Unlikely visitor at Bon Secours Hospital

Staff Writer While the frogs from Frogs • Fur • Friends attracting much attention throughout Grosse Pointe, a lone peacock caused a lot of excitement around Bon Secours Hospital and surrounding neighborhoods for several days in early June.

"The bird just showed up," said Mark Nuytten, Bon Secours Cottage Health Services (BSHS) photographer. "What I heard is that Chris Carney (retired BSHS chief executive officer) was walking up to the main hospital entrance when the peacock arrived. Apparently it looked like the bird was going to walk right in the front door."

The peacock later flew up to the roof and hung out in the rooftop garden. Standing at least three feet tall, it is beautifully adorned with iridescent blue and green feathers.

The bird also perched on the infection control department's windowsill for a while, and on the ledge outside patient room 205, a vantage point that attracted several interested patients.

The peacock was also sighted in the yard of Bruce and Nancy Vick who live a few blocks away from the hospital. It made its appearance during a bridge club meeting in the evening of June 7.

The Vicks searched their him," said Day. "They all backyard the following morning for the feathered friend, but it was gone.

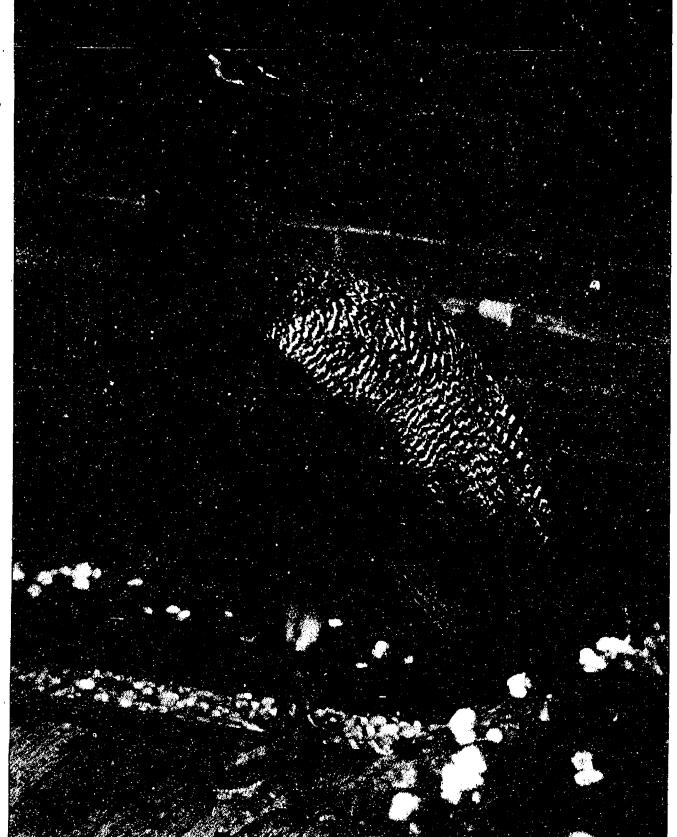

> Most likely the bird is a member of the pheasant family called Black-shouldered Peacock which is a descendant of the India Blue Peacock. Since 1962, peacocks have been the national bird of India.

In the United States, peacocks are commonly kept and bred in captivity. A hearty breed, they can thrive even in colder climates like Michigan's, and have been known to live as long as 40 years.

Since they usually don't stray far from home, they don't need to be placed in a covered pen. While they can fly, they don't fly long distances and are mostly runners; so it is highly unlikely that this peacock came from Belle Isle, or the Fisher Mansion in Detroit, where peacocks have been known to live in recent years.

There is speculation that someone living around the hospital has an aviary where the peacock was kept.

For now, though, the bird seems to have checked-out of the hospital and the neighborhood to a destination yet unknown.

This mysterious but flamboyant fellow treated employees, patients, visitors and neighbors of Bon Secours Hospital with a surprise visit for a couple of days in early June.

How to fix accretion in the Shores ou can't fight Mother Nature. That is what lakeside property owners north of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club know for a fact.

Since about the 1960s, accretion the build up of sand along breakwalls - has been a mounting problem for property owners along the lake.

As evidenced by a photograph in last week's Grosse Pointe News of Rankin Peck's property and his boathouse that now has become a beach house due to accretion, the problem is severe, and it stinks — literally.

What used to be gently lapping water at the breakwall is now accumulated sand and rotting vegetation and debris.

What used to be gently sloping mowed lawn down to water's edge is now eclipsed by weedy, reedy, marginal flora.

The problem is extensive. Property owners in the affected area who have been studying the matter, estimate the accretion at some 160,000 cubic yards covering 80 acres. The cost of the dredging is ballparked at $7 mil-

The question is who will pay for it? Obviously, since the former lake bottom outside the breakwall is considered state land, individual property owners do not want to foot the bill to maintain state real estate.

The Village of Grosse Pointe Shores likewise sees little benefit in helping the state.

And, as we all know, the state is struggling to make ends meet as it is.

doubt the governor Legislature would be willing to spend money they do not have for the benefit of 31 lakeside property owners.

Then there is another problem. Once the accretion is dredged, there is nothing to stop it from coming back. So is dredging money well spent?

Property owners petitioning for the dredging say the accretion is due to decisions made long ago in building the Shores and yacht club marinas. The harbors, petitioners say, prevent the free flow of water and particulates along the coast.

As obstructions, the harbors cause the sand to settle and accumulate.

If they are correct, then dredging is only a temporary fix. The causes of the problem remain.

We have an idea that may meet everyone's needs.

Why not just deed the accreted property over to the affected property owners?

They would gain title to more land in exchange for paying for new breakwalls, hauling in topsoil and dredging if necessary to even out the new shoreline.

Further, the new breakwall could curve outward toward the tip of the harbor obstruction and provide for a better current flow.

Some might object, thinking residents are getting "free" public land for their own. But they fail to take into account the cost of rehabilitating the land.

They further forget the additional taxes the benefiting property owners will have to pay on the additional land. Additional local, county, state and school taxes would be generated for perpetuity.

As it stands now, the accreted area is a no-man's wasteland with little value to anyone. It is an eyesore and a stench.

Perhaps our idea is too simplistic, but whoever said simple was bad?

The sounds of freedom

rom sea to shining sea, most of us will be celebrating this weekend. We will display our flags and banners. Some will march in parades and take part in three-legged races and egg tosses.

Most of us will fire up the barbecue and enjoy the day with friends and families. And while we repeat our routine annual rituals, let us be cognizant of the reasons for our celebrations.

Let us pause to acknowledge the years of sacrifice, dedication and wisdom that brought us to this place. May we be ever thankful to those who sought and gained our independence with their caring and cautious insight to create a document that continues to guide our government through more than a century.

Before we jump off the diving boards into the water, let us stop to pledge our allegiance to our flags with a further pledge to do at least one personal thing to impact this . country in a positive way this year.

It can be as simple as vowing to show up at the voting booth for the next election or to join in a community volunteer project. As we unfurl our flags, remember the line from the song, "It's the emblem of the land we love," may we revere and respect it always.

And may we reaffirm our support for those who remain steadfast in their resolve to fight on foreign soils to protect our freedom. We must take every opportunity to express our love and respect for their dedication and sense of duty. God bless America!

