or tortilla wrap sandwiches — these are popular and fairly easy to manage while driving, if time is limited. A peanut butter sandwich is another choice, but be careful with the jelly. You would hate to have it drip on your clothing before going into an important meeting.
- Reduced-fat tuna or chicken salad sandwiches, hommous, tabbouleh, fruit salad, black bean salad or garden chicken salad — all good choices, but they can be difficult to manage while driving. Save these for days when you can eat while the car is stopped.

More options to round out an on-the-go meal:

- Fresh fruit in season or easy-to-manage fruits such as grapes, apples, bananas, strawberries, blueberries, raisins and dried apricots.
- Yogurt, "gogurt," a 1-oz. bag of soy nuts or peanuts, reduced-fat moo sticks (mozzarella cheese).
- Peanut butter/celery or reduced fat cream cheese/celery.
- Green and red pepper strips, carrot and celery sticks, cucumber slices.
- Reduced sodium tomato or V8 juice.

Need a little sweetness? Try a Rice Krispie treat, a low-fat granola bar, an oatmeal raisin cookie, banana muffin or an energy bar.

Packing the car with food is easy and an excellent habit for people on the go. Give it a try at least three days each week.

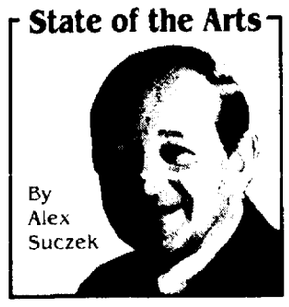
Stratford's 'As You Like It' is as likeable as it gets

State of the Arts



By Alex Suczek

Making an old play new again in repertory is a challenge for every director and actor. Fortunately the task is easier with a great play.

Director Jeannette Lambermont couldn't ask for a better script than "As You Like It."

Nor could Lucy Peacock ask for a better role than its lead, Rosalind.

What is more, the play could hardly expect better treatment than it is getting at Stratford this summer.

The creativity and originality of the approach is signaled immediately with an amusing pantomime prologue that quiets the house even before the lights go down.

Meanwhile, attention is focused on a functional platform set that fulfills both symbolic and practical needs. Silhouetted on the backdrop are giant clockwork gears that eventually are understood to reflect the formality of life at the villainous Duke Frederick's court. It also illustrates many references to the passage of time in the course of the play. The most famous — Jaques' speech describing the seven ages of man.

In the second act, the stage floor between the platforms becomes the surface of a pond where at one point Touchstone the clown entertains whimsically with a magical paper boat that seems to float freely. Heavy hanging ropes stand in for the trees of the forest of Arden, allowing the actors even to climb up to imaginary branches.

At first it all arouses questions as to just how this production will work out. Gradually, in the answering, it yields an evening of exceptionally pleasurable and intelligent amusement.

"As You Like It" was probably written at the request, or command, of the Queen for performance at Court and so it seems to represent Shakespeare's most sophisticated humorous treatment of various love relationships. He must have expected a high appreciation from his courtly audience, for the script contains some of the most clever word play he could produce in the treatment of idealistic sentiments.

His courtly characters gathered in the pastoral atmosphere of the Forest of Arden are exiles from the Duke Frederick's court, so their speech can be rich in the world play and witticisms of the Elizabethan upper crust.

As for the plot — people seeking refuge separately in the forest, meeting and falling in love — it is a convenient vehicle for the exploration of ways of courtship and loving behavior. Shakespeare offers a well-selected variety which this clever cast presents with charm, tenderness and humor.

There is so much play on words that the better you know the text, the more you enjoy it. That is no problem here. The entire company delivers the lines with clarity and well-placed emphasis.

Setting the standard — and it is a high one — is Lucy Peacock who played Rosalind once before at Stratford a decade ago. She brings a special depth of feeling to her masquerade as a man, discussing love with her lover without his realizing who she is. The conflicts between talking "man to man" and her feelings of affection for him make for lively innuendos and even livelier dialogue.

In his turn, Donald Carrier as her lover Orlando is an evocative representation of the romantic lead — handsome, sincere and giddy with passion as he hangs papers bearing declarations of his love for Rosalind on almost every tree (the dangling ropes).

Other lovers on the scene have different styles. Outstanding and contrasting are Touchstone and Audrey. He is the court jester who has fled with Rosalind from her abusive Ducal Uncle. Brian Tree, with bizarrely moussed hair, makes a superb version of Touchstone, one of Shakespeare's most perceptive human commentators. His wise foolery and his wooing of the ragged goat girl is as crudely, and entertainingly, self-serving as Orlando's is idealistic.

Another distinctive touch is the way the many songs that Shakespeare put into this play are presented with acted clarity. The lyrics become especially significant in furthering the ideas in the play itself and are especially enjoyable that way.

As the shepherd duo of Phoebe and Silvius, Michelle Giroux and Michael Therriault present a bumpkin version of lovers where he adores her and she disdains him. In fact, she falls for Ganymede who is Rosalind in male disguise. This creates an awkward situation out of which the script allows the actors to make a lot more hay.

At one point, a trio of goat-puppet costumes animated by actors wander in. They upstage the principals and form an entertaining gallery as they observe the curious antics of foolish mortals in love. It is a touch of whimsy that accents the mood of the main action.

In stark contrast to all the fun, Juan Chioran as Jaques, with disdain for the many expressions of affection, makes his melancholy commentary on the state of mankind. It is a telling counterpoint to all the talk of love.

Happily, as Jaques withdraws into gloomy seclusion, love conquers all.

Even the villainous brother of Orlando (who drove him into exile) falls in love with Rosalind's closest friend. The fantasy peaks then as the Goddess Hymen delivers Rosalind, restored to her beautiful womanly status, to Orlando, for a mass wedding of all the lovers.

All of which brings to a happy conclusion a thoroughly delightful evening of easy intellectual stimulation and exploration of the experience of wooing and winning. It is all the happier for the absence of grunts, groans and heavy breathing.

One leaves the theater with a sense of glowing well-being, satisfaction and contentment.

"As You Like It" is presented in repertory at the Avon Theater through Nov. 2. For a schedule, Visitors Guide and reservations call (800) 567-1600.

Spinach salad is simple; it's good for you, too

This week's feature is my favorite recipe for a simple spinach salad that can serve as a starter or an entree — with or without bacon.

Summer is a great time for buying fresh Michigan-grown spinach at Eastern Market. It's usually quite dirty and requires several rinsings, but the robust flavor is worth your efforts. Bagged baby spinach is ready to eat for those who want to keep the salad preparation to a minimum.

À LA ANNIE
By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff

Wilted Spinach Salad

1 lb. freshly washed and torn spinach or 1 lb. ready-to-eat baby spinach
4 - 6 hard-boiled eggs, peeled and sliced
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
6 oz. fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
1/2 lb. bacon (optional)

Warm Bacon Dressing

1 package Good Seasons Italian dressing mix
1/2 cup salad OR olive oil
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
2 tablespoons Hormel real bacon bits

Cut the bacon into 1/2-inch pieces or so, and cook in a skillet until crispy, about 10 minutes. Remove from skillet and transfer to a paper towel to drain.

Prepare the Good Seasons dressing according to package directions substituting the balsamic for the red wine vinegar.

Shake well and pour about half of the prepared dressing into a small saucepan. Stir in the bacon bits and heat dressing over a low burner.

Meanwhile, place the cleaned spinach in a large bowl. Add the red onion, the mushrooms and the sliced eggs. Drizzle some of the heated dressing over the spinach mix and begin tossing, preferably with salad tongs.

Make sure to continue tossing until all of the ingredients have been evenly coated with the dressing. Add more dressing as needed to suit your taste. After the salad is tossed, transfer it to a serving bowl, making sure that none of the "goodies" (eggs, mushrooms and onions) are left behind.

Sprinkle the cooked bacon pieces on top of the salad before serving.

These ingredient measurements are merely a guideline for putting together a spinach salad. The recipe will serve 4 to 8 people, depending on the serving size. The amount of any ingredient can be changed as you desire. The Good Seasons dressing keeps your life simple, as does using ready-to-eat spinach and bacon bits from a jar.

Vegetarians can skip both bacons but heat the dressing anyway because it really makes a difference when tossing the salad.

I usually skip the cooked bacon but add the bacon bits to the dressing in an effort to catch the bacon flavor while cutting down on the overall fat content of the salad.

Serve spinach salad as a first course or as the main dish. Top your salad with a piece of grilled salmon and enjoy a light summer supper.

EDWIN ▼ PAUL
20327 Mack Avenue - Grosse Pointe Woods

Edwin Paul is pleased to announce that construction has begun at our new day spa. After 15 years of hearing clients tell me that they had just been to various spas in Bloomfield Hills I decided to do some research.

For two years I traveled from Palm Springs to Palm Beach looking at spas from a client's point of view.

I asked owners which services were most popular while studying architecture and design. During this time I learned a true spa must be separate from a salon environment. They are two completely different things that require unique styles. A salon should be fun like a good party, a spa quiet, private and luxurious, not an afterthought in the back of a salon. Clients should smell flowers and beautiful fragrances in a spa, not hair color and perms.

So I got together with the best designers around and came up with Grosse Pointe's only luxury day spa.

Together we gave attention to detail and atmosphere that is uncommon most anywhere.

Here's just a few of the things you'll find inside. Soundproof treatment rooms, separate lounges for men and women, showers, steam room, Wolff tanning equipment, thick embroidered robes, massage, facials, micro dermabrasion, Aveda skin care and makeup, makeup lessons, nail care and pedicures in a $5,000 chair that heats and massages, a spa menu created for us by Andiamos, custom wall fountains, imported Italian marble, custom-made furniture from Italy, full retail with gifts for the bath and home, the full line of Edwin Paul hair care, a private outdoor veranda and on and on.

All with the attention to service, education and cleanliness Edwin Paul is famous for.

We'll begin booking appointments the first week of July for our opening July 17th.

Treat yourself to the best at Grosse Pointe's only luxury day spa. You deserve the best. Edwin Paul spa (313)885-9002. Visit our web site at wwwEdwinPaul.com

Joe Ricci of Grosse Pointe Farms gets ready to race in the Dodge Neon Charity Challenge.

Neon racer takes a wild ride

By Brad Lindberg
Staff writer

Five minutes to the start.

Joe Ricci sat in his race car, thinking.

The car's four-point safety harness squeezed him against the driver's seat.

Cocooned inside a metal roll cage, he took a deep breath and tightened the belts even more.

The countdown was on for the Dodge Neon Charity Challenge. The race raises money for the Detroit Police Athletic League Run in support of the Tenneco FedEx Detroit Grand Prix, the challenge this year would generate $380,000.

"Mirrors are fine," said Ricci, scanning the cockpit. "Peripheral vision is fine."

Ricci was wired, literally. A microphone rigged to his racing helmet recorded every word, most printable.

He took a deep breath and tightened the belts.

Four minutes.

He loosened the belts. Ricci was getting fidgety.

"I'd hate to take my blood pressure right now," he said. "I'd be disappointed if I don't finish in the top 10."

Ricci did a mental run-through of the upcoming race.

"Keep with the leaders so you don't get waylaid in traffic," he said to himself. "Have a good run at turn one and two. Head down the inside (of the straightaway) to turn three. Downshift to third gear. Carry third to turn six. Quick downshift to second gear, up to third as I hit the apex (of the turn), drag out third gear, hit fourth."

From there, he'd speed down the back straight along the Detroit River. Entering turn seven, where an Indy car driver slammed the wall in qualifying and was airlifted to a hospital, Ricci would lift the throttle.

"Brake," he continued. "Downshift to third gear. Carry third through the S-turns."

At this point on the narrow, twisting track, Ricci would be wrangling through a series of almost constant turns called collectively the Casino turn.

He'd downshift to second gear in turn eight, missing the apex by a car-width.

"Up to third gear," he said deliberately. "Carry third to turn 11 (the slowest turn on the course). Downshift to second, back up to third for turn 12; nice even brake through 12. Hit power just before the apex, carry it to turn 13. Drive through fourth gear to the

Norsemen one goal away from state lacrosse championship

Grosse Pointe North's boys lacrosse team was only one goal away from a state championship.

Lansing Waverly scored with 56 seconds remaining in regulation to beat the Norsemen 9-8 in the Class B championship game at Cranbrook Kingswood.

Brendan Fossee led North with four goals, while Mark Seppala and Alex Thomas each scored twice.

Fossee and Thomas also collected two assists apiece and Andrew Ellis, Jeff Dinverno and Nick Tuscany each had one.

Goalie Don Northey made 19 saves for the Norsemen.

Fossee's efforts earned him one of the two Most Valuable Player awards for the game.

North finished the season with a 19-5 overall record after posting a 16-4 mark in league play.

In the semifinals, North edged Madison Heights Bishop Foley 11-9 on three goals apiece from Seppala and Fossee.

Thomas and Matt Coleman each scored two goals and Ellis completed the North scoring.

Fossee had three assists, Thomas and P.J. Mallon two apiece and Ellis, Seppala, Tuscany, Tim Bozell and Matt Coleman each picked up one.

Northey made 21 saves for the Norsemen, who didn't pick up a penalty in the contest.

Eleven was also the lucky number for North in its quarterfinal game with Pontiac Notre Dame Prep as the Norsemen beat the Fighting Irish 11-6.

Seppala had three goals and Thomas and Coleman tallied two apiece. Ellis, Jeff Hiller, Bozell and Jeff Dinverno added a goal each.

Fossee had four assists and Hiller, Dry, Seppala and Dinverno each had one.

Northey turned away 21 shots.

Coleman and Seppala each scored four goals as North began its playoff run with a 12-romp over Ann Arbor Huron.

Thomas scored twice and Mallon and Dinverno completed the scoring with a goal apiece.

Seppala and Mallon each collected two assists and Thomas, Josh Dry, Ellis, Vinnie Sadzinski, Dinverno and Fossee each picked up one.

Northey recorded 10 saves.

North had several all-conference selections, headed by first-team players Andrew Ellis and Fosse at midfield, Northey in goal and Thomas on attack.

