Positively Palmer

Liz Aiken, left, and Jeanie McNeil interviewed Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer Heenan at the West Park Farmers Market on Saturday, July 9, for an upcoming episode of WMTV's (Comcast Channel 5) "Positively Positive." The hosts interviewed a number of people involved in the success of the weekly outdoor market.

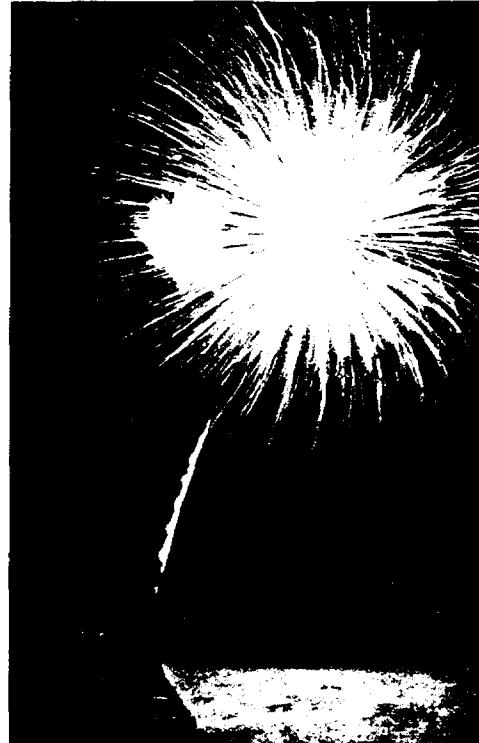

"It (the market) is so positive, not just for Grosse Pointe Park, but for everyone. That's what our show is all about," Aiken said. The episode will air the week of July 26.

Farms fireworks spectacular

The show started with a flurry and ended with a finale. In between were 16 minutes and 18 seconds of crack, boom, bang, proving once again the big bang theory is fine with fans of the Grosse Pointe Farms lakeside fireworks show last Saturday at 10 p.m.

Above, Mark and Dick Trost of the Farms staked out a good viewing spot and passed time before the show by reading "Little Quacks Hide and Seek" to their 5-year-old twins, Katie and Liggie. The Trosts were among thousands of people jamming space along Lakeshore. Boaters watched the rockets' red glare from the eastern shallows of Lake St. Clair. Public safety officers from the Farms and neighboring communities patrolled the viewing area but had no incidents to file. Fireworks culminated the Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club 2004 Regatta at

Gaffney: Start school after Labor Day

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Legislation by Rep. Edward Gaffney, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, would start the school year after Labor Day.

The current K-12 academic calendar, which begins Tuesday on the last week in August then breaks the next Friday for a four-day Labor Day weekend, would be relegated to history books.

"People have complained to me about it," Gaffney said. "They're mad that Grosse Pointe schools (this year) will start Aug. 31, before Labor Day."

Gaffney's introduction of HB 6058 has to do with Michigan's economy and family togetherness.

"That week (before Labor Day) is a shot for the tourism industry," he said. "Communities will have one last chance to capitalize on tourism investment."

The Michigan Tourism Industry Coalition, comprised of more than 40 tourism-related groups, estimates at least $50 million is spent in the state during Labor Day weekend.

Gaffney said families that don't take vacations that week are preparing for school.

"They're buying clothes and supplies," he said.

In the 1990s, an EPIC-MRA consumer opinion pole sponsored by the Michigan Restaurant and Beverage Association revealed strong backing for a post-Labor Day start-up.

Support ranged from 63 percent in northern Michigan to 75 percent in Macomb County. Among families most likely to have school-age children, support ranged from 64 to 74 percent.

Gaffney said summer vacation is short enough already.

"Why make it shorter?" he said. "Have a full summer off — right until the end."

When Gaffney was growing up in New England, school bells were silent until the Wednesday after Labor Day.

"Kids, teachers and parents need that time off," he said. "Teachers need to decompress. Kids need to refresh themselves, and it will mean more family time together with parents."

Ten representatives have co-sponsored the bill. Although the measure targets the school code, it's anticipated economic impact is reflected by referral to the commerce committee.

■ Some 10,000 bathers pass through the turnstiles at Grosse Pointe Park's municipal park July 5. The figure sets an all-time one-day attendance record.

Farms park-goers help push attendance at four of the five Pointes' parks to 35,657.

The Park also sets a weekend attendance record of 15,280. The Farms is second with 10,500, followed by the Woods' 8,113 and 1,764 in the City.

■ Enrollment during summer school reaches a record 716. The previous high was 710 in 1942.

Nearly all summer enrollment increases during the last few years have been at the high school level.

■ A one-man war is declared on grackles in Grosse Pointe Park.

A resident in the 1300 block of Kensington promises imminent attack in a letter to Mayor Home Fritsch and the city council.

"Hundreds of grackles roosting in city trees are ruining our property with their droppings," the man writes. "Their constant noise all night makes it impossible to get a good rest. I intend to enlist several of my friends to bring shot guns here just after dark some evening and have a shooting bee. I ask your permission to do this; if permission is not granted I am going to start shooting anyway."

■ Grosse Pointe Park officials will plant 200 Cleveland Norway maples to partially replace more than 1,000 city-owned American elms lost during the last seven years to Dutch elm disease.

"We desire to widen the variety of trees in the Park," says John Crawford, city manager.

■ Grosse Pointe Woods council members put the brakes on trying to reduce heavy traffic on Roslyn.

Council members agree to delay until July 16 a decision to erect temporary barricades to limit access to Roslyn's westerly section.

■ Members of the Grosse Pointe Woods planning commission table a decision regarding adoption of a land use plan for the year 2000.

Inaction is based on apprehension about designating the northwest section of the city as a high-density residential area, meaning multiple units.

■ E.coli flowing downstream in Lake St. Clair from Macomb County outlets force the closure of Pier Park beach in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"Three water samples were tested," says park director Dick Huhn. "Two samples were within safety limits. The third wasn't; so we decided to close our beach to be safe."

■ Thousands of fireworks enthusiasts don't seem to mind when rain forces postponement of this year's show at Parcels Middle School field in Grosse Pointe Woods.

A large crowd reassembles the following Tuesday when clear skies allow the show to go on.

■ Grosse Pointe Shores residents will have 80 television channels to choose from now that village leaders have approved a 15-year agreement with Comcast Cable.

According to the contract, Shores and Comcast representatives will meet every five years to review the system's status and evaluate upgrades that may be desirable to keep service state of the art.

■ A number of Grosse

Pointe residents want to keelhaul a City sailor for seeking state permission to moor his 27-foot sloop in shallow water off the Farms.

The sailor finds himself without a slip this season and seeks safe haven about 500 feet offshore.

Farms welcomes newest firefighter

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

They call him Pops.

He calls them things he doesn't want printed.

But whatever razzing takes place, it's all in the family.

"They're a very good group of people," said Larry Stocking, newest member of the Grosse Pointe Farms fire department.

At age 42, Stocking also is the division's oldest officer.

"I've done a lot of things, from working for other people to owning my own business," Stocking said. "I never, ever had a chance to work with a group of people like I do here."

"When you're joking around the station, it's one thing," said Sundae Sepesi, a fire specialist helping train Stocking. "But the next second, everybody's lives can be at stake. What can be more serious than that — your life on the line, your partner's life on the line, members of the public's lives on the line. You depend on each other."

Stocking graduated with the recent class at the Schoolcraft College fire academy. He spent last week training with Sepesi and other veterans, but he isn't a stranger around Farms public safety headquarters.

Two years ago Stocking was hired in the parking enforcement unit.

"I grew up in the Farms," he said. "I always looked up to the department. When I heard a position was opening for parking enforcement, I took it."

A few months ago Stocking opted to become one of the Farms' four fire specialists. He joined a department including officers Sepesi, Jason Osborne and Raymond Krause.

Fire department employees aren't cross-trained in police work, as are public safety officers.

"Fire specialists are the engineers of the trucks," said Sepesi. "We drive to the fire, run and operate the rigs while public safety officers fight the fire."

Specialists maintain trucks and equipment, test thousands of feet of fire hose and tend roughly 600 fire hydrants throughout the city.

Last week Stocking and Sepesi tested hydrants on the grounds of St. Paul Catholic School and church. Maintenance continues year-round.

In addition to Stocking's job with the Farms, he's entering his 11th year as a youth minister at Our Lady Star of the Sea Parish.

"I work with high school kids," he said.

His fire training this summer meant not having time to take parish youths on their vacation to Cedar Point.

"They gave up their annual trip, which allowed me to go to the academy," Stocking said.

Yellow is for bravery

"For Lance Armstrong, a cancer survivor, yellow is more than just the color of the Tour de France's leader jersey. Yellow is the color of hope, courage and perseverance."

— Lance Armstrong Foundation

For five-time champion Lance Armstrong, the Tour de France is more than just a contest to determine the best biker in the world. It is an opportunity for him to tell his story – a story that he hopes will help people follow in his footsteps in the quest for a cure for cancer. Armstrong began his cycling career brilliantly at a very young age. But when he was diagnosed with advanced stages of testicular cancer in October of 1996, he thought it was all over. Not only did he have cancer of the testes, but it was also spreading to his lungs and his brain. His chance of surviving was less than fifty percent.

However, Armstrong did not give up. He went through surgery and chemotherapy, and with the support of family and friends he was able to celebrate his victory over the dreaded disease nearly two and a half years later.

Since then, Armstrong has gone on to win five straight Tour de France bicycle races, and in the process has become the hope for many cancer patients and survivors.

According to the American Cancer Society, cancer is the second leading cause of death in the United States, with roughly 555,000 fatalities per year. With nearly 1,400,000 cancer cases estimated in 2004, it is believed that one in two men and one in three women will develop cancer in their lifetime.

With these kinds of odds, we all need to be a little more cautious about what we do, and we need to start thinking about the future of cancer research. Why wait until cancer has struck to start learning about cancer and what you can do to help in the mission of finding a cure.

The Lance Armstrong Foundation has teamed up with Nike to help find that cure.

Together they are trying to raise $5 million to support the Lance Armstrong Foundation that hopes one day to find a cure for cancer.

The campaign motto, LIVESTRONG, which is said to be Armstrong's mantra, is really a selling point for this campaign. The motto is also inscribed on bracelets that are being sold all over the country. For every dollar donated, Nike will send you a yellow bracelet, which they hope will encourage others to donate. So far, it has helped me raise awareness and also has helped raise money for the foundation.

On their web site, wearyyellow.com, visitors can tell their stories of how they have been touched by cancer. We all have in one way or another and will be for years to come if we don't do something now.

Lance Armstrong is an inspiration to many, on and off the bike, and I feel that what he has done with the LAF has been great. He is giving hope to others while allowing everyone to be involved in the search for a cure.

It is never too early to donate; odds are that one-day your donation could be helpful to your own recovery.

According to the foundation, "In the battle with cancer, knowledge is power and attitude is everything. This fund raising campaign will support the foundation's efforts to help young cancer survivors live strong."

On stage

Every year, hundreds and hundreds of aspiring comedians travel to Chicago to try to break into show business. Every year, hundreds and hundreds of them are disappointed — but not Megan Grano, the daughter of Michigan Supreme Court Chief Justice Maura Corrigan, of the Park, and the late Wayne State law professor Joe Grano.

She first starred in Second Suburb, an improvisational comedy group at South, before graduating in 1995. She went to the University of North Carolina where she started a similar group called CHiPs (Chapel Hill Players), which is still going strong.

When she graduated in 1999, she, too, headed for Chicago, viewed as the comedy capital of the United States. Her goal was lofty — to work for Second City, which launched the careers of folks like Gilda Radner, John Belushi, Chris Farley, Mike Myers and Tina Fey.

That's when reality hit. "Second City holds auditions for one or two openings per year, and each time hundreds upon hundreds of people show up out of the woodwork for the auditions," Megan reports.

For four years, she performed at Improv Olympic and in the all-female improv group, Sirens. She also did stints as a law firm marketing secretary,

Megan Grano

Chicago Public Schools substitute teacher, a temp employee, a patient in medical experiments, a receptionist and a person who passed out free candy at a suburban mall while dressed as a mummy.

She quit the medical experiment profession when one "went awry," and she slept for 36 hours, and she only lasted two days as a bandaged mummy at the mall. "I feel for people who have to do that for a living," she said.

"Needless to say, I had been auditioning yearly (at Second City) for the past four years when I was finally hired this past March. I was thrilled," Megan said.

She is now on the Second City National Touring Company, performing scenes from the past 45 years. In her first months, the company toured Connecticut, New Hampshire, Delaware, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri and South Carolina.

Her first show with the group was a nearly sold-out performance in a 2,000 seat theater in Davenport, Iowa.

In early May, she was appearing on the Second City Main Stage in Chicago, and who should show up to take part in the improv set? Mike Myers and the cast of "Shrek 2," who were in town to do the Oprah show, dropped by.

"Since we were performing that night, we got to play with him. He brought Cameron Diaz, Antonio Banderas and Melanie Griffith along, too," Megan reports.