Religion in politics

To the Editor:

The time has come for all Americans to force religion out of the executive branch and the legislative branch of government. Any executive or legislator should be sanctioned and then removed from office if they even mention their religious beliefs.

These religious pronouncements have resulted in unconstitutional legislation and are destroying our Constitution.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., or "Doctor Frist," has even given a medical diagnosis on the floor of Congress which was totally wrong, causing the Congress and the president to legislate on Sunday for one individual which is unprecedented.

Free speech doesn't mean that Christians can dominate our government by their hypocritical stance on religion.

These religious hacks should keep their religion in their own bedroom and out of the bedrooms of the rest of Americans.

Honesty's best policy To the Editor:

It isn't often that one is able to write a letter such as this, but I felt I must share this experience with the community.

I took a suit into Belding Cleaners to be cleaned and had inadvertently left a valuable diamond stickpin in the lapel of the jacket. It was several days later when I realized this, and I honestly felt that I would never see it again.

When I went into the store to pick up my items, I timidly asked if it had been found. They indeed had found it and had pinned it to the invoice.

I am so impressed with the honesty of this establishment that I felt the incident should be known all through the community.

Supporting athletics

To the Editor: To the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board:

The athletic booster clubs at our two high schools placed a full-page "ad" in the Grosse Pointe News that was one-sided, biased, misleading and inflammatory (May 12). In that ad they asked the community residents to contact our school board to tell them how we feel, so that's what I'm doing.

First, I thank you all sincerely for taking on such a vital but thankless job. Secondly, I fully support your recommendations to take the first steps to making athletics, and other extra-curricular activities, accountable for their cost structures.

Academic services have long been held to such standards. Athletic directors are rebelling at being asked to do what their peers on the academic side have always had to do.

It appears that the boosters think that taking an "us vs. them" approach will be helpful. I think they are wrong. When the community at large realizes that maintaining support for athletics at current levels will result in additional reductions to academics, you will have the support you need.

Many people in the Grosse Pointe community are business people. They realize that reduced funding does not mean the end of a program, but it does require innovation and rethinking how things are done to maintain the quality of the program you have created. That's what the boosters and athletic directors should be collaborating on, not using inflammatory language to try to divide the community.

The school board did not create the situation that requires drastic cuts in funding across all programs, that is the result of proposition A and a prolonged weak

The school board is charged with dealing with the reduced funding and making very difficult decisions regarding the allocation of funds to the many programs the school is responsible for providing.

Any group that wants to be relieved of such cuts needs to be upfront with the community about which programs they propose absorb the cuts they do not want to accept. There is not one word in the full-page ad about any such alternative suggestions. Booster groups can and should provide support for "extras" which can make an average program exceptional. State laws prohibit booster groups from providing support for core academic curricular programs.

Instead of spending money on full-page ads, I suggest that the athletic booster clubs get busy preparing for a drastically different future. If they are paying attention to the economic and political realities of this state, they will be preparing for a future with flat funding for extracurricular activities, at a level that is a fraction of current and historical levels. Unlike what they say in their ad ("....a community without a vibrant athletic program..."), that does not mean the destruction of athletics. It means the way the programs are conducted will be forever changed.

We all need to work together to make that change happen in a way that will satisfy the needs of our community. It will not happen by pointing accusatory fingers at each other.

American symbolism

Earlier this year, I announced to my office chums I had a craving for a Twinkie.

It's been years since a vanilla creme filled sponge cake has passed these lips. Yet, it was just one of those cravings that pop up, and it won't go away until it has been satisfied.

Off to the store I went to invest in a few Twinkies for my office comrades. Must be I've been under a rock because when I picked up the box, there was Twinkie, the Kid ever so subtly letting me know that these American lunch box treats have been around 75 years.

An opportunity for a column if there ever was one. Back to the office I went, arms laden with those lunch bags for seven decades. I was all smiles as I presented the cellophane wrapped goody.

A groan went up from the office staff when I offered them this simple, nostalgic afternoon pick-me-up and fill-me-up with chemicals

It shouldn't come as a surprise it was included in the time capsule because William Clinton was president at the time.

When the president in 3000 opens the capsule, will the Hostess bakery still be baking 500 million a year, as it does now? And will Chicago residents still be consuming the most Twinkies per capita?

Those are almost exactly the signs that Ms. Landers details in her book.

Contracting out To the Editor:

"It takes a village to raise a child."

I find it disheartening that a community such as ours, is considering resorting to contracting out custodial and food service personnel in the school system.

Those employees are not only hardworking, dedicated workers, they are also a very big part of our children's dents by name; they know what their interests are. they care about them. These are not people who just come into the building to do their jobs; these are people who are loyal to their schools. who take ownership and pride in what they do. These are people who care about our schools and our children, their wellbeing, their safety and their growth.

I know there are budget issues, there always are, but is taking away the life of these hardworking, special people who are part of the Grosse Pointe School family the answer? Is bringing in some contracted company that doesn't know beans about our schools, our kids, our community the answer?

I'm not sure what the answer is, but I would think for as well educated and community-driven as Grosse Pointe is we would be able to come up with something that will keep our custodial and food service staff in the schools where they belong, not strangers.

This goes far beyond clean schools. With the way the world has become since 9/11. do we really want to get rid of family and bring in strangers, who have no sense of allegiance to our schools, staff and students? Is this really what Grosse Pointe has become? Like everyone else?

Let's not give up and take the easy road, let's fight for what makes Grosse Pointe what it is — community.

Privatization

To the Editor:

I appreciate the dilemma facing the board of education: to find $2 million in the 2005-06 budget without damaging the excellent school system for which our community is noted. And I hear the parents' concerns that valued programs such as music and/or athletics might suffer. However, I want to address the issue of the possible privatization of school services.

Privatization of services is often seen as a way to save money. And it does — in the short run. Bids from private companies will always come in lower than the amount needed to pay public employees' salaries and benefits, especially those with years of seniority.

What is lost in this equation is accountability and community control. When a private company takes over services such as janitorial and cafeteria for a community's schools, that community no longer has a direct say in the day-to-day work being done with and for their children. Yes, the board of education can terminate the company's contract, but it would require a serious breach of contract to do so.

And what about all the extras we count on?

I think of custodians like John Dixon who went through the Grosse Pointe schools himself and has worked here as a school custodian for 22 years. When I asked John about the extras he and other members of our custodial staff routinely do for the students at Brownell, he mentioned their staying with any child whose ride failed to show up, taking them into the office to call home, and letting them wait inside the building until they're picked up. And, at any time of the day or evening, going through room after room with anxious parents and children searching for lost or forgotten items.

Do you think a custodian being paid $8 to $12 an hour by a private company would respond so sensitively to our students' needs?

And what about our children's food? No matter what claims the companies might make in their bids, my guess is that price will always win over nutritional value when they plan their menus. After all, for a private company, profits are the bottom line.

Choosing to privatize is a slippery slope, one we in Grosse Pointe should not risk taking. Better to raise taxes than to lose control over our community's treasure, our schools.

> Patricia Lay-Dorsey Grosse Pointe Farms

Editor's note: I don't believe taxes can be raised to pay for cafeteria or custodian services.

Privatization To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that the Grosse Pointe Board of Education is looking into the privatization of the school cafeterias in Grosse Pointe Public Schools. This is an interesting concept, but it is wrong for Grosse Pointe Public Schools.