Making the second team were attackmen Coleman and Seppala and midfielders Dinverno and Mallon.

North players on the third team were defensemen Jim Ellis and Jon Fischer and middies Dry and Hiller.

Defensemen Ray Andary and Mike Mansor and midfielders Bozell and Tom Gassel received honorable mention.

Woods swimmers win opener

Nine Grosse Pointe Woods swimmers won three events apiece to lead the Warriors to a 321-232 victory over the Grosse Pointe City Norbs in a Lakefront Swimming Association meet.

Joey Zarb, Stephen Van Beek, Megan Moore, Larry Briski, Michael Van Beek, Alex Johns, Scott Paavola, Kevin Paavola and Carly Piper each won three first-place ribbons.

There were several other highlights for the Woods team.

Jeffery Moore, 10, moved up an age group and did well in the breaststroke as he helped the 12-and-under boys medley relay team take a first place.

Newcomer Michelle Carolan won the girls 10-and-under 25-yard backstroke by a two-second margin over the runner-up. She was also second in the 50 freestyle for her age group.

Two more newcomers to the team, David and Paige Castile, made contributions in both individual and relay events.

Robert Briski was second in

Well-rounded effort needed for NOOD regatta winners

Winners at the Sailing World NOOD (National Offshore One-Design) regatta hosted recently by Bayview Yacht Club needed to turn in well-rounded performances to claim class trophies at the scheduled three-day event.

The regatta opened in a stiff 18-knot breeze with shifts as large as 50 degrees reported. It was a good early-season test for racers.

Wind velocity and windshift angles settled down on the second day with eight to 10 knots of breeze. On the final day of racing, the breeze went to the other extreme. There was no wind on Lake St. Clair and no races were held.

The 19 skippers who won class trophies mastered every type of breeze.

Two of the classes — the Express 27s and Hobie 33s — used the regatta to run their national championships.

Hobie 33 champions Stu and Sandy Kevelighan of West Bloomfield and their crew on Stealth entered the regatta as the boat to beat after dominating the class in 1999 with five first-place finishes.

Stealth won all three of its races in Friday's heavy air, but Stu Kevelighan admitted that the day's racing had some tribulations.

"We had a tough second race," he said. "We started on the wrong side of the course and worked our way back over to the second boat."

Stealth caught Jonathan Swift skipper Ronald Nolan of Overland Park, Kan., and the two boats traded the lead until the photo finish.

"The committee said it was less than a second between the two of us," Stu Kevelighan said. "I thought (Nolan) had gotten it."

The Kevelighans took a fourth and second in the final two races to beat Nolan by three points.

Californian Paul Deeds and his crew on Lorax also repeated their class win at the 1999 NOOD to win the Express 27 national championship.

The Express 27s added an extra day of racing, hosted by the Crescent Sail Club, and Deeds topped the 12-boat class by never finishing worse than fourth in the seven races.

Cal 25s with 20 boats and Tartan Tens with 21 boats were the largest classes in the regatta. Tom Schreiber of St. Clair Shores won the Cal 25 class by a nine-point margin as he never dropped lower than third in Annie Mayme.

In the Tartan Ten class, the fight for class honors became an intense battle. Most boats in the top five had at least one double-digit finish in their score.

Tim Britton of Mentor, Ohio, on Troll was the winner by a five-point margin. Britton and runner-up David L. Klaasen of Grosse Pointe Park on Macho Duck entered the final race separated by one point.

Frank Tenkel of Grosse Pointe Shores on Bravo won the C&C 35 class by a one-point margin over Contender, which is owned by Gary Graham of the Park.

Doug Scheibner of the City of Grosse Pointe skippered Mr. Nice to a one-point victory in the Etchells class.

John Barbour of the City brought Velero VI to a one-point win over Ben Stormes of Grosse Pointe Farms in Level 40.

Gordon Morlan of the Park had a six-point win in the Santana 35 class and Curtis Kime of the Farms won the Warhorse class in Silver Cloud.

At each event, support sponsor Boatscape.com recognizes the fleet's top performer on a given day of racing with the Boat of the Day award.

Youth won out at the Detroit NOOD with the crew of C&C 35 Eliminator winning the honor. Led by the helmsman/tactician duo of brothers Chris and John Van Tol of the Park, the crew was comprised of sailors 19 and younger.

Following are the winners in each class, along with Grosse Pointe sailors who finished among the top three.

front straightaway."

Neon races are 30-minute timed events. Drivers hit 120 mph wile averaging 65 mph on the 2.3-mile, 13-turn Belle Isle track.

Ricci's strategy called for keeping his car's 150-hp, five-speed engine revving between 4,800 and 6,000 rpms. Anything less would bog him down. Anything more could blow up the motor.

Three minutes.

"I'm a little nervous," said Ricci, who races Formula Mazda open-wheel race cars as a member of the Sports Car Club of America.

When he's not chasing his high-speed hobby, Ricci, a resident of Grosse Pointe Farms, is CEO of Motorquest Dodge of Dearborn, a group of car dealerships.

Back on the track, Ricci sat in row seven next to Floyd Hall, the former chairman of Kmart. Kitty-corner sat Frank Borschke, treasurer of the Motor Sports Hall of Fame in Novi. Ricci would battle those drivers the whole race.

"Frank's been known for blocking," said Ricci. "It's going to be dicey getting by him."

Two minutes.

"These belts are tight," he said. Deep breath. Long silence.

"Concentrate, concentrate," he chanted.

One minute.

Track announcer: "The first event of the Tenneco Automotive Grand Prix will unfold."

"I'd like to get on a scale and see how much weight I lose," said Ricci, his voice clipped.

Announcer: "Gentlemen, start your engines."

Horns honked. Somebody did "shave and a haircut — two bits."

"The horn works," said Ricci in an upbeat voice. "OK. We're off, guys."

To a chorus of rpms, the field begins the pace lap.

Ricci talked to himself about turn three, a section of troublesome track that will dog him for the next 30 minutes.

"I have to brake at the 300-yard marker going into turn three," he said. "I have not been able to do that (during practice)."

Still fidgeting half way through the pace lap, Ricci adjusted, what else, his seat belts. The field rounded the final turn on the pace lap.

Start.

"We got green. We got green," Ricci yelled as the cars buzzed like hornets across the starting line.

"Turn two is the most important turn on the course because it's the fastest corner leading to a straightaway," Ricci explained.

It's also dangerous. The corner is slanted to the outside. Gravity and centrifugal force push the cars toward the outside wall, a series of 3,000-pound concrete slabs.

"Don't look at the wall. Just keep going," he said.

"I blew a shift," he yelled going through the right-left combination of turns one and two.

High revs down the front straight to turn three. Hall cut to the middle of the track.

"Floyd Hall's trying to cut me off," he said. "I'm going wide — so is Floyd."

Approaching turn three, Ricci, as he feared, downshifted too early.

"I'm way too slow," said Ricci. Tires squeal. "Whoa," he called, his tires losing grip. "The tires are cold."

The shifting mishap drained Ricci's momentum. He was passed.

No talking, just driving. A cacophony of real-life sound effects told the story. Revving engines mimicked the Doppler effect. A deep mongrel growl indicated hard acceleration in the lower gears. A high-pitched whine signaled a top gear sprint down a straightaway.

Downshift, break, turn, tires squeal, hit the gas, upshift, gas, break, turn, squeal. Ricci closed in on the car that had just passed him.

"I might try to take him on the inside (of a turn)," said Ricci. "I'm coming in."

Extra-high revs revealed a high speed downshift as Ricci edged inside the turn. Tires chirped.

"I got 'em," said Ricci. One lap, one pass.

Thumpthump.

"Dead squirrel on the track," said Ricci, exiting turn two with a "where'd that come from" tone to his voice. "That's wild."

Loud tire squeals through turns three, four and five.

"If I didn't hit the brake pedal so much I'd be OK," he said.

A few laps passed. The race was seven minutes old. "It feels like I've been in here for hours," he said.

Ricci was having trouble keeping the rpms up. Downshifting to second, he mistakenly put the car in fourth. Rpms plummet to 2,500. Way too low.

"That really screwed things up," he said.

Calming himself down, he said to himself, "Be smooth, be smooth. Power on, power on — shift!"

He trailed Floyd Hall by seven car lengths. "I don't know if I can catch Floyd."

Ricci said, "I'm starting to lose my concentration. Get back in the rhythm."

He squealed through the Casino corner.

"I picked up a couple of spots there," he said. "I kept the rpms close to 4,000. Ahhhgg. I dropped below 3,500 (rpms) on that turn. Nice even throttle. Smooth, smooth. Downshift to second. Hit the gas, hit the gas. Upshift. I don't know how these guys go flat-out through turns eight and nine."

He entered the back straight heading to turn 12. Smooth engine sound.

"I'm starting to feel pretty good," he said. Tires squealed a little through turn 12. "Much better."

On the next lap, Ricci again shifted too early entering turn three. Hall and Borschke pulled away.

"I'm just not getting that right," he said in disgust. "I'm starting to feel fatigued. I've got to be careful."

He started gaining ground.

"I'm going to wind this car out," he said. Loud tire squeals through a turn. "Oh boy, this car is getting beat up."

Another driver hit the wall.

"I can pick up another spot," said Ricci, who passed the wreck into 12th place. Race drivers are opportunists.

"Floyd (Hall) is clogging the track," said Ricci, anxious to finish 10th or better. "We're picking up traffic."

He lapped last place driver Carmen Calabrese, an auto executive.

"A good guy," said Ricci.

He focused on Hall: "I'm on Floyd's ass."

Hall slowed entering a turn. Ricci made a run.

"He cut me off," said Ricci. "That's all right. He knows I'm here."

In turn five, Ricci dodged inside.

"I'll force him outside," he said. Revs up, power down, he hurried through a short chute to turn six, a left-hander.

"I'm taking the inside again," said Ricci. Sudden brake squeal, not just from turning, but from braking hard. Full power.

"I got 'em — pushed him off. Yes sir," said Ricci.

Ricci passed Floyd Hall. Two laps to go. Where's Borschke?

"He's driving down the middle of the track," said Ricci.

Last lap.

Ricci is in 11th place. Would he make it to 10th, his goal?

He highballed it through the Casino. The engine revved in turn 11, the slowest corner on the track. He had good headway down the back straight to turn 12, a right-hander at the downstream end of Belle Isle.

"I want to stay inside," he said, his voice rising. He stuck his Neon's nose aggressively to the inside of Hall's right rear bumper.

"Nice move, nice move," said Ricci.

Hall, his line taken, backed off.

"Got 'em!" said Ricci.

Upshift, power on, loud squealing through turn 13.

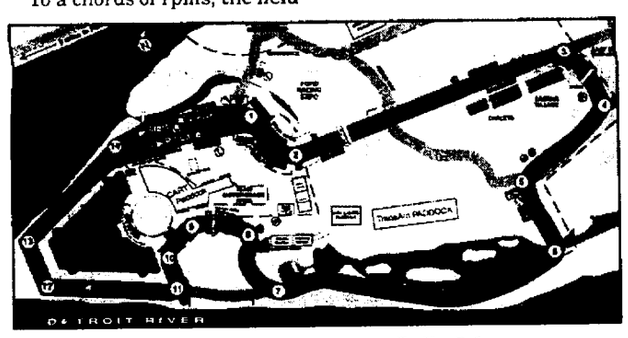
He pushed through the gears to the finish line.

"Yeah," he yelled. "Got the checkered! Woohoo. Yeah!"

Horn honks.

"Wahoo. Yea. Unbelievable!" he said. "I might have got 10th place."

He did, his best-ever finish — until the next day's race when he finished ninth.



The 2.3-mile Detroit Raceway on Belle Isle.

THE ORIGINAL KITCHEN REFACING COMPANY

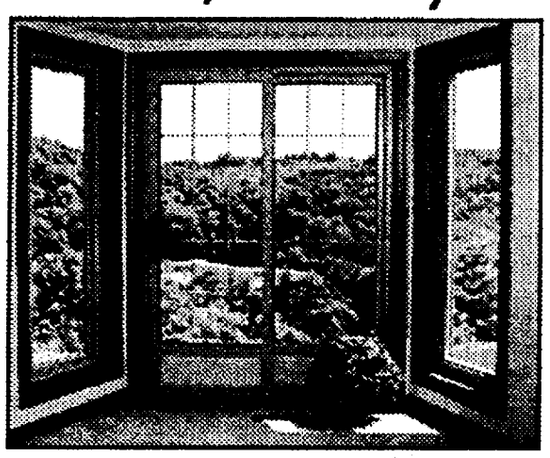
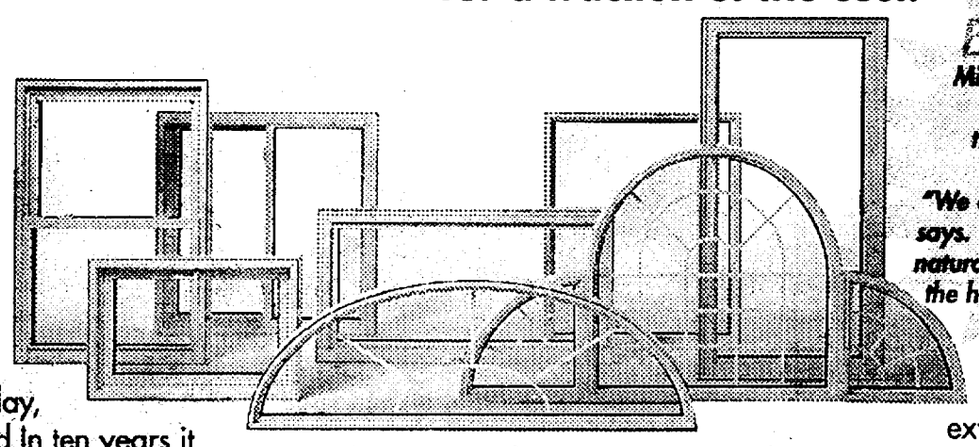
KITCHENS, WINDOWS, SIDING & MORE

CabinetClad of Madison Heights is literally where home improvement meets "Home Improvement." It seems a couple years back, Martha Bones, the mother of Detroit Favorite Son Tim "The Tool Man" Taylor was shopping around for a kitchen makeover. After pricing some complete kitchen remodels, she was dismayed by the expensive estimates she had received. That was until she called Jay Towar, owner of CabinetClad.

