Stars & Stripes South: 75 years of an educational ideal

"It will take years, not months, to produce a school worthy of the building which it occupies. A start has been made. Certain traditions have been established. Certain ideals have been held before you by the teachers. It is for you, the pupils of the school, to determine how long it will take to come within reach of this goal. A perfect school has never existed. But my greatest wish for Grosse Pointe High School is that it may strive more and more to become the ideal school — a school which shall give to all within its influence a first-class preparation for life; and above all, a school which shall be outstanding in the high character of its graduates and others who have been in attendance."

Those words were spoken by Principal Jerome Burtt in 1930, just two years after Grosse Pointe dedicated its first high school building.

For some 22,000 citizens of Grosse Pointe, the dedication of the impressive Georgian-Colonial edifice of brick and Indiana limestone in May of 1928 marked a coming of age for one of the Midwest's premier suburbs.

Until that time, opportunities for earning a high school diploma were limited for a large portion of the population and wrought with major inconveniences.

At the turn of the 20thcentury, students had to take public transportation to Detroit's Central or Eastern high schools.

By 1924, students in grades 7 through 12 were crowded into the Cadieux School building which was built in 1906.

The offspring of the more affluent residents often opted to attend private and parochial boarding and day

But the opening of "The High," as it would be known for the next 40 years, drew all elements of the citizenry together.

It became the crossroad, Belgian settlers could share an academically excellent preparation for life with the scions of an ever-expanding population of executives, industrialists and profesfoundation for the future of the community.

Construction

Though the construction of a public high school was a top priority when the Grosse Pointe Board of Education consolidated December 1921, the final plan met with considerable opposition.

Soon after the school board and local voters authorized the purchase of Lot No. 7 of the Jane L. Fisher farm in Grosse Pointe Farms, then a part of the Newberry estate, in 1923 they met with a small, yet intense pocket of opposi-

The estate did not want to sell the property, and certain citizens felt that the 22.5acre site was not centrally located; the proposed plan was too expensive, and the school would be much larger than the population would ever require.

After considerable legal wrangling, ground was broken for the building, designed by George J. Haas in cooperation with educational consultant Dr. Arthur B. Molhman of the University of Michigan, in January of 1927.

The school was built to fulfill five basic purposes: instructional use, beauty, flexibility, economy and community use.

The final price tag for the project was $1,410,116.17.

Inner beauty

When the first 735 junior and senior high school students entered in February 1928, they found an aesthetically elegant environment that included 30,000 square feet of marble lining the walls, intricate cornices, walnut ceiling beams and furnishings and Pewabic tile drinking fountains.

Created to accommodate 1,700 pupils, the building boasted outstanding facilities including a two-story library that could hold up to 16,000 volumes, a state-ofthe-art chemistry laboratory and a natatorium. Portions of the manicured

North grad reflects on Navy

By Chip Chapman Special Writer

Chad Andrus wasn't sure about what he wanted to do when he finished high school eight years ago, but he is certainly glad about the decisions he has made since - especially his choice to join the U.S. Navy, where he has served twice near Iraq during the past 4 1/2 years.

Although his family has military service in its history — his grandfather was a civil engineer in Patton's 3rd Army during World War II, and his father, Doug, was an investigator in the Air Force during the Vietnam era - Chad selected a different branch of the service.

"I picked the Navv because, growing up in Grosse Pointe, I was always on boats," he said. "I had always been fascinated with aviation, and the Navy offered both boats and planes. I knew that's what I wanted to do.

Six weeks after graduating from Grosse Pointe North High School in 1995, Andrus entered boot camp in Chicago and then went to the Navy's aviation electronics school in Memphis, where he learned radar, navigation, weapons systems and other aviation-specific training. Following "A-School," Andrus went to Miramar, Calif., where he joined Top Gun. When Top Gun's training site was transferred to Fallon. Nev., Andrus was sent to a squadron VF101, also known as "The Grim Reapers," in Virginia Beach, Va., with whom he spent two years.

"The Grim Reapers are the training command for the (F14 fighter) Tomcat, he said. "After flight school. you go to VF101, where you learn to fly the Tomcat. I was in charge of a shop that trained the radar intercept officers - the guys who sit in the back seat of the Tom Cat — how to use the systems and target acquisitions.

After the Grim Reapers, Andrus joined VF32, a group dating back to World War II and known as "The Swordsmen," in Norfolk, Va.

In November 1998, Andrus left aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise as part of Operation Desert Fox, the assault against military targets in Iraq. More than 200 Tomahawk cruise missiles were launched from the Enterprise during a 70-hour operation.

"I was a flight deck troubleshooter," he said. "If something on a plane broke as it was getting ready to leave, they would call me to fix it because of all of the schools I've gone through. I was taught to do quick response in fixing aircraft. I was also the last one to inspect the aircraft before it took off from the carrier, to say whether it was safe or not.

After a plane left the carrier, Andrus would watch on video what the pilot was seeing and the dropping of bombs. "It was an experience I'll never forget," he said. "It was really my first moment of combat.

Andrus returned to the Persian Gulf two years later aboard the U.S.S. Harry S. Truman where planes from the ship patrolled Iraq's southern No Fly Zone. "Our primary mission was to patrol the No Fly Zone as part of Southern Watch," he said.

The only time Andrus said he felt somewhat nervous aboard a carrier was when traveling through the Suez Canal. "The carrier's No. 1 defense is aircraft," he said. "Going through the Suez Canal, we were pushed by tugboats. You look to the left and to the right and all you see is land. We had to rely on Egypt for protection. We saw their military vehicles driving along side of us as we went through."

Andrus is an Aviation Electronics Technician Petty Officer 2nd Class Air Warfare Specialist. He reenlisted in 1998, and his current contract expires at the end of 2004.

With the success of Operation Iraqi Freedom, the need for No Fly Zone patrols has eased, but Andrus said the possibility exists for him to return to Bahrain, where his squadron is forward deployed.

Operation Iraqi Freedom has been a big morale boost to the Navy, as well as the other branches of the service, Andrus said, and he expects enlistments to go up as a result. It's a path he recommends highly.

"I've been to 17 countries around the world and experienced so many things and so many different cultures,' he said. "The Navy has been great for me. I have no complaints."

Fourteen condominiums at the corner of Cadieux and Jefferson in the City of Grosse Pointe will give way to a 112-spot parking lot, which will extend beyond and existing parking lot behind the wall in the foreground for Bon Secours Hospital. Plans are shown in the illustration below.

Fourteen condominiums will give way to 112 new parking spots for Bon Secours Hospital.