Antonio and Melanie were too nervous to perform with the group, but Cameron and Mike pitched in for the 45-minute set.

"It was quite surreal to have an improv pillow fight with Cameron Diaz and to play 'Freeze Tag' with Mike Myers," she said.

Some friends from Grand Rapids witnessed Megan on stage in Chicago and reported that "she was great."

But then the teachers at South and the folks who saw her perform in Second Suburb here from 1992 through 1995 already knew that.

A Fourth of July digital image disaster... how can you learn from my mistake?

Like many of you, I got together with some friends on Sunday, June 27th to watch the amazing fireworks at Parcels. This year, I took a walk on the wild side and brought my digital camera.

I caught some great pictures of Rick and Jackie Filippelli, Matt and Tina Seely, and Woods Council persons Lisa Howle and Darryl Speicher, among others. I even sacrificed one of my ear drums in the name of photojournalism to get a picture of one of the band members showing some of the children how to play the guitar!

Last Wednesday, Kodak delivered our new PictureMaker machine. The machine is really a technological marvel. It can print 4 X 6 inch prints of your digital images at the rate of one every 6 seconds! It even prints pictures from your camera phone while you wait!

The Kodak rep needed a digital card to use for some test prints, so I went to my camera case and pulled out the image card with the images from the fireworks and handed it to him for his testing, then left the store for a meeting across town.

When I got back to the store, the Kodak rep looked like his best friend had died. Apparently, he had gone back to our lab to check on some test prints and when he came out, my image card had disappeared!

I was guilty of the ultimate digital photography sin. I didn't make a CD or save my images immediately after I took them, and I had no prints or negatives!

Luckily, after a four day search, the $300 image card was found. The moral of the story? As soon as you're done taking your digital images, burn them on to a CD. Don't pull an "Ahmed" with your vacation pictures!

...Ahmed Ismail (ahmed.ismail@comcast.net)

Would you like prints from 4" X 6" up to 8" X 12" while you wait from your camera phone, another picture, or your digital image card?

No problem.

Start school after Labor Day weekend

It is hard to believe the Fourth of July is already here and gone. Many people equate Independence Day as the beginning of the end of summer.

Who could blame them, what with swim suits and flip-flops giving way to back-to-school clothes and new school shoes?

Our local state representative, Ed Gaffney, R-Grosse Pointe Farms, believes summer goes by too quickly and wants to give kids and parents a few extra days. Mr. Gaffney wants to postpone the opening of school to after Labor Day.

Under current state school code, public school classes begin on the last Tuesday in August — Aug. 31 this year. After three days of classes, students then have the Friday before Labor Day off and enjoy a four-day weekend.

We, and Gaffney, ask, why not just postpone the start of school until after Labor Day?

According to an EPIC-MRA poll in the 1990s, as reported in a news story by Brad Lindberg in this week's Grosse Pointe News, as many as 75 percent of local residents like the idea of school starting after Labor Day.

The final holiday of the summer is the last chance for family vacationing before the rigors of homework and school-sponsored extra-curricular activities kick in. But as it is now, families cannot plan the last week before Labor Day for time spent together camping, sight-seeing or pool-lounging.

Instead, parents are frantically trying to fill school-supplies lists from store shelves that have already been picked over. What a stressful end of summer!

Further, Labor Day weekend is — or was — a major draw for tourists. The Michigan Tourism Industry Coalition estimates $50 million is generated in travel-related spending during the Labor Day weekend.

Tourism would probably be even greater if kids didn't have to start class before the long holiday weekend.

We support Mr. Gaffney's efforts to have school start after Labor Day. He says that when he was a child, school started on the Wednesday after Labor Day. That sounds perfect. Parents would then have time to "wind down" after the last long weekend of the summer and be prepared to get down to school business.

If you agree, e-mail, write or call Mr. Gaffney at edwardgaffney@house.mi.gov; or S0585 House Office Building P.O. Box 30014 Lansing, MI 48909-7514; or (517) 373-0154.

Paved with good intentions?

Are we in danger of being renamed Stump City USA? Like so many of our fellow natives of this community, I am stunned and saddened by the latest annihilation of our treasured trees.

It seems as if it were yesterday that "the powers that be" decided to destroy several magnificent trees along Grosse Pointe Boulevard, bordering the South High property. Several of us objected strenuously to this action, only to be informed that it was necessary. Now we are asked to believe that the majority of the trees on Fisher Road were also diseased. What a convenient explanation! It wasn't that long ago that the islands were designed to salvage the trees, but that was the action of a former board.

The trees did not have to go to allow a measly 25 more parking spaces for students. What a ridiculous tradeoff, a mere finger-in-the dike solution. If replaced and by the time new trees reached maturity, today's students would be well into their senior years. Once again, we either didn't know or didn't respond until the deed was done.

I would like to respond to the comments in a letter to the editor this week.

Indeed there was a compassionate and remorseful story written when the great elm at the former Grosse Pointe News had to be destroyed. The entire building was uniquely designed in homage to the tree, with a recessed setting to accommodate its size. That magnificent tree had been preserved, cabled and treated for decades. The tree wore a historical plaque, and no expense was spared in the many attempts to save it.

It wasn't until the News was asked to remove the tree, as it posed a public health hazard if one of its limbs were to fall on a pedestrian, that it was felled with great reluctance. It was a sad day when the tree surgeons took that majestic specimen from the Hill. The news logo on the editorial page has been a picture of the tree, with the caption "Under the Elm," for almost seven decades.

As for neighboring residents offering kids the opportunity to park on their streets, why should they? It would seem homeowners deserve certain rights to the areas on the streets in front of their homes. Occupants have meetings, guests and services as part of their daily lives. For the taxes we pay, it would seem appropriate that we have adequate parking available for these occasions. Is it being suggested that school students have privileges that homeowners do not? They already have free parking in many places.

When I went to school in this community, we walked. With the recent outcry about obese and unfit children, perhaps it might be suggested that more students walk, jog or try car pooling if the distance is too far.

Parking has long been a problem on Fisher Road. Just look at the turnover of businesses there. The fact that the school is in one city and the majority of businesses affected in another further complicates things.

In response to the letter writer's final paragraph, I would like to point out a few truisms.

Every municipal and school meeting in this community is published a week in advance on the front page of the Grosse Pointe News. They are repeated as legal notices inside the paper. This paper is NOT a government agency. We do our very best to inform our readers as well as offer opinions and editorials focusing on current issues. Our readers may not all agree with us, but we attempt to be fair.

Concerns such as major tree removal, lighting on the playing fields, the property at Mack and Seven, proposed condominiums, etc., are all important issues. Why are we so surprised when we learn that millages and laws have been passed and taxes raised? I have to ask myself, is everybody sleeping?

There is no excuse for us to go to the voting booths unprepared. However, too many of us just don't vote or stay home because the weather didn't cooperate. Apathy is the great accomplice of our opponents. What we cannot do is read the paper for our subscribers. Our staff attends school board and council meetings to educate our readers. However, if you feel passionate about an issue, do the responsible thing: attend a meeting. Listen; ask questions, and let your voices be heard.

issue. As for the maples on Fisher Road, we had a forester examine the logs and stumps to determine the health of the felled trees. According to the forester, there was some decay in one tree, but overall the trees were in "good condition." There was no danger of them falling.

While we are supporters of our community and schools, we do not readily accept every decision the school board and administration make. A little common sense is required.

Eroding aesthetics

To the Editor:

The only fault I found with the July 1 Grosse Pointe News editorial, "Schools' Big Yellow Taxi," regarding the Fisher Road maple tree removal, is that it was not strong enough.

The aesthetics of this community continue to erode. Well-intended groups are making decisions which they are not qualified to make.

We have a shopping district with meager choices, citizens driving miles away to buy better produce and organic food, and here comes a group apparently unaware of the benefits of mature maple trees buffering sound as well as enhancing much-needed beauty to an intensely used piece of land. Are we to look at every city tree and consider it another parking space opportunity?

When we voted in favor of school millage we assumed it was going toward education. $113,851 divided by 25 parking spaces equals $4,554 per space. There is not a community of distinction that operates without an ongoing, well-developed city plan including consistent beautification.

How many of us are living in the past reputation of Grosse Pointe Farms as being a beautiful residential community? That reputation is eroding before our eyes — a tree here, an ugly fence there, followed by each rezoning variance.

Bond issue division

To the Editor:

I was greatly disappointed by the inaccurate and divisive comments of Harper Woods Schools Superintendent Dan Danosky printed in the June 24 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, "District takes next step toward new bond issue."

The Facilities Action Committee (FAC) was composed of many supporters and opponents of the previous bond issues. Regardless of past positions, FAC members set aside their differences and together made an educated recommendation to the Harper Woods Board of Education by a vote of 18-1-1.

Arriving at that recommendation was not easy, as many of the issues were heavily debated. But come to a recommendation we did, which bears witness to the ability of this microcosm of voters to sit down and reach a unified solution.

For Mr. Danosky to characterize the recommendation as one wherein the "no" voters on the committee as having "come around and given their support" to the previous bond issues, and having "turned 180 degrees" is wholly inaccurate.

The recommendation, which includes building a new high school and remodeling the two elementary schools, in no way supports the previous bond issues that called for (among other things) the elimination of a school facility east of I-94.

The recommendation is actually repugnant to the previous bond, and shows a realization by both camps that the stated principles used to buttress support for the previous bond were without merit. The FAC members who opposed the building of three new schools can no more be said to have "turned 180 degrees" than those who supported such a measure.

Both sides had to move 90 degrees to get to this recommendation. Now it's time to pass this proposed bond, and the comments of Mr. Danosky, which inaccurately imply that one side or the other "won out" only divide us further.

Ironically, the fact that Mr. Danosky seems to embrace the recommendation shows he has moved 90 degrees on the issue himself. Too bad he doesn't realize it.

Tree logic

To the Editor:

While you may have a few points about "paving paradise," you seem to have a rather slanted view. If you talk to Woody's Tree Service (they trimmed the trees), they may be able to tell you that several of those old trees were quite unhealthy and in danger of splitting. Was there a sensational story written when the GP News cut an old tree down in front of their former building?

As far as the trees being a sound barrier for the football field, with the lack of healthy branches on them, they were not very effective. Is that one more argument you will use to argue about the light issue? Heaven forbid our kids have a game to go to in the evening! Why, all that noise they make until 9:30 at night. My, my, maybe it would be better if they were in a basement somewhere, doing something else — anything quietly.

Has anyone at the news noticed the lack of parking at G.P. South? The new layout of the J lot will enable quite a few more students to park cars off of the street. Take a drive through the area around the school and you might notice that residents aren't inviting kids to park on their street.

Perhaps employees at the News would be more helpful if they came up with more constructive ideas and less criticism of every issue at our schools. A little common sense goes a long way.

City joins fight against ash borer

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Two trees dating to the founding of the City of Grosse Pointe have been injected with a powerful chemical to K-O emerald ash borers.

"It knocks the spot out of anything in the tree," said Frank Schulte, City public works supervisor.

The prized ash trees are among the tallest specimens at Neff Park. Schulte estimates the pair sprouted about when the City organized as a village in 1893. Both have trunks more than 50 inches in diameter.

"I was really concerned about saving those two trees because of their size and age," Schulte said.

Last year Schulte spotted borer activity in the trees' upper branches.

"They were under attack," he said.

Limbs were leafless and dying. Pruning revealed borers had eaten into vascular tissue, disrupting the tree's distribution of water and nutrients.

Schulte opted for treatment with Bidrin injections.

"It's a highly toxic chemical, highly toxic," said Brian Colter, Park city forester who three years ago first identified emerald ash borer in the eastern suburbs.

"It is one of the few chemicals used in ornamental horticulture that is a restricted-use pesticide, the highest level of toxicity," said Carl Dollhoff, retired state agriculture regional supervisor for Southeast Michigan.

Injections at Neff Park concluded before the lake-side facility opened Memorial Day weekend for full-throttle summer activity.

"Bidrin was developed quite a few years ago," said Dollhoff. "It was widely used for elm bark beetle control. It ran into disfavor because you have to have somebody present the entire time it is being taken up in the tree. It is a highly damaging material to the human body."

Bidrin, produced by a division of Shell Oil, is fast-acting but potent for only seven to 21 days, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Round two in the fight to save the City's ash trees will involve injections of imidacloprid, a less powerful chemical for keeping bugs down for the count.

Imidacloprid, the active ingredient in numerous insecticides, requires only annual injections. Studies at Michigan State University found the chemical kills emerald ash borers, helps rid bugs from infested trees and protects healthy trees from attack.

City officials last week awarded Arbor Pro an $18,000 contract to inject imidacloprid into ash trees in high-visibility areas, such as along Mack Avenue, the Village shopping district and Neff Park.

Injections will be limited to white ash, which seem less susceptible to emerald ash borer than green ash.

Of the City's 540 municipally-owned ash trees, Schulte estimated 240 are autumn purple ash, a type of white ash.

"They're a beautiful tree because of their growth habit and fall color — purple, gold, reddish," Schulte said.