Under privatization, the students would suffer a significant loss of social skills. the choice of nutritional foods, and it is unfair to the staff who have served the students all these years. Also, with safety in schools a priority these days, it would allow another unknown element into the school environment.

There must be a better way to accommodate everyone, without hurting the employees who work so hard serving our students and to continue to keep our children in a safe environment.

Pets on leash

To the Editor:

Yesterday I saw a beautiful family dog get hit by a car because when it saw the dogs I was walking, it ran right across the street.

The man who hit the dog was very, very upset and I tried to reassure him that it wasn't his fault. The dog looked like an older dog and that just goes to show you, they can go years without running in the street and one day they forget not to.

I have two dogs of my own and they have been trained to never leave the back yard; but still, as a responsible pet owner, they are never allowed out front without a

Another thing to consider even though your dog is friendly, not all dogs enjoy an off-leash dog running up to their face. This can result in a serious dog fight which could seriously injure your dog. If you must have your dog next to you while you're gardening, then, please, tie it up for the dog's safety and the public's safety.

The ohs and the ahs sounded through the warm summer night of Sunday, June 26, when Grosse Pointe Woods put on its fireworks display in honor of the United States' Independence Day, July 4.

Fireworks in colors of blue, gold, red and green shot through the night sky. People never tire of seeing these light bursts on a night when families, friends and neighbors are gathered to share in a special celebration.

School budget approved

Positions eliminated, class size increased

By Ann L. Fouty Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Board of Education has unanimously approved its 2005-06 budget of more than $109 million in general fund expenditures. Monday, June 27. This is an increase of 3.8 percent over the 2004-05 budget.

Add the general fund, the sinking fund, capital projects fund and the Durant fund, and the total expenditures are projected to be $135 million. (This figure fluctuates year to year because of construction project costs.) The board has directed the administration to dip into fund equity for $600,000 to support the middle school music program,

The state's portion of the revenue will be about 66 percent, down 2 percent from last year. Local taxes add in 24 percent, up less than a percent, and the federal share is 2 percent. County taxes add another projected 7.8 percent.

It's a fair, equitable and balanced budget, said Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business affairs. It reflects a $2 million cut in topic. the budget through the loss of general education teachers, office personnel and plant personnel. There is a large increase in state-mandated pension payments and an increase in special education teachers to accommodate the increase in special education students.

There was talk, and bids

Factors considered during budget process

- $175 per pupil increase in state foundation allowance.
- No reduction in State 20J funding.
- An increased assessment of $900,000 from the state for the pension accrual.
- No change in student enrollment.
- Positions were eliminated in virtually every staff group including general education teachers, classroom assistants, office personnel, plant personnel and supervisors.
 - Class sizes were increased at all levels.
 - Sixth grade exploratory options were reduced.
- Middle and high school course offerings will be afected. as maximum class sizes are reached and sections closed.
- Some lesser enrolled course offerings will be eliminated or offered on an every other year basis.
- Athletic and extra-curricular fees were increased at the middle and high school levels.
- Each building has determined where computers can be removed that will not have a major impact as we decrease the number of computers in use by 100.
- Additional privatization of services is being evaluated. Supply and staff development budgets have been

Board member says goodbye

By Ann L. Fouty Staff Writer

In Grosse Pointe Board member Joe Brennan's goodbye statement, he wished the board fellowship.

"My wish for you is to come together or recognize you must come together not as palsy walsy. You must respect, must listen to each other," he told the board members during one of his last meetings on Monday, June 13. Having served eight years on the board of education, Brennan chose not to run for reelection this year. Brennan, a 1972 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, advised his colleagues, who had earlier lauded him for being level headed, humorous and a mentor to newer members, and asked them to keep an open mind.

"I wish you fellowship. The community needs you as a board," he said. Conducting business in a fair way, in open discussion and relying on the administrators for information, those would see the board through difficult times and those times are upon the board.

"This district faces real challenges. It will be challenging to do what is going to have to be done," he said.

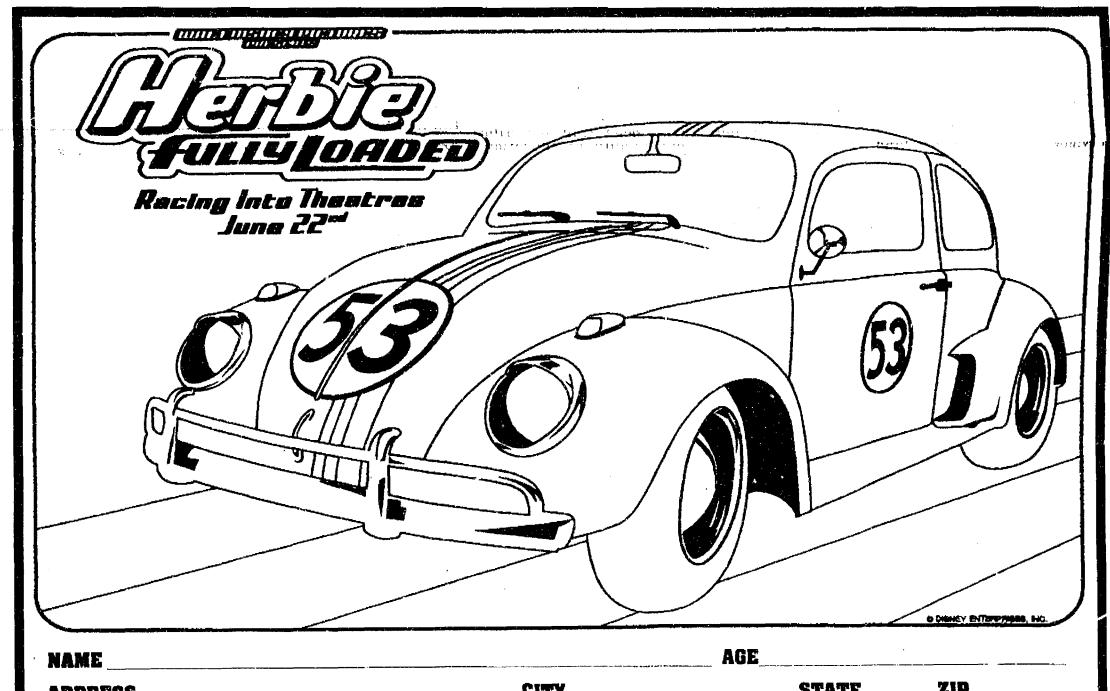

Between the board's potential, being surrounded by people who have dedicated themselves to education and the drive to guarantee a quality education, they would always make the right call.

When first elected to the board, Brennan told the late-night audience that he wanted to play a part in moving the school ahead.

"It has been a great pleasure to serve with superb trustees. We haven't always seen eye to eye. I believe they were driven by single thing — improving the district, guaranteeing (quality) education."

Saxton "Sax"

Voelker Saxton "Sax" Veelker, 97, formerly of Grosse Pointe Woods, died on Thursday, June 23, 2005, in Waterford.

She was born in Calumet in 1908 and moved with her family to the Detroit area in 1919.

She built her house on Country Club Drive when it was just woods and farmland and lived there most of her life.

During 33 of those years, she was employed by the Detroit Edison Company.

She was dedicated to helping others and was, at various times, a member of such service organizations as Volunteers of America, the Sorosis Club and the Detroit Altrusa Club. She was also a member of the Women's Economic Club and the Detroit Edison Boat Club.