The hospital was awarded four variance requests from the City of Grosse Pointe City Council, which sat as a Board of Zoning Appeals, at its Monday, April 28, meeting to construct the lot at the corner of Cadieux and

According to Michael Serilla, Bon Secours Cottage Health Services vice president of operations, the new lot will fulfill some of the need for 150 additional spaces at the hospital. He said the hospital had purchased the condominiums over the past eight years for that purpose.

However, in order to continue the new lot along an existing 156-spot parking lot that has been in place along Cadieux since 1991, the hospital had to request a setback variance for the parking lot along Jefferson from 50 to 40 feet and along Cadieux from 25 to 20 feet. It also had to request a setback variance for a brick wall along Jefferson from 50 to 37 feet and along Cadieux from 25 to 12 feet.

The lot built in 1991 is zoned P-1 (parking) and required variances at that

While Serilla said the health system kept in touch with and worked with many of 80 surrounding neighbors while working on its parking issues over the past year, about 10 neighbors showed up at the meeting and expressed concern about hospital expansion.

"I'm not looking forward to this." Mario Diffore said. "This (existing parking lot) wall should have been one to two feet higher, and the setbacks should be different for hospital parking lots than for houses. As a resident of by late August.

alleviate parking on my street. The only way you'll achieve that is to have permits and enforcement.

Residents also expressed concerns about the possibility of a two-level deck in the future, something Serilla said the hospital would be likely to request in about 10 years

While the board did not prohibit that possibility when outlining a number of conditions in granting the variances, it sought advice from the city attorneys in stating that the variance for the lot could not be used in designing a future deck. The board also requested that hospital receive approval from city administrators on landscaping plans, maintaining the same elevation as the existing wall, and matching existing materials, fixtures and landscaping already in place along the existing lot on Cadieux. In addition, the board requested the hospital pay a service fee in the amount of city taxes lost from the condominiums, a gesture the hospital offered the City in its proposal.

Serilla said construction of the lot should begin May 27 and should be completed

City man helps Farms police nab 2 suspected car thieves

By Bonnie Caprara Staff Writer

Bryan Mack said he's often had a knack for being in the right place at the right time to rescue something or someone.

When he was 17, Mack swept a boy out of the path of an oncoming car on Ridge in Grosse Pointe Farms. Last fall, he snagged a puppy out of the street to prevent it from getting hit by a car and returned it to its owner

Mack's good deeds haven't stopped there.

On March 27, Mack helped a Farms public safety officer track down and apprehend two 15-year-old Detroit boys who took off with a Clinton Township woman's car from a gas station at Mack and Moross in the Farms.

That doesn't surprise me at all," said Mack's father, Ted Mack.

Mack was at the gas station at 6:30 p.m. when he noticed the woman filling the tank of her Dodge Stratus. A moment later, he saw another customer pointing at the car on Mack and the woman left behind.

"I got in my car and flew down Mack," Mack said. "I weaved in and out of traffic looking for the car until I unselfish and courageous saw it at the corner of Bournemouth.

City takes soft approach on speeders

By Bonnie Caprara Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe is going soft on speeders on one of its residential streets.

In response to residents' concerns about traffic speed on Rivard, the City has installed three speed cushions between Goethe and Charlevoix.

Unlike speed bumps, which are made of concrete, the 6-foot by 6-foot cushions are made of recycled tires and are glued and bolted into the street. The cushions will not interfere with parking and are marked with "bump" signs.

"At 25 mph, you'll fee a bump," Deputy Director of Public Safety Dennis Van Dale said. "They won't do any damage to cars; there's a gradual incline on the sides, and they're rubberized so they'll 'give.' The whole idea behind this will ment," resident Amy Taylor used in Eaton County. A traffic study performed last year by the Traffic Improvement Association commissioned by the public safety department did not indicate a serious speed problem. However, traffic volume is greater on Rivard because it is only one of two City streets that cut through from Harper in Detroit to Lakeshore. The City public safety department has considered Rivard a "special circumstance.

Residents, who have expressed concerns about traffic on the street for the past two years are pleased with the installation of the speed cushions, especially considering there are 45 children under the age of 12 on the block.

City, Shores to take bite out of mosquitoes

By Bonnie Caprara

The City of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Shores are taking a bite out of the spread of the West Nile virus before the mosquito season.

The Shores' Department of Public Works will be dropping larvacide briquettes into its 800 catch basins between May 19 and June 1.

Catch basins are believed prime breeding grounds for mosquitoes, which pass the virus along from birds to humans and

Smith said the briquettes pose no risk to sewage water.

The Shores is joining forces with St. Clair Shores to take advantage of economies of scale. The Shores will spend $2,800 on

Smith said he preferred using the briquettes over spraying since that type of application needs to come into contact with an adult mosquito and spraying could only be done on village property in the evenings.

The City is also contemplating catch basin treatment but has not decided on which larvacide to use. The City expects to spend about $2,500 to treat 500 catch basins.

The City is also extending its efforts with a proposed plan to educate its residents.

"We have a challenge being so close to Detroit, which is not planning to treat its catch basins," the City's City Manager Michael Overton said.

Among its suggestions, the City recommends:

 Disposing of any waste that could hold water, such as cans, containers or tires.

• Drill holes in the bottom of trash receptacles and recycling bins.

· Clean roof gutters frequently and check storm

• When outdoors, cover up with long pants and a longsleeved shirt.

Who armed Saddam? Not U.S.

By Doug Patton

re you as weary as I am of hearing those who opposed the war with Iraq repeat the phrase, "America armed

Well, take a short trip with me down memory lane to the halls of the United Nations. Do you remember all that whining and gnashing of teeth among the assembled states on the U.N. Security Council last fall and again this winter over the "warmongering" Americans and our "cowboy" president?

Do you remember the nations that protested the loudest? Do you remember what they said? Something about, "give inspections a chance" (read 'give appeasement a chance").

The people protesting the loudest included the Germans, the Russians, the Chinese and, of course, our old friends, the French. With everything in their diplomatic arsenal, these nations stood in the way of removing Saddam Hussein. France, realizing it could not persuade the Bush administration to continue waiting on Hans Blix to find something, even threatened to veto any resolution to use force against the Iraqi tyrant.

And all the while, from the left, we heard the refrain, "America armed Saddam.'

Well, the truth can now be told. The current issue of The Weekly Standard, quoting from a study done by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, provides a breakdown of which nations supplied weapons to Iraq between 1973 and

No. 1, by far, was the former Soviet Union (Russia) with a whopping 57 percent. Next came peace-loving France with 13 percent, followed by China at 12 percent, Czechoslovakia at 7 percent, Poland with 4 percent and Brazil with 2 percent.

Bringing up the rear were Egypt, Romania, Denmark, Libya and that warmongering cowboy, the United States of America, with a paltry 1 percent each.