Invasion

Experts think emerald ash borers journeyed to Michigan about seven years ago among packing material cradling manufacturing parts imported from Southeast Asia.

Three years ago Dollhoff captured half-inch, metallic green insects crawling on ash trees in his yard in Livonia. His forwarded his samples to various laboratories for identification. Eventually, scientists in a former Soviet block country identified the first emerald ash borers found outside Asia.

The flying insects have killed hundreds of thousands of ash trees since establishing a foothold in North America.

Three years ago Colter discovered the bug in Grosse Pointe Park. That same year it entered the City, according to a study of dead ash trees Schulte has cut down over the last two years.

Last year infestation was confirmed throughout all five Grosse Pointes.

The City's injection strategy means all five Grosse Pointes have swung into action against borer infestation.

• In the Park, Colter is treating only a few specimen trees at the two lake-side parks, sacrificing the balance to what he considers inevitable decline. He's putting his limited budget toward replacing ash with a wide variety of hardy landscape trees, including elms that resist Dutch elm disease.

• Farms officials have been injecting 536 municipally-owned ash trees with imidacloprid for three years. So far, only a handful of treated trees have been lost to borer activity.

• In the Shores, 334 village-owned trees are being injected by specially trained employees of the public works department. Efforts are being overseen by Brett Marshall, a resident and owner of a tree company who is volunteering his time.

• In Grosse Pointe Woods, staff members are limiting injections to 106 ash trees along Mack Avenue, which account for about 10 percent of the city's ash inventory.

Budget busters

Expansion of emerald ash borer throughout the Pointes mirrors the insect's overall trek outward from Wayne County.

The trend is daunting for millions of ash trees nationwide and the agricultural specialists who are trying to save them.

Injections of select ash trees in the City will continue year-by-year until something better comes up.

Schulte said it would cost $225 to remove every city-owned ash tree. Replanting adds another $250 per tree, bringing the potential overall cost to $256,000. His department's annual tree budget is $120,000.

"Last year I cut down 12 ash trees diseased by emerald ash borer," Schulte said. "This year I'm almost there already."

Emerald ash borers have no known natural enemy in North America able to significantly control their population.

As a result, scientists two years ago determined their numbers are increasing 10-fold each year.

"They overwhelm trees," Schulte said. "On St. Clair, there's an eight-inch ash tree dead in a back yard that looks like a piece of Swiss cheese. There's bore holes every few inches. It's out of control."

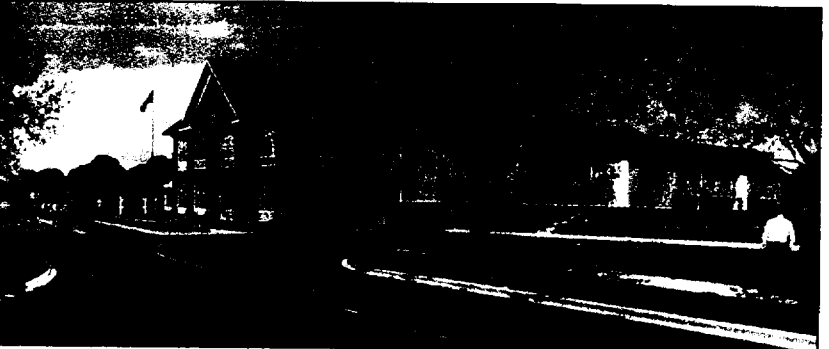

Man-made treatments appear to be the only way young ash trees will survive to reach the 50-inch girth of the twin, 100-year-old specimens at Neff Park.

By acting decisively, scientific evidence shows that eastside communities still have time to make a difference.

Artist's renderings show what Sunrise Development's second planned senior assisted living center in Grosse Pointe Woods will look like from Mack, above, and Vernier, below. The proposed project, dubbed Sunrise of Grosse Pointe Woods II, will cater to residents with memory impairments who do not have intensive medical needs. Building plans were approved by the Woods Planning Commission on Thursday, July 1, pending approval of a special use variance by the city council on Monday, July 12.

Sunrise unveils second senior development

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend to the city council that Sunrise Development be allowed to construct a second senior assisted living complex in the city.

The Planning Commission met in an early morning special meeting held on Thursday, July 1, in order for Sunrise to meet the deadline for an option to purchase the property that expired on Monday, July 5.

The Planning Commission's approval is pending a special use variance that would have to be granted by the city council. The council is expected to vote on the request at its Monday, July 12, meeting.

The 38-unit facility is proposed to be built at 1850 Vernier, the current site of the Pointe Masonic Temple. It will specialize in the care and housing of residents with memory impairments, such as Alzheimer's Disease, who do not have intensive medical needs.

The new development, dubbed Sunrise of Grosse Pointe Woods II, is the smallest of the eight Sunrise facilities in the metro Detroit area.

Laura Hester, Sunrise development officer, said that architects struggled with the plan in order to maximize the number of bed spaces and other conditions set forth by zoning requirements and Planning Commission requests.

Still, Hester maintained the effort was worth it.

"There's very little offered in the Grosse Pointes, and there's a significant senior and care giver population," Hester said.

Another Sunrise development, under construction on Mack and Brys, is expected to open by the first of 2005.

Hester did not say how many of the 53 units have been reserved at the Mack and Brys location, but did say, "Pre-sales are going very well. There's been tremendous interest."

Corrections will be printed as necessary. If there is an error or fact in any story, call the newsroom at (313) 882-0294.

In the July 1 Grosse Pointe News, it was printed that Los Gatos would play that evening in the Village concert series. Los Gatos played the previous Thursday, and there was no concert on July 1.

In the War Memorial concert series preview last week, the dates for the Alexander Zonjic & Friends concert and the Mark Randisi concert dates were incorrectly published. The Alexander Zonjic & Friends concert will be held on Wednesday, July 28, and the Mark Randisi concert will be held on Wednesday, August 4.

G.P. Park woman cooks up a fresh business plan

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Food has definitely been a recurring theme in Michele DeLand's life.

DeLand, 49, is the chef of My Chef, a personal chef service, which she started as a side business about 1 1/2 years ago.

"I've cooked all my life," DeLand said. "My mom worked when I was a kid, so I'd come home from school and get dinner ready. And I've always loved entertaining; I'm always throwing dinner parties."

The concept of the personal chef business has been growing on the east and west coasts for the past 10 years. Many personal chefs, like DeLand, do not work for one family, but several families on a frequency that is tailored to their needs.

"I target busy people," DeLand said. "This is a great service for someone who goes out to eat two to three times a week or is on a special diet. Grabbing food on the go is not the healthiest way to eat. My meals are pretty comparable to what you spend on going out to eat, and you know exactly what's going into your food."

Not only does DeLand pay particular attention to using the freshest provisions, but she also keeps a file on every one of her client's likes, dislikes and special needs.

DeLand's part-time gig became a full-time gig when she fell victim to corporate downsizing last October. She thought of what most people would consider bad news to be an opportunity.

"One door closes, and another one opens," DeLand said.

DeLand is a lifelong Grosse Pointe resident. She grew up in Grosse Pointe Woods and graduated in the Class of 1972 at Grosse Pointe North High School. Today, she lives in Grosse Pointe Park in an upper executive flat above her mother, Nina DeLand. Her sister, Barbara Kerwin, lives only a few streets away.

But living in the Grosse Pointes means more than residing in the Grosse Pointes. DeLand's cooking classes have been popular offerings through Grosse Pointe Community Education and Pointe Pedlar.

"At Community Education, I've taught an international foods class, teaching people how to cook Indian, Thai and Mexican foods," DeLand said. "In the fall, I'm teaching a cookie class, teaching people to make all kinds of different cookies. I'm doing a Thanksgiving class where I'll have a prepared turkey, and we'll be preparing different side dishes."

"At Pointe Pedlar I've taught a class on how to prepare chicken. Look at how many people eat chicken and how many different ways there are to prepare it."

But by no means is DeLand a homebody.

"I love to travel to warm places, and I like to go to places where I'm going to have wonderful culinary experiences," DeLand said. "I always buy cookbooks wherever I go."

"My most recent favorite destination was Tahiti, where I went 1 1/2 years ago. I was compelled to go there by Tahitian vanilla. I brought back tons of beans. Guam was interesting. They have all kinds of unusual fruits and vegetables that we don't have here - odd looking things and things that are very starchy. I love the Caribbean and the Virgin Islands. I love Puerto Rican and Hispanic food. I love Jamaican jerk spices. I love to go, of course, to New York. It's the Mecca for restaurants."

POINTER OF INTEREST

After being the subject of corporate downsizing, Grosse Pointe Park resident Michele DeLand decided to expand her side business as a full-time venture. "In life, you have to do what feels right. That's why I'm pursuing my personal chef business."

"I love to travel, but I always end up here."

For most of her adult life, DeLand has worked in public relations and marketing, with the bulk of that time spent at the Kmart Corp. handling celebrity management, working very closely with Jaclyn Smith, Martha Stewart, and sports celebrities.

"She (Stewart) is a phenomenal businesswoman and an incredible cook," DeLand said. "When we were out at her house in the Hamptons one summer for a photo shoot for some commercials, she sent us to some local fruit stands and grocers, and she made the most phenomenal brunch for us. It was just spectacular. She really was an influence in my cooking. She makes everything look so easy. I have all of her cookbooks."

During her time with Kmart, DeLand was also instrumental in placing Little Caesar's Pizza Kitchens in Kmart stores.

After 16 years with Kmart, DeLand worked as a sole practitioner for a while, handling a variety of clients, including Powerhouse Gym, which indirectly led to a turning point in her career.

"About six years ago, I was in a coffee house on Jefferson in the Park, and there were a couple of guys in front of me," DeLand said. "One of them was wearing a jacket from Powerhouse Gym. So I started talking to him and found out he was a boxer. A little while into our conversation, he said, 'Maybe you can market me as a boxer.'"

DeLand worked not just with the man she met in that Park coffee house, but she took on several other boxers as clients. Not only did she promote them, but she also traveled with them, trained them, and not surprisingly, cooked for them, too.

"Weight, for boxers, is a huge issue," DeLand said. "They're always trying to lose a couple of pounds to stay in their weight class or trying to bulk up to get into the next weight class."

After a few years on the boxing circuit, DeLand went on to work for General Media, and then lastly as director of marketing for, of all places, Tubby's Grilled Sandwiches.

As for her mid-life career change?

"In life, you have to do what feels right," DeLand said. "That's why I'm pursuing my personal chef business."

Shores has backup funding plan

Grosse Pointe Shores officials are laying the groundwork to acquire funds for emergency projects, such as fixing broken water lines or making major street repairs.

In one of his last tasks before retiring this month, Ralph Houghton, city attorney, began drafting an ordinance to pay for such tasks through special assessments.

"The purpose of this ordinance (No. 234) is to allow the council, through the authority set forth in the ordinance and our charter, to adopt, when appropriate, special assessment districts wherein you assess properties that specifically benefit in proportion to the benefit they receive," Houghton said.

"If we needed to do major sewer or road work, and we did not have the funds, we could do it through a special assessment zone," said Mike

Kenyon, village manager.

Kenyon said the village isn't planning any special assessment projects. He characterized the action as creating a backup funding plan.

Houghton said the Shores' charter provides authority for special assessments.

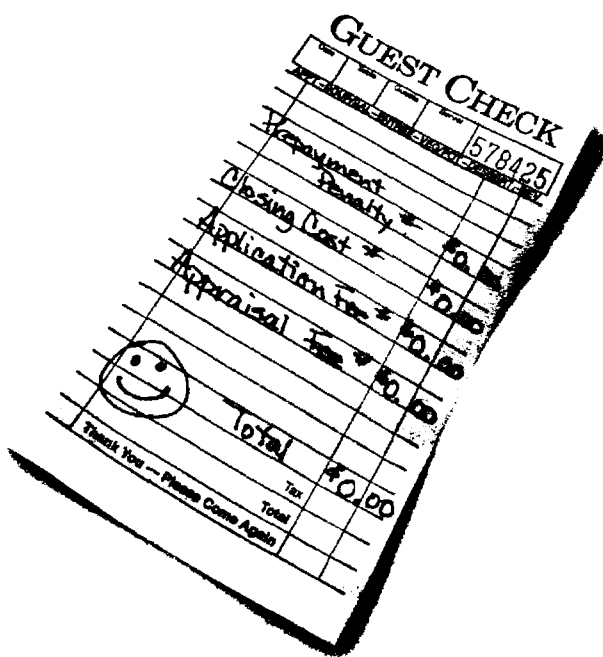

"But statutory law of Michigan allows us broader authority than we have thus far in the charter," Houghton said.

"It's an ordinance we don't have on the books," Kenyon said.

"We have put together a draft that confirms our existing charter but also supplements it, indicating the purpose of the ordinance is to allow us to broaden the scope of the term 'public improvement' to encompass that which is allowed under statutory law," Houghton said.

Pointer girl heals from heart transplant and gives talk

By Carrie Cunningham
Staff Writer

She met and handled a potentially tragic problem with composure and bravery — and managed to tell the tale afterwards with words of encouragement.