In 1976, she was featured as a "Pointer of Interest" by the Grosse Pointe News.

Always a "can do" type, she was especially proud of the patents she held in both the United States and Canada for her mail-sorting machine.

She enjoyed gardening and travel. On her 80th birthday, she floated through the sky in a hot air balloon and at 90 she could be found exploring the far reaches of the Upper Peninsula.

What most people seem to remember about her was her complete disregard for age - her own and everyone else's. She approached young and old with the same glad heart, leaving a person hoping that just a little of her cheerful appreciation of life had rubbed off.

She outlived all her immediate family but retained many great friends, both old and new, who will miss her dearly.

This combination results in adequate acceleration and excellent EPA numbers. which come in at 24 miles per gallon city and 32 mpg highway. The engine puts out just 145 horsepower and produces 155 foot-pounds of torque. On paper, you'd think it's a slowpoke, but it does run fairly well with driver only, thanks to its slim 2,895-pound curb weight.

With the manual transmission, expect even better acceleration and a bump in EPA loaded, so drive accordingly

Cobalt delivers a solid driving experience thanks to a strut front suspension, semiindependent torsion-beam rear suspension, and front and rear stabilizer bars for more exact body-roll control. We were pleasantly surprised as Cobalt's handling agility showed through on those twisty country roads we like to drive. Actually, Cobalt performed similar to some of the more expensive sporty cars we've tested, so we can imagine how good the SS version will be. The car also has a tight turning radius of only 34.8 feet curb-to-curb.

Important numbers include a wheelbase of 103.3 inches, 13.2-gallon fuel tank (regular grade fuel) and 13.9 cubic-feet of cargo space. Chevy lists the Cobalt as a five-passenger vehicle, but we all know the middle passenger in the back seat will be pretty cramped if of average size.

Hit and run

A 40-year-old City of Grosse Pointe man has been cited by Grosse Pointe Farms police for drunken driving, leaving the scene of an accident, not wearing a seat belt and child endangerment.

The latter charge is due to the man's 9-year-old son riding in the man's black and gray Chevrolet Sportvan while the other offenses allegedly were committed.

On Saturday, June 25, at 6:04 p.m., two Farms officers were at a fast food restaurant on Mack between Kerby and Moross when they monitored a radio report of a hit an run outside a business next door.

The man reportedly admitted to the first officer of drinking "two beers." The man reportedly told the second officer of drinking "two shots."

A test revealed his blood alcohol at .22 percent.

Police said the man resisted being placed in a squad car until officers warned they would jolt him into submission with a Taser electric stun gun.

At 9:10 a.m. the next day, the man was released on $500 bond and assigned a July 27 court date.

Gun drawn

On the morning of Friday, June 24, Grosse Pointe Farms police tracked a shoplifting suspect to Detroit and arrested him at gunpoint.

At 8:30 a.m., the 42-yearold male suspect wearing a safari hat had been reported stealing Motrin and a $5.49 bottle of Bayer aspirin from a store in the 18800 block of Mack near Moross.

Witnesses said the man left the area in a blue 1993 Dodge Dynasty four-door. Farms police met up with

The driver, a 38-year-old Detroit man, ran away but was caught and found in possession of a small amount of cocaine. The passenger, matching the description of the 42-yearold alleged shoplifter, was ordered to the ground.

Both suspects are on parole, police said.

The store will prosecute.

Water arrest

On Friday, June 24, at 4:04 p.m., a Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officer assigned to the Wayne County marine patrol of Lake St. Clair arrested a 43vear-old male boater from Detroit on an $880 outstanding warrant. The man was wanted for missing a court date.

Officers were checking his boat's expired registration when a background investigation revealed the warrant.

Open car window policy

A Grosse Pointe Farms woman who thought she could hide her purse in an unattended car learned last week that thieves can reach through open windows.

"(The) vehicle's front passenger side window was open half way," police said. "(Her) wallet was in her open purse on the passenger-side front seat. (The) purse and wallet were covered by (her) coat."

The woman said the theft occurred at Pier Park on 1:45 and 3 p.m.

She told police her purse contained $45 cash and about 10 credit cards.

G.P. Habitat Partners sponsors in Jimmy Carter Work Project

By Sarah Kurtz

Special Writer Pointe The Grosse Partners of Habitat for Humanity had an exciting week: They joined Bank volunteers from around the world and for-President Jimmy Carter to construct a house in seven days.

The partners, made up of volunteers from 12 Grosse Pointe churches, were cosponsors in the 22nd Jimmy Work Project Carter (JCWP). They built the house in the Thurgood Marshall Village in southwest Detroit from June 17 to

For each house, sponsors must provide volunteers for the week and funding (the cost of a house is $75,000). The Grosse Pointe Partners split the cost with Bank One and had volunteers on-site the entire week.

However, the partners' house was only one of a staggering 230 homes built across Michigan.

Additionally, an estimated 3,000 volunteers came from all over the state and places as far away as South Korea to volunteer for the project.

"We have never seen a Michigan has this week," Carter said.

The Carters joined the volunteers and came to Detroit with their daughter, Amy, and son, Jeff, to work

Although he is an internationally recognized figure, Carter insisted he came to Michigan to work.

He said he believes "A basic human right is to have a place to live.

Gov. Jennifer Granholm, who was also on-site, said the former president is "quite a foreman," motivating and encouraging his fellow workers, including the governor.

Jack Frakes of the Farms was a crew leader for the Carter home, working alongside the former president and first lady during construction.

"[Carter] is very unprestate or a country come tentious. He . . . thinks voltogether as completely as unteers and homeowners are more important than he is." Frakes said.

> Frakes also noted Carter's dedication to the construction.

a healthy church?

By the Rev. Matt Swiatek Grosse Pointe Baptist Church

What is a healthy church? Is it dynamic music, or beautiful architecture, or up-todate facilities? Is it the church that is growing numerically, with programs that meet everyone's needs?

All of those are good things, but are not necessarily signs of a healthy church. In fact, at times, those "good things" can mask problems

So, what makes a church healthy? Our view is that a church is healthy when it teaching them to obey every-Word of God.

When the church does so, it proclaims God's loving Word to mankind and reveals Jesus as mankind's only hope of eternal life.

In preaching and teaching the Bible, the healthy church fulfills God's purpose — from the covenant with Abraham (all peoples on earth will be blessed through you), to the command of Christ

"Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and preaches and teaches the thing I have commanded you.")

Further, the healthy church equips its members to "live a life worthy of the calling received" and shapes them to be "like living stones heing built into a spiritual house to be a holy priesthood, offering spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ."

God has not called us to build a crowd, but to proclaim Christ as the only way of salvation and teach His Word. It is in the power of Christ and His Word that lives are changed.

'Souper Celebration' raises funds for Capuchins

The 24th annual Capuchin "Souper Summer Celebration" on June 11 at Comerica Park was deemed a success by the Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers, sponsors of the event.

This year's theme, "Swing for the Stars," featured live musical entertainment as well as fire eaters, fire throwers, jugglers, yo-yo champions, Stilt Man, a caricaturist, fireworks and a raffle of jewelry donated by the Ahee family.

All money raised from the event goes directly to the Capuchin Soup Kitchen.

Grosse Pointers who won raffle prizes included Alger LaHood, Paul W. Smith, Brandan Walsh and Tom and Kim Campau.