To their credit and my surprise, the Germans apparently have been behaving themselves for the last 30 years (although it is worth noting that half of them were behind the Iron Curtain for the majority of that

Hypocrisy seems to be the major export of the nations at the top of this list — especially the French. Just when we think they can't disappoint us any further, they hit a new low.

We have known all along that France provided the nuclear materials Saddam used to build the reactor the Israelis had to destroy in 1981.

Now we learn from a British newspaper, The Sunday Times, that files found in the wreckage of the Iraqi foreign ministry in Baghdad reveal that the government of Jacques Chirac has been funneling information to Saddam Hussein gleaned from the United States, even from meetings with President Bush himself.

Apparently the information so conveniently supplied by the French kept Saddam briefed on every development of U.S. planning and may have helped him prepare for war. One report warned of an American "attempt to involve Iraq with terrorism" as "cover for an attack on Iraq.'

As it becomes increasingly obvious why Jacques Chirac didn't want us poking around in the ruins of a liberated Baghdad, for fear we might find "Made in France" labels on a lot of contraband, we find ourselves in the position of having to deal with an 'ally" who is completely untrustwor-

Likewise, very little trust should be extended to Russian President Vladimir Putin in this post-war environment. While the Soviet Union is no more, and Russia is not the same sort of state it was for 70 years, the fact remains that Putin came out of that regime. In fact, he was the coldblooded leader of the dreaded KGB.

And, of course, it is a given that China is never to be trusted.

What President Bush ultimately does about U.S. relations with these nations remains to be seen. But the next time some peacenik tells you that "America armed Saddam," give him the facts. Not that it will make any difference.

Tax reform not an option

By Herman Cain

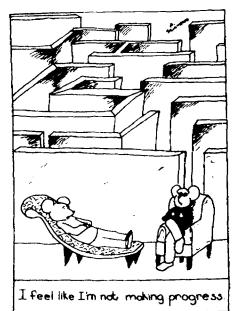

ur tax code is an 8-millionword mess. It's beyond any type of reform and is unfair to every American. We are reminded of this every time we receive a paycheck.

But change may be coming since President Bush has suggested it may finally be time to replace the income tax with a consumption tax.

Several commissions, including The National Commission on Economic Growth and Tax Reform, on which I served, have all concluded that a replacement tax system should satisfy six principles:

- 1. Economic growth
- 2. Fairness
- 3. Simplicity
- 4. Neutrality
- 5. Visibility 6. Stability

The FairTax, a national sales tax on consumption proposal, meets all requirements. It has been extensively researched, analyzed and documented by some of the most respected business people, economists and academicians in the country and was introduced into Congress as The FairTax Act of 2003 (H.R. 25). However, without the insistence of millions of voters, it will be stuck in congressional committees going nowhere.

The FairTax is a single rate of 23 percent inclusive on all retail purchases, which would replace all personal and corporate income taxes, payroll taxes and death taxes. It eliminates all loopholes, which would generate more revenue to fund our government.

The FairTax unleashes the full economic potential of our economy. It eliminates hidden taxes and allows people to save more. The FairTax untaxes the poor by providing every American household a "prebate" for taxes on necessities before they buy, not after. It also untaxes education, which is one of the keys to an improved standard of living.

Additionally, it would not punish "sweat equity." Working harder and longer would allow people to save and invest without double and triple taxa-

The FairTax is simple and highly visible.

Americans just want to pursue their dreams. If we want to remain the greatest nation in the world, we must succeed at restoring hope in the hearts of every working American.

The president has shown courage to suggest that it is time to solve the problem. We must have the insistence to make sure change occurs.

The voters are still in charge. It's our room in Grosse Pointe Woods Lakefront Park that could affect our health and well-being.

The problems are: One does not need to take a shower before entering the pools and one does not need to remove their street shoes before walking through the shower rooms.

Some adult men are walking through the men's shower room with their very young daughters while 90 percent of the men are taking showers unclothed. The men find this embarrassing and unnecessary.

The following are solutions to these problems:

- Post a sign that one must take a shower before entering the pool deck.
- · No street shoes are to be allowed. One must wear bath
- slippers. Female children are not allowed to walk through the
- men's locker and shower room with family members. A separate "family" locker/shower room should be - made available. I surveyed several adults using the pool last year and they agreed that these pool rules should be adhered to. The city of Warren uses the above rules, so should Grosse Pointe Woods.

Letters Clarification on polio program To the Editor:

Bonnie Levitan's recent letter on the Rotary campaign to eliminate polio ("Polio Alive in U.S.," April 3, Grosse Pointe News) puzzled me, so I wrote to Rotary International and asked them to clarify the situation for Grosse Pointe News readers in regards to the polio virus. Here is the answer:

Dear Kim,

Men Only

I'm working on a list of things that make men tick. Men are different, in spite of what any scientific survey or psychological tests say. Little men — boys — are different than little girls.

Other than the obvious topics (sex, power and food) that apparently stir men's souls, there are a few more. You be the judge.

I know a man who slows his car, leans across the passenger seat, points to an empty lot near Oxford, Michigan, and gets nostalgic, even tearful, because we're driving past the site of a store where he used to buy Bait. That's worms; minnows; slimy, wiggly stuff.

The store was demolished decades ago. The site is an empty lot full of weeds and litter.

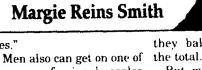

I find this nostalgia rather odd.

I tried to explain the curious phenomenon to this man's grown son.

'Oh, that bait store," his son said. "I remember that. ties." They had night crawlers and red worms and his wife worked there too and . . what was his name?"

The point of my story, which was so obvious to me. was lost on both of them. They wandered off and spent the next 15 minutes reminiscing about about with something called "spot- adjust the weights until

This is bizarre.

Little boys are also hardwired at birth in some extraordinary Y- chromosome configuration. From exactly the first moment they pick up a toy car - or anything with wheels - they know how to imitate a motor.

Nobody teaches them this sound. They just know it.

"Vrmmmm-vrmmmm, vrmmmmmmm," they say. As little boys get older, they increase their repertoire of motor-like noises to include the sounds of airplanes, trains, powerboats and helicopters.

They perfect their renditions of special sounds multi-car crashes, for example, police and ambulance sirens, 18-wheelers and a variety of different kinds of squealing brakes. They learn to imitate explosions. bombs, the sounds of gunfire and, as a bonus, an incredible variety of gross bodily noises

By the time they're 6 or 7. little boys compete to see who can get the most disgustingly dirty in one day and who can develop the most extensive arsenal of sounds depicting speed, power, mayhem, mishap and indigestion.