"(By refacing her present kitchen) we saved her 40 percent over the cost of a brand new kitchen," Towar says. "We are the only company in Detroit that truly promotes refacing and remodeling....We go into a job looking at what is best for the customer. (And) kitchen refacing instead of remodeling can be done for a fraction of the cost."





Both Towar and his general manager, Mike Denton, live in the Pointes and support many youth programs through their participation in the Grosse Pointe Optimist Club. "We employ many young people," Towar says. "Working with the Optimist Club is a natural outgrowth to ensure better lives for the hundreds of kids the Optimists help."

That should come as good news to residents of the eastside. Because most of the homes here are at least 30-40 years old, the original building materials are made of such quality materials that kitchen refacing is a logical choice. But whether you're looking for a complete makeover or a facelift, you can be sure that your money is working for you. "Sometimes I would rather look at my (new) kitchen than my stock portfolio," Towar says. "You take a luxury car that costs $50,000 today, and in ten years it will be worth what, $10,000? A new kitchen worth $15-$30,000 today will still be worth at least that in ten years. Maybe even $100,000 with a brand new kitchen."

Customer Service is No. 1 at CabinetClad. The quality of laminates, veneers and finishes are first rate, but Towar even takes that to another level. After the job is completed, CabinetClad will conduct either a physical or verbal inspection of the work. It is that commitment to the customer that the CabinetClad team has put into the some 17,000 kitchens jobs it has performed. In recent years, CabinetClad has also branched into replacement windows and siding. Because the average cost of a complete tear out and new window can run as high as $1,500 per opening, the vinyl window alternative is very appealing both in costs and looks. "We found that windows and siding to be a natural outgrowth for us," Towar says. "We have vinyl windows that match wood surfaces on both the interior and exterior. With the energy savings, in 5-10 years you have the new windows paying you interest."

The savings don't end there. If the customer opts to have the full treatment, kitchen, windows, siding, they are eligible for CabinetClad preferential referral pricing, in which the next product becomes discounted. It is CabinetClad's way of thanking the customer for choosing one contractor for all three jobs. Many of these same customers come back later (1-20 years) to have more updating done. And that's with an unlimited lifetime guarantee.

VILLAGE LOCKSMITH

matching customers with the best solution

In an era of fast food, cookie cutter cars and summer movies whose plots depend on the number of explosions per-minute, the people at Village Lock and Home Repair in Grosse Pointe Farms believe that personal, specialized service is the right way to do business.

"We sell commercial and residential locks," said store owner Mike Petkwitz. "Grosse Pointe is a community with old homes and old homes often have old locks. We specialize in trying to find out what customers want. But just as important, we work with customers to find out what they need."

A big national hardware store chain sells the kinds of locks that sell well across the country, which is reasonable for them to do, said Petkwitz. Village Locksmith, on the other hand, stocks what Grosse Pointers want and need.

"Homes cost so much these day," Petkwitz said. "People want to take care of their houses, and that's where we come in. Instead of replacing an old lock with a new one that might cost $250 and up, we can restore the old lock at a lesser cost. Plus we can make sure that the work is aesthetically pleasing and consistent with the rest of the house."

He has on staff the expertise to fix old locks, said Petkwitz. If they don't have the part, they can make it. Plus they also offer excellent service.

"People don't have to throw up their hands because they bought a lock at a hardware store and then realize they don't have the expertise to install it," Petkwitz said. "We can install it for them. If the customer wants to maintain their house in the traditional manner, we can repair the lock in an old, traditional door. We sell period-looking brass, and we sell the name brands people recognize."

It's important to work to educate the customer on what he and his staff can offer them, said Petkwitz. When replacing a lock, its important to know whether it needs replacing or if it can be repaired for less money.

"We have craftsman, not salesmen on commission whose salary depends on what they can sell you," Petkwitz said. "They are experienced people with years on the job. When people come in and ask for the guy who fixes things, they're surprised to learn that we're all the 'guy' who fixes things. There are people on staff who specialize in glass, in carpentry, in locks. It's all a part of the service."

The store also provides expert brass polishing and refinishing, wood and steel replacement door, screen repair, safes, foreign and domestic auto service and 24-hour emergency service.

"DUCT CLEANING COULD BE THE HEALTHIEST HOME IMPROVEMENT INVESTMENT YOU WILL EVER MAKE"

Inside your house, lurking inside the catacombs of the air duct system, is an enemy many of us don't even know about. Dirt. Years of dust and filth, accumulated up to a half-inch thick inside the network's ducts and pans, is blowing back into your household air every day when you turn on the air conditioning or heat.

Needless to say, it's not a healthy situation. But there is a solution, a way to remove all of that unhealthy dirt, dust, pollen, animal dander, hair, spores, mildew, bacteria and other contaminants that get pulled into your duct system. It's the solution offered by Breath of Life Air Duct Cleaning, a business that is improving indoor air quality all over the area.

"We treat each house as if it were our own," said Breath of Life Owner and Technician Gabriel Nicholas. Gabriels' sons, Gibran and Jaad, join him on the job; his daughter, Josephine, runs the office operation.

"A few years ago, I decided to make indoor air quality a personal concern. My family now makes it a full time job to see that homeowners have the opportunity to breathe clean, healthy air inside their own homes, " Nicholas said.

Breath of Life uses the exclusive HEPA-AIRE cleaning system, which incorporates a powerful vacuum connected at the furnace end of the system and high-pressure air through the ductwork. The duct system is also brushed with an electric powered AIRE-SWEEP Power Brush System. This power agitation system effectively removes caked on debris from various types and configurations of ductwork. The process was developed by Abatement Technologies of Georgia, an industry leader in source removal duct cleaning.

Long lengths of one-inch air hose with 360-degree nozzles are snaked into the duct system through access ports drilled by the technicians. The AIRE-SWEEP compressor shoots air through the hose, which dislodges debris in a "reverse air sweep." The debris is then sucked through the system into the HEPA-AIRE vacuum connected near the furnace.

The main trunk line is then brushed with the AIRE-SWEEP Power Brush. This consists of a revolving brush with special air nozzle located behind the brush head being snaked through the ductwork. This special air nozzle helps blast the debris loosened by the brush into the air stream of the power vacuum and is operated in both a reverse and forward direction. This unique system enables the simultaneous brushing and air sweeping of the duct system.

The vacuum has a filtration system so efficient that it can trap tiny specks of foreign matter 1/300th the diameter of a human hair and returns indoor air to "hospital quality."

Another added benefit to having clean ducts is lower energy costs because of greater efficiency.

After the job is finished, Breath of Life technicians use rubber caps and metal plates to professionally reseal the duct system. The caps and plates also allow access for subsequent cleanings.

In addition to cleaning out the duct system which includes delivery ducts and cold air returns Breath of Life cleans the register and "boot" areas and spot-vacuums hard-to-reach places.

How long does such an involved process take? "Some companies do a so-called duct cleaning in less than 40 minutes," Nicholas said. "That's what makes us better than the other companies. Forty minutes is not a thorough job. We're meticulous and do the job right, which means the average house takes a minimum of three to five hours."

Often, a house can take all day to clean. "Older houses take more time," Nicholas said, "because of years of accumulation and the layout of the ductwork."

Prices on cleaning jobs generally range from $350 to $800, depending on the size of the house and configuration of the ductwork.

If there is more than one furnace in the house, Breath of Life hooks up to each system. In these cases, prices range higher. In every case, the process can be adjusted to meet the needs of the homeowner.

"We're a family business," Nicholas said. "We're constantly getting positive feedback on the results of our work and the manner in which we conduct our business. I'm proud of that. When you do business with us, it's like doing business with friends."

In addition to cleaning out the duct system which includes delivery ducts and cold air returns Breath of Life cleans the register and "boot" areas and spot-vacuums hard-to-reach places.

How long does such an involved process take? "Some companies do a so-called duct cleaning in less than 40 minutes," Nicholas said. "That's what makes us better than the other companies. Forty minutes is not a thorough job. We're meticulous and do the job right, which means the average house takes a minimum of three to five hours."

Often, a house can take all day to clean. "Older houses take more time," Nicholas said, "because of years of accumulation and the layout of the ductwork."

Prices on cleaning jobs generally range from $350 to $800, depending on the size of the house and configuration of the ductwork.

If there is more than one furnace in the house, Breath of Life hooks up to each system. In these cases, prices range higher. In every case, the process can be adjusted to meet the needs of the homeowner.

"We're a family business," Nicholas said. "We're constantly getting positive feedback on the results of our work and the manner in which we conduct our business. I'm proud of that. When you do business with us, it's like doing business with friends."

Village Locksmith

matching customers with the best solution

In an era of fast food, cookie cutter cars and summer movies whose plots depend on the number of explosions per-minute, the people at Village Lock and Home Repair in Grosse Pointe Farms believe that personal, specialized service is the right way to do business.

"We sell commercial and residential locks," said store owner Mike Petkwitz. "Grosse Pointe is a community with old homes and old homes often have old locks. We specialize in trying to find out what customers want. But just as important, we work with customers to find out what they need."

A big national hardware store chain sells the kinds of locks that sell well across the country, which is reasonable for them to do, said Petkwitz. Village Locksmith, on the other hand, stocks what Grosse Pointers want and need.

"Homes cost so much these day," Petkwitz said. "People want to take care of their houses, and that's where we come in. Instead of replacing an old lock with a new one that might cost $250 and up, we can restore the old lock at a lesser cost. Plus we can make sure that the work is aesthetically pleasing and consistent with the rest of the house."

He has on staff the expertise to fix old locks, said Petkwitz. If they don't have the part, they can make it. Plus they also offer excellent service.

"People don't have to throw up their hands because they bought a lock at a hardware store and then realize they don't have the expertise to install it," Petkwitz said. "We can install it for them. If the customer wants to maintain their house in the traditional manner, we can repair the lock in an old, traditional door. We sell period-looking brass, and we sell the name brands people recognize."

It's important to work to educate the customer on what he and his staff can offer them, said Petkwitz. When replacing a lock, its important to know whether it needs replacing or if it can be repaired for less money.

"We have craftsman, not salesmen on commission whose salary depends on what they can sell you," Petkwitz said. "They are experienced people with years on the job. When people come in and ask for the guy who fixes things, they're surprised to learn that we're all the 'guy' who fixes things. There are people on staff who specialize in glass, in carpentry, in locks. It's all a part of the service."

The store also provides expert brass polishing and refinishing, wood and steel replacement door, screen repair, safes, foreign and domestic auto service and 24-hour emergency service.

"DUCT CLEANING COULD BE THE HEALTHIEST HOME IMPROVEMENT INVESTMENT YOU WILL EVER MAKE"

Inside your house, lurking inside the catacombs of the air duct system, is an enemy many of us don't even know about. Dirt. Years of dust and filth, accumulated up to a half-inch thick inside the network's ducts and pans, is blowing back into your household air every day when you turn on the air conditioning or heat.

Needless to say, it's not a healthy situation. But there is a solution, a way to remove all of that unhealthy dirt, dust, pollen, animal dander, hair, spores, mildew, bacteria and other contaminants that get pulled into your duct system. It's the solution offered by Breath of Life Air Duct Cleaning, a business that is improving indoor air quality all over the area.

"We treat each house as if it were our own," said Breath of Life Owner and Technician Gabriel Nicholas. Gabriels' sons, Gibran and Jaad, join him on the job; his daughter, Josephine, runs the office operation.

"A few years ago, I decided to make indoor air quality a personal concern. My family now makes it a full time job to see that homeowners have the opportunity to breathe clean, healthy air inside their own homes, " Nicholas said.

Breath of Life uses the exclusive HEPA-AIRE cleaning system, which incorporates a powerful vacuum connected at the furnace end of the system and high-pressure air through the ductwork. The duct system is also brushed with an electric powered AIRE-SWEEP Power Brush System. This power agitation system effectively removes caked on debris from various types and configurations of ductwork. The process was developed by Abatement Technologies of Georgia, an industry leader in source removal duct cleaning.

Long lengths of one-inch air hose with 360-degree nozzles are snaked into the duct system through access ports drilled by the technicians. The AIRE-SWEEP compressor shoots air through the hose, which dislodges debris in a "reverse air sweep." The debris is then sucked through the system into the HEPA-AIRE vacuum connected near the furnace.

The main trunk line is then brushed with the AIRE-SWEEP Power Brush. This consists of a revolving brush with special air nozzle located behind the brush head being snaked through the ductwork. This special air nozzle helps blast the debris loosened by the brush into the air stream of the power vacuum and is operated in both a reverse and forward direction. This unique system enables the simultaneous brushing and air sweeping of the duct system.

The vacuum has a filtration system so efficient that it can trap tiny specks of foreign matter 1/300th the diameter of a human hair and returns indoor air to "hospital quality."

Another added benefit to having clean ducts is lower energy costs because of greater efficiency.

After the job is finished, Breath of Life technicians use rubber caps and metal plates to professionally reseal the duct system. The caps and plates also allow access for subsequent cleanings.

In addition to cleaning out the duct system which includes delivery ducts and cold air returns Breath of Life cleans the register and "boot" areas and spot-vacuums hard-to-reach places.

How long does such an involved process take? "Some companies do a so-called duct cleaning in less than 40 minutes," Nicholas said. "That's what makes us better than the other companies. Forty minutes is not a thorough job. We're meticulous and do the job right, which means the average house takes a minimum of three to five hours."

"We're a family business," Nicholas said. "We're constantly getting positive feedback on the results of our work and the manner in which we conduct our business. I'm proud of that. When you do business with us, it's like doing business with friends."

sets their sights on the future

How's this as a formula for success: "Take care of the customers, take care of the employees, and the company will take care of itself."

It's a formula that Bill Farrah of IXL Glass said has lifted the company to a higher level.