Sarah McPharlin, 14, an incoming freshman at Grosse Pointe North High School, had a deadly heart virus in which she underwent various medical regimens: first, medication, then a pacemaker and ultimately and successfully, a heart transplant.

She gave a speech with inspiring pieces of wisdom to graduating eighth-graders at Brownell Middle School about her medical journey from sickness to health. McPharlin's mother, Diane, said the speech was emblematic of how McPharlin courageously handled the ordeal for the past three years.

"She's incredible. She often gave us strength," Diane said of how she bolstered the McPharlin family. "She was always very positive. I have never heard her complain that this happened to her."

McPharlin spent the fall of her sixth-grade year at Children's Hospital after her heart transplant. She received a heart from a woman from Atlanta who died in a car crash. She was initially on some 31 drugs when she first received the heart and is now down to about six drugs. Her family resided at the Ronald McDonald House during her stay at Children's, and every member felt ecstatic when McPharlin finally came home.

"When Sarah came back, I ran down the stairs and gave her a big hug," Emily, McPharlin's six-year-old sister, said.

McPharlin and her mother said the biggest challenges in McPharlin's read-

Excerpt of speech of hope

In Sarah McPharlin's speech at Brownell graduation she made seven points she has learned after her life-altering experience of having a heart transplant. The suggestions beamed with maturity and wisdom. She closed her speech with a moving elegy on how to act as the class moves onto high school:

"Our class has always been known as a strong and considerate class. We, at Brownell, have a unique opportunity to affect both high schools thus affecting the entire community. My hope is that we don't become 'Blue Devils' versus Norsemen but rather old friends experiencing different places. May our good nature continue in high school as we struggle to find out who we are. I hope we will learn to advocate for ourselves, while still remembering to respect others and their feelings in the process. May we continue our random acts of kindness. May we be secure in our group of friends but also secure enough of who we are as people to tell our friends when they are hurting or not respecting someone else. We can start changing the world by just changing our schools. I wish you all the best that life can offer and when the going gets rough, I wish you family, community and friends."

justing to a regular life was regaining confidence and reentering the flow of social life among her friends.

McPharlin was greatly assisted in regaining normalcy with visits to a psychologist who helped increase her self-esteem. Her loving family was instrumental, too.

She is back playing sports and recently scored a goal in a soccer game, an achievement her teammates vociferously applauded.

McPharlin's speech to the Brownell community contained many words of wisdom and revealed a truism psychologist noticed: McPharlin is wise beyond her years.

McPharlin spoke of what is important in life, outlining seven main guidelines to follow. Some of her thoughts included: "You don't always have a choice of what is handed down to you, but you always have a choice of how you react;" "Don't limit your possibilities;" "Even a rose garden has thorns. Are you going to complain or create change?" "Material possessions are nice, but they are not the most important things in life;" "Don't underestimate the value of a smile;" "Get high on life and nature and not on substances;" "Anger is a feeling, not a solution. When anger is acted upon, the world becomes an ugly and hateful place."

McPharlin ended the speech with a litany of hopeful words of encouragement and blessings for her classmates (see above article for ending excerpt).

"I wish you all the best that life can offer," she said. "I wish you family, community and friends."

McPharlin spoke to about 900 people and spoke without anxiety, her mother said.

Undergoing a sad but eventually triumphant journey, McPharlin has dealt with a life and death situation that many people don't encounter in their entire lives. With the heart donation and then her own perseverance coupled with the love of her family, McPharlin has been given a chance for the future — and the possibility of experiencing our wonderful world.

Nancy Kline will retire from Defer Elementary this year. She taught her fifth grade students about standard subjects as well as the world of theater.

Fifth-grade teacher Kline retires from Defer Elementary

By Carrie Cunningham
Staff Writer

To Nancy Kline, Defer Elementary School is like a family, and the dedication she shows in educating her students in academic and extracurricular activities reveals her deep affection for the school community.

Kline has been a teacher at Defer since 1975 when then-principal Dr. Alfreda Frost hired her. She is retiring this year after over 30 years of service in education.

Kline came to education when instructors at the University of Minnesota prodded her into getting a degree in elementary education.

"I went to the university, and they said, 'What do you like?' I said, 'I always liked going to school,' and they said, 'You'll be a teacher.' As it happened for me, it was a happy decision. I liked it," she said.

Before she went to Defer, Kline taught in Minnesota and took time off when she was raising her kids, Lisa, John, Jeffrey and Gretchen. In Michigan, she received a master's in education from Wayne State University. Her husband, Ken, is head of electrical engineering at Wayne.

At Defer, Kline has a particular interest in teaching writing and mathematics to her fifth-grade students. Her motto in instruction is, "If the teacher isn't having fun, the kids aren't having fun."

"I teach them with enthusiasm," Kline said. "If I'm having fun, so are they. Life is never boring."

In terms of academics and extracurricular activities, Kline introduces her students to novel ways of learning and experiencing life. She takes her students to Young Authors conferences, where each student takes a book of his or her work and shares it with students from other schools.

She has participated in exchange trips with students from France. In February 1987, 30 French students visited Defer, and the school community showed them the best of what America has to offer.

Later in the year in May, Defer students traveled to France where they went to Versailles, the Louvre and the French countryside.

"Taking children to France was hard work but also a thrilling and valuable experience of learning for both students, teachers and parents," she said.

Kline has a strong affinity for the theater, and she works very hard at introducing students to the thespian world. She thinks it offers students who might have trouble in some academic area a chance to blossom.

The Write Your Own Opera program motivated students to write the words and music for their own musical.

The students, under the guidance of Kline, also present a class play each year.

"These plays and shows were beneficial to my students. Each child could see that if everyone contributes in his or her own little way, it can make a very impressive whole," Kline said. "In addition, it brings me satisfaction to see them succeed."

One area where Kline would like to see a change at Defer is in foreign language: she hopes that different languages can be introduced to students at the elementary level even though money to pay for it may be hard to come by.

"I still hope someday that actually comes about," she said.

Kline and her husband will move to Charlevoix during her retirement where she may perform some substitute teaching as well as possibly immerse herself in youth theater.

Kline will miss her students and fellow teachers at Defer, a community she says is full of strong relationships.

With her passion for life, Kline will no doubt have as important an impact on the people she encounters during retirement as she did at Defer.

Denim for charity

The faculty at Grosse Pointe North High School has been "Desperate for Denim" on paydays. Beginning with the Lee Jeans Denim Day for breast cancer awareness organized at North by Michelle Stackpoole, North's faculty has been paying $5 each on payday Fridays for the opportunity to wear jeans.

Proceeds from each successive Desperate for Denim day have helped fund the North Directed Living Program's annual trip to Camp Fowler. Also, the money has been submitted to various charities such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the American Heart Association, Special Kids Day, the Heinz Prochter Maudie Depressive Fund and the Multiple Sclerosis Society. So far, North teachers have collected approximately $1,400 for these charities.

A flutist plays at North ceremony

Graduating Grosse Pointe North High School Senior Bridget Brosnan played a smooth, uplifting prelude during the Class of 2004's commencement exercises on Wednesday, June 9. She played a piece by John Rutter in a collection of pieces called "Suite Antique."

A flute player since fourth grade, Brosnan shares the gift of playing music with her family. Her her father, Martin, is a professional trombone player, and her brother, also named Martin, plays the cello.

Lynn said Brosnan wasn't nervous before playing, and the performance of the song sounded good.

Brosnan will attend Wayne State University next year where she will major in chemical engineering. She wants to continue playing the flute.

ULS valedictorian sparkles with accomplishment

By Carrie Cunningham
Staff Writer

Graduating University Liggett School senior Leanne Lawwell is a remarkable young woman with a very full life.

She earned valedictorian honors for the Class of 2004 at ULS and beams with gratitude about her high school journey. Her favorite classes were the sciences. She took advanced placement physics and biology this year. She also took AP classes in Calculus, Spanish and art history and received just over a 4.0 grade point average overall.

"She is a very conscientious student. She's one of those kinds of people who will read because it's interesting," said Lawwell's biology teacher Shernaz Minwalla. "She's very patient. That makes her very easy to teach."

Lawwell gave a speech at the ULS graduation in which she talked about going beyond achieving success to impact and help other people. She spoke of her middle school principal who in her eyes is an apotheosis of this theme: he took the time to tell her about the possibility of attending ULS, an experience which ended up changing Lawwell's life.

"I was considering a few other schools, and I have friends who go to them. I see the education they've got versus the education I've got, and I feel as if I've really gotten a lot more. I've been challenged," she said.

Lawwell also talked about helping people in terms of service, an area in which she has contributed a lot. She spoke of her work at Bon Secours hospital where she helps admitting people and also reads to patients. Lawwell also assists kids at a children's home in Detroit and teaches Sunday school at her church in St. Clair Shores, St. Germaine.

"I love working with children," she said.

Lawwell has a great affection for theater, an affinity she developed at ULS. She started out working on props and costumes and then moved on to serve as assistant director and stage manager. One of her favorite plays is "Proof" which ULS will perform next year. She worked on the school's two productions this year, "A Company of Wayward Saints" and "Where's Charley."

"I really like the directing and the telling of a story. Whenever you pick a show, you see so many different things and all the different aspects of character," she said.

In the past, Lawwell ran track and played volleyball but committed solely to theater in her senior year.

She will attend Kalamazoo College next year, where she hopes to be a premedical major with the expectation of becoming a pediatrician. She wants to continue her exploration of theater at Kalamazoo, and she might run intramural track.

The college offers a chance for study abroad, which is appealing to Lawwell; she would love to travel to Ecuador and the nearby Galapagos Islands.

Someone who savors her friendships made at ULS, Lawwell hopes to forge new relationships at Kalamazoo, a place she felt had a close-knit aura.

"I kind of felt at home. I spent the night and went to classes. I got to know students, and they were all really nice," she said.

Lawwell lives in St. Clair Shores and her parents, father, Homer, and mother, Lora, work for General Motors and H&R Block respectively. She has a younger brother Joel, 16.

Looking back on her high school years, Lawwell relishes everything about the experience.

"I had a good education, but at the same time, I got to know a lot of really good people," she said.

Students named winners of Adams award

By Carrie Cunningham
Staff Writer

Every year, teachers from Parcels Middle School choose from the eight-grade class one or two students to be the recipients of the Fred W. Adams Award. The qualities needed to earn the award include leadership in school and community, concern for others, a Renaissance spirit and a commitment to educational pursuits. The award has been given for 13 years.

This year the nominees were Christina Costakis, Kyle Detloff, Katharine D'Hondt, Peter Dong, Dana Grimm, Andrea Koueiter, Brian Like, Emalee Manns, Nikila Ravi, Elizabeth Rewalt, Jacob Rochte and Chelsea Smialek.

Two students won the award for their exemplary achievements and character. They are Katharine D'Hondt and Elizabeth Rewalt.

Fred W. Adams, the man for whom the award is named, was a long time member of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. He made education and community service a lifelong commitment.

"Most of the time he devoted his thoughts to maintaining quality education," said Adams' wife Mary Grace, who now oversees the giving of the award since Adams passed away in 1990.

Adams and Mary Grace together embraced Grosse Pointe schools. They would show up early in the morning to support a reading conference at an elementary school; they were often seen greeting volunteers, parents and students at different school events spanning the academic and extracurricular spectrum.

The award is meant to celebrate the qualities of Adams, including his collaborative spirit, and students who win it embody the fine qualities he personified.

"He was such a wonderful person," Mary Grace said.

Giving out the award each year, Mary Grace keeps in contact with Adams award winners throughout their high school years at Grosse Pointe North High School. She asks them questions about their development such as what each year has meant to them, what they plan to work on and what are they looking forward to in the future.

There is a total of 28 Adams award winners.

Adams gave of himself throughout his life, and by designating young students as winners of the Fred W. Adams Award, they have a model of how to be full of life and to assist their community.

Markets in slow gear; individuals not on board

U.S. preempts Iraq quasi-turnover, Greenspan bumps interest rates, and Detroiters headed north for four-day extended holiday, another week of declining Dow and Nasdaq — those headlines best describe last week's news. The accompanying "At-A-Glance" box tells the rest of the story.

Diversification

LTS last wrote about Kalamazoo-based Stryker (SYK, about 54.77 last Friday) on Sept. 11, 2003, when the stock traded around 74.83. Last month, SYK split 2-for-1, its sixth split since going public in 1986.

LTS recently heard from a post-IPO buyer of SYK, who purchased 200 shares for $5,132 in the fall of 1986. This happy local investor now holds 4,800 shares worth over $260,000, but now has a severe problem due to unbalanced diversification.

LTS is often asked: "How many stocks should an individual own? Ten, 25 or 50 stocks?" The table below illustrates the percent of the risk eliminated by various numbers of stocks held. The math behind this table

Diversification vs. risk

No. of stocks in portfolio	% of risk eliminated
2 stocks	46%
4 stocks	72%
8 stocks	81%
16 stocks	93%
32 stocks	96%
64 stocks	98%

assumes approximate equal market values of each stock at inception.