By the time little boys become senior citizens. they're routinely looking back with fond memories to things like their first catchers' mitts, their favorite sports heroes, their first bike, car, girlfriend - and the store where they used to buy bait.

That drew the ire of a waitress, Mary Hanser, at Little Tony's, on Mack in the Woods.

Volunteerism and our Children... what are we doing to make it second nature?

On Sunday, I had the pleasure of attending the Services for Older Citizens (SOC) All Star Award celebration. The Celebration honored the dedicated volunteers in our community who go out of their way to serve our senior citizens. What a wonderful event! Besides running into Pointers like Russ Noble and Dan Beck (who have been customers of ours since I was a stock boy working for Carl Joyner). I had the pleasure of meeting a wonderful and energetic Kerby School parent, Betsy Schulte

My conversation with Betsy started talking about the wonderful work the SOC does. It ended on an qually important note...teaching the life lesson of volunteerism to our children while they are in elementary school, so that it becomes second nature to them as they grow to become productive members of society. Betsy has done wonderful things with the Kerby children and sets a bar of achievement we as parents should strive for. As parents and residents, we should also urge our teachers and school systems to integrate volunteerism and community activism into the elementary school curriculum. What do you think

District appreciates devoted volunteers

By Jennie Miller Staff Writers

Behind the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, the superintendent, the administrators, faculty and even the students, lie individuals devoted to education: the volunteers.

On Monday, April 14, school board members recognized four outstanding citizens who have dedicated time and effort to helping the children in Grosse Pointe's schools.

These volunteers, Alicia Carlisle, Betsy Schulte, Gary Garvin and Bill Harrington, were nominated by school principals who wanted to show their appreciation for all their care and hard work.

Community growth As Grosse Pointe grew, so did the high school.

With the opening of Brownell Middle School in 1958, junior high schoolers moved out of "the High."

A two-story industrial arts ouilding was added to the plant in 1942.

In 1955, the gymnatorium was constructed. In 1964, the industrial arts facility was topped with a third floor, the same year that the octagonal Wicking Library was opened.

The "S" building, surrounding the library, provided students with a new music room, labs and classrooms in 1973. As part of that same project, the school annex and Quonset hut were demolished; four new tennis courts, a tennis practice area, numerous parking spaces and a second-story bridge where added.

Baby-boomers enrollment to increase by an average of more than 400 students per year by the 1960s.

To accommodate this growth, Grosse Pointe North High School opened its doors

Much to the chagrin of many senior alumni, in 1969 "the High" officially became "Grosse Pointe South High School." From that year on, the building has served students in grades 9 through

Last July 4, part of the previous playground burned down due to children playing with fire crackers. The new facilities — including a new slide, jungle gym and jumping toys — were paid for by money from an insurance settlement and funds raised from the Beacon Parent Organization.

The settlement was $12,000, and the BPO contributed $5,000.

"Kids definitely like the new stuff," said Denise Rogers, head of the Beacon playground committee and mother of four daughters. "We were able to get this nice new playground."

"We can just walk over there and use it." said Paul Cyburt, father of Beacon second grader Andrew.

Cyburt said he was upset about the fire but was pleased at how the new equipment turned out.

"They did a nice job. We're happy with it," he said.

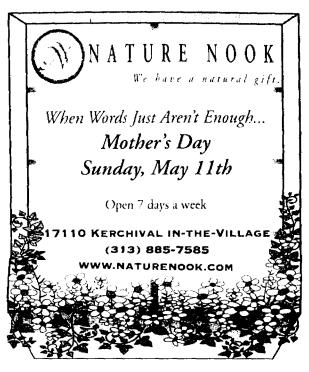

Bill Warters said his son Spencer, a Beacon first grader, likes the jumping toys.

"We went over there during the break," he said. "He's happy with it."
Warters said the facility offers a variety of new ways for children to climb around.

"We like it," he said.

Dog sitting?
Charges of drunken driving and underage drinking at 8:30 a.m. stemmed from a noise complaint at 1:34 a.m. on Bullies take on Tuesday, April 24 in the 1800 block of Roslyn in Grosse Pointe Woods.

At about 2 a.m., an 18vear-old man from the Woods was cited for drunken driving a few minutes after leaving the house and attempting to drive away in a blue 1997 Dodge van. Police said the man had vomit "all over his face." At 3:24 a.m., a test recorded his blood alcohol level at .14 percent.

Back at the house, officers were denied entry by a 19year-old Park woman who said she was there "to feed the dogs." The 50-year-old homeowner was out of town.

Police waited at the scene, having observed the interior "in shambles" and "several individuals running about." Officers rounded up three underage drinkers from the Woods, Harper Woods and Eastpointe whose blood alcohol levels ranged from .05 percent to .169 percent. Five other attendees didn't show signs of drinking.

Crack cocaine

On Saturday, April 26, at 3:28 a.m., two Grosse Pointe Woods patrolmen made a suspected drug bust while investigating a 47-year-old Roseville man. The man had rolled his car through a stop sign at Littlestone and Eastbourne.

Officers discovered a block of Berkshire in Grosse bags of suspected crack crack pipe and three small cocaine.

> Officers said the man admitted drinking, appeared "lost and confused" but registered only a .002 percent blood alcohol percentage. Officers took the man to a local hospital to have his blood checked for alcohol and other drugs.

Felonious fight

Grosse Pointe Woods police arrested a 19-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man for felonious assault and malicious destruction of property in connection with a fight that took place Wednesday, April 23, at about 2:45 a.m., in the 900 block of North Oxford.

According to police, at least four of whom responded to the scene, the altercation involved the Park man wielding a knife and threatening to kill an 18-year-old St. Clair Shores man. The St. Clair Shores man reportedly used a baseball bat to fend off the alleged attacker and then ran to his car to get away.

The Park man, police were told, picked up the bat and resumed the attack by bashing the other man's car.

Police rounded up five additional teenagers at the scene, plus another eight who arrived during the investigation. The youths were residents of the Woods, Farms, City, Clinton Township, Eastpointe and Roseville.

Police recovered a kitchen knife and bat at the scene.

WI-FI

Barron's (April 28) feature cover article by Eric J. Savitz covers the latest consumer invention, "Wireless Fidelity," or simply, "WI-FI."

This radio technology, FCC Standard 802.11, is changing the way people connect to the Internet and can interconnect their PC, TV, DVD, radio and audio components.

No more speaker wires! WI-FI needs a miniature radio transmitter and an access node - a little box with an embedded radio that is attached to an Internet source, such as cable, DSL, T1 or telephone.

The access node is already in thousands of public "hot-spots" in some Starbucks coffee shops, in 10 McDonald's in Manhattan (300 by yearend), in hotels, in airports, in book stores, in copy shops and in convention centers.