"The business has evolved," said Farrah, the company's director of sales and service. Product lines have expanded. The staff has grown.

Yet, with annual sales blossoming well into the millions and a list of customers from as far away as Chicago and Minneapolis, the company remains rooted in the values of its mom and pop heritage.

"We're not perfect," said Farrah. "Only God is perfect. But if we make an error, we're going to correct it. We're not going to run from our customers."

The focus is on customer satisfaction at IXL Glass. The company is located on the north side of Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The company's line of 75 residential and commercial window, door and glass products runs from the practical to the exotic. From custom beveled leaded glass entryways for homes to bullet-proof glass for Detroit police stations, the company's selection is unmatched.

IXL's sister company, Squier Windows and Doors, has a local lineage dating to 1932.

IXL's auto glass division sports a mobile repair van. Other services include repairing auto upholstery and convertible tops.

"I'm not interested in being the biggest company," said Farrah. "Although we've become major players in the market, I just want IXL to be the best company."

The staff's can-do attitude has translated into what Farrah called a "considerable" increase in business, but not at the expense of the individual residential customers.

The company was built around helping homeowners.

From selling individual panes of glass to weekend do-it-yourselfers to outfitting homes with thermal windows and window enlargements, the people at IXL have their sights on the local customer.

"Residential work is a very important part of our company, but it's also something very dear to my heart," said Farrah, a 46-year resident of the Pointes. "I like meeting my Grosse Pointe neighbors. I want the residents to know how much I appreciate doing business with them and how we really want to serve them."

He said, "The most refreshing thing in the world to me is taking care of our customers."

The company has its own installation and repair staff. The work is done in-house, not farmed out.

Whether providing glass-work for a nationwide client or repairing storm windows and screens for a customer down the block, the IXL family focuses on the customer and stresses service.

In addition to window products, the company has added line a line siding.

"It's a natural evolution," explained Farrah. "The products go hand-in-hand."

The IXL roster of employees has grown recently from 17 to 23, including Tom Everlove as the new director of operations.

"We've assembled a great team," said Farrah of his employees. We work together as a team. We stress service because it is a privilege to be here."

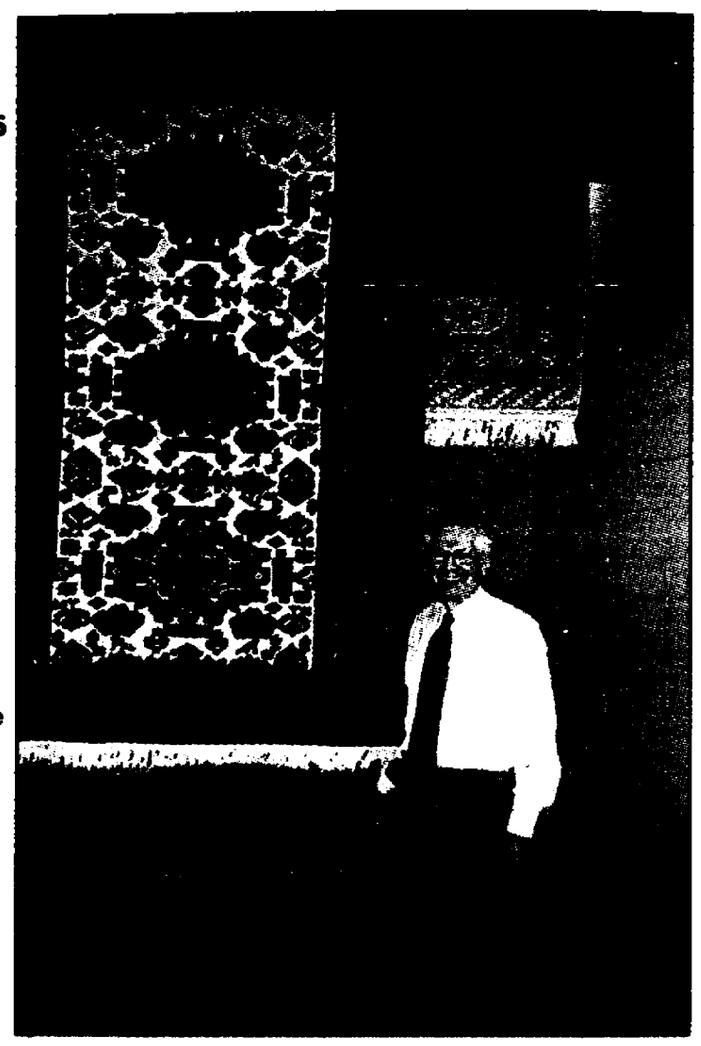
STEVE HAGOPIAN & CO.

your carpet and upholstery cleaning specialists

An artist, a problem solver and someone who makes house calls — each describes Steve Hagopian & Co. in Southfield, specialists in carpet and upholstery cleaning.

"When we work on a carpet or cushion, we find solutions to the problem, whether it's a stain or a tear," Hagopian says. "The technique is important; we don't want to change the appearance. It's really a fine art.."

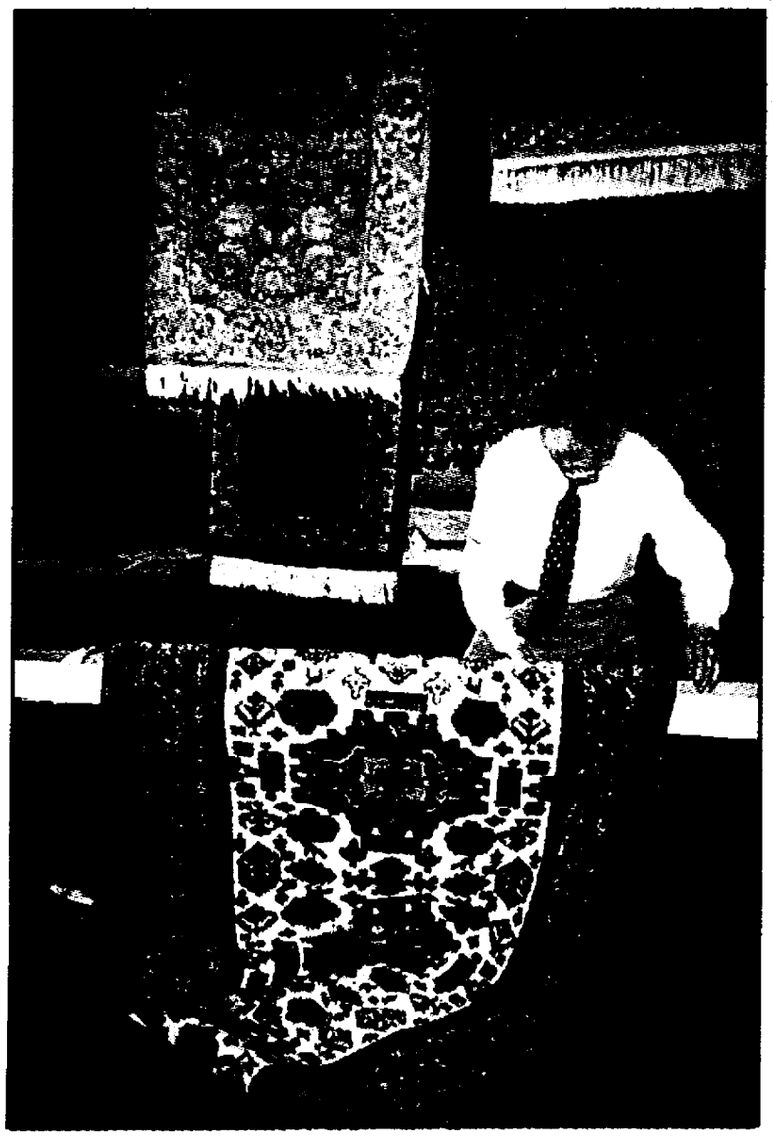


"When we work on a carpet or cushion, we find solutions to the problem, whether it's a stain or a tear."

STEVE HAGOPIAN
Owner

Hagopian, a University of Michigan graduate chemist, began working with his father 55 years ago. He opened his carpet cleaning business 23 years ago to focus on the cleaning end of the carpet business. Hagopian has developed his own cleaning products and was the first person in Michigan to introduce truck-mounted steam cleaning and water damage restoration. His personal touch, expertise and experience have earned him the reputation of "Picky, Picky, Picky."

His business has continued to grow, and to accommodate his customers Steve Hagopian & Co. moved two years ago to a larger building at 22201 Telegraph, just south of Nine Mile Road. With a staff of 50 employees and 17 trucks, Steve Hagopian & Co. is able to meet his clients' needs.



Steve Hagopian & Co. specializes in cleaning and restoring Oriental rugs. There are two weavers on staff who are able to make repairs to worn or damaged Oriental rugs. "People become very attached to Oriental rugs," Hagopian says. "We have a miniature loom, similar to the type on which the rug was originally made, and are able to restore rugs that are stained or damaged. We don't use glue guns here."

your carpet and upholstery cleaning specialists

Steve Hagopian & Co. has the materials to repair any carpet and unique cleaning methods to treat stains. "We're constantly testing new cleaning agents and methods for the latest carpet and upholstery materials," Hagopian says. "We're a certified firm for the Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration."

Although most carpets and upholstery can be cleaned at the customer's home, Oriental rugs must be picked up and taken to Steve Hagopian & Co. "We have after hours pick-up and delivery available for our customers' convenience," Hagopian says. "We are constantly evaluating and changing our business to meet their needs."

REAL RESULTS TRAINING

You want the best results from your workout. That's why the best way to get in shape is from the inside out at the only complete Pilates-evolved exercise studio on the east side of Metro Detroit.

The certified personal trainers at Real Results Training specialize in Stott Pilates conditioning, an exercise regimen that builds upon deep abdominal and back strengthening. "This method will safely and effectively deliver optimal strength by building muscle that is toned, firm and flexible," says owner Suzette Wilson. "You will also improve your posture without adding bulk or stress at the joints."

Wilson calls Stott Pilates training "a contemporary anatomically based approach to the mind-body exercise method pioneered by Joseph Pilates." Pilates was a German asthmatic athlete who developed the regimen for bedridden soldiers 80 years ago. Real Results enhances Pilates' original teachings with modern knowledge about the body including current principles of core stability and functional fitness.

Stott Pilates training is a no-impact regimen that incorporates the eastern philosophy of exercise with controlled breathing and movement and highly focused attention with the western approach to exercise with resistance. A typical workout session includes using a cadillac, a barrel, a chair, a ball and ring apparatus and a Stott reformer in which the user manipulates his or her body weight with a system of pulleys and springs.

Client Suzie Crain, who has used the Stott Pilates regimen since January says, "I'm using muscles I've never used before and I'm sculpting my body and getting the results I want." Crain trains once a week to supplement her usual routine of walking and golfing.

"You feel revitalized."

Suzette Wilson
Owner and trainer

Stott Pilates training benefits all people of all ages regardless of fitness level or ability and enhances back and knee strengthening, cardiac rehabilitation, athletic performance training, weight loss or gain, and balance and proprioception training. It especially firms the abdominals, hips and buttocks.

"You feel revitalized," says Wilson. "You don't feel exhausted after you work out. Pilates himself said you will feel better after six workouts, look better in 10 workouts and have a whole new body after 24 workouts. This method really works," says Wilson.

To get started with a Stott Pilates regimen, new clients must schedule two initial private appointments with a trainer. The trainer will review your goals, instruct you in mat and equipment work and develop an individually tailored program. Real Results Training offers private, semi-private and group sessions at the studio or off site.

Real Results Training is located at 21605 Harper, north of Eight Mile Road, in St. Clair Shores. They can be reached at (810) 771-5716.

VERHEYDEN FUNERAL DIRECTORS

eliminating the mystery of funeral expenses

We don't think funerals should have to cost so much," says Brian Joseph, president of Verheyden Funeral Directors, 16300 Mack Ave., in Grosse Pointe Park. "There is a negative perception regarding funeral expenses. That's why we try to educate the public so that they understand all of their options and can select services appropriate to their individual needs."

Verheyden Funeral Directors publishes its price list for various services and items to eliminate the mystery of funeral expenses. "Since we've published our service costs, there has been a significant increase in the number families who choose Verheyden," Joseph says. "Many are surprised because they've told us, 'we thought you were the most expensive.' We feel so confident of our prices, we will beat any Federal Trade Commission mandated published price list for equal services."

Independently owned and operated since 1908, Verheyden Funeral Directors continues its tradition of providing funeral services to local families while keeping up with a changing society. "People are more cost conscious today," Joseph says. "Convenience is important. This is how many senior, veterans and baby boomers think, and we have to think in the same way."

One of the many ways Verheyden Funeral Directors has accomplished this has been to be a full-service resource center for everything related to funerals. Attention to detail is important, from helping the grieving family members to coordinating with the church, cemetery and florist. Verheyden Funeral Directors also provides extended services, such as aftercare; widow and widower programs; explaining death to children; and Social Security, Medicaid and veterans benefits. The staff also speaks at schools and to community groups. "A funeral director's job is part science, part art and part compassion," Joseph says. "Empathy is important; we want to do as much as we can for the family."

Joseph says that an increasing number of people are pre-arranging their own funerals. Pre-paying freezes today's costs for tomorrow's funeral service. "It's a small amount to pay for peace of mind, no matter how old you are, and you can receive 100 percent of your money back, at any time, if you change your mind." This pre-payment plan is transferable from state to state and funeral home to funeral home. "People plan for weddings and baptisms, we should plan for funerals, too. It's the celebration of a person's life."

The highly trained staff at Verheyden Funeral Directors prides themselves on their spacious and comfortable facility, their restorative arts and their prices. "We want to make sure that we give a family quality service and value," Joseph says. "We pay attention to every detail whether it's a group of 10 or 2,500 people."

Verheyden Funeral Directors is building off its strong traditions while continuing to meet the needs for the future as a one-stop resource center, assisting families in all aspects of planning a funeral or any disposition that the family may choose.