Artist: Grosse Pointer Susan Roubal has an exhibition "Flying Solo," a collection of pastel landscapes, at the Grosse Pointe Artists Association's Art Center, 1005 Maryland in Grosse Pointe Park. Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m., Wednesdays through Saturdays.

Benefit: "Rock the Runway," a benefit for the St. John Hospital Meade Pediatric Hematology Oncology Center, will be hosted by Friends Hair & Nails and Andrew Marke Salons on Monday, Aug. 15, at the Emerald Theatre in Mount Clemens.

The event will feature a taste fest, live entertainment, fashions and innovative creations of hair and makeup design.

"We are dedicated to our communities, and we're thrilled that businesses in the communities we serve understand that, and are dedicated to us," said Donna Handley, St. John administrative director of oncology services at the Van Elslander Cancer Center. "The funds raised by this event will provide needed services for our patients." Tickets are a $60 dona-

The two-day class covers topics that include babysitting as a job, how to be a successful sitter, a systematic approach to accident management, basic child care essentials, safety and choking rescue instruction, plus rescue breathing, preventing problem behavior, behavior management and more. The course is held in the Bon Secours Hospital Connelly Auditorium. For more information or to register, please call Bon Secours Cottage Community Health Promotion at (586) 779-7900 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"We want to thank everyone who sponsored, walked in and supported the Mutt March," said Ron Blauet, Michigan Humane Society education director. "The donations raised at the event will help us save thousands of animal lives." Each walker who turned in $100 or more in donations received an official Mutt March T-shirt, and all canine marchers received coordinating Mutt March bandanas.

Sponsors of the Mutt March were General Motors Corp., Michigan Veterinary Specialists, Pet Supplies Plus, the Grosse Pointe News and 99.5WYCD.

Awards: The Junior League of Detroit has announced its fourth quarter Community Assistance awards for the following organizations:

• The American Red Cross received a $1,725 grant to provide for its "Plan to be Safe" program, which educates youth through the Detroit and Oakland public schools about potential disasters such as fires.

 Arts & Scraps received a $2,000 award for two new computers and one all-inone printer, fax and scanner for its new facility and ongoing support of its varied programming for the children of metropolitan Detroit.

• Boys and Girls Republic received an award of $750 to send three youths to the H'Olympics in Ocean City, N.J. The attendees will learn about teamwork. healthy competition and fair play in this program.

• The Detroit Center for Youth Development received an award of $1,450 for outfitting 7-year-olds with complete equipment for Tiger's Dream Team Project, a football training camp in the Brewster Project area.

• The Detroit Institute for Children received an award of $2,100 for the purchase of four adaptive bikes for use by children with cerebral palsy and other physical disabilities, which allows the children to participate in a bicycle obstacle course during camp.

• Living Arts/Southwest Dance received an award of $1.650 for two ballet barres and two mirrors to provide 28-week dance classes for youths in southwest Detroit, ages 3 to 17 years old and to assist youth in obtaining knowledge, appreciation and practical skill in the art of dance and to develop healthy patterns during after-school hours.

• Youth on the Edge . . . of Greatness received an award of $1,000 for mural in motion, located on Alter and Mack in Detroit. The community-created mural will have to be relocated to a nearby park because of the recent development of the area.

For more information on the Junior League of Detroit, call (313) 881-0040 or visit www.jldetroit.org.

The next award deadline (for the third quarter of 2005) is July 1.

In 2004 the Junior League of Detroit embarked on its new signature project: the Belle Isle Nature Zoo. In partnership with the Detroit Zoo, this project will offer year-round educational, recreational and environmental conservation opportunities to Detroit families. It will include nature displays, planned programming, nature walks and crafts for Nature Days. The project is scheduled to last until 2006.

Some of the League's recent past initiatives have included the Children's Television Workshop, Emergency Child Care Assistance Fund, Cornerstone Schools Association Partnership Project, Detroit Police Athletic League Tutorial Project, Children's Hospital of Michigan Pediatric Mobile Team and John C. Monteith Regional Branch of the Detroit Public Library.

Since 1914, the Junior League of Detroit has been a nonprofit volunteer organization of women committed to promoting volunteerism, developing the potential of women and improving communities through the effective action and leadership of trained volunteers. Its purpose is exclusively educational and charitable. It is currently celebrating 90 years of women building better communities.

The Junior League of Detroit, through its many programs, projects, financial resources and trained volunteers, continues to initiate and participate in community-based collaborative partnerships that work to broaden the educational. cultural, health and recreational opportunities for children in metropolitan Detroit.

Trans fat — Watch out!

By Susanne Consiglio Special Writer

Most people are aware that eating too much fat -especially animal or saturated fat -- can lead to weight gain and possibly heart disease.

Trans fat is another type of fat that creates additional problems for your heart by increasing the LDL or "bad cholesterol." It is formed during a process called hydrogenation. Manufacturers add hydrogen molecules to a polyunsaturated fat such as corn or soybean oil which causes the oil to become more saturated and solid at room tempera-

You may have read their names in the ingredient lists. They're also known as partially hydrogenated oils. As of Jan. 1, 2006, it will be mandatory that the trans fat contained in a product must be listed on the Nutrition Facts food label. You will find this under the Total Fat section of the label and just under the saturated fat.

Typically, foods that contain trans fat are cookies. cakes, crackers, chips, pastries, fried foods and some low-fat anacks.

Many companies are already in the process of changing their labels by altering the type of fat in advance of the 2006 deadline. Products such as pretzels and cheese, which do not contain partially hydrogenated oil, were among the first items to change their labels.

Don't be misled. Even if a food is trans fat-free, you still should watch the serving size or portion, especially of cheese, which is a highly saturated animal fat source that can lead to clogged arteries.

Butter labels now show that they are trans fatfree. Butter contains no oil and therefore no hydrogenation or trans fat. However, butter is still a source of animal fat, and is highly saturated. In moderation or small amounts, butter is fine.

Most margarine containers, whether stick or soft tub, have not made the change to remove the partially hydrogenated oils. Whether you cook with butter or margarine, you might want to replace them with olive or canola oil, two heart healthy oils that are high in monounsaturated fat.

What's interesting is that some products such as whole-wheat crackers have already switched to soybean oil without any hydrogenation. However, other labels such as chips, cookies, granola bars and peanut butter are adjusting their products to include palm or palm kernel oil or cottonseed oil, all lesser quality oils — especially the palm oil.

You might also be surprised to see a product listed as trans fat-free and while reading the ingredients discover that it contains partially hydrogenated oil. According to the FDA, as long as the total amount of partially hydrogenated fat is less than 0.5 grams, it may be listed as trans fat-free or 0 grams.

The fast-food industry is also at work trying to adjust its recipes to remove the partially hydrogenated oil before the 2006 deadline. Your best bet is to limit foods that contain trans fat.

Try grilled sandwiches or deli meats with whole grain bread, and fresh fruit or vegetables on the side. If you have a "salt" or "sweet tooth," go for natural sources such as corn tortilla chips with salsa, fresh popped popcorn instead of microwave varieties, homemade muffius, sorbet or frozen yogurt.

Read the label and stick to the serving size. At least this is a start for controlling the amount of trans fat or other oils of lesser quality.