Your existing PC, laptop or notebook must be modified to accept the WI-FI card, the radio receiver.

By year-end, most equipment will be sold WI-FIready.

If you are located within 100 to 300 feet of the access node, your PC, laptop or notebook can "pickup" the WI-FI radio signal, wire-

In the near future, home networks can be installed in your residence so your second computer, laptop or notebook in your downstairs library can "talk" to your main computer upstairs, wirelessly, by WI-FI.

In order to show I am alert and listening twe won't mention life support), this is what I found out.

It doesn't. Well, that was simple. Oh, you want more? OK. It shouldn't, Microwaves shouldn't interfere with wireless computing because of the microwave's shielding. With no shielding, the cat could grow three heads and cough up triple the number of hairballs. Just kidding.

Here is the real problem.

friendly neighborhood computer store and buy a cheap access point for about $80.

"Since most of the installs are do-it-yourself, and there is no coordinating body (the feds), we have a recipe for trouble," Drake said.

Now I'm going to provide some information that only computer geeks will understand, and then I will try to explain it.

802.11b is the official name for the "old" wireless standard that operates in the band starting at 2.4GHz (the same one used by microwave ovens). It is one of three such bands made available by the FCC for unlicensed Manufacturers are now hawking 802.11g, which is around 5 GHz.

Note the difference in the two names is just the letter at the end.

(Do not memorize this material under penalty of being called a geek and given plastic pocket protectors as presents.)

Drake said some of the new laptops are promising to have capability on either standard. But the new, official 802.11g standard is not going to be released until late this year.

The bottom line is that anyhody now buying new wireless equipment can, at the very least, count on needing an upgrade when the new standard is released.

By the way, 802.11g is more directional and supports higher data speed.

What does this mean in the simplest terms? More people are buying wireless computers — and wireless phones, by the way. Any signal overlap can cause problems for you and your neighbors. Remember what is touted on the box or manual, "Range up to 200 feet."

It doesn't matter that you operate the equipment in your home. The transmission signal is out playing across the street at your neighbors. (He is also writing me about this problem, but I haven't told him it's your fault.)

I don't have an immediate solution for the phone problem, but I can help a bit with the computer signal interference. Spend more money and get a directional antennae - and

Me? I intend to wait until the new options are available from the FCC before I decide on whether to go wireless.

Even then, I probably would rather get a docking station for my laptop

A docking station allows you to slide your laptop into it so you can use a full size monitor and keyboard, while charging the battery. When done, just slide it out and move on.

I don't, contrary to popular opinion, need the latest bells and whistles. But that doesn't mean I don't want them.

(Remind me sometime to tell you who is listening into your plug-in-the-electric-wall-socket baby moni-

I'll have more on wireless computing as the new standards hit. But for now, I've suddenly developed a taste for some zapped popcorn. And now I don't have to warn my neighbors.

TO BUY OR SELL FIRST

Here is one of the oldest questions in the real estate "Should I sell my house first and then scramble to buy a new one or should i find the new one first and then sell?"

In reality, both activities should be taking place simultaneously, but you'll need more information first and a helping hand to coordinate the steps so they'll fall into place painlessly. You're first step should be a visit to an experienced real estate agency like ours. We will prepare a marketing plan for your present home. This will give you a firm basis for planning your new purchase by giving you an idea of the cash you will have available to use as a down payment for the next house. Also, you'll have a time-frame for the sale of your present home from listing to closing. This will help in planning the time you'll need to wrap up the purchase of the new home.

If selling one home to buy another, you are not alone. Over 70% of all residential transactions are hinged on one sale taking place before another is consummated. Our agency will help make this transition more profitable and less stressful.

Take action at The Academy's auction

By Jennie Miller Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Academy Action Auction, one of the largest and most successful events of its kind in the nation, is set for Wednesday, May 7, and Saturday. May 10.

This annual major fundraising event generates an exciting array of donated items and draws more than 1,200 bidders each year.

Turkey used to be reserved for holidays or deli sandwiches. Thanks to culinary technology, we can now enjoy turkey in ways that were not possi-ble before — ground turkey, turkey sausage, turkey tenders and turkey steaks, to name a few. These precut (and in some cases pre-marinated) turkey portions are ready to cook and allow you to take turkey into many different directions. This week's recipe pairs turkey steaks with a citrus-ginger sauce that turns this easy stove-top preparation into a festive spring meal.

in the dried cranberries. Taste the sauce and season with salt and pepper. Return the cooked turkey pieces to the skillet to reheat. Finally, add the fruit sections (from the jar) and heat throughout.

Transfer to a serving dish and scatter with the chopped chives.

Serve these sassy turkey steaks with wild rice and steamed broccoli. The sweet and ginger flavor has a definite Asian influence. Buying fresh (sectioned) fruit is a real timesaver.

The presentation has spring written all over it. The taste has delicious written all over it.

Last year, Katie was diagnosed with juvenile rheumatoid arthritis. She is lucky because she was diagnosed early and is taking medication for the disease. Early diagnosis and an aggressive treatment plan will help slow or prevent damage to her joints.

Arthritis affects some 70 million Americans, including approximately 300,000 children. It's the nation's leading cause of disability, robbing people of all ages of their ability to participate fully in many daily activities and diminishing their overall quality of life. Michigan counts 3 million adults and 7,000 children affected by the disease.

Breast reconstruction

By Dr. Daniela Rodriguez Special Writer

Each year approximately 200,000 American women face the reality of breast cancer. Today, the emotional and physical results are different from what they were just 20 years ago.

New approaches in cancer detection and treatment mean a better outlook for recovery.

In addition, advances in reconstructive surgery have provided opportunities for women who have had a mastectomy, or removal of a breast, to restore their appearance.

The main goal of reconstruction is to create a new breast that, when a woman wears clothing, is indistinguishable from the natural breast. Reconstruction eliminates the need for a prosthesis or special bra.

TRAM flap

One surgical breast reconstruction option, called TRAM flap reconstruction, uses tissue and muscle from the lower abdominal wall to create a new breast. The TRAM flap refers to the transverse rectus abdominis muscle flap, located in the lower abdominal area.

Because of unwarranted safety concerns surrounding silicone gel or saline-filled implants, this procedure, which uses a woman's own tissue, has grown in popular-

Many surgeons prefer the use of a patient's own tissue because it can be molded to create the natural slope of the breast. It is also popular with patients because it results in a tightening of the lower abdomen, or a rectus fascia plication, which is similar to a tummy tuck.

After the patient's own breast is removed, the plastic surgeon makes a horizontal "tummy tuck" incision across the lower

A layer of fat and skin is dissected, and part of the vertical abdominal muscle and blood vessels that feed the tissue are detached. A portion of the tissue is transplanted to the mastectomy site and molded into a breast.