In addition to set amount of cash assets, the Michigan Department of Public Aid allows a pre-arranged funeral including casket, vault, cemetery property, grave marker or burial crypt. If you or someone you know are considering aid, consult our funeral home for information on pre-arranged funerals.
It is wise to make funeral arrangements before applying for aid. We are glad to answer your questions about pre-planning funerals any time.

VICARI FIREPLACE & BARBEQUE SHOP

wide selection of finest quality merchandise

At Vicari Fireplace & Barbeque Shop in Clinton Township, the customer has always been number one. Since 1965, the family-owned and operated company has grown from a small installation firm — catering to mainly friends, to a full-service showroom that sells a wide selection of BBQ grills, fireplaces and gas logs, patio furniture, and many accessories as well!

"We are an example of the American business dream," says Midge Vicari. "We have built a wonderful business by selling quality products and then standing behind them — customer satisfaction has been our number one goal over the years!"

"We have built a wonderful business by selling quality products and then standing behind them — customer satisfaction has been our number one goal over the years!."

MIDGE VICARI
General Manager

Vicari sells only the finest quality merchandise, including the summers hottest item, stainless steel gas grills. "Our customer recognizes quality and personal service and realizes that purchasing from us is a lot different then going to a mass merchandiser. They know that down-the-road, we will be here for service and to answer any questions they might have." David Vicari serves as president of the company, and Midge is the general manager, but all family members including: Michael Vicari, Leslie Vicari-VanDoorne and Dominic Vicari have a vested interest and have a lifetime of training to answer all their customer's needs (Sam Vicari, the company's founder passed away last year). "We have fun working with the customer all the way from planning, to purchase and installation," Midge says. "When you look at our products, we sell merchandise that people are going to enjoy. It makes the work a lot more fun!"

With the new construction boom still going strong, sales remain brisk. The typical Vicari customer is the independent contractor or homeowner, so the purchase is a much more personal investment. Because each customer has a personal vision of what he or she wants, the Vicari family not only serves as a sales and installation agent, but also as design consultant. "When a customer comes in with a sample of their fireplace marble or brick, or even carpet and paint, we help design everything from custom fireplace glass doors or screens, fireplace mantels and gas logs, to assisting in picking out frame colors and fabric patterns for their outdoor furniture as well."

Right now is the heart of the summer barbecue sales peak. With advancements in gas grill technology, the days of the charcoal kettle grill appear numbered. While purists still holdout that gas can't replicate the flavor of charcoal, Midge thinks otherwise. "People today have busy, busy lifestyles," she says. "People don't have the time to work with charcoal, lighting it and getting an even burn. With the different smoking chips, and with the 'indirect' and rotisserie grilling methods, you will find that the food tastes less dry and more flavorful."

It is especially rewarding when customers keep coming back. "Our customer's essentially become our friends, and it's amazing that we now have many of our original customers' children that also put their trust in us," Midge says. "It really means a lot to our entire family and staff when a customer thanks us for merchandise they purchased years ago, and credits us with a professional and courteous sale. It is all part of our business philosophy."

Vicari Fireplace & Barbeque Shop is located at 39777 Garfield (between 17 and 18 Mile) in Clinton Township. Hours are Monday and Thursday, 10 a.m to 8 p.m.: Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.: Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.: Sunday — closed. Phone at (810) 228-6900.

Soulliere Garden Center - where helpful knowledge is included with every purchase.

The Soulliere name is synonymous with quality landscaping products and services throughout metro-Detroit.

Right here on the east side, Soulliere Garden Center has grown from a small landscaping company founded nearly 50 years ago on Little Mack near Nine Mile Road into a full-service yard and garden resource center.

David G. Soulliere founded the landscaping company bearing his name in 1952 at Lawndale and Little Mack, where the company's materials yard remains today.

David G. passed the business down to his two sons, Gordon and Jerry.

Gordon became sole owner of the business 20 years ago, and now the third generation of Soullieres - Gordon's children, David, Ronald, Michelle and Kimberly - run the business.

In 1989, Soulliere Garden Center was born with the construction of the new, 9,000-square-foot store on Little Mack across Lawndale from the company's founding location.

"With the new building," says David Soulliere, "we've been able to expand into brick pavers and offer a larger selection of shrubs, perennials and annuals - as well as general landscape materials, such as top soil and mulches."

"We're selling a lot more perennials, herbs and garden accessories," Soulliere says. "People are spending more time in their back yards, using gardening to relax and get away from stress.

> "We travel to trade shows all over the country in the winter, planning for the next season."
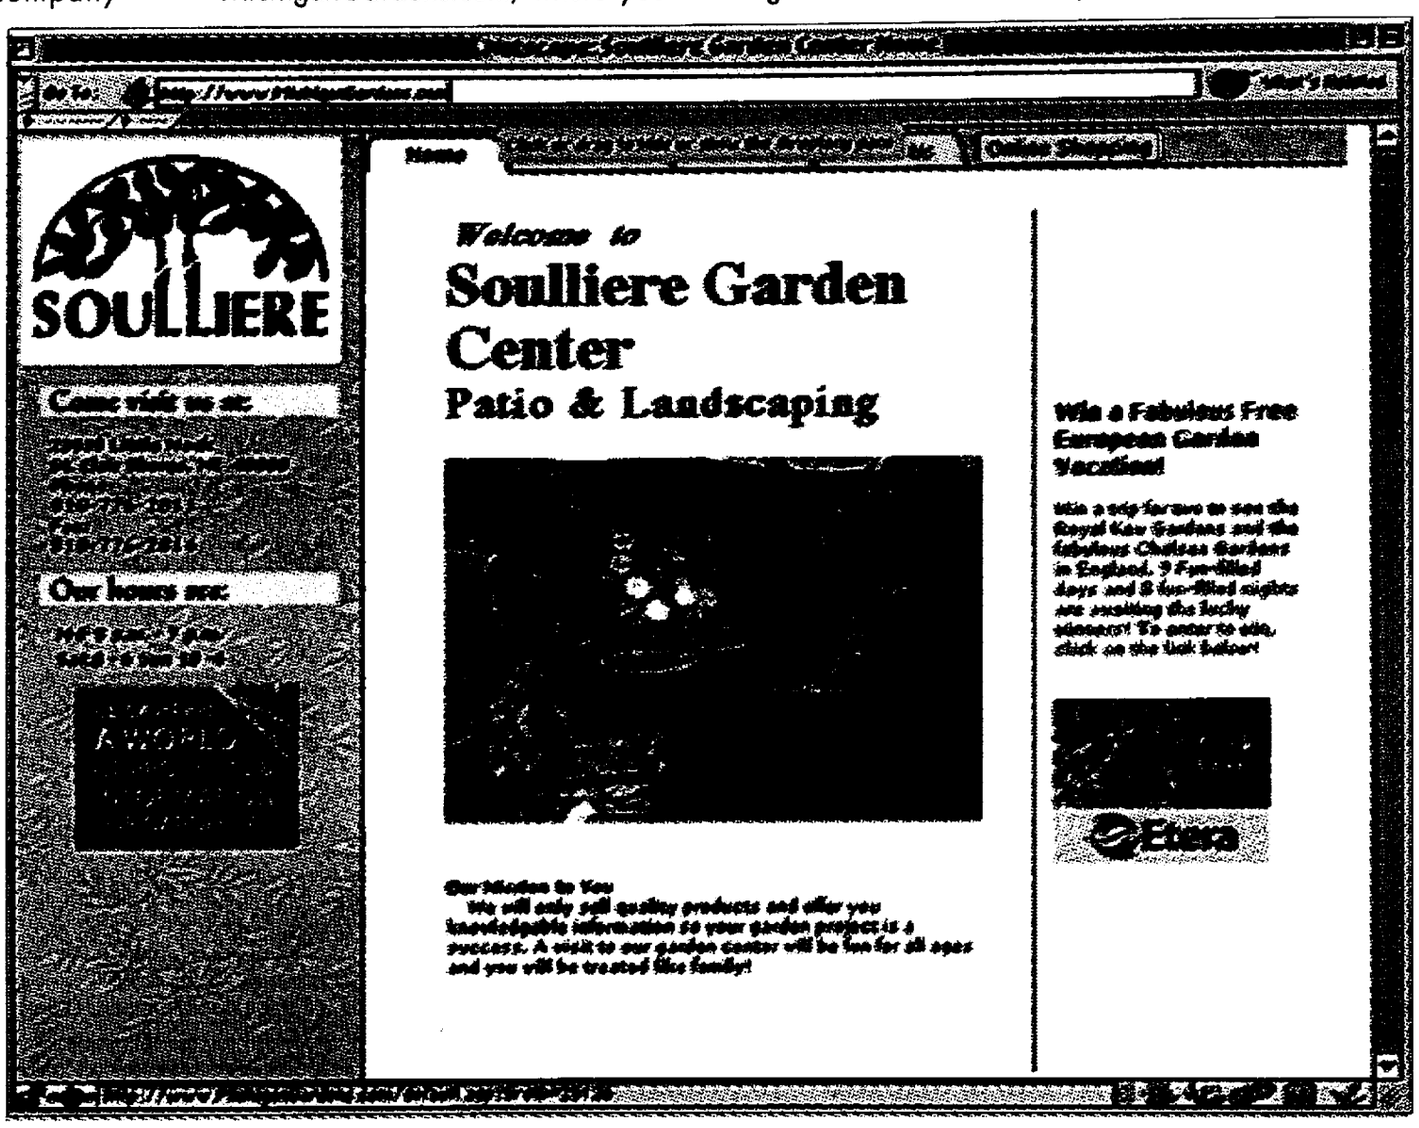
> David Soulliere

"The popularity of landscaping and gardening has helped our business grow over the past several years."

And grow it has. Soulliere makes more than 5,000 deliveries a year, moving some 10,000 cubic yards of quality loam.

And Soulliere Garden Center has entered the computer age with its own website, MichiganGardens.com, where you can browse, shop and get helpful information online.



Out of cyberspace and back in the "physical world," the neat, bright, new store stocks thousands of items in its comprehensive inventory, including wind chimes, bird feeders, pond supplies and everything imaginable for the lawn and garden.

"We get new items all the time," Soulliere says. "We travel to trade shows all over the country in the winter, planning for the next season."

"Pond supplies over the past few years have grown a lot," he continues. "We sell everything to plan and build a pond, including the plants."

But what Soulliere provides free - knowledgeable advice and instruction - is priceless. Unlike huge, self-serve home supply centers, you're not on your own when buying pond supplies - or anything else - from Soulliere Garden Center.

Soulliere will help you plan, design and build your own pond, landscape or whatever outdoor project you have going.

That's also true with interlocking garden walls and stone pavers. In fact, Soulliere holds free classes on installing brick pavers every Saturday during the summer at 10 a.m. at the store.

> "We can help you decide what best to plant where and under what conditions."
> David Soulliere

And if your yard needs "something," but you're not sure what, Soulliere carries sample landscape designs - even actual landscapes, walls, fountains and waterfalls and ponds - right at the store. And custom landscape designing is also available.

"If someone brings in a picture of the area and measurements," Soulliere offers, "we can help you decide what best to plant where and under what conditions."

And for you backyard hackers out there, Soulliere Garden Center now also installs synthetic putting greens.

"The toughest thing," says Soulliere of his business, "Is handling the big rush in the spring and early summer."

Be that as it may, Soulliere's is not idle after the snow flies. In the winter, the store is transformed into a beautiful Christmas shop with all the lights, decorations, trees and outdoor lighting any ambitious Santa could want.

Soulliere Garden Center also is a No. 1 source for firewood and salt and other winter necessities.

If you think that going to chain do-it-yourself stores is a bargain, you may be fooling yourself.

"Some people are always going to go for the lowest price," Soulliere explains. "But if someone actually does comparison shopping, they're not paying that much difference in price. But at a smaller, independent store, they're getting a whole lot more knowledgeable service. You might be able to find what you need at the chain stores, but you'll never be able to get instruction on how to do it."

And Soulliere, a Michigan Certified Nurseryman who writes the east side's No. 1 lawn and garden advice column, "Ask the Landscaper," weekly in the Grosse Pointe News and Connection newspapers, knows what he's talking about!

Soulliere Garden Center is located at 23919 Little Mack, between Nine and 10 Mile, in St. Clair Shores; old-fashioned service - modern products!

GILBERT'S PRO HARDWARE

Gilbert's Pro Hardware — old-fashioned service, up-to-date products.

Remember the small, family-owned hardware store where you can find anything, no matter how obscure, and get knowledgeable advice on how to do just about anything? Some say it's a dying breed.

But fortunately not so in St. Clair Shores, where Gilbert's Pro Hardware continues to carry on the tradition.

"Good, old-fashioned service, the right products and fair pricing are the recipe for a successful business," says owner Blair Gilbert. "We have more items than other stores twice our size and twice the trained service people per square foot to sell those items."

Gilbert should know. He learned the business at the knee of his father, "Gil" Gilbert, who founded the business with his wife, Norma, in 1949. In fact, they built the original store at Rosedale and Harper (about 8 1/2 Mile).

Just last year, Blair Gilbert and wife Diane moved the hardware to its new location, sharing the same parking lot 150 feet south of the original address, where Gilbert's Pro Hardware celebrated its 50th anniversary in 1999.

With the move doubling Gilbert's floor space, the venerable hardware can offer easier-to-find merchandise and wider aisles.

> "Good, old-fashioned service, the right products and fair pricing are the recipe for a successful business"
> Blair Gilbert
> Owner

Gilbert's move is a true success story. Even faced with increased competition from huge discount home-supply centers, Gilbert's Pro Hardware has not only survived, it has grown.

"The service is how we survived," Gilbert explains. "We have long-time, loyal customers."

A licensed builder who used to do it for a living, Gilbert knows his trades - and tradesmen respect doing business with him.

As a former builder, Gilbert will not sell any product by any manufacturer that he would not use himself. And since he talks to and supplies painters, plumbers and other service contractors, Gilbert not only knows what they use but, more importantly, what they don't.

Have you spent hours wandering endlessly through huge warehouse operations trying to find that small item you need, only to give up in frustration? If so, you should have gone to Gilbert's.