Stratford's 'Cat' is serious, philosophical

Even with all the earthiness and coarse talk that make the play's characters hypnotically fascinating. "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" is a serious, philosophical play. Tennessee Williams knew how to hold viewers' attention with provocative personalities.

Maggie the Cat strives alternately to shame or seduce her husband Brick back into their marriage bed. But Williams also knew how to frame characters and action to explore issues of life that troubled his soul. Thus he presents Brick as escaping his disgust with the hypocrisy, which he calls mendacity, that he sees in everyone around him by drinking himself into oblivion.

Or as audiences interpreted it when the play first appeared a half century ago, perhaps Brick may be escaping his own ambivalence about an implied sexual attachment for his dead buddy, Skipper.

Today that issue is no longer such a sensation.

Meanwhile, Brick's older brother, Gooper, and his wife, Mae, are maneuvering to gain control of the estate of the father, Big Daddy. Facing his mortality due to cancer, Big Daddy is struggling to resolve his younger (and favorite) son's alcoholism. He wants to be comfortable about making Brick heir to the biggest plantation in the Mississippi Delta.

The competitive ambitions and behavior in this conflicted family crisis make a gripping story on stage and require a performance that is both powerful enough to enliven the exciting drama, and sensitive enough to communicate Williams' underlying philosophical message.

The entire cast at this year's Stratford Festival production dods a manage. able job of accomplishing both. Artistic Director Richard Monette explains his inclusion of the play in this summer's repertory as celebrating the 50th anniversary of its appearance on Broadway and the fact that it fits the Festival's theme of this season: Saints and Sinners.

But the quality of the play and its ideas make it a great choice for any season. Going beyond the attractions of the plot, the concepts of social values and even the purpose of human life on which Williams has based his script are good for discussion long after leaving the theater. Living in the age of existentialism, the playwright seemed to hold values that coincided with the ideas of Sartre and Camus. He reflects awareness of the isolation of the individual consciousness and concern that life may have no meaning except what we invent out of our own imagina-

His characters, Maggie, Big Daddy and the mother. Big Mama, often refer to life as being all we've got, how short it is, and how important it is to hang on to it. Especially reminiscent of existential ideas is Brick's expression of disgust with the dishonest self-justification of our affluent society. Williams' play achieves a kind of immortality through the continued, even intensified, significance of this concept as applied to business ethics of today.

The cast in this production is especially effective in bringing the family drama to life. Brick, played by David Snellgrove, is focused most of the time on achieving the inner peace that an unmeasured but large quantity of Echo Spring bourbon brings.

His occasional outbursts are prompted by all the other members of his family seeking to break him out of his alcoholic escape.

He is actually sympathetic as he strives to be free of all that hassle about fathering a child and taking over the enormous estate. His conversations with James anguished. Early on, they are merely ill-fated attempts to connect genuinely in conversation. The efforts to open their hearts to each other are painfully. realistic.

Like Shakespeare, Williams worked to create complexity and ambiguity in his characters and again, like the Bard, he was nonjudgmental, letting each point of view stand on its own. Nonetheless, he drives home the existential idea that we alone on earth are aware of our mortality and must work hard to deny that life is fundamentally meaningless.

Perhaps the most thoroughly consistent personification of these ideas is the performance by Lally Cadeaux as Big Mama. She is the most convincing exponent of the very hypocrisy that Brick objects to; yet with the very inconsistency that Williams identifies in human character, Brick seems to love her and indulges the sincerity of her beliefs.

Moreover, Cadeaux creates a stage personality that is a gem of a portrait of the wealthy Southern Plantation owner's wife who has never quite shed the tastes, style and mannerisms of her humble origins.

In portraying the key figure of Maggie, Brick's wife, Cynthia Dale faced the biggest challenge of all the principals.

The first act is her show. It is practically a monologue, responded to by Brick with grunts, sighs, monosyllabic replies and interruptions to get another

As she strives to convey the details of the family conflict along with her own cter's sims and frus-s, Date is obliged to race unrough her lines, sacrificing one of the less obvious yet ultimately more precious qualities of the play.

Again, like Shakespeare, Williams the playwright is also a poet. The lines he wrote have many cadences, metaphors and repetitions of signal phrases, like the play's title and the word mendacity, which are used repeatedly by several characters. While the lines cannot be read as poetry, they demand an expressive flow and pacing. This was lacking in the opening act.

As the stage filled with the rest of the cast in acts two and three, however, it was in evidence as both the drama and the ideas that Williams was illustrating with it were forcefully portraved.

Add to that the seriocomic relief of Gooper, Mae and their five children trying unsuccessfully to win the favorable attention of Big Daddy and making themselves totally obnoxious in the process, the performance is a powerful statement of one of the truly great American plays of the 20th century.

Moreover it can be enjoyed thoroughly on the less profound level of the drama of family conflict. But its real fascination is in the revelation of the values that Williams was eager to impress on his audiences, especially on American society. This production provides an outstanding opportunity to experience both. Anyone who has seen the film version with its Hollywood modifications should keep in mind that this production represents Williams' original intent. The differences are important.

Baked Shrimp with Tomatoes 1/3 cup plus 3 tablespoons olive oil, divided 3 medium onions, > chopped 2 14.5-oz. cans diced tomatoes with juice 4 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley, divided

1 tablespoon dried oregano 5 garlic cloves, minced

2 pounds medium to large shrimp, peeled and deveined (tails left on) 1/2 cup ouzo (unsweet-

1/2 teaspoon cayenne

ened anise liquor) 1/2 cup pitted Kalamata olives, halved

8 oz. crumbled feta cheese

1 loaf crusty bread Salt and pepper

Heat 1/3 cup of the olive oil in a large, deep skillet over medium heat. Add the onions and saute until golden, about 12 minutes. Add the tomatoes (and juice), 3 tablespoons of the parsley, oregano, garlic and cayenne.

Bring the mixture to a boil, reduce heat to medium-low, cover and simmer for 20 minutes, until the sauce thickens. Season with salt and pepper and transfer to a bowl. Cover to keep warm.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In the same skillet, heat the remaining 3 tablespoons of olive oil over medium-high heat.

Season the uncooked shrimp with salt and pepper and add to the skillet. Saute the shrimp for a few minutes, remove skillet from heat and add the ouzo.

Carefully ignite the ouzo with a match and return the skillet to medium heat. Saute until the flames subside (a few more minutes).

Add the tomato mixture and the olives to the skillet and toss. Transfer the shrimp/tomato mixture to a large (3 quart), greased baking dish and top with the crumbled feta.

Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes, until heated throughout. Sprinkle the remaining tablespoon of fresh parsley over the top. Serve with crusty bread.

You can also ladle this yummy shrimp over cooked pasta.

Either way, it will certainly be the talk at your Fourth of July party next week.

A few Habitat homes were built in Windsor as part of the JCWP, and Carter was scheduled to be at the Canadian site by noon one day.

However, he and Rosalynn wanted to finish the door casings they were working on at the Detroit house, so they made an effort to come in the morning to complete the job.

"He likes to work, he doesn't like to be a figurehead, really," said Jack Williams of the Farms, a crew leader at the Grosse Pointe Partners'

The Carters also presented Bibles to all of the new homeowners during dedications later in the week.

Workers said Carter provided inspiration as they hammered, painted, put up siding and did insulation in the summer sun.