A scar is left across the new breast and a horizontal scar across the abdomen. They will fade over time, but do not go away completely.

Two types of TRAM flaps:

Pedicle flap involves tunneling under the skin to the breast area. The muscle, fat, and abdominal skin, along with their blood vessels, are moved up through a tunnel created under the midriff area, shaped, and sewn in place as the new breast.

Free flap means that the surgeon cuts the flap of skin, fat, blood vessels and muscle free from its original location and then attaches the flap to blood vessels in the chest area.

This requires the use of a microscope (microsurgery) to connect the tiny vessels and takes longer to finish than a pedicle

The free flap is not performed as often as the pedicle flap, but some surgeons believe it has a hardier blood supply and maintains its volume better.

TRAM flap reconstruction can be done at the same time as the mastectomy, eliminating the need for two separate surgeries.

Women who are not candidates for this surgery include those who are very thin or obese, have circulatory problems or take certain medications.

Patients with diabetes, connective tissue or vascular disease also may not be candidates. Surgeons sometimes suggest that patients wait and have the reconstruction later, separate from the mastectomy.

This may be a good choice for those who smoke, have other health conditions or require radiation post-operatively.

After TRAM flap reconstruc-

An areola is then made using a

Post-surgical expectations

Patients may stay in the hospital one to six days following the procedure. Most feel tired and sore for a few weeks after surgery. Medication can be given to make recovery more comfortable. Use of the Marcaine Pain Pump, which releases medication directly onto the internal incision, has greatly improved post-operative recovery.

Gradual introduction of stretching exercises and return to normal activities is generally advised, but patients should avoid overhead lifting, strenuous sports, and sexual activity for four to six weeks following surgery. After six to eight weeks, most women are back to their pre-surgery lifestyle.

Reconstruction does not restore normal sensation to the breast, but some feeling may return.

It may take one to two years for scars to fade.

While a diagnosis of breast cancer and mastectomy surgery are traumatic events for women, advances in plastic and reconstructive surgery, such as TRAM flap reconstruction, have provided valuable options for those who seek to restore their natural appearance.

Dr. Daniela Rodriguez is a Bon Secours Cottage plastic surgeon. She completed five years of specialized training in TRAM flap reconstruction.

Rodriguez sees patients at Renaissance Plastic Surgery, P.C., located in St. Clair Shores. For an appointment, call Bon Secours Cottage Physician Referral at (800) 303-7315.

Know Your Skin by Lisa A. Manz-Dulac, MD

Brown spots, sometimes known as sun spots, age spots or liver spots are hyperpigmented areas of skin which appear as brown or gray areas of skin much like over size

Though not related to the liver at all, they are related to sun exposure. The spots appear and grow due to the increased production of melanin, the pigment which colors our skin.

Especially where hyperpigmentation is light, treatment can be achieved in several ways. The most common is the use of "bleaching cream", although some lesions may require freezing (or cryotherapy) or laser treatments.

Bleaching creams actually do not bleach, but reduce the production of melanin. They are available over the counter or your doctor may recommend a prescription strength formulation.

Diligent efforts needed to reduce underage drinking

Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence (NCADD) has declared April as Alcohol Awareness Month. Despite their diligent efforts to educate about the dangers of drinking, alcohol still remains the deadliest drug for America's youth.

A 16-year-old in this country is more likely to die from a drinking-related problem than any other cause, and alcohol consumption is associated with the leading causes of death among young people, including car crashes, unintentional injuries, murder and suicide.

The Pastor's Corner Real Estate, God's way

By Carla Kalogeridis Special Writer

Christ Jesus once said, "No man can enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house." (Mark 3: 27).

As spring is a time when many Grosse Pointers find themselves immersed in the process of buying or selling a house. I thought about how this biblical passage once helped me some years ago when we were looking for a house in Grosse Pointe.

Our family had been leasing a house in the Farms for about 18 months, when the owner indicated she would consider selling it to us. We were thrilled. We loved the house, the location and the neighbors.

However, as we tried to move forward with the process, she eventually admitted that she had a change of heart about selling the house. In fact, she wanted to move back in!

The temptation was to feel fear and despair. The owner kindly gave us six months to find another house, but I worried if this was enough time. I worried if we could find, let alone afford, what we really wanted. I worried if we'd be as happy in the new house as we were now.

I tried to turn to God in prayer, but my thoughts were so full of worry, I couldn't seem to muster the concentration I thought it would take to hear His guidance. I found myself flipping through the Bible randomly, searching for something that would quiet my

And then I saw the passage that opens this article. I knew that Jesus often taught in parables, and I was accustomed to digging deeper to get to the spiritual meaning within his words.

In a few moments of quiet inspiration, the word "house" became "thought" or "consciousness." I realized that my fears regarding the house situation were really nothing more than my belief in a power opposed to or greater than Worry, doubt and fear had entered my "house" or "consciousness," and they were doing a darn good job of binding my thought, effectively closing it to the good thoughts and ideas that God continually communicates to man, his beloved child. I resolved to close my thinking to anything that was unlike God.

If I didn't let in the suggestion that God was not in control, that God did not have a plan for me, a plan that would include a wonderful home with everything we needed, then these fears couldn't bind me and keep me from receiving the good God had in store for our family.

We made up a list of what we wanted in a house and what we could afford to pay and gave it to a real estate agent. She said that she doubted she could find a house with all those features at that price, but she would begin looking.

Within three days, she showed us a house that had everything on our list and more. Furthermore, it had been on the market for some time, and the owner joyfully accepted our offer. The house was empty and available to us immediately.

When I called to tell our landlord that we had found a house and would be moving in 30 days, she was not as happy as I had hoped she'd be. She wasn't planning to return for several more months, and she needed a renter in the house until then to help cover the mortgage payment.

I assured her that God had led us to this new house and that His plan never helps one of his children while hurting another.

I continued to pray that whatever God's plan was for our family, it would bless equally all those involved. I prayed for the unfolding of God's perfect idea and reminded myself that this was a certain outcome.

The week we moved out, a family whose Grosse Pointe home had been partially destroyed by fire rented our landlord's house for the four months it would take to rebuild their home. Furthermore, this family's insurance coverage allowed our former landlord to collect more than she had been receiving from us.

The family who moved in for the four-month period expressed their deep gratitude at finding a wonderful place to live while the repairs to their home were made.

Truly, all involved were blessed. I found another passage helpful in praying about this experience, and it appears in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy. She writes: The understanding, even in a degree, of the divine All-power destroys fear, and plants the feet in the true path, the path which leads to the house built without hands eternal in the heavens.'