It's amazing. Need a hard-to-find part or obscure piece of hardware? Gilbert's Pro Hardware has it. Need to know how to repair a faucet, a door, a plumbing leak? Gilbert, the east side's famous and knowledgeable "Mr. Hardware," who writes a regular column in the Grosse Pointe News and Connection newspapers, can guide you through the project.

Further, you need not chase after stock boys who wouldn't know a phillips from a slotted screwdriver. As soon as you walk in the door at Gilbert's, you are politely offered assistance.

Gilbert says his helpful staff, combined with the new, brighter location, has been a find for women shoppers.

> "Do it right the first time.... If you can't find the time to do it right, when will you find the time to do it over?"
> Blair Gilbert
> Owner

"The old store was small and cramped and seemed like a guy's kind of place," he says. "Now women aren't afraid to come in."

In fact, Gilbert's Pro Hardware is ideally suited for women, especially for those whose husbands are in the middle of a home project and are told to run and get some missing part or needed product.

The knowledgeable Gilbert's hardware professional is a wife's best friend, being able to understand the problem and supply the missing item. Gilbert's workers have even been known to call the husband at home for more information. Try that at a warehouse store!

Be assured, at Gilbert's Pro Hardware, you will not be steered wrong. In fact, Gilbert's slogan is "Do it right the first time." The Gilbert motto is, "If you can't find the time to do it right, when will you find the time to do it over?"

Gilbert says don't be afraid to ask questions. Gilbert and his staff actually enjoy helping customers solve their problems - when it pertains to hardware, that is!

Gilbert loves to share his expertise. Not only can readers of the Grosse Pointe News and Connection enjoy "Mr. Hardware's" well-written, easy-to-understand weekly columns, they can also access them on Gilbert's website, found at www.mrhardware.com.

Whether you're a tinkerer, a diehard do-it-yourselfer, a wife on a mission or a professional contractor, Gilbert's Pro Hardware is the place to go for the best in service, know-how, hard-to-find items and top-quality merchandise.

And don't forget to "Do it right the first time" with Gilbert's Pro Hardware.

Gilbert's Pro Hardware is located at 21912 Harper, at about 8 1/2 Mile, in St. Clair Shores.

BOLTON JOHNSTON

Knowledgeable real estate professionals on line

With computers and the Internet, house hunters can view prospective homes and shop for good interest rates from the comfort of their offices or homes, and this is very convenient.

But to make the best use of all the "cyber data" out there, you need the expertise of the trained, knowledgeable real estate professionals at Bolton-Johnston Associates, REALTORS, of Grosse Pointe Farms.

"Virtually all of our associates have computers and leading-edge software to provide the best real estate services possible to our clients," says Co-Owner/Broker Nanci Bolton. "Our associates have up-to-the-minute information on homes for sale throughout metropolitan Detroit and across the country. In addition, our technology also provides financial information on the latest mortgage programs and rate."

"Our younger clientele are people who grew up with technology and are very busy. They like to communicate with us via e-mail," explains Forman Johnston, Bolton's partner and Co-Broker. "We can access multiple listing services every day, or several times a day; we can e-mail details and photographs of the house; we can even offer virtual tours of many of our listings."

But as great as Bolton-Johnston's technology is, Bolton says, the sale or purchase of real estate involves a major asset for most of our clients, and they want to work with people they trust who will advice them properly. Computers and the Internet have revolutionized business, and real estate is no exception.

"However," says Bolton, "our clients still come to us because they know they will receive the personal service they have come to know and expect from us." We have the professional expertise to assist our clients in making the best possible decision. The public has access to nearly all of the information Realtors do through the internet, however, good decisions require trained professionals to analyze the data. That is where our skilled associates best service our clientele."

"Technology does not take the place of a knowledgeable realtor escorting buyers through your home, showing them the neighborhood and explaining the nuances," Johnston adds. "When you are making really important decisions of this magnitude, you want a knowledgeable professional advising you. Particularly if you are moving from another area."

In fact, Bolton-Johnston is one of the few premier relocation specialists in Grosse Pointe - or the state for that matter. For many years the exclusive member of Who's Who in Luxury Real Estate, Bolton-Johnston remains just one of two Grosse Pointe Brokers to bear that distinguished designation.

Bolton-Johnston's full-time, fully staffed relocation department also works exclusively in Grosse Pointe with Christie's Great Estates, and is a long-time member of RELO, the world's largest relocation network.

RELO is represented in 15,000 communities in the United States alone with a network of 90,000 real estate associates. More than 50,000 home Buyers are referred to other members of RELO annually, generating more than $2 billion in annual home sales by premier Brokers.

"To buyers moving out of town," Johnston points out, "we're able to refer them to the best real estate companies in the communities to which they are relocating.

"To sellers, we're able to offer their homes to executives' families moving into the community."

Bolton-Johnston's relocation department services automotive manufacturers' relocation departments, as well as those of major health care providers, advertising, law and accounting firms.

What Bolton-Johnston Associates brings to Buyers and Sellers are trained, knowledgeable real estate professionals who, armed with state-of-the-art technology, will make your next real estate transaction a pleasurable experience.

BREADSMITH

where people buy their bread on a daily basis

Brian and Cathie Freshwater are owners of The Breadsmith on Mack Ave. in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The candle oil burns early at the Breadsmith on Mack Ave. in Grosse Pointe Woods. While the rest of metro Detroit slumber, sumptuous bread dough is being prepared for baking in anticipation for the day's demand for bread, muffins, cookies and scones. It's a process that Breadsmith owners Brian and Cathie Freshwater take very seriously. "It takes quite a bit of creative energy when baking the best, freshest breads," says Cathie. "Bread is our flagship product and we have many different varieties. They are all mixed and baked from scratch. We approach the business with a European philosophy where people buy their bread on a daily basis."

The baking process includes several steps before the finished product is placed on the store's sale racks. Starting at 1:30 a.m., dough made from unbleached, unbromated flour is mixed by the baker and placed in the dough barrels for fermentation. Once the dough ferments, it is hand shaped and placed on the stone hearth, four-deck oven for baking. The Breadsmith's sweeter breads like the Apple Pie Bread, are baked at 370 degrees, while the others with a crustier texture are baked at 430 degrees. "We love good quality food and have a great appreciation for the whole dining experience," Brian says. "We buy the best products. Our spices are ground in the Spice House of Chicago. Our (motto) is complete customer satisfaction. If anyone is unhappy with our product we replace it free."

Cathie and Brian have owned the Breadsmith for about 1 1/2 years. The Grosse Pointe store is one of nine in Metro Detroit, of a chain that has 50 stores nationally. The franchise traces its roots to Milwaukee and both Brian and Cathie draw their dedication from the founder, whose first commitment is pleasing the customer. The Breadsmith does sell to area wholesalers, including the area's country clubs. It can also be found on the shelves of Farm's Market in Grosse Pointe, but the customer coming in the front door is the top priority. "Brian has been approached in the parking lot by members of the country club when making deliveries, " Cathie says. "They want to know where they can buy the bread (they are being served). We try to be very active owners and we have a good crew. I think the fact that our employees have stayed with us for a long time is a tribute to our success."

The Breadsmith has daily breads that are staple. Special breads are also prepared and offered each day throughout the week. Any left over bread at the end of the day is donated to the Children's Home of Detroit and the Mariner's Inn, a shelter in Detroit. Those are just a fraction of the community projects the couple are involved in. "This business is a labor of love," Cathie says. "I get a thrill when a new customer comes in and a regular customer will (encourage) him to try this or try this. We appreciate what the community has done for us."

Brian's most rewarding feeling is seeing the finished product up on the shelves. The couple are recreating the artisan process that has largely vanished in the corporate world. "Our philosophy is to have one product and do it well."

BAVARIAN MOTOR VILLAGE

spotlights certified pre-owned BMW cars

Do you really enjoy driving? Do you get a kick out of a car that willrespond in a quick, agile manner? Do you crave performance and luxury?

If you answered yes to these questions, you've probably wanted a BMW automobile for some time now. But perhaps you don't think you can afford a new one, or you're hesitant to buy a used one.

Bavarian Motor Village, at 24717 Gratiot in Eastpointe, is here to allay any fears. BMW of North America has instituted a certified pre-owned vehicle program to help car buyers ease into the BMW driving experience.

What BMW has done is add a custom, two-year, 50,000-mile factory-sponsored warranty to pre-owned BMWs. That warranty is on top of BMW's new-car warranty of four years and 50,000 miles.

As an added bonus to customers who purchase or lease a certified pre-owned car from Bavarian Motor Village the dealership will include 24 months or 24,000 miles scheduled maintenance.

"Essentially, from the original in-service date of a car, you'll have a 6-year, 100,000-mile warranty, as long as the car is sold through a BMW dealer," said Louis Boukis, used car manager. "It takes our warranties through 100,000 miles, good anywhere in the United States or Canada."

Under the new program, pre-owned BMWs go through an 83-point inspection by a factory-trained BMW master technician. The inspection includes the chassis, tires, wheels, brakes, transmission, engine, suspension, steering, cooling system, battery and electrics, accessories, anti-theft system, exterior fit and finish, spare tire and jack, and documentation.

"The key here is that only a BMW master technician touches the car and only genuine BMW parts are used for any needed repairs, and it's all covered under a factory warranty," Boukis said. "We've offered warranties before on pre-owned cars, but they were underwritten by insurance companies. This is a 100 percent factory-sponsored program. The margin for error is nil."

Bavarian Motor Village Principal and Owner Eitel Dahm concurs. "We want to ensure that the BMW experience is a happy experience, a trouble-free experience ^ whether the car is new or pre-owned. Often, a BMW owner's first experience with a BMW is a pre-owned car."

Both Dahm and Boukis believe that the new certified pre-owned program is a good way to build brand loyalty for BMW. "We want the BMW owner to have that continuity of a positive experience, starting with a pre-owned car, and then possibly moving to a new BMW later on," Boukis said.

To qualify for the certified pre-owned warranty program, a BMW must be no older than 60 months, must have 60,000 miles or less, and cannot have had any structural damage.

Bavarian Motor Village's motto is, "Service is our priority, not just a necessity." That motto sums up Dahm's philosophy ^ one he's espoused since founding the business in 1972.

As a matter of fact, Bavarian Motor Village started as strictly a service outlet and became a sales dealership three years later. Today, the company has approximately 30 employees at its Eastpointe location and another 35 at a sister dealership in Ann Arbor, Auto-Strasse Limited. The Ann Arbor location is an authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer and sells BMWs as well.

Dahm believes in service before sales because the service department generates repeat business. "You can go to any dealership across the country and purchase the same car, with the same equipment. The difference between dealerships is in the quality of service. It builds relationships and referral business," Dahm said.

Bavarian Motor Village's service department offers a free pick-up and delivery service or a free BMW loaner to those who need their cars serviced.

The typical BMW customer is 25 to 54 years old (up to and over 65 on the high-line models such as the 750), from all walks of life, usually with a college education. "They all appreciate a fine driving machine, that's what they all have in common," Boukis said. Income demographics start at around $35,000 annually for new BMW buyers and at about $25,000 for pre-owned buyers.

Current popular BMWs include the Z3 two-seat sports car and the 528 sedan. The 750 is a V-12-powered model with BMW's highest level of technology and luxury. It features a three-year, 36,000-mile free scheduled maintenance program and a head protection system with side impact air bags.

All BMWs from 1997 and on have a sophisticated all-season traction system.

"BMW pioneered safety features such as anti-lock braking, standard air bags, and all-climate traction," Dahm said. "Safety, quality and drivability have always been the hallmarks of BMW."

Bavarian Motor Village is located at 24717 Gratiot between 9 and 10 Mile Roads in Eastpointe. Sales department hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Thursday; from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. The service department is open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Phone: 1-800-551-2688. Prospective customers can visit the dealership's web site at www.bavarian-motorvillage.com. Owner Eitel Dahm encourages customers to e-mail him.

UNITED HEATING & COOLING

keeping you comfortable in any weather

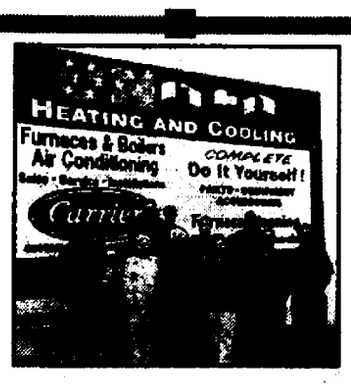
United Heating & Cooling, 4004 E. Eight Mile Road in Detroit, has been serving the furnace and air conditioning needs of southeastern Michigan since 1955, and customer service has played a big part in the company's success.

"Customers are paramount," says City of Grosse Pointe resident Nancy Thiel, owner of United Heating & Cooling. "What sets us apart is that people know they can come in and meet with the owner. I treat customers special because they are."

In August 1998, Thiel began making arrangements to purchase United Heating & Cooling from her father, Bob Cicciarelli, from whom she learned the importance of providing people with good service and value. The purchase closed on Jan. 1, 1999 and on Dec. 31, 1999, after 21 years at Ameritech, Thiel left her position as a Sales Director there and focused all of her energy on United Heating & Cooling.

"I conduct a good portion of the estimates and the introductions because I believe customer contact is important," Thiel says.

United Heating & Cooling is a Carrier Leadership Dealer, which means they've passed Carrier's rigorous certification criteria with high-volume sales and without customer complaints. "Even though we're a Carrier dealer, we service all brands," Thiel says. Carrier has a factory distributorship in the Detroit area, so there is no waiting for your new furnace or air conditioning system. Carrier's heating and cooling units have the Energy Star label, which indicates energy and cost savings that can be factored into a mortgage.



With the number of older homes in the area, it's nice to know there is a company like United Heating & Cooling, which makes repairs to and conversions of older furnace units. "Some people want to keep their old furnace and add central air. We can install the Unico system and give them the comfort of steam heat along with the convenience of air conditioning," Thiel says.