"His presence here makes it a lot more fun - you don't have a chance to meet an expresident very often," said Woods resident Ted Fly of the Grosse Pointe Partners.

Even with the excitement of JCWP, participants from the Grosse Pointe Partners said they had a rewarding personal experience.

They were touched by the people they met and the family they helped achieve home ownership.

Anne Archer of the Woods spent her vacation time working on the JCWP with the partners.

"I think it's wonderful to work with all these different Dusette, works for the U.S.

"The homeowner is a wonderful person," Archer said. "She's actually gone into the house and decided where she wants the furniture that's how excited she is about this house."

Williams said Dusette is "very grateful," and he is glad to help.

"We came with a sense of helping these homeowners improve their lives so their kids get better grades in school and have a better place to live and kind of join the American system," he said.

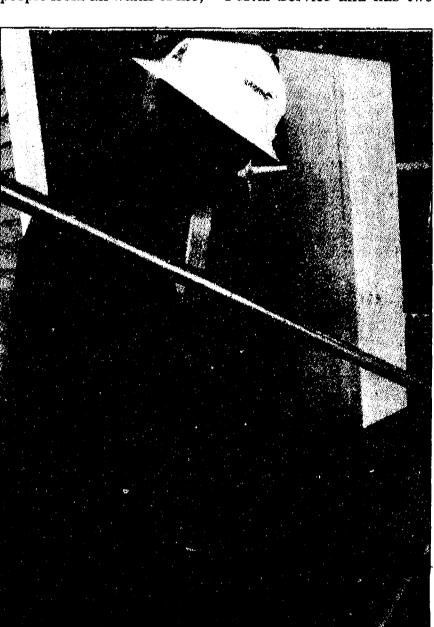

In order to move into the home, homeowners must be able to pay a no-interest mortgage and complete at least 300 hours of "sweat equity," where they work on the construction of their home.

Dusette has worked alongside of the partners throughout the Frakes says homeowners are scheduled to move in in about three weeks.

Ideally, organizers said, the JCWP will lead to a sense of community and better lives for these families.

It will take a few years for the neighborhood to fully develop, but the volunteers, corporate sponsors and state certainly did a magnificent job getting it started.

As Carter said, "There's something special about Michigan.'

'Magnificent Seven' formed cornerstone of ULS champions

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

They came to University Liggett School as a freshpotential.

They left as key members of the first girls soccer team to win a state championship at ULS.

"I call them Magnificent Seven," coach David Backhurst said of the seniors - Allison Jones. Leeza Kossak, Erin Deane, Megan Getz, Chrissie Keersmaekers, Jordan McIlroy and Laura Nicholl.

"It has been a pleasure to coach them for the last four years. They've been so coachable, intelligent and pleasant. I've had several seniors on other teams, but I've never had a group of seniors that have all played such a key role. Their graduation is certainly going to leave a void on our team."

Wood is first tennis coach in national prep Hall of Fame

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Bob Wood looked at the state championship trophy that University Liggett School socor coach David Backhurst was proudly holding and smiled.

"I've seen a few of those," said Wood, the long-time tennis coach and athletic director at ULS.

Indeed he has.

Wood's boys and girls tennis teams won a combined 39 state championships for ULS.

On Saturday, Wood, who now lives in semi-retirement in Jackson, Tenn., will be inducted into the National High School Hall of Fame at ceremonies in San Antonio, Texas. The Hall of Fame was started in 1982 by the National Federation of State High School Associations, and Wood is the first tennis coach to be honored.

Wood's exploits in Grosse Pointe have reached Tennessee, where he is listed as athletic director of the University School Jackson.

A story about his election to the Hall of Fame appeared in the local paper, and when Wood was shopping a stranger recognized

"There is? What?" Wood

"That means that 39 a trophy, the man said, incredulously.

Later, Wood reflected on the remark.

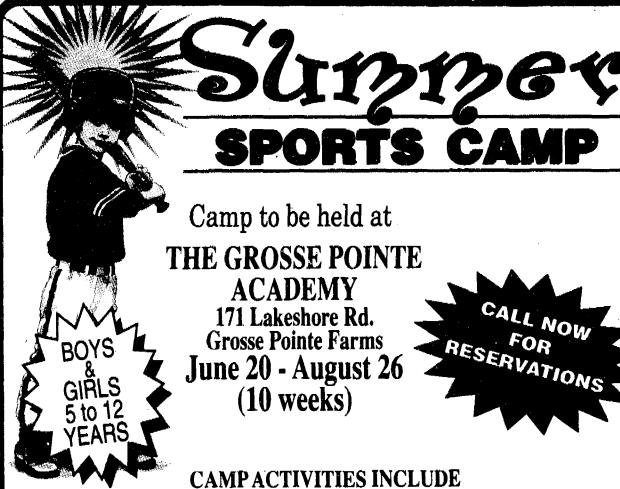

"I never thought about it that way, but it's true," Wood said. "That's a new way of looking at it."

Wood guided his ULS boys tennis teams to 27 state championships, including 13 in a row from 1972-84, while his girls squads won 12 state titles.

With his induction on Saturday, Wood becomes the third Michigan high school coach in the NFHS Hall of Fame. The others are Lofton Greene, who coached basketball at River Rouge High School, and Diane Laffey, who coaches basketball and softball at Regina High School.

There are five categories for induction into the NFHS the Yankees. Henry Muller, Andrew Jack Strachan, Jacob Diluigi and Lepczyk, Alex Cendrowski and Megan Polack made excellent defensive plays. The Yankees also got solid fielding from catcher Joe Andreoli and Gretchen Shirar, Lilly Sterr and Kelsey Whitney.

Max Tech and Chris Peltola scored the Cubs' runs with aggressive baserunning. Tom McShane and Annie Galager had strong defensive games.

Twins 16, Rockies 15

Mike Yacobucci capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the sixth with a home run to deep left-center field as the Twins squeezed out the victory. Josh Davey drew a one-out walk and his aggressive baserunning led to the tying run. The Twins got off to a fast start with 12 early runs on timely two-out hitting by Davey, Andrew Barnett, Joe Becker, Flowers and Andrew Cornwall. Davey also pitched three strong innings, while Yacobucci and winning pitcher Gunnar Peery helped keep the Rockies at bay. The Twins also had fine fielding and baserunning from Colin Anderson, Phoebe Piku, Matt Wronski and Brian Fennell.

The Rockies scored five runs in the top of the sixth to take the lead, and the inning ended on a diving stop and throw from his knees by Cornwall. The key hit in the inning was a double by David Harris. The Rockies got back into the game with strong hitting and solid defense from Steve Brengman, Chris Montague, Andy Pfeuffer and Marco Leggett.

In addition to the 27 state championships, Wood's boys tennis teams had seven runner-up finishes in his 37 years at the helm. Although he didn't put a huge emphasis on dual match records, Wood's teams had a 328-206 record.

Wood coached the ULS girls teams for a total of 13 seasons from 1987-91 and 1994-2001. His 1989-9i teams were undefeated in dual meets, and his overall record in dual meets was 131-32. The girls teams at ULS won 22 invitational tournaments while Wood was head coach.

Wood also did much to promote the sport of tennis in Michigan, especially at the high school level.

Treat for roots after sewer is cleaned

Q. Mr. Hardware, I have a sewer line that clogs yearly with roots. A sewer company opens the drain, and I then use copper sulfate to kill the remaining roots. Either the copper sulfate does not work or I am using it wrong. What can I do short of replacing the main line?