When creating a new portfolio — perhaps from an inheritance — the first decision would be, percentage wise, how much would be invested in equities? How much in fixed income securities? How much in money market cash reserve funds?

Since most investors consider equities more risky than investment-grade bonds, it is important to diversify the equity allocation in an agreed number of sectors, often called industries, REITs or global securities.

Some analysts prefer "growth stocks," while others are members of the "value stocks" school.

At some point, a determination should be made, considering the aggregate size of the investments, whether to look at mutual funds, segregated portfolios managed by professionals on a fee basis, or a do-it-yourself selection of individual stocks.

Diversification should also consider all other assets under common ownership, including tax-deferred IRAs and 401(k) accounts and profit sharing and pension funds.

You may not want to own more than one mutual fund under the same management family, since research shows that these co-managed accounts often buy the same stocks and may not give you the diversification hoped for, unless you cross-check each fund's detailed portfolio holdings.

Even though past results should not be relied upon for future performance, many financial consultants use an estimated 8 to 10 percent annual total return (net income plus market value increases or decreases) for forecasting purposes. Results of the past five to 10 years, in most mutual funds, have underperformed that level on a consistent basis.

Year-end tax time is a good time for in-depth portfolio reviews. Bless the winners, sell the losers, and weed out some or all of the "do-nothing dogs."

With the federal long-term capital gains tax rate at a maximum 10 percent, there has never been a cheaper time to take some profits (Who knows, if Kerry wins in November, the current 10 percent tax rate may disappear in 2005.)

Market caps?

Everybody's talking about market capitalization. What is it?

Many larger mutual fund managers say they need instant liquidity; that's why they won't purchase anything but large Caps. So how big is a large cap, and how tiny is a small cap?

The market capitalization (MC) of a stock is its closing market price times the number of its shares outstanding. Different analysts have slightly different parameters:

- micro cap = less than $100 million MC;
- small Cap = $100 million to $500 million MC;
- mid-cap = $500 million to $5 billion MC; and
- large cap = over $5 billion MC.

Very large mutual funds (assets over $25 billion), by necessity, have very large dollar holdings of individual stocks (many millions of shares each), which inherently are sometimes very difficult to buy and to sell. The accompanying table,

All the way back to Mackinac and back

Remember the good old days when it was the Mackinac Sailboat Race?

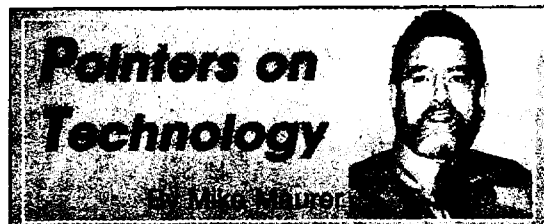

It's now called the Bacardi Bayview Mackinac Race, a 254-mile sailing contest from Port Huron to Mackinac Island. This year it starts in just over a week, Saturday, July 17.

The good news is you no longer have to rely on spoty radio and television reports to keep track of your favorite boat, or what some call a hole-in-the-water in which to throw money.

(See Canadian-born Stan Rogers album called "White Squall." Look for the song called "Raise the Blue Dolphin." This album, and some of his others, have more original maritime songs of the Great Lakes.)

Now, what were we talking about? Oh, yeah.

Interactive Creations (www.intercreate.com), a Grosse Pointe Woods development and marketing consultant firm, will once again provide real-time online race entry, updates and results on the race Web site available at www.byc.com/mack04.

The system has been under development for more than eight years and is already online for this year's event.

As the skippers register their yachts online, their entry will immediately appear in the official regatta Web site. The online registration system also provides them the opportunity to submit their crew list information.

Visitors to the site will be able to view complete information on every boat participating in the race. The official scratch sheets are now available with details of each class, along with all the starting times scheduled for this year's event.

I noted with interest that there are 269 boats already registered for the race. Heck, they should start the race in Lake St. Clair. That many boats would certainly raise the water level to a more functional level.

Once the race starts, the site will provide family, friends and visitors with regular updates on the progress of the race. They can subscribe to have these updates sent directly to them via e-mail.

As the boats begin to cross the finish line, their finish times will be immediately entered. Corrected times will then be calculated, and every participant's results with current standings will be displayed as each one finishes. As each boat finishes and its race performance is calculated, its standing may constantly change until the last boat in its class has finished.

Now it's time for my favorite boat name. I found it while searching the lists of entrants.

The winner is ... Contumacious (meaning obstinately disobedient or rebellious or subordinate). Its owners must have teenagers. The only problem I see is the assumption that the rest of the boats have dictionaries on board, and not just as anchors.

Rehab center teams with Lochmoor Club

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Going to a physical therapy appointment can be not just as good as going to a private club; the appointment is at a private club.

Last Monday, the Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan (RIM) opened its 15th satellite rehabilitation center at the Lochmoor Club.

"We look geographically where we need to be," said Patti Jobbitt, RIM director of outpatient services. "The Grosse Pointes have always been an area we've needed to be in."

"We have been looking to add more health and fitness services to our members," said Kurt Pitcher, Lochmoor Club general manager.

"When a member of our club, who sits on the board of the Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan, suggested this, we saw a great opportunity to provide a service that up until now we had not been able to provide. I've worked with this concept when I was at a few clubs in Aspen, Colo., and it was really popular."

RIM will provide a physical therapist and an athletic trainer on a part-time basis at the club to provide basic orthopedic and recreational therapy to both member and non-member patients. Members will need a physician's referral in order to receive insurance coverage for services.

In addition to providing physical therapy services, RIM staffers will provide stretching clinics and dry land workouts for the swim team, an athletic trainer at all of the swim meets, an aquatics class for adults, injury prevention golf and tennis clinics, and a series of women's health issues clinics in the fall.

About 1/3 of the visitors to the clinic are expected to be club members.

"We hope this will be a very strong relationship," Pitcher said. "I've been very impressed with their level of professionalism."

This is not the first time RIM has joined with a private club to provide outpatient services. Other RIM satellite clinics are located at the Franklin Fitness & Racquet Club and the Detroit Athletic Club.

District addresses loitering at Beacon

By Jennie Miller
Staff Writer

A swell of concern has prompted Harper Woods School District officials to examine its rules and regulations at the playground of Beacon Elementary School.

Several weeks ago, worried parents came before the city council and school board to demand action after an incident between youths at the playground brought up questions of safety.

The city was quick to respond and address residents' concerns. Harper Woods police have increased visibility in that area, city manager Jim Leidlein said, and all has been quiet since the last reported incident. The police log records hourly patrols, and the cell phone number of Lt. James Burke has been handed out to concerned parents.

But the property is the responsibility of the school district, not the city.

"I don't know what's going to be done," said Superintendent Dan Danosky, who planned to speak with the city's attorney to find out how enforceable posted signs are. "Signs have been up there for 20 years that say 'No Loitering.'"

But there is nothing police can do if youths are simply hanging out in the park, unless a city ordinance is passed or illegal activities are going on.

"We could close (the park), but I can't imagine anybody wants it closed," he said.

He also explored the possibility of hiring a private security company, but added that the district is already facing a shortfall in funds in its operating budget. And like the police, the security officers would not be able to enforce anything at the playground unless a law was broken.

Danosky has been in contact with Leidlein regarding the situation. The school board hopes to work together with the city to address the problem.

While he admits the issue has long been discussed, ("Kids have been doing this for years") he expressed concern over new problems the city might face. Area children have been affected by the parental escort policy recently introduced at Eastland Center, leaving kids with nowhere to go.

"This Eastland curfew policy will drive kids away from the mall, and they're going to hang out somewhere," Danosky said. "We do need to get more vigilant about it."

But the city wants to make it clear that children are safe in this community.

"There is no crime wave in Harper Woods or roving gangs of youth," Mayor Ken Poynter said. "This is a safe place to live."

While children petted the animals or made a craft, parents were able to browse through the farmhouse's annual attic sale.

The man, 49, was caught by police officers at his residence in the 18900 block of Elkhart after the vehicle was recovered in the 19200

She witnessed one of the males enter the Escalade before the van fled west on Old Eight Mile to Kelly. Police observed that the Escalade's front and rear passenger side windows had been broken out and a TV/DVD player that had been in the car was damaged. There was no sign of the Astro van or the three teens.

Osius is Shores 'best kept secret'

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Osius Park, set back from Lakeshore and nestled between the landmark Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and water-side estates upstream, is easy to take for granted.

"It's one of the best kept secrets in Grosse Pointe Shores," said Jim Cooke, Shores director of parks and recreation.

The Shores lakeside park was named after the village's first president of more than 90 years ago, George Osius.

At only 8.3 acres, Osius Park packs a lot of activity.

"We have a great swim program and coaching," Cooke said. "Our Sharks swim team has a lot of fun."

After every meet, home or away, the team has a picnic.

"Parents supply food and entertainment for the kids," Cooke said.

Bathers in the freshly-painted swimming pool are overseen by a well-trained team of lifeguards.

"We have great lifeguards. I'll brag about them," Cooke said. "They've won the Top Guard competition in the Pointes three years in a row. We've also sent them out to other competitions, and they've won those. It just goes to show you that not only are they great guards, but they get great training."

Family activities include volleyball, basketball and tennis camps.

"We show movies at the park like old-time drive-ins," Cooke said. "On top of that, we have boating and fishing off the sea wall."

The park's lakeside walkway has been planted with Fresh flowers brighten a cloudy day along the lakeside walking path at Osius Park in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The walkway is punctuated by three lookouts that extend a few feet into the water for views toward the Ford Estate up Lakeshore. "It's a spectacular view," Cooke said.

This year for the first time, boaters moored in the marina will be able to stay overnight. Park rangers will man the gate house and provide security.

Pool hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day.

Special upcoming events this year are:

- July 11, splash party.
- July 14-15, swim team camp out and pancake break-

Mazda adds convenience to RX-8 style

By Jenny Kling

Mark Anderson, a Sun Microsystems employee living in Brighton, was intrigued by the front-closing rear doors of the 2004 Mazda RX-8. So the almost-six-foot-tall computer guy climbed into the mini back seat and pronounced it good. There was space for legs and even some headroom. Not bad for a redesigned two-seater.

This incarnation of Mazda's rotary engine sports car somehow manages to look sleek and sexy while offering the unquestioned benefits of four doors and a back seat area.

By moving the front seats forward, we even managed to put a couple of molded plastic lawn chairs in the back, plus a large plastic storage box we had thought would fit in the deep trunk.

Well, for serious shopping, best to weigh and measure things before paying for them and trying to determine in the parking lot if you can squeeze them into your RX-8.

On the road, this sports car is a pleasure to drive. Quiet and quick, it is powered by a newly designed twin rotor engine that develops 238 HP with manual transmission or 197 HP with an automatic with "sport shift" capabilities (a kind of shifting without using a clutch).

This engine revs high: 4,000 RPMs in overdrive. And a rotary engine does use more oil. Mazda suggests check the oil level with every second fuel fill-up. The oil lamp was lighting intermittently in the test vehicle after perhaps 150 miles. We're proud: we found both the hood release and the dip stick on first tries. The oil was down just below where it should be.

About the engine: Mazda appears to be the only auto maker to make this design work.

According to Mazda, its Cosmo Sport 110S was the company's first rotary-engine sports car. The Cosmo Sport made its international racing debut in the 1968 84-hour Marathon de la Route endurance competition in Nurburgring, Germany. Mazda then offered the R-100, RX-2, RX-3, RX-4, RX-5 and, most recently, the RX-7.

The RX-8, priced beginning at $25,180, comes in four trim packages: standard, sport, touring and grand touring. With the grand touring, you get special headlights, traction control, moon roof, upgraded audio, leather trimmed upholstery, heated front seats, fog lamps and heated mirrors.

Mazda offers a new double-wishbone front suspension, with lower arms mounted on a rigid sub-frame. The fuel tank is positioned ahead of the rear axle and all seating is within the wheelbase and track of the car. With the engine mounted farther back than in the previous model, there now is a 50/50 vehicle weight distribution, said

Mazda, and handling is tighter.

A word or two about the additional doors — Mazda calls them "free style." These small back doors are hinged in the rear and can be opened only when the front doors are open. The front doors cannot be latched until the rear ones have been shut. The owner of a Honda Element, which has similar door designs, said sometimes it is difficult, in a tight parking space, to open both doors — the front one must be fairly wide open before the rear one can be made practical. But when they are open, there's an unobstructed opening (except for the front seat) through which to pass things, including molded plastic lawn chairs.

Driver visibility is surprisingly good in this low-slung sports car and gives one a better sense of control than any number of larger vehicles.

Getting in and out of a sports car on a multi-stop trip can be tiresome. But once you are in place behind the wheel or as a passenger, this is a great way to travel.

The power moon roof brings in light and fresh air, and the small windows on the rear doors push out slightly for additional oxygen.

The 2004 Mazda RX-8 is a high-performing sports car with rotary piston engine and rear "mini-doors."