"Most people don't plan on furnace or air conditioning breakdowns," Thiel says, "so we have resources set aside to help people afford repairs or replacements. We do our own fabricating, which helps customers save money." United Heating & Cooling is an authorized MichCon dealer and a MichCon referral. Financing is offered through Franklin Bank. United Heating & Cooling also provides Carrier retail financing credit.

United Heating & Cooling has expanded since Thiel bought the company and many renovations are taking place at their 8,000-square-foot building on East Eight Mile Road. A new showroom will allow customers to see the various heating and cooling models, as well as other accessories they carry, such as air cleaners, humidifiers and programmable thermostats.

United Heating & Cooling follows up after installing a furnace or air conditioning system; a service representative will come to the customer's home and check, test and start the new unit and answer any questions the customer might have. "We want to make certain the customer is familiar with the new equipment," Thiel says. For those who want to install their own systems, United Heating & Cooling sells complete do-it-yourself packages and will guide you through the installation process and make sure the installation goes smoothly.

Visit United Heating & Cooling or call (313) 366-1140 to set up an appointment. They will come to your home, discuss your needs and make a proposal. Then, one of their experienced crews will deliver and install your new equipment. "We can do it all," Thiel says. "We are licensed and insured and we will take care of all necessary paperwork."

United Heating & Cooling employs highly-trained experts and does not use subcontractors. Their technicians undergo continuous training to keep up to date with the newest industry technology. This enables United Heating & Cooling to offer customers the latest and best equipment.

Whether Michigan is experiencing a hot, humid summer or a freezing winter, United Heating & Cooling will make your home a comfortable one.

Artistic Gymnastics Academy

bring out the champion in your child

Over 28 years ago Frank Howson had a vision of creating a gym where athletes could train and reach their full potential. For the past 28 years Artistc Gymnastic Academy (A.G.A.), located on Groesbeck just south of Common Rd., has been realizing this vision.

One gymnast at a time the experienced coaches, encourage, train and lead children on to incredible feats. Frank Howson is proud of his competitive team that came in first place for the state of Michigan on numerous occasions, but no prouder than he is of each and every gymnast that enters his building. "Watching a student's self image rise from learning new skills is incredible," said Howson.

A.G.A. offers classes to individuals ranging from 2 years to 18 years. They offer small class sizes in order to provide the students with the individual attention they require.

"We offer a variety of ways for children to experience gymnastics. You can bring your youth group, girl scouts, childcare etc., for a field trip that is economical, exciting, and educational. If you are looking for a unique way to celebrate your birthday consider a gymnastic party. Our parties put Happy in Birthday. This year come and join one of our Olympic Parties," Howson added.

If you're interested in cheerleading, consider signing up for one of Artistc Gymnastics Academy's power tumbling class. Students work on cartwheels, round offs and back handsprings.

"The skills that our gymnasts learn go far beyond back handsprings and cartwheels, your gymnasts learn to believe in themselves."

Kimm Howson
General Manager

Hard work and lots of fun entitles every child to be a winner at the annual recital. Students are given the opportunity to show off the skills they learned to family and friends. The skills acomplished are rewarded with a gymnastics medal. So come and join the Olympic Fun. Please reserve your spot for summer or fall classes by calling (810) 776-6678.

Siding Unlimited

latest technology ensures satisfaction

Have you ever considered new siding for your home but wanted an assurance of how it would look before committing a lot of money to the project? At Siding Unlimited, in Macomb Township, you can see how nice your home can look before the work is started.

SIDING UNLIMITED INC. Established 1978

"With today's technology we have the capability to show a customer the finished project before the work begins," says William Vernengo, owner of Siding Unlimited. "We can take a digital photo of a home and display it on a laptop computer. Then we can add our products and ideas to the customer's home."

Vernengo, who grew up in Harper Woods and graduated from Bishop Gallagher High School in 1970, founded Siding Unlimited in 1978 in Harrison Township. He moved his business five years to Macomb Township and is expanding his store to include a larger showroom. Siding Unlimited carries and installs replacement windows, seamless gutters, doors, soffits and, its specialty, vinyl siding.

The benefits of vinyl siding include easy maintenance and a sharp appearance. "With the vinyl products available now, original wood craftsmanship can be duplicated," Vernengo says. "That's important for customers who want to maintain the appearance of their home."

Siding Unlimited's skilled employees have installed siding in almost every city in Michigan, Vernengo says, "We even did a job for a customer on Long Island, N.Y." Siding Unlimited is licensed and insured and involved participants with Habitat for Humanity.

Since 1975, Miami Tile & Marble in Fraser has been adding beauty to the interiors of homes and businesses all over southeastern Michigan. Miami Tile & Marble specializes in custom marble, granite and ceramic tile work. "A big part of our job is educating customers about what they can do to beautify their homes," Amicangelo says.

Since founding Miami Tile & Marble 25 years ago, Amicangelo has grown his business from two to 22 employees. They are the exclusive representative of 40 different manufacturers from Italy, Spain, Brazil and other countries. Visit Miami Tile & Marble's spacious showroom and see the wide selection of ceramic and marble tiles, as well as granite and marble for tables and countertops—in-stock items you won't find anywhere else in the area. They have everything you need to make your kitchen, bathroom or any room in your house unique and luxurious.

A strong economy over the past few years has helped the construction industry, and in turn, many people have opted for custom marble and tile work for their new homes. "We've done a lot of ceramic tile work in the Grosse Pointes over the past 20 years," Amicangelo says.

"When people renovate their kitchens, they often want new countertops. We've installed a number of granite countertops in the Grosse Pointes, too."

Miami Tile & Marble's experts will help you select and install the perfect tiles or counter top, or they can recommend a contractor to do the job. Miami Tile & Marble is different from a traditional tile store. Their experienced staff will advise you about the maintenance and care for your new tiles, countertop, table or fireplace. When you add a new countertop, floor or ceramic tiles to your home, you are not only adding beauty but also value to your home. At Miami Tile & Marble, they want to make sure you are satisfied with you are satisfied and that the work is done right.

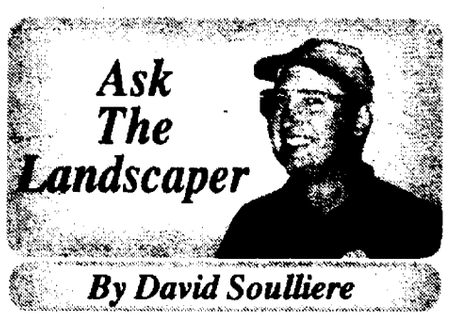
Be king of the anthill



By David Soulliere

Q. My yard has been invaded by ants. I have anthills in the lawn, between the cement slabs, and in my flower beds. How can I get rid of my ant problem?

A. Ants are very annoying to have in your home or in your yard. In small numbers, they will not do much damage. As the population increases, the ants can start to damage the lawn and plants by eating at the root systems of the plant. The anthills can make the lawn uneven and lead to having unwanted pests in your home.

Control of ants may take months. The populations are large and widespread. Partial control may be obtained with a pesticide application, but second and third generations will continue to spread if left untreated.

Control of ants can be accomplished by spraying with an insecticide containing diazinon or chlorpyrifos (dursban). Diazinon will remain effective for one month and Dursban for six to eight weeks. Always follow the label directions when using any pesticide. Ortho makes a product called Bug-b-gon which contains diazinon and is ready-to-use making application easy.

Another product, which is less toxic to humans, is boric acid. This product will be taken back to the colony by the worker ants. Ants are attracted to either sugars or proteins. To find out which type of ants you have, simply put a small amount of jelly and peanut butter (not mixed) near an anthill and see which one attracts the ants. Then mix boric acid with the one your ants were attracted to. Place this mixture in a jar with a lid that you can punch holes in so the ants can get in and out but children and pets cannot get into. Place these jars around the active anthills in your yard.

Many people mistakenly believe that simply because they install wood chips or mulch around the house, they will have an ant or other pest problem develop. The problem of pests living in the mulch around is not very common, and the benefits of the mulch around the planting beds far outweigh the occasional pest problem. If a pest problem occurs, it can easily be controlled with an application of insecticide around the home.

Here's a 'rough draught' for the Fourth of July

By Diane Morelli

Antique's Ambience

To 'antique' an oil painting

Q. We have a painting in a gold-leaf frame showing the castle of Dachau, painted by a German woman artist named E. Walther. She is supposedly a well known artist. Please let us know if you might have any information of her works. The painting is at least 65 years old. — H.G.

A. Ralph and Terry Kovel inform us in their extensive antique price guides that to learn the value of an oil painting by a listed artist you must contact an expert in that area. The Kovels' also offer a tip on cleaning a gold-leaf frame by rubbing it with a cloth dipped in onion juice.

I suggest you contact DuMouchelles Fine Art Appraisers and Auctioneers or try to access information on E. Walther at the website http://www.telepraisal.com This New York-based telepraisal company gives written or verbal reports on paintings. You can phone them at (800) 645-6002.

I once sold an attractive, well-expressed still-life of lilacs oil painting a few years back at a yard sale. The man who bought it lived up the street from me in a turn-of-the-century Victorian home. He recently had moved in and turned the home into quite a show place from the outside.

I have never seen the interior, but imagine it to be strikingly decorated with elegant antiques. The home was repainted in multicolored hues that brought out the details in the gingerbread ornate woodwork. He and his wife landscaped that home to turn-of-the-century perfection.

In introducing himself, while purchasing the oil painting, he explained cleverly how he was going to make the painting look like an antique by burying it in dirt for several days and then uncover it — still keeping it outdoors — to wallow in the elements. This procedure would continue to give it and its reproduction age-old frame the antique look he strives for.

I imagined the look of the painting after he was done antiquing it and how I wished I was keeping it and antiquing it in that fashion myself. He was going to add the character that painting needed. We both realized that oil painting was a perfect specimen for his "antiquing" procedure.

He also purchased an old plaster frame I had for sale and explained how he was going to repair the top right-hand corner of it by making a clay mold of its flawless left lower corner. He was going to fill the clay mold with plaster and after it hardened, glue the molded plaster onto the frame's damaged corner.

I still wish I had that oil painting in its "new" antiqueness.

Of independence

One of the American Treasures of the Library of Congress is the "Original Rough Draught" of the Declaration of Independence, written by Thomas Jefferson which shows the evolution of the text from the initial "fair copy" draft to the final text used by the Continental Congress on the morning of July 4, 1776.

Library of Congress, Prints and Photographs Division, Detroit Publishing Co. collection.

On June 11, 1776, the congress appointed Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston to write a declaration that would make clear to all the people why a break from King George III was necessary and inevitable.

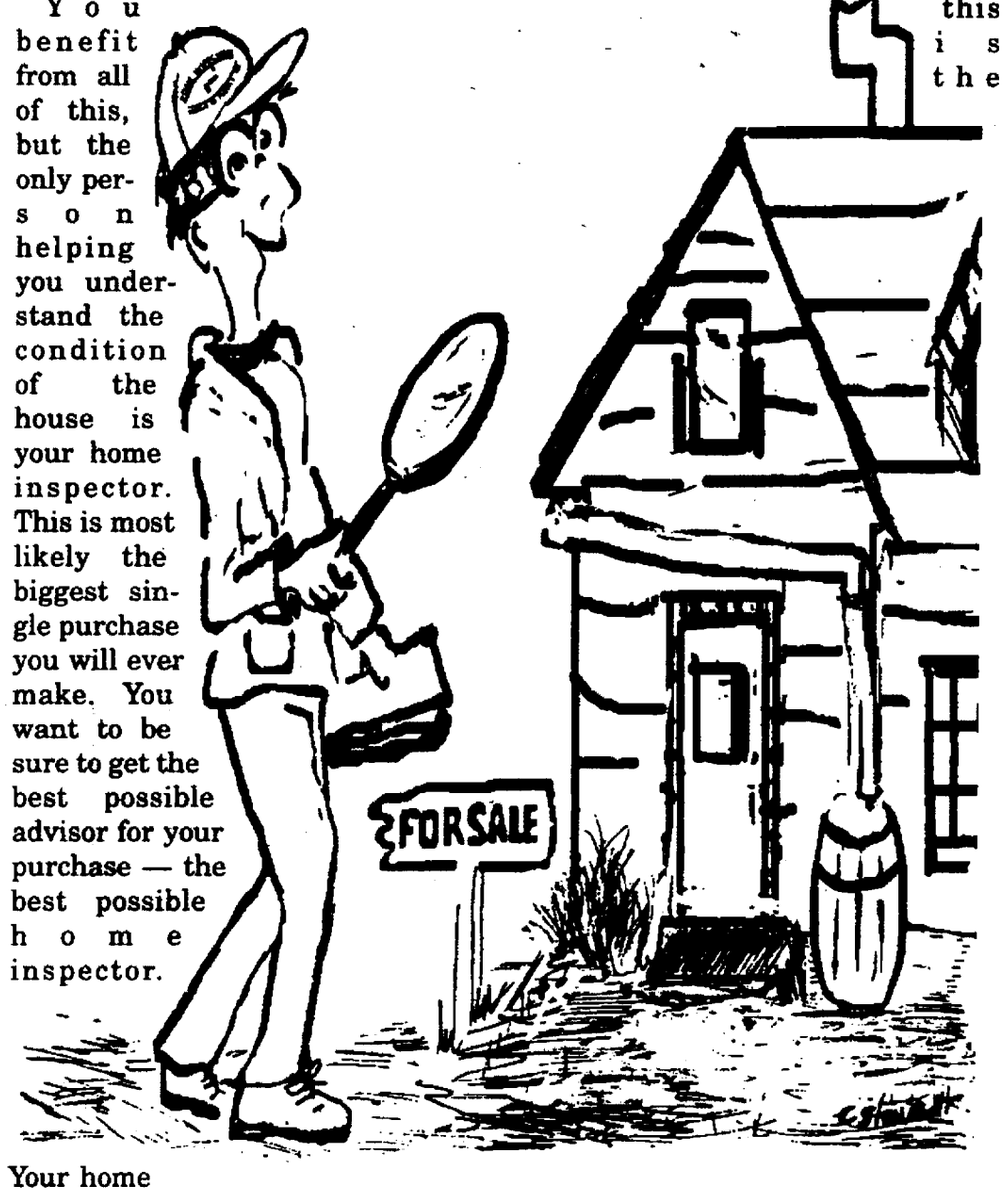
Finding the right home inspector for you

HIT — The most important aspect in home buying, after finding the home that is right for you, is having the home inspected for major deficiencies.