— Tommy in St. Clair Shores.

A. Tommy, the old standby root killer, copper sulfate, is being discouraged by treatment plants due to the damage it causes to the biology at the plant.

We now recommend a root killer called Roebic's Foaming Root Killer. It is sold in one-pound containers for about $18.99 at most hardware stores.

The best way to control roots is to mechanically remove the roots with a sewer cable and then treat the sewer line with a foaming root control. Leave it undisturbed for six hours for the best results. It is called "foaming" because it coats the top of the sewer line where roots can enter.

To use, pour Roebic's Foaming Root Killer into the main cleanout, and chase it with 3 gallons of water. I use 2 gallons of water when the roots are closer than 50 feet from the house. Ask your sewer guy what the distance his cable was out when he hit the roots.

Immediately replace the sewer cap after pouring the water in the cleanout; the foam could back up out the drain. Do not use this product with a clogged drain or you could be up to your knees in foam!

When getting the line cleaned start with a small cutter so as not to jam the cable in the roots. Then work up to larger cutters to remove as much of the roots as possible. Be very careful not to get a large cutter tangled with roots and not be able to remove it out of the cleanout.

Many sewer men who encounter large clusters of roots will only be able to run a small cutter through the line. They will then recommend using copper sulfate for a couple of weeks to weaken the roots and then return to run the larger cutters.

Secrets for a star-spangled bash

(NAPSI) — The young and young at heart have enjoyed Red Vines red licorice as a sweet snack for more than 90 years. To add a festive spin to this chewy treat, Lulu Powers, chef and party planner to the stars, including Leonardo DiCaprio, Will Smith Madonna, offers a unique way to sweeten up a Fourth of July party or other patriotic occasions with her Red Vines and White and Blue Cookies. This easy recipe features a deliciously creamy cookie made with cream cheese, maple syrup and chopped white chocolate. Each cookie is topped with chewy red licorice twists and fresh blueberries to form mini fireworks of flavor.

In addition to this star-spangled treat, Powers offers these tips for a spectacular Independence Day bash:

• Summer is a great time to take advantage of the outdoors; so move

Don't sweat it: Follow these seven easy steps

Remember last summer when you and your family couldn't sleep and were cranky and irritable with the summer heat and high humidity? Worried that this summer could be worse? If so, this might be the perfect time to consider installing or replacing your central air conditioning system for your home

If your air conditioner is over 10 years old, you may want to consider asking a certified contractor like Flame to perform a free evaluation of your system. New air conditioning systems offer more efficiency, quieter operation and environmentally safe refrigerant (Puron versus Freon-22).

You should also be aware that in January 2006 federal law mandates that no air conditioner can be manufactured with an SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio) rating below 13. The present mandate requirement is 10.0. The more efficient units are also more costly.

This will translate into retail price increases of 30 to 50 percent starting this fall.

The moral is if your air conditioner is over 10 years old now is the time to replace it before the large cost changes take place.

Based on over 55 years of selling, servicing and installation experience, Flame Furnace has developed a seven-step checklist that makes purchase of your new central air conditioning system relatively stress free:

Air Conditioning

- 1. Choose a qualified contractor. Ask your Chamber of Commerce, friends, or family for referral. Look for a contractor who has been in business and has trained and NATE (North American Technician Excellence) certified technicians to install one brand of equipment.
- 2. Call your City Hall and speak with your building inspector. Central air conditioning installations require refrigeration and electrical permits to be filed with the city and inspections by the building inspector upon completion. Check to see if there have been any problems with the contractor.
- 3. Set up an appointment with the contractor. Make sure the contractor comes to your home at your convenience, and you have the name of the person visiting. Make sure he is licensed and insured. Ask if the contractor belongs to the ACCA (Air Conditioning Contractors of America). Ask for a copy of his licenses, both mechanical and refrigerant handling and a certificate of insurance. Visit the showroom, Ask for references. Ask about NATE certification.
- 4. Get a written estimate. Talk to the contractor about your home, any special comfort needs, and how long you plan to stay in your home. This information will help the contractor propose the best central air conditioning system and associated equipment for you. Have the contractor list exactly what is covered by the estimate new equipment installed, old equipment removed, warranties and time frame.

- 5. Explore payment options. Your contractor should offer options: cash, check, Visa and MasterCard, or 100 percent financing with terms. Often contractors ask for down payments to schedule the job and secure the equipment.
- 6. Schedule installation. When you schedule your installation, make sure it is convenient for you and ask for the names of the installation technicians. Check IDs when the technicians arrive. Before they leave, good technicians should explain how the system works, and there should be literature, maintenance instructions and phone numbers on your central air conditioning compressor. Your home should be left cleaner than when they arrived.
- 7. Purchase a maintenance plan. Annual maintenance of your central air conditioning system saves energy and often prolongs the life of your equipment. Good contractors offer these plans, and the cost of the plan is often covered by the savings in your utility bill.

your party out by the pool, down by the beach or to a local park. The open space may entice the guests to linger longer.

• Purchase a large piece of red, white and/or blue fabric at a fabric store to use as a table covering or picnic blanket. Purchase blue or white paper dinner napkins, and wrap silverware in them. Instead of a napkin ring, tie a red licorice twist around the napkin. Put an American flag toothpick (available at most party stores) through the twist to hold the knot in place.

• Stir up a pitcher of lemonade with red licorice and mint ice cubes by chopping red licorice twists and mint in ice cube trays. Add either water or simple syrup (sugar water) and freeze. Place in lemonade drinks or float in Blue Curacao martinis.

 Make red licorice marshmallow pops by inserting a Popsicle stick into a large marshmallow. Dip into melted chocolate, and roll in chopped red licorice twists. Let pops dry by resting them in an empty egg carton.

• For a nighttime party, fill a vase three-quarters full with sand. Add shells inside the vase, so that they are visible on the outside. Place candles in the vase.

• Roll down lunch-size paper bags and fill with nuts, dried fruit, popcorn and red licorice. Separate each ingredient into its own bag and cluster bags together on a table or counter. Supply white Chinese takeout containers so that guests can customize their own trail mix. Kids can decorate their boxes with markers and stickers.

Red Vines White and Blue Cookies

Recipe by celebrity chef Lulu Powers

2 sticks butter

3 ounces of cream cheese

1/2 cup sugar

1/4 cup maple syrup

1 teaspoon vanilla

2 cups flour

2 cups white chocolate, chopped

Additional sugar for coating

Red Vines Original Red Twists, chopped

1 cup fresh blueberries

Preheat oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

In a large bowl, cream together butter, cream cheese, sugar and maple syrup. Add vanilla, flour, chopped white chocolate and mix well.

Roll dough into 1/2 tablespoon balls, and then roll each ball in sugar and place directly on cookie sheet. Use a silicon pad, or spray a cooking sheet with vegetable shortening.

Press a slight thumb print into the center of the dough ball so that you can add the blueberries after baking. Place the chopped Red Vines on top of dough balls surrounding the thumb print to form a burst formation. Dough balls may flatten out a little. Red Vines can most easily be cut by holding four or five pieces together and cutting as one would cut green onions.

Bake 12 to 15 minutes. Place a blueberry in the center of each cookie, while the cookie is still warm, to complete the firework design.