New premium sports compact from Saab, the 9-2X, features full-time all-wheel drive and prices that start under $25,000.

Saab unveils new all-wheeler

Saab has unveiled its new 9-2X, a premium sport compact. If you thought Saab already offers a premium sport compact, you are right. But the company's new 9-2X, available in two models beginning in July, is actually less expensive than the Saab 9-3 (starts at $27,100) and looks like a winner.

With standard, full-time all-wheel drive, 9-2X prices start at under $25,000.

Audi of America releases pricing on 2005 A8 models

Audi of America, Inc. announced the price for its expanded A8 line-up for the 2005 model year. Available mid-June, the normal wheelbase A8 4.2 quattro joins the model line alongside the long-wheelbase A8 L. The A8 has a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $66,590. A8 L models have a suggested retail price of $69,900.

Both models use the 4.2-liter V-8 engine producing 335 horsepower and 317 pound-feet of torque. A six-speed Tiptronic automatic transmission and quattro all-wheel drive channel the power to the ground and improve the car's sporty dynamics.

Regardless of wheelbase, all A8s come equipped with a variety of standard equipment and technology. The Audi Space Frame adds strength and reduces weight.

Rear view of 2004 Mazda RX-8 shows contemporary styling of this very useful "four-door" sportster.

An adaptive air suspension allows for changes in ride height and driving dynamics.

Drivers can choose from four different suspension settings, ranging from sporty to standard, to best match their driving style and road conditions.

Area 'Natives' savor successful first year

By Jennie Miller
Staff Writer

Just one year has passed since a hot summer afternoon in a Ferndale basement, when six musicians searching for success found a new style among friends. Now they're busy relishing in the glory of a colossal first year.

Natives of the New Dawn has been making waves over the past year, commanding respect for its original music. Just one week after forming the group, they had written and recorded three songs and were off to play their first show. A year later, they've certainly earned some bragging rights.

Last month, the Natives left the New York International Film and Music Festival with the "Top Pop Band" award.

On Friday, July 16, the band will perform at the Roostertail's annual Hottiefest along with the Grosse Pointe-rooted rock band, Bump.

They will then celebrate the release of their first full-length album, The Sunshine Chronicles, with a special shindig at The Village Idiot on Friday, July 23. The following day, the Natives will embark on Van's Warped Tour, performing in 13 cities from California to Massachusetts.

Band members Adam Bramlage, Joe Fikany, Gary Hoenicke, Tony Nouhan, Ryan Coomer and Vince Mann have difficulty simplifying a description of their music, for they have brewed a mixture of old sounds to create a catchy new style.

"People might call it hip-hop, but I wouldn't," Nouhan said. "We have an emcee, who is very hip-hop, but when you put Joe's southern rock guitar over it, when you put Adam's basic break beats over that, plus a funky jazz bassist and then whatever you want to call my piano playing, it's something completely different and unique."

Even if forced to compare it to a style that's already out there, Nouhan has difficulty keeping it simple.

"It's a mix between Stevie Wonder, Kid Rock, A Tribe Called Quest and Led Zeppelin," he said. "It's rock but it's hip-hop and funk and jazz, but if you went to the store, it would be under popular music. There are so many different facets. It's cool and unusual."

The band credits the diversity of its members as a source for its uniqueness.

"It's a culmination of a bunch of different interests that really fit together," Mann said. "We're making music fun again."

"We've got six incredibly creative people coming together with unique elements that haven't been infused into a band," Coomer said. "This is something that hasn't been heard before."

The Natives already have a strong support of fans in the metropolitan Detroit area. At a recent fund-raising event held at the Roostertail, more than 200 people came out, donating enough money for the band to acquire a 15-passenger van and trailer to take on its upcoming tour.

But while music-lovers in this area are familiar with the Natives' sound, the band is anxious to spread it around the country. The New York festival and the Warped Tour are just the beginning of an effort to garner more fans.

"During the Warped Tour, there's constantly a sea of people everywhere you go," Nouhan said. "You can't buy that kind of publicity, and you certainly can't pass it up. This is for us to get our name out there and for people to know who we are." (The Warped Tour will stop in Michigan on Sunday, August 15 at the Silverdome.)

But while excited to embark on this new journey, nothing can match the pride the Natives have for their new CD. They spent two weeks in a Harper Woods recording studio with producer Chris Macintosh, laying down tracks of freshly polished original tunes. The record will be released on their independent label Realized Recordings and can be purchased through the band's Web site (www.nativesmusic.com).

Passion for music started early

Members of the Natives found each other on the Internet, after Coomer and Mann posted a Want Ad for musicians. One by one they came together and gathered in Ferndale to see how well they meshed. They knew in an instant that they'd found a perfect match and could create something new for the music world.

"The chemistry we all felt on that first day was instantaneous," Coomer said. "We knew we had something that night, and we've really stuck with it."

Each musician has different tastes and styles, which helps make the band so unique. But one commonality among band members is a strong passion for music, one that was formed early in childhood.

Nouhan, Fikany's cousin, shares this dream for success, only his is through his voice. Nouhan had been singing since his early teens and is dedicated to the craft. He won a state championship his junior year at Grosse Pointe South High School. He attended the University of Cincinnati College Conservatory of Music. He entertained notions of moving to New York to be on Broadway. He sang with the Macombers at Macomb Community College, and was close to joining the U.S. Army Chorus.

But he found his dreams coming true when he started singing and playing the keyboard with the Natives. After meeting the other musicians, Nouhan knew it was something worth pursuing.

Coomer, the group's bassist, lives in Royal Oak. He played the saxophone throughout grade school and later switched to the guitar.

"I make music with whatever I can find," he said. "I've always had a strong affinity toward music. It's the place where I find my freedom. When that good groove hits, and everybody's there ... those are the happiest parts of my life. You've got to keep pursuing that."

He said music is universal and integral to humanity.

"When you go back to the earliest cultures, music was communication," he said. "It was how we told stories. Good music, it frees your soul."

Hoenicke agrees, though he leans toward the hip-hop genre.

"I like hip-hop for the culture, for the stories it tells," said the St. Clair Shores native and 1997 graduate of Lakeview High School. Hoenicke started playing around with turntables six years ago after watching Eminem's former DJ perform at St. Andrew's Hall.

"I thought it was sweet and wanted to get into it," he said. "I picked up a set one day and went into the basement. I didn't come up for like two weeks."

Hoenicke likes being what he calls the band's "sixth element."

"I like being that oddity," he laughed. "I drop samples into it and add a little hip-hop to the songs."

He's thrilled to be a part of something successful and something positive.

"This is absolute feel-good music," he said. "There's no way you cannot be happy or dance or have some sort of positive effect from the words or the instruments."

Bramlage thinks it's the simplicity of the songs that will attract fans.

"It's so easy to listen to and dance and enjoy," he said. "It's just fun music."

Bramlage, a 1997 Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, has been playing the drums since the fourth grade.

He graduated from the University of Utah after studying film and playing in various bands. He came home looking for a new direction, which he found with the Natives.

"I knew I had come home for a reason," he said.

He is pursuing his teaching certificate in addition to playing music. But he, like the other band members, is confident in their future.

"All of our personalities mesh together," he said.

"The energy is there and the timing is right."

"I feel the longevity; I think we can last," Nouhan said. "All the stuff that has happened to us in the last year doesn't happen to bands who have been together for 10 years. There's nowhere for us to go but up and forward."

Natives of the New Dawn is Gary Hoenicke, Ryan Coomer, Adam Bramlage, Vince Mann, Tony Nouhan and Joe Fikany.

"I've been inclined to do this since I was born. My love of music started in the womb," Mann said. "My allowance when I was a kid wasn't money; my mom would take me to Harmony House to buy me some forty-fives. She always had the record player going."

Mann is the emcee of the group. He lives in Ferndale and finds that music has always been a release for him, something each of the band members has in common.

"When I was young, instead of Ritalin, I was given a pen and some paper," he said. "I would outlet my energy, my anxiety, my love and hate through ink."

Fikany would do this through his guitar.

"My dad always had guitars lying around the house; so I thought, 'Why not rock?' I taught myself how to play," he said.

The 1999 Grosse Pointe North High School graduate experimented with bands throughout his youth. But it wasn't until he joined the Natives that he realized he could achieve his dreams.

"This is something I've wanted to do for so long; make it in the music industry and travel," he said. "It's all coming together for us. It is a dream come true in some sense."

Wrong decision is no decision Understanding the drug discount card program

The Medicare-Approved Drug Discount Card program officially launched on June 1, but millions of eligible Medicare beneficiaries may be missing out on significant prescription drug savings.

In order to help ensure that people take advantage of the new Medicare drug discount card program, churches in many cities across the country are holding a Senior Rx Savings Weekend on Saturday and Sunday, July 10-11.

In partnership with Pfizer, participating churches will hold events on Saturday and Sunday at which people with Medicare and their families and friends will have the opportunity to learn more about the Medicare-approved drug discount card program.

The main goal of the weekend will be to let Medicare beneficiaries know that there are Medicare drug discount cards that offer real savings on prescription medicines, and that they need to take the time to find out which card is right for them.

For millions of people with Medicare, not signing up for a card means leaving money on the table.

For example, one of the cards that provides significant savings is the U Share Prescription Drug Discount Card, a Medicare-approved drug discount card sponsored and managed by United HealthGroup.

Through the U Share Card, Pfizer and other pharmaceutical companies will provide even greater savings to Medicare beneficiaries with low income.

For example, for those who qualify, Medicare beneficiaries will pay only a $15 flat fee per prescription for up to a 30-day supply of many Pfizer prescription medicines.

For prescription medicines made by Pfizer and the other participating companies, income can be up to $18,620 for a single person and up to $24,980 for a couple to qualify for the additional savings.

The U Share Card is just one of many discount cards currently available to people with Medicare. Because of the potential discounts and added savings provided by pharmaceutical companies, it is important that all Medicare beneficiaries are aware of the program and enroll in the card that is best for them. Not choosing a card is the wrong choice because Medicare beneficiaries may be missing out on real savings.

Seniors who would like to learn more about the Medicare Drug Discount Card program can call (800) 633-4227 or TTY (877) 486-2048 or visit www.medicare.gov.

For more information on the U Share Card, call (800) 707-3914; TTY (866) 234-4138, seven days a week from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. EST, or visit www.usharerx.com.

Through its legal entity, United HealthCare Insurance Company, United HealthCare Insurance Company (United) provides the U Share Prescription Drug Discount Card program. United contracts with Medco Health Solutions Inc. to provide pharmacy services.

This is not insurance.

Discounts are available only at network pharmacies, including the mail order service. Certain limitations apply.

Income eligibility levels are higher in Alaska and Hawaii.

Young people spend their vacation learning, helping other people

By the Rev. Thomas F. Rice

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

Imagine you are 16 years old. Summer vacation has just started. What do you do with your free time? What do you do to relax and recover from a long school year?

Eighteen youths from our area and five adult advisers flew to Denver, Colo., the week of June 13 through 20 for our 2004 youth mission trip.

For the first five days we stayed at the First Mennonite Church in downtown Denver, hosted by an organization called Discovering Opportunities for Outreach and Reflection (DOOR).

DOOR staff members broke us into five work teams. Each day, each work team would go to a different work site, so that by the end of the week we had experienced many different service opportunities. Each evening we would reflect as a large group upon what we had learned and done that day.

I am so proud of what our high school youths did. They worked in soup kitchens, preparing meals and serving up to 800 homeless, "working poor" and elderly persons in a day, serving each one with a smile.

They worked at a cafe for the homeless, a place during the day to rest, visit, play cards and have shelter. What a wonderful opportunity this was for our youth to visit with homeless persons, hear their stories and begin to gain respect and understanding for people who were no longer just a statistic.

These high school students and adult advisers from the Grosse Pointes worked at a day shelter for homeless women and children. Overnight shelters close at 7 a.m., and so The Gathering Place gives people a place to come to prepare resumes, take GED classes, get a shower, a meal or a nap, find child care for their children or receive counseling.

The young people and adults worked in educational centers next to "The Projects," where children could come for help with computers, writing, reading and art.

A 10-year-old boy had come from Mexico five weeks ago. We helped him with his English and helped all of the children strive to keep learning throughout the summer.

Some of our work teams went to the Food Bank of the Rockies, carrying literally tons of food to waiting trucks for delivery to soup kitchens.

For our last two days we went to the YMCA of the Rockies, where we climbed Snow Mountain, with its five peaks. It is aptly named. On June 19, we climbed through the snow and clouds, and then on the way down marveled as the sun came out and all of the clouds dispersed to reveal a magnificent view. We went horseback riding and canoeing, flatlanders reveling in the snow-capped mountains.

When we came back to Grosse Pointe, our youths told our congregation about their experiences. The theme for the week was "Seeing the Face of God in the City." Our youth experienced God in the beauty of the mountains, but also experienced God in the beauty of the people they met in homeless shelters, soup kitchens and after-school programs.

We learned so much. A person earning minimum wage in Denver needs to work 144 hours per week to be able to afford the price of an average apartment. So many people have to choose between paying for medications, shelter or food.