So, if you happen to be one of those many Grosse Pointers looking to make a move this spring, don't let worry or fear take over your thinking. Humbly place everything in God's hands and wait patiently for His good work to unfold. I know from personal experience, there's no better way to buy or sell a house than that.

The most common cause of deafness in older adults is nerve damage. It is not reversible but can be substantially improved with hearing aids and sometimes surgery, for severe

A problem with detecting gradual nerve-related hearing loss is that it is so gradual.

People say, "It's OK, I'll get used to it." And in the doctor's quiet examination room, it's not obvious to the doctor that the patient has a hearing problem.

There are hearing losses that are reversible, like those caused by infections, wax buildup or a middle ear condition called serous ototis that might follow colds or other respiratory illnesses. All these can be Reversible hearing losses that are not treated, however, can lead to more serious hearing loss.

The study concludes that many patients and primary-care doctors are ill-informed about the different types of hearing loss and consider it an untreatable effect of aging.

Dr. Munsey Wheby, president of the American College of Physicians. which represents 115,000 internists and medical students, agreed that hearing loss is underdetected in older adults, partly because of the lack of awareness among some primary-care doctors. That is one reason only an estimated 25 percent of patients with treatable nerve-related hearing loss receive hearing aids.

Simple tests to detect hearing loss include a 16item questionnaire and a $500 tone-producing hand-held device called an audioscope.

If it's been determined you need a hearing aid, I have two pieces of advice. The first: No hearing aid will provide the same wonderful hearing your own ears used to be capable of. Don't let unrealistic expectations keep you from a hearing aid. Having said that, however, a hearing aid should work well enough that you can enjoy a social life. If the first hearing aid you test doesn't work well, try another type.

Keep on trying until you feel comfortable with an aid. Audiologists will make it possible for you to test different hearing aids for up to 60 days to be sure which works best for

My first hearing aids. purchased some six years ago, never worked well for me. And I concluded that no hearing aid would. One big problem, which I thought was insurmountable, was that my jaw hinges move more than they are supposed to.

This resulted in feedback (squealing in my case). Adjustments would be made in the soundproof room of the hearing aid provider which seemed to correct the problem. But after a short time back into the real world of sound, the squealing began again.

I decided recently that in the six years since purchasing my hearing aids, there must have been some technological improvements. I went back, this time to an audi-

After trying three different kinds of aids over a several month period, we found one that worked well and dealt with the way my jaws work.

Yes, I occasionally do miss out on a word. Put me into a room full of people all talking at the same time and things can get chaotic.

But I hear enough to be quite functional, and never experience the isolation that could have overtaken me.

The volume adjustment wheel also makes life pleasanter whether I'm struggling to hear a woman with a soft voice, or when I'm overwhelmed by an orchestral arrangement with lots of brass and percussion, or when some sopranos and tenors hit high notes that make me want to cover my ears.

Charlie's Angels will walk for Multiple Sclerosis cure

By Carrie Cunningham Staff Writer

Charlie Waldorf, head custodian for Tyrone Elementary School, woke up one morning about five years ago and felt numbness throughout his whole body. He was perplexed about what was wrong with him. He endured the lack of feeling for a couple of days and then went to a doctor. After taking a slew of tests and waiting a couple of months, doctors diagnosed him with multiple sclerosis.

"It was devastating, but it was kind of a relief at the same time to find out what it was," Waldorf said. "During that time of not knowing was the worst because you start diagnosing yourself and start looking up symptoms. You start thinking I'm going to die.'

While MRIs showed the scarring of the nerves in his brain and his neck, Waldorf is fortunate because his MS is in remission. Symptoms flared up at the onset of the disease but have since abated. He has residual numbness in his hands. He takes a medication called copaxone to blunt the progression of the disease.

Waldorf decided to be proactive about his illness. He joined the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, the largest private sponsor multiple sclerosis research in the world and educated himself about the disease.

"You have a choice. You can either roll up and crawl under a rock and die, or you can take it on," he said. " I armed myself with as much information as I possibly could. That's what I decided to do.

Through his involvement with the MS Society, he learned about the MS walk to fight for a cure. The Charlie Waldorf, diagnosed with multiple sclerosis five years ago, has enlisted a team of people, called Charlie's Angels, for the Grosse Pointe MS walk.

Michigan chapter of the they're wearing them here, society organizes a walk in communities across the state. This year's Grosse Pointe walk is May 4, starting at North High School at 8 a.m. and ending at 1 p.m.

Starting in 1999, Waldorf approached many people in the community to walk with him in the Grosse Pointe walk, an event the Grosse Pointe News and the Connection newspapers sponsor. He dubbed the team of people he gathered as "Charlie's Angels." He made up T-shirts bearing his team members' names coupled with an illustration of a sports shoe with wings on it.

In 1999, 50 people walked with him raising $3,600. In 2000, 70 people walked, taking in $7,500. In 2001, 150 people raised $12,000. Last year about 50 people raised $7,500 This year, he has gotten together about 50 people and hopes to garner about $9,600.

"More than raising money, it's raising awareness about the disease and what people can do to help," Waldorf said of the walk.

"I see people wearing the T-shirts here all year long. If they're wearing them out there, and people see that," he said.

Over 15,000 people have Michigan. MS across "Everybody knows someone with MS," Waldorf said.

Many people have difficulty getting around as the disease worsens. The National MS Society aids people with devices like wheel chairs as well as being a clearing house of information.

MS is closely linked with a host of other diseases like

"I think once they have a breakthrough on one of these diseases, they're going to get real close on a lot of them. The research part of it is big," said Waldorf.

Waldorf is excited about this year's walk and expects to continue with it in the coming years.

"It's pretty cool. It's a lot of fun getting the whole thing together," he said.

Hearing loss in seniors

We seniors know that vision loss is probably the greatest of all sensory losses, but hearing loss is a close second. It isolates us even when we're in the midst of a group of people.

I talked recently to a woman who told me she had such great hearing loss that she had given up most social occasions. She found them to be frustrating. She couldn't hear people when they talked to her, and there wasn't much point to making conversation when she couldn't hear the response.

My father was profoundly deaf when he died at 89. It was heartbreaking because we couldn't carry on even a limited conversation. Writing him a note was not a viable solution because his eyesight was very poor. Perhaps the saddest thing was that his mind was sharp as a tack, but he received little intellectual stimulation from his surroundings.

I know that many I know in their 60s, 70s or 80s are having problems with their hearing. I have also come to realize that many of them fake hearing. I was at a luncheon with a speaker. At that time I was wearing a hearing aid that wasn't much better than doing without a hearing aid.

The speaker said something that made everyone laugh. I asked the woman next to me, who'd been laughing, what the speaker said. She whispered to me that she hadn't heard it either.