The home inspector is the only person in your corner. Real estate people work to move the property. Appraisers work for lenders to see if the home has sufficient value to justify the mortgage loan. Title people work to see if the lender will have clear title behind your name. Lawyers process the paperwork to see that it is correctly completed.



You benefit from all of this, but the only person helping you understand the condition of the house is your home inspector. This is most likely the biggest single purchase you will ever make. You want to be sure to get the best possible advisor for your purchase — the best possible home inspector.

Your home inspector should be a highly competent generalist capable of inspecting the various components of the home you'll be buying.

It takes training to become a good home inspector. It is not enough to be knowledgeable about houses. One must also know and understand the home inspection business. There are inspection procedures which inspectors are taught to employ to help them see deficiencies. The inspector must understand that it takes time to perform an inspection.

In some instances, home buyers use their home inspection report in legal proceedings regarding the real estate transaction. Thus the report quality must be able to stand up to that type of scrutiny. It takes training and constant review to reach and maintain a high level of report quality.

A quality inspection takes three to five hours. The customer should be there to see what is being done and the thoroughness of the inspection. Moreover, this is the time you get to know the house.

Ask friends, coworkers and relatives which inspectors they know. Go to an inspector listing, such as the one found at www.inspecthomes.com, the web site of the Home Inspection Institute of America Inc. Ask about the quality of their reports. Look at the reports if possible, to see if they give advice on who should make repairs. Only the type of contractor, without naming any particular contractor, should be given to avoid possible conflicts of interest. This is better than asking a real estate agent who is interested in moving the sale along and who may not care to have deficiencies influence your decision to purchase.

There is so much more to home inspection than meets the eye; you must find a quality inspector. The highly recognized Home Inspection Institute of America Inc. is a private occupational school, specializing in home inspection, founded in 1989. Only their trained or certified inspectors are accepted for their web site listing.

This institute certifies home inspectors in a program that involves the review and critique of the inspector's reports each year. Even in states that license home inspectors, this certification separates the few from the many.

The institute publishes "The Standard of Care for the Home Inspection Profession." This publication is the leading standard for explaining what should be inspected and included in the written report.

Measures to ensure a safe, healthy picnic this 4th

Ants, bees and mosquitoes aren't the only bugs that can ruin your summer picnic. When planning an outdoor feast this Fourth of July holiday, take precautions to prevent bacteria such as E. coli and salmonella from causing foodborne illness.

"The key is to keep hot food hot and cold food cold," says registered dietitian Fay Fitzgerald, Heart Smart coordinator at the Henry Ford Heart and Vascular Institute.

Hot food should be kept at least 140 degrees Fahrenheit, either in a warmer or thermos. On the grill, chicken should be cooked until its juices run clear; red meat should be cooked until it is no longer pink.

As for cold food, place items in a cooler full of ice at least 40 degrees Fahrenheit or lower. Food such as meat, chicken, fish and eggs should remain in the cooler until you are ready to grill or serve. Leftovers should be promptly returned.

"Before eating, it is a good idea to wash your hands or wipe them clean with premoistened towels with antibacterial hand soap added — especially if you handled raw meat before grilling," she says. "Also, do not reuse a utensil that has touched raw meat."

Fitzgerald offers the following tips for a heart-healthy picnic:

• If grilling, choose low fat meat or chicken breast and marinate to tenderize. Fish usually does not need to be marinated for tenderizing. However, low fat fish may dry out unless brushed with a marinade or oil as it is cooked.

• Salads such as potato or coleslaw should be prepared with low fat or fat-free mayonnaise. This will trim 50 to 100 calories from each half-cup serving.

• Pack prepared, cold sandwiches. Choose whole grain breads, lean cuts of meat and cheese and spread with mustard or low- or nonfat mayonnaise. To keep the lettuce and tomatoes crisp, store them in a separate baggy and add when serving.

• Prepare sloppy Joe filling and carry it in a thermos. To serve, simply spoon onto whole grain buns.

• Provide plenty of fluids, especially on a hot day. To prevent dehydration, drinks should not be alcoholic or caffeinated.

• Watermelon makes a great dessert and provides lots of fluid. Other desserts that carry well are brownies and cookies.

Note: HeartSmart recipes for sloppy Joes, fresh basil and pepper potato salad, Ambrosia fruit salad and chocolate chip cereal cookies are available at Henryford.com.

Are away-from-home telephone charges too costly?

Have you ever received a telephone bill with high costs after using an Operator Service Provider (OSP) while away from home?

What's an OSP? An OSP is a company that provides long distance telephone service and may also provide local telephone service. You may encounter an OSP when using public telephones or pay telephones located in hotels, motels, hospitals, restaurants, gasoline stations, convenience stores, etc. The OSP serving a public telephone generally will handle a call if a "0" (zero) is dialed before dialing any other number.

OSPs are used primarily when using a calling card, calling collect, and billing a third party. Then, some weeks after using the OSP, the residential telephone bill arrives with some unusually high charges from a company unknown to the customer.

For calls within Michigan, an OSP may assess charges up to 300 percent higher than the state's average rate for operator or long distance services. The OSP fee structure may have two components: a per-minute charge and an operator fee based on the type of call you place.

For example, the maximum costs for a one-minute customer-dialed call billed to a calling card is about 71 cents per minute plus an operator charge of $4.78, a total of $5.49. OSPs may charge any amount they want for calls made interstate or between states.

What can you do to protect yourself?

• Listen for the OSP's recorded message giving the option to get price information prior to the connection of the call. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) rules require each OSP to identify itself and orally notify callers of their right to obtain rate quotations for interstate calls before the call is connected and billed. Customers can press a button, such as the # (pound) key, or stay on the line to hear the per-minute charge and other fees or surcharges applicable to the call charged by the OSP. After hearing the information, callers can hang up without incurring any charges.

• Use the toll-free number or access code of the long distance telephone company you want to handle your long distance call. To obtain the access code or toll-free number of a preferred long distance company, contact the long distance telephone company directly. OSPs are required to permit use of toll-free numbers or access codes.

How to get help:

• Direct questions about OSP charges to and from telephones in Michigan to the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) at (800) 292-9555, or view the information at cis.state.mi.us/mpsc/comm/osp-caps.pdf

• Write the FCC for information about OSP calls made to or from other states or other issues related to OSPs. Address the complaint to: Federal Communications Commission, Consumer Information Bureau, Common Carrier Complaints, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, D.C., 20554; or log on at www.fcc.gov; or call (888) 225-5322.

The MPSC is an agency within the Department of Consumer and Industry Services.

Antiques and Collecting

By Ralph and Terry Kovel

The tilt-top table has been a popular piece since the 18th century. The top was made to tip so the table could be stored close to a wall. The round tilt-top table with a tripod base was a popular design in the 1740s. Most of the tables had a smooth, flat, round top. The best examples had a raised rim or a dish-top that kept spilled liquids and dishes from sliding to the floor. Copies of this useful style are still being made. A rarer style, known as a supper table or wine-tasting table, had added carvings of plate-shaped indentations. Food or wine was served in dishes that were set in each indentation. The tables, with tops about 24 to 30 inches in diameter, were too small for eight seated diners, but the food could be served buffet-style. In Victorian times, many plain round-topped tables were recarved with plate-shaped sections. These reworked tables are of little value today (about $500 to $1,500), while an 18th-century piece in original condition is worth thousands of dollars.

Q: My dinnerware set has a mark on the bottom in the shape of an eagle, with the initials "NRA" over it. Can you tell me what the initials stand for? Could it be the National Rifle Association?

A: No. The letters stand for National Recovery Administration, a Depression-era U.S. government agency established by the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933. The agency instituted industry codes that were meant to eliminate unfair trade practices, reduce unemployment, set minimum wages and maximum hours, and guarantee the right of collective bargaining. Companies that agreed with the NRA codes could display the NRA Blue Eagle emblem, which is on your grandmother's dishes. The NRA's code system was found to be unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1935, so your grandmother's dishes were made sometime between 1933 and 1935.

Arts and Crafts or Mission style furniture has become so popular that it is being reproduced by many prominent manufacturers today. The most famous of the original makers was Gustav Stickley who made the heavy, plain oak furniture at the beginning of the 20th century. He worked with some of his brothers as well as alone.

The five Stickley brothers were involved in at least eight different furniture companies that made similar styles of furniture. One type made by Gustav Stickley is easily recognized because of its special decoration. It was designed by Harvey Ellis, who was hired by Stickley in 1903 and died just nine months later. His pieces often had inlays of pewter, copper and light woods. The designs were inspired by nature, but they look abstract to collectors today. Very few Ellis pieces were made, but his designs influenced some of Stickley's later designs. The highback chair, the cabinets with wide, overhanging tops and the curved aprons at the bottom of some cabinets were designs created by Ellis. Today some of the highest priced pieces of Stickley furniture are those designed by Ellis. A cube chair recently sold for $154,000 at a Treadway/Toomey auction in Cincinnati.

Q. A few of my great-grandmother's possessions have been passed down to me. I especially like a cotton bandanna from Benjamin Harrison's 1888 presidential campaign. It is red, white and blue and measures 22.5 by 21.25 inches. There are U.S. flags and stars around central portraits of Harrison and his running mate, Levi P. Morton. How rare and valuable is this item?

A. Woven or printed textiles with political or military celebrities were popular in Europe before the American Revolution, and this country continued the idea. Presidents from George Washington to Bill Clinton have been pictured on scarves, pennants, quilts and handkerchiefs. Printed bandannas or handkerchiefs like yours were especially popular at the end of the 19th century. Your bandanna is worth about $200.

Clarkston boasts a large dining room, bonus room

Gently arched windows and a combination of hipped and gabled roof lines draw the eye to the Clarkston, a mid-sized family home with a vaulted great room. Its dramatic entry portico, supported by a massive square brick column, adds to the attraction. The arched transom window over the door mirrors the shape of the exterior brick arch.

A freestanding fireplace is at the core of this informal plan. Its central location allows enjoyment of the warmth and colorful flames from the kitchen, nook and family room. The home has no living room, which many contemporary families see as a plus. But it does boast a large dining room facing the street, along with another bright room that could be outfitted as a home office, den, or a fourth bedroom.

Efficiency was a major consideration in designing this kitchen. Range, sink and refrigerator are set in a tight triangle that minimizes wasted steps. Sliding glass doors provide patio access for outdoor dining. Utilities are tucked in a pass-through space that connects the house with a three-car garage. A small powder room is nearby.

Master suite and secondary bedrooms are on opposite sides of the great room. Master suite amenities include a huge walk-in closet and a private bathroom. A pocket door separates the toilet and shower from the tub and double vanity, while sliders in the sleeping area open onto the patio.

The Clarkston's secondary bedrooms share another dual-compartment bathroom. The double vanity in the outer section allows teens the luxury of extended mirror use without blocking access to the toilet or tub.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Clarkston 30-080 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Household Help

When wildlife comes for lunch

By Samantha Mazzotta

Q. We bought our dream home in the Appalachian Mountains about a year ago. It's beautiful, but the local wildlife — deer, rabbits, you name it — are taking their toll on the trees and shrubs in the yard. Any suggestions on keeping them off our property? — Bill W., Boone, N.C.

A. Deer are a permanent feature on the Appalachian landscape (as well as most other rural areas), so it's unlikely that you'll be able to get rid of them completely. However, you can reduce the damage. Jack Maguire provides a few tips on how to do just that in "True Value Guide to Home Improvement" (Stonesong Press/Alison Brown Cerier, $13.95):

• Wrap burlap around the bottom three feet of young or damaged trees, and tie it in place. Don't use nails or staples to attach it, as they can further injure the tree.

• Spread shredded pine or sawdust mulch around the base of trees and shrubs, then spray with an animal repellent.

• Stuff unscented bar soap into old pantyhose legs — or mesh bags — and hang them from random branches inside shrubs. You could hang them from tree branches, too, if your neighbors don't mind the sight.

• Finally, lure the wildlife away by offering more attractive treats. Go to the nearest livestock feed store or nursery and get a bale of hay or a salt lick for the deer. Place it at the edge of your property, in a secluded area. Save leftover, uncooked vegetables like carrots, celery or radishes for rabbits, and put them at the edge of your property weekly (just don't put them next to your neighbor's shrubs!).

The focus here is to get keep these pests as far away from your trees as possible. The bigger your property, the more successful you'll be. But yards of any size will benefit from these measures.

Send questions or home repair tips to Samantha Mazzotta at homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is A Hammer, c/o King Features Syndicate, 628 Virginia Drive, Orlando, Fla. 32803.

Pet Care

By Peter Edwards

Most of us — along with our dogs and cats — will probably never run into a skunk, let alone be sprayed by one. But it can happen, especially if you live in or are visiting a rural area.

To say that the scent of a skunk's spray is unpleasant is probably the most understated comment you'll ever make. It's also very difficult to get rid of. But there is a "de-skunking recipe" that may work. It comes from Drs. Foster and Smith, the two veterinarians whose "Doctors Foster & Smith" catalogs of pet products also offer valuable advice for pet owners.

First, before you do anything to deodorize your animal, I would suggest that you call your vet to find out if your pet has any allergies or skin problems that may be exacerbated by either a commercial product — such as "Skunk Kleen" — or by Fosters' "De-Skunking Recipe." If you get an all-clear from your vet, then either use the product or the recipe. If you choose the latter, here it is:

Mix together 1 quart of hydrogen peroxide, 1/4 cup baking soda (sodium bicarbonate for you chemistry majors out there) and 1 teaspoon of liquid soap. (This recipe can be doubled for larger breeds.)

Wet your pet down and work the mixture through the pet's hair. Leave on for three to four minutes and rinse.

Then — and this is important — discard any excess mixture. You don't want to leave it around for a child or a pet to handle.