On any given day in Denver, 500 teenagers are homeless. The "issues" took on flesh and blood for us, and as we met more and more people, our attitudes changed. These weren't lazy people. These weren't people who were "getting what they deserved." Many families are one paycheck away from the streets.

Now we are back, learning more about the city of Detroit with its own needs and challenges. Our young people want to make a difference, and apply what they have learned.

Now they're volunteering for Habitat for Humanity, working to build decent, affordable houses for families in need. New homeowners will have spent 300 to 400 hours of "sweat equity," working to build their own or a neighbor's house. They will buy their house, but with their mortgage payments they will be escaping the cycle of poverty.

How's that for summer vacation? Exhausting and exhilarating, life-giving and life-changing. I think it's the best kind of tired we could ever be.

Superb Lifestyle at an Affordable Price.

'Timon of Athens' is surprisingly contemporary Friendship and gratitude don't count when it comes to money. It's a message that can be illustrated easily with contemporary examples in business, politics, even personal relations. Asking to borrow a large sum is an easy way to lose a so-called friend.

So just what is the nature of friendship? Where does friendship stop and business begin? Which is more important?

Shakespeare explored these questions 400 years ago when he wrote "Timon of Athens," and the play was not one of his hits. Perhaps it simply was an issue that the Elizabethan audience was not prepared to deal with. It may have had only a few performances or not even have been commercially produced until decades later. Since that time, it may not ever have been presented with such meaningful lucidity as it is this summer at the Stratford Festival. But this production is an eye-opener.

With brilliant direction by Stephen Ouimette and superb acting by leading members of the company, this new production in modern dress makes it clear that whatever the play meant to earlier generations, it definitely qualifies as a 21st century issue. It is all the more remarkable that it was conceived with the poet's incredible vision four centuries before its time.

The title character is, at the start, a bountiful giver to public and private beneficiaries. Timon's generosity knows no bounds. His largesse, even in the make-believe world of the stage, is munificent. The sycophantic recipients smother Timon with flattery and protestations of affection, and Shakespeare has portrayed them with a hundred different faces of feigned gratitude.

As Timon, Peter

State of the Arts

By Alex Suczek

Donaldson endows the role with a devotion to generosity that is almost pathological. His Timon makes giving the basis of his status in life, and Ouimette's staging of the experience is startlingly contemporary. Even the script's Elizabethan English acquires a modern lilt.

Timon's career as a giver culminates in a lavish banquet that could pass for a modern stag party of senators and influential business leaders. A disco atmosphere prevails when a bevy of dancing girls are brought in for more than entertainment. Donaldson plays his role as host with a kind of naivete implying his confidence that the recipients of his gifts and hospitality are genuine friends. He receives their flattering expressions of admiration and thanks, as totally sincere.

His performance is balanced brilliantly by Tom McCamus as Apemantus, the truth-talking commentator. Almost like a news anchorman, he exposes Timon's friends for the hypocritical leeches they really are and warns him of the folly of his behavior.

The Shakespearean invective flies as Timon laughs off the comments in rapid exchanges. They keep the members of the audience on the edges of their seats as they follow the clever turns and twists of the sarcastic puns and figures of speech. Seated close to the action in the small

Tom Patterson Theatre, the audience, in fact, are almost a part of the action. Donaldson brings the drama to its most intense phase after Timon suffers drastic financial reverses. Turning to his friends for a return of all his favors, he finds himself rebuffed on all sides. The hypocrisy runs deep, as bankers, politicians and senators respond that they are temporarily unable to float a loan, or some other excuse.

For Timon, the conversion to an embittered mis-anthrope is instant and total. Donaldson delivers a performance of grim commentary at one more banquet for his faithless friends. It is a stunning episode of exposing their two-faced personalities and the hypocrisy of their unwillingness to compromise their self-interest to help a friend.

While Timon in his complete withdrawal from society rejects even his two loyal friends, Apemantus and the General Alcibiades, played earnestly by Sean Arbuckle, they and the discovery of a hidden treasure help Timon finally bring his former friends to account. It amounts to a resolution of the conflict but leaves the play's powerful message undimmed in a not very happy ending.

This production of Timon is an exceptional experience, forged in the creative foundry of the Stratford Company's outstanding direction and acting. It explores issues of ethics and human relations that are critical in our society today.

While the play itself has some structural weaknesses, it also offers a powerful message which is put across with enormous impact by the dynamic performance. It is a theater piece of considerable substance, and for any thoughtful citizen and theatergoer, it is definitely an experience not to miss.

"Timon of Athens" is being presented in repertory at the Tom Patterson Theatre through Saturday, Sept. 25. Call (800) 567-1600.

Everybody else's mother

It seems my 11-year-old daughter has a new friend. Although I haven't met her, I've heard a lot about her. Apparently she's the same age, height, and build as my daughter, but with bright blue hair, multiple body piercings, and a henna snake tattoo.

She wears things like sliced-up jeans and suede halter-tops to school. On top of that, she's allowed to stay up as late as she wants to, play inappropriate video games, and watch B horror movies. She never has to clean her room and keeps all 50 pairs of her trendy low-cut jeans in a pile stuffed underneath her bed.

I know what you're thinking. You're probably thinking that I must be some kind of negligent parent to let my daughter associate with such a bad influence. You're right.

But, you see, her name is Everybody Else. And, chances are, if you're a parent of a middle schooler, your child hangs around with her, too.

Oh, at first, she seems quite harmless. You'll be sitting around the kitchen table giving the family high fives because of the great deal you found on, say, a purple rolling backpack, and your 11-year-old will suddenly say, "But Everybody Else has a blue one."

You absentmindedly nod in a "That's-nice-Honey" sort of way and go on about your business.

Later you'll say something like, "It's 9 o'clock; so you'd better get ready for bed." And your 11-year-old will say, "But Everybody Else gets to stay up until 10 o'clock."

And so it goes until, sooner or later, you find out that Everybody Else is also allowed to ride on motorcycles with 16-year-old boys, wear cut-off fishnet stockings, paint her toenails purple and listen to Marilyn Manson CDs.

In short, you really start to hate Everybody Else. But, as infuriating as Everybody Else is, her mother is even worse.

Take, for instance, the other day when I asked my daughter to turn off the television. She said, "Everybody Else's mom lets them watch television before doing homework." When I said she couldn't have a slumber party until she's 16, she informed me that, "Everybody Else's mom invites whole Girl Scout troops over to sleep." And when I served store-bought cake for my daughter's 11th birthday, she said — you guessed it — "Everybody Else's mom makes cakes from scratch."

Face it, Everybody Else's

Family Daze

By Debbie Farmer

mom makes the rest of us look, well, bad.

A wiser person would've recognized this for what it is and risen above it. But me, I am not this wise. So you can't really blame me when, last night, during a 15-minute diatribe on what kind of deprived life my daughter leads because she doesn't have her own cell phone, I heard myself say, "I don't care if Everybody Else's mom likes loud rap music, or makes bologna casserole for Thanksgiving dinner or approves of multiple body piercing; if I ever catch her alone in an aisle at the grocery store I'm going to grab her by the nose ring and give her a piece of my mind!"

You have to just marvel that a rational human being can say something like this and mean it.

But I'm not that worried, really. Lately my daughter is starting to hang out with a better crowd. In fact, last night, when I asked her to go to bed, she replied, "Nobody Else goes to bed before 9 o'clock." And when I asked her about her C on her history test, she said, "Nobody Else got an A on last week's history test."

You know, I'm starting to really like this Nobody Else kid. And I can't wait to meet her mother. Something tells me we're going to get along great.

If you share your tapas, I'll share mine

If you have ever traveled through Spain, you more than likely sampled food in the form of a tapa — food meant to be consumed in small portions and almost always shared by all.

The term tapas (TAH-pahs) refers to an extremely broad range of foods. From appetizers to entire meals, this Spanish tradition is becoming popular all over the world. I had my first tapas experience in London a couple of years ago. There were about eight of us at the table and I remember sampling everything from mussels to nachos to steak bites.

We each had a small plate in front of us and every 10 minutes or so the waiter arrived with more goodies to taste. The following recipe is from a cookbook, "New Tapas: Culinary Travels With Spain's Top Chefs."

Spicy Pork Kabobs

3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

À LA ANNIE

By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff

1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon sweet paprika
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 lb. 2 oz. lean pork, cut into 1-inch cubes
Salt and pepper to taste

In a medium bowl, whisk together the olive oil, vinegar, cumin, paprika, parsley and garlic. Pour mixture over the pork cubes and chill in the refrigerator for 48 hours.

Thread the pork cubes onto skewers and grill on high heat for 4 to 5 minutes on each side or until desired doneness. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve at once. Serves four entree tapas. My meat choice was thick lean pork chops from Costco. I trimmed the fat and simply cut them into 1-inch pieces. I served the spicy pork as a party appetizer with just 1 cube of pork threaded onto the tip of 6-inch wooden skewers that had been soaked in water to keep them from burning. Doubling this recipe is a snap.

The 48-hour marinating time gives the flavor combination plenty of time to soak into the meat. Ziplock bags are the smartest way to go when marinating almost everything. I cooked my mini kabobs for just a few minutes on each side and kept them warm in a low oven, completely covered so they wouldn't dry out before serving them. The meat was absolutely delicious.

If you saved last week's recipe for feta pepper dip, it is a perfect accompaniment for these tasty kabobs.

Parents should learn kids' slang

By Jeff and Debra Jay
Special Writers

Dear Jeff and Debra:

My son has just come home from completing his first year of college. His grades were good, but to be honest, not as good as his father and I expected. He plans to go to law school once he completes his undergraduate studies, but I worry that he'll have trouble getting into a good program if he doesn't improve his grade point average. Our son says his grades reflect a normal adjustment to university life, and he'll do better next year. I thought it was a flimsy excuse but accepted it until I overheard a phone conversation my son was having with a friend. Making plans for the evening, he asked his friend if he had any "K." Having no idea what "K" is, I confronted him. He told me it's slang for cash. It didn't quite sound right to me, so I asked a friend if she ever heard her kids use "K" as slang for cash. She said she thought it was slang for drug use. Can you tell me if this is true?

— Thrown for a Loop by the Slang

Dear Thrown:

Your friend is on the right track. "K" is slang for a particular drug: ketamine. Also called "Special K," it is an anesthetic used in veterinary medicine.

It belongs to a class of drugs called "dissociative anesthetics," and the effect of the drug is to separate perception from sensation. It usually comes in a liquid form and is cooked into a white powder for snorting. We've heard of people injecting the liquid form into muscle for a quicker high (it is never injected into veins).

Snorting small amounts, called "bumps," creates a mild, dreamy sensation. If larger amounts are used, the resulting effect is referred to as "entering a K-hole." A K-hole is described as having the sensation of rising above one's body or is sometimes compared to a near-death experience. Higher doses may also produce hallucinations. While people are in a K-hole, they often have difficulty moving and will remain in a stationary position.

Heart rate can increase even with low doses. High doses can lead to depressed consciousness and breathing. It is exceedingly dangerous to mix ketamine with alcohol, tranquilizers such as Valium, or GHB (commonly called the date rape drug).

Frequent use of ketamine can lead to neuroses or other mental disorders. The drug creates a powerful psychological dependence that can lead to addiction. Ketamine is illegal, and possession can result in prison.

If your son is asking friends about ketamine, you can assume he is using the drug with some frequency. You need to take action.

We recommend that you and his father consult an addiction specialist who can guide you in confronting your son and working out a solution. If your son is addicted, he will continue to use no matter what you say, or he'll switch addictions by replacing ketamine with other drugs. If this is the case, he needs to check into an alcohol and drug treatment center.

A Note to Our Readers: You frequently ask us for recommendations for books covering topics such as teens using alcohol and other drugs, how family members are affected by alcoholic loved ones, how to overcome anger caused by someone's addiction, where to find a solid education about the disease of alcoholism, how to intervene, and more. So, we've decided, after more than seven years of answering these questions, to create an online bookstore of titles. You can access the bookstore at www.lovefirst.net. We are also adding a page of readers' recommended books; so if you have a favorite recovery book, e-mail us at contact@lovefirst.net with the title, author's name, and why you recommend the book.

St. John names chief of cardiovascular surgery

St. John Hospital and Medical Center has named Dr. Steven Harrington chief of cardiovascular surgery.

Harrington has been a leader in cardiovascular and thoracic surgery at St. John Hospital and Medical Center since 1988.

He has been at the forefront of new procedures in cardiovascular surgery, including minimally invasive surgery that dramatically reduces scarring and improves recovery time for patients undergoing the procedure.

He was the first physician in the state and one of the first in the country to use the Port-Access, minimally invasive surgery procedure using video-assisted cameras to repair or replace malfunctioning heart valves.

"Dr. Harrington has been a leading force in continuing our reputation as one of the busiest and best facilities for cardiovascular surgery," said Dr. Larry Lloyd, chief of surgery at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

"We are honored that Dr. Harrington accepted this position to lead us forward into the future as we continue to provide advanced treatment options for our patients," he said.