I'd be willing to bet there were many in that audience laughing because it was obvious the speaker had made a joke, but they hadn't been able to hear it. An article in last month's Journal of the American Medical Association says research indicates up to 40 percent of adults aged 65 and older have hearing loss. Worse. It estimates that fewer than 10 percent of launch is Laura Levine's madcap "This Pen for Hire: A Jaine Austen Mystery." If you wondered, Jaine's mother is an Anglophile and a bad speller. Thirtysomething (aren't they all?) Jaine is a struggling writer in Los Angeles who hires out to write whatever's needed: brochures for plumbing fixtures, resumes, personal ads and letters. Jaine quit advertising for this when she got tired of ending all her copy with "void where prohibited by law.'

The more recent series

But freelance writing doesn't make much money. She ends up writing a love letter for a stalker. Howard. He's an insurance adjuster who watches a lot of TV, lives with his mother and collects chopsticks from Chinese restaurants.

Actually, he's a harmless dork with a crush on a bombshell aerobics teacher at his gym. Call it the Freddie Eynsford-Hill syndrome.

However, hopeless, harmless Howard's accused of murder when said bombshell is bludgeoned to death with a Thigh Master. (I do love

Of course, our intrepid Jaine gets involved, almost gets killed a few times and has a swift comment for mention she has a willful cat named Prozac? Prozac will amuse cat fanciers. but won't annoy others. This may be Levine's first book. In a past life she wrote sitcoms. Her credits include "The Bob Newhart Show," "Laverne and Shirley," "The Love Boat," "The Jeffersons," "Three's Company" and "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Her work also appeared in The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times.

Fans of mystery and screwball comedy will lap this up.

From the East Coast we get Ellen Pall's relatively new Nine Muses series. The beroine Juliet Bodine, regency romance writer, has a private secretary. Her apartment is a large and extremely comfortable one on Manhattan's Upper West Side. Can't get much cozier than that.

Pall does solid research on police procedure and story background. She gives a short note on background facts and fiction in her literary subject and historic figures.

She knows her stuff. She writes regencies under the name Fiona Hill.

scene, moving back and forth between Juliet's work in progress and the mystery. Those interested in regencies, writing, literary allusions and old-fashioned cozies with wellstructured clues and multitudes of suspects, will enjoy.

On the other hand, while Pall has some sense of humor, don't look for frothy comedy. Nor will speed freaks appreciate her. The carefully assembled clues, the background and the excerpts from Juliet's in-process book slow things down. Also, after Jaine Austen, ladylike Juliet may seem a tad pallid and wispy.

Pall's first Muse was Terpsichore, in 2001's treat for balletomanes, "Corpse de Ballet." Her second, "Slightly Abridged," which just came out, is dedicated to Erato.

However, those looking for a salty romp had best look elsewhere. There's not enough sex in the book to raise Grandaunt Hortensia's easily arched left eyebrow, let alone put her knitting in a knot.

So there you have it. Whether your taste runs to zany Levine or cozy Pall, you'll have something to read while your favorite takes a long-needed breath between murders.

The Blue Devils outscored the Cougars in all major areas - sprints, distance. hurdles, jumps and throws - and took first in 13 of the 17 events.

North track team gets ready for a rough two-week stretch

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

After a couple of easy weeks, things are going to get a lot tougher for Grosse Pointe North's boys track

The Norsemen have three meets on this week's schedule, including the Sterling Heights Invitational on Saturday, and two Macomb Area Conference dual meets next week.

One of those is a MAC showdown with Gold defending division champion Marine City on the Norsemen's home track on May 6.

"We're going to point toward that meet to use as a measure for how far we've come," said coach Dan Quinn. "Marine City is real strong in the field events, so we'll have to blow them away on the track in order to beat them."

North ended a layoff of nearly two weeks on Saturday when it competed Dyle. in the Port Huron Relays. The day before, the younger members of the North squad competed in the Sterling Heights 9th and 10th-grade invitational.

Quinn didn't have a full team to take to Port Huron because of spring break vacations, but the athletes who were available did a good job.

"We earned medals in every relay that we entered and Phil Saffron won a medal by himself in the pole vault relay," Quinn said.

North's best showing was a second place in the Port Huron special relay, which has legs of 100, 200, 300 and 400 meters.

John Bremer ran a fine anchor leg as he passed three runners to give the Norsemen their secondplace medals. Other members of the team were Marcell Maxwell, Kevin Kwiatkowski and Bremer also ran well in leading off the 4x800 relay in which North took third place.

"He ran a 2:04, which equaled his PR (personal record) at the end of last year," Quinn said.

Rob Matouk, Aric Minney and Mario Sexton were other members of that relay team that had an 8:54 clock-

North's team of Sexton. Minney, Matouk and David Secord finished third in the distance medley (800, 400, 1,200 and 1,600) relay.

"We were just two seconds out of second place," Quinn said. "Matouk ran a 2:12 800 in the 4x800 and his 1.200 leg was a 3:40, so he was under five minutes for the mile. Secord ran a 5:11 mile. He's getting his confidence back after being injured most of the cross country season. He's a seasoned vet-Scott eran who's helping our younger kids."

North's other third place came in the 4x100 relay. Robert Bailiff got the Norsemen off to a good start and Dyle made an excellent handoff on the second leg. Saffron and Maxwell finished up in a time of 45.6.

"We finished behind Southfield and Port Huron, a couple of schools who always have good sprinters," Quinn said.

North was fourth in the 4x200 relay, but the Norsemen's time of 1:35.2 was the best of the season, helped by a 21.8 anchor leg by Maxwell.

"Marcell had a great time," Quinn said. "He's becoming a team leader at a young age. He's leading us in points and is one of our leaders in attitude.

Saffron cleared 12 feet in the pole vault to earn the sixth-place medal.

"Phil is making a good bid to get a place in the region-Quinn said. "And he's also helping us in the 106-7 in the discus, while Jake Masinick had a personal-best throw of 97-0. Both of them also did well in the shot put.

Because several of North's including sophomores, Bremer, Maxwell, Dyle, Sexton, Bailiff and Masinick, were competing at Port Huron the next day, they didn't go to the Sterling Heights meet.

"It was a good chance for sonal best 19-5 1/2 in the our JV kids to show what they could do on their own," Quinn said. "Without the Dave Selak had a throw of pressure they performed well.

> PRs were turned in by Scott Ulrich in the pole vault; Mark Lapansie, discus: Anthony Capizzo, Andrew Fayad and Allan Fullerton, 1,600; and Jeff Kurtz, Kyle Kwiatkowski and Jacob Sexton, 800.

> "Jacob Sexton's time equaled his brother Mario's best time from last year," Quinn said.