This week we decided to do something a bit different. Ted put together a list of five questions. Each of us answered them without seeing the other's responses.

Q: What is the toughest part of being a parent of a child with special needs?

Ted: It's a tie: Knowing what could have been and looking at other people's "normal" children every day knowing Andrew is not able to do the same things and may never be able to do some of the things. It's a feeling of loss and hopelessness. It's a feeling of an anchor growing heavier around my neck. It's a feeling of no matter what happens right in my life (career and financial success, anniversary milestones, awards, etc.), his limitations will always spoil the party. But on the positive side, it's a great way to keep balanced, grounded and not too full of yourself.

Mary Beth: Feeling as if I am ill-equipped, as if I have the wrong information because I studied for a different exam than the one I was given. And I've always detested feeling unprepared!

X-tra Special Advice

Q: What have you learned most as a parent of a child with special needs?

Ted: Love as I have never experienced and patience that I never thought I had. Andrew is the person I most admire in life and he loves me unconditionally. The feeling is mutual. He is my super boy.

Mary Beth: I've learned how many others have children with special needs and how supportive those parents can be. I've probably met the strongest women that I've ever known in the last few years.

Q: What is your biggest fear for your child with special needs?

Ted: There are so many,

St. John Senior Community's 'A New Beginning' honored

St. John Senior Community Food Services Director Sharon Syfert was recognized by the Michigan Association of Homes and Services for the Aging (MAHSA) for her innovative and aggressive pursuit of a new food service program for 200-plus assisted living and nursing home residents at St. John Senior Community.

"A New Beginning" was just that for everyone involved in creating a successful transition from the old tray-style food service into a dining atmosphere of hot and ready meals.

The vision blossomed 12 months prior to its debut in January 2004 for residents at the Senior Community.

After touring many nursing homes and evaluating the current style of food service, steps toward making "A New Beginning" a reality began.

"Imagine residents being able to order eggs their way and having them cooked right in the dining room and served hot on the spot," Syfert said.

The enthusiasm spread to the staff that willingly offered suggestions and anxiously awaited the new equipment that would make "A New Beginning" a reality.

Through supportive guidance from Ann Matish, consultant dietitian at Gordon Food Services, the new traveling steam line carts were ordered. Now a variety of food is brought to resident dining rooms hot and ready to be served restaurant-style.

Dubbed "Galloping Gourmet," these aromatic steam line carts also serve residents who choose to dine in their rooms.

A spin-off of Galloping Gourmet is Speedy Gourmet, the direct dial-up dining service for residents requesting room service, which is ideal for residents arriving after mealtimes or partaking in rehabilitation.

"We've seen an increase in family members wanting to share the home-like dining experience with their loved ones," Syfert said.

Redness, scaling and small bumps around the mouth, especially in women age 20-50 may indicate a condition known as perioral dermatitis.

Rare in men, this condition is contradictory in nature. For instance, this rash, when treated with high potency topical steroids will actually get worse when the medications are discontinued.

The cause of perioral dermatitis is unknown. It is not caused by germs, poor hygiene, or dietary factors. Perioral dermatitis is not contagious.

While not an infectious condition, treatment involves the use of tetracycline, an oral antibiotic. Topical therapy using antibiotic creams and low potency steroids may be appropriate for some patients.

Have you ever wanted to dress like the folks at the Renaissance Festival?

Well, you can. And you can also help children with special needs. Volunteers are needed to dress in costume and sell soft drinks during three August weekends. Proceeds will go to Children's Therapy Fund. Grants from Children's Therapy Fund help children have access to the diagnostic and therapeutic services they need to reach their full potential.

Call (248) 514-2290 if you can volunteer and/or if you have a costume which could be used during August.

Enjoy the wonderful aroma of lavender

Take a deep breath. Depending upon your location, you might smell the fragrance of lavender in the air. If its essence hasn't found you, consider adding it to your garden. It's a must for every gardener.

An easy lavender, Lavendula, species to grow in our zone, is Lavendula angustifolia "Munstead," known by its common name of Munstead lavender. Munstead is an old-fashioned dwarf cultivar with fragrant violet-blue flowers on long stems and aromatic gray-green leaves on a compact plant.

Native to the higher altitudes of Europe, this lavender is cold hardy and makes a wonderful addition to edgings, herb gardens, and containers. As with so many plants, most of the lavender species have crossed, creating a wide variety of lavender from which to choose.

Munstead grows to 1 to 1 1/2 feet with aster blue flowers of various shades. Another well-known cultivar is Hidcote which is slightly shorter with dark blue-purple flowers. If you plan a long row or multiple grouping, be sure to ask the grower if the plants are grown from uniform cuttings.

A pink flower is found on Rosea or Hidcote Pink. And, find the more rare white flower on Alba, Alpine Alba or Nana Alba.

This 1- to 3-foot tall shrub is adorned by aromatic, grayish, needle-like foliage. With a rounded shape, the flowers are at the tips of spikes held above the foliage. These flowers are in differing shades of blue, purple, white or pink.

What about Provence?

English varieties of Munstead or Hidcote. This cultivar is more difficult to grow in our area.

Lavender is a member of the Lamiaceae family which includes mints, sages, basil, thymes and oregano. With about 90 cultivars of the genus Lavendula, only 11 of the 20 botanical species are of herbal interest. The remainder are reserved for the true lavender collector.

Caring for your lavender

Most easily grown from a plant purchased from a grower, the more ambitious might try growing from seed. With more mature plants, consider root-layering. Simply place a rock on top of a lower stem. After one growing season, sever the rooted section from the mother plant and transplant it. The transplant should take place in early spring.

The hardier lavenders prefer full, all-day sun, excellent drainage in sandy soil or raised beds, and good air circulation around plants to prevent rotting. Keep bark mulch away from the plant crowns to avoid rotting from the medium. The use of stone mulch helps to wick away moisture and aids in reflecting heat up into the crown.

No fertilizing is necessary if planted in the ground. Any other treatments are unnecessary as lavender is a wonderful repellent on its own. Prune lavender in spring before the new growth begins.

With all that said, realize that the hardier lavenders are very easy to grow in our zone and while they prefer the conditions mentioned, in some instances have also been found growing in clay soil or wet shade.

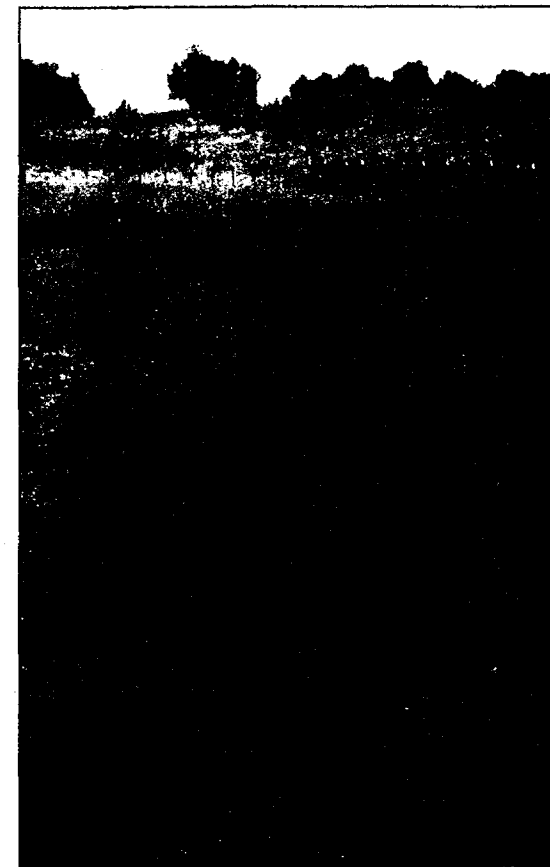

A good all-round book on choosing, growing and using lavender is "The Lavender Garden" by Robert Kourik.

Uses for lavender

The wonderful essence of lavender is well-known as used in beauty products and sachets. Medicinally, lavender has strong antibacterial action and has been used for helping to heal cuts. It has sedative properties and is often used for calming anxiety and tension. Aromatherapists use lavender to help hospital patients relax prior to surgery. Lavender oil should only be taken internally under supervision.

However, the flowers are wonderful in cookies and a variety of other recipes. Add lavender flowers to your recipe for Herbs de Provence and add to soups or stews.

Make lavender sugar by mixing 2 cups of granulated sugar with 3 to 4 table-spoons of dried lavender blossoms in a jar with a tightly fitting cover. Let stand for several days. Sift before using in cookies, cakes and other dessert recipes. Or in lemon tea... yum!

Whatever way you choose to grow or use lavender, remember to take a whiff. From the book, "Mother Nature's Herbal" by Judy Griffin, PhD: "Lavender (Lavendula species). I am the herb of love and chastity. My aroma is calming and clean. Although my home is the Mediterranean, I've learned to live all over the world. Most of my species have crossed. My hybrid varieties yield the most oil. I can germinate from seed but grow easily from cuttings. I must have well-drained soil and enjoy sunlight. I am an attractive container, garden, or edging plant. My French variety requires winter protection. English, Spike, and Munstead are more winter-hardy. I am a 'must' for every gardener. I have a variety to suit every climate and every need."

South laxers finish strong; trio gets All-State mention

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's boys lacrosse team was sorry to see its season end.

"In our last two games, especially, we played the game the way it's supposed to be played," said John Fowler, who completed his first season as coach of the Blue Devils.

South began Class A state tournament play with a 7-6 victory over Utica Eisenhower. Unfortunately, that sent the Blue Devils against Birmingham Brother Rice, and the Warriors came away with an 18-4 victory.

"Brother Rice is the No. 1 team in the state and one of the best teams in the Midwest, and they have two All-American players," Fowler said.

"It was two lacrosse teams playing at a high level. We played good team defense without any penalties. We cleared the ball 60 percent of the time. We didn't lose our composure in either of the last two games. I'm sorry to see it end because we had our two best practices before the Brother Rice game, and we played two of our best games against them and Eisenhower."

Matt Reynaert scored three goals and Robbie Barrett one against the Warriors.

It was Reynaert and Barrett, who shared South's Most Valuable Player award, who also led the way in the Blue Devils' comeback against Eisenhower.

The Eagles led 5-2 after scoring four goals in the third period, but Barrett scored four straight goals in the fourth quarter and set up Reynaert for the game-winning 30 seconds remaining in the game after Eisenhower had pulled into a 6-6 tie with about three minutes left.

"They picked up the lead offensively, and our defense was outstanding," Fowler said. "We got a lot of turnovers."

The teams were tied 1-1 at halftime. Barrett scored South's goal. The Blue Devils went ahead 2-1 in the third period on a goal by Reynaert from Tom MacEachern, but then Eisenhower scored four straight goals.

Fowler praised the efforts of his captains — Mike Bates, Colin Cassidy, Barrett, Reynaert and Pat LaRiviere.

"They were just what you'd expect from your captains," Fowler said. "They were great leaders."

Three South players received Class A All-State honorable mention. They were Barrett, a senior attack; junior midfielder Pete Grimmer and sophomore defender Bobby Diehl. Reynaert, Cassidy and LaRiviere made the all-district team.

In addition to Barrett and Reynaert being named co-MVPs, Pete Wendinski was South's most improved player. "Pete was a first-year senior who was the only player on the team that never missed a practice," Fowler said. "That was a big reason for his improvement."

Local hockey standout to continue career at Niagara

Trevor Mallon has known good times and bad in a hockey career that started at the age of 5 in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association, but the good has outnumbered the bad.

Another of the good times came a couple of months ago when Mallon signed a letter of intent to play hockey for Niagara University.

Niagara earned a berth in the NCAA Division I tournament this year as the College Hockey America representative, but lost to Boston College in the first round.

The bad came about a year ago when he suffered a serious shoulder injury in a summer league game while playing for the Cleveland Barons of the North American Hockey League. Mallon was sidelined for four months after surgery to repair a dislocated shoulder and a complete tear of the labrum muscle and the bicep tendon.

He worked his way back into the lineup in November and helped lead the Barons into the playoffs after a year's absence. Mallon played seven years for coach John Hackett's GPHA Bulldogs. They won three state championships and the Pee Wee team won a national title.

After three more years of travel hockey, Mallon followed older brother P.J. into Cougars in the Ontario Provincial Junior A Hockey League. He was named to the All-Star team, and was one of two rookies and the only American to play in the game that year.

Mallon finished the season as the second-leading scorer among defensemen in the OPJHL with 15 goals and 30 assists. He was the Cougars' rookie of the year.

Mallon was recruited by several Division I schools after that season, but he decided he needed another year of experience before making his decision on a college, so he signed with the Cleveland Barons. One of his teammates was Chris Barger, who played with Mallon on the two state champion teams at North.

Niagara assistant coach Jerry Forton had seen Mallon play several times with Cobourg. Once he proved that he had recovered from his shoulder injury, Niagara offered him a scholarship.

Trevor is the son of Paul and Nancy Mallon of Grosse Pointe Woods.
