GROSSE POINTE WOODS

Petitioners seek term limits

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods voters might have to decide if mayoral and city council terms should be limited during the Nov. 7 election.

Mayor Robert Novitke and councilmembers approved the resolution for language concerning term limits for the city's governing body. It will be submitted through the Wayne County director of elections for publishing purposes.

The resolution and eventual ballot language must be approved by Gov. Jennifer Granholm to be on the Nov. 7 election.

"It's my understanding that the attorney general will review the language and if it is suitable, it will be sent to the governor, who will then in turn review it. If everything is found suitable, it will be sent

"No person shall be elected to the office of Mayor more than two times. No person shall be elected to the office of Councilperson more than two times."

Petition language to Wayne County to be put on the ballot," Novitke said. "By approving this resolution, it does not mean I agree with the decision to have term limits."

The proposed amendment of the city charter reads as follows: "No person shall be elected to the office of Mayor more than two times. No person shall be elected to the office of Councilperson more than two times."

Several Woods residents initiated the petition drive and gathered more than 700 signatures. The petition needed the verified signatures of 5 percent (647 were needed) of the city's registered voters to be accepted.

City clerk Lisa Hathaway had 45 days to verify the signatures and returned them to city attorney Don Berschback on Aug. 11. She will also forward the paperwork to the state's attorney general and Granholm.

The paperwork will also be sent to the Wayne County Bureau of Elections.

The attorney general will review the documents and make a recommendation to the governor.

The resolution and ballot language are subject to criticism from interested parties, the attorney general, the governor, the Wayne County Bureau of Elections, individual councilmembers and city residents.

Lot swap squares off Village

Neighborhood Club, City exchange parking lots

By Rebecca Jones
Staff Writer

The casual parker won't notice a difference.

But a property transfer approved Monday, Aug. 21, between the Neighborhood Club and City of Grosse Pointe means the Neighborhood Club can look to the future with a designing eye.

The two entities will swap portions of parking lots between St. Clair and Neff, adjacent to Lot 3.

The properties are the exact square footage, but the exchange leaves both sides with rectangular parcels, rather than awkward L-shaped lots.

"This enables both of us to 'square off' our property, so now we both have rectangles," said John Bruce, executive director of the Neighborhood Club. "Right now, we're kind of L-shaped with a fat leg. ... This is a very important first step."

The Neighborhood Club hopes to expand its programs and services with a goal of becoming a "premier destination

Zoning, yacht club at odds

GPYC says it can't comply with change

By Rebecca Jones
Staff Writer

A four-month moratorium on accessory buildings is over in Grosse Pointe Shores.

New rules are in place after the Village Council passed revisions to its zoning ordinance on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

The changes address the number and location of accessory buildings, such as tool sheds, as well as garages and athletic courts.

Under the new ordinance, homeowners cannot install an accessory building within 10 feet of the rear yard line. The previous setback was six feet.

As before, each yard is limited to one accessory structure, in addition to a detached garage.

However, the new ordinance adds two new categories of ac-

♦ VOTE ON FLUORIDATION PLANNED: The controversial issue of fluoridation will be placed before Grosse Pointe Farms voters again in November.

The Farms City Council approved placing the measure on the ballot as an advisory vote after receiving a petition bearing the names of 355 voters.

The issue was defeated 1,832 to 1,366 in the spring 1955 election. City of Grosse Pointe voters, who receive their water from the Farms, will not have a say in whether to add the substance to the water supply.

♦ FARMS MAY OWN SUBMERGED LAND: Grosse Pointe Farms might have a valid argument in its bid for a deed to its Pier Park property.

According to Farms city attorney Edward P. Wright, when the Farms purchased five pieces of property years ago, part of which was dedicated to permit the construction of Lakeshore, the city had also purchased riparian rights to the property. Wright said the city has a 50-50 chance of proving its claim and obtaining a deed for the property.

In order to streamline the state's judicial system, a state law requires all cities to convert to the district court system.

Opponents of the district court say the municipal courts work just fine and switching to a district court is an expensive alternative.

♦ CLUES KEEP SLAYING PROBE OPEN: Grosse Pointe Woods police received two anonymous letters recently that shed light on the shooting death of a 17-year-old boy earlier this summer.

The letter writers claim they were drinking alcohol with the victim until about 5:30 a.m. that day when they dared him to break into a home. Minutes later, the 17-year-old was shot four times by the homeowner who thought he was a burglar.

Police are searching for the letter writers to verify the story.

♦ TOFU TOPIC OF NEW CLASS: "All About Tofu" is one of the new fall classes offered for area residents through the department of continuing education.

"Chop it, mince it, blend it—it picks up any flavor it comes in contact with," said course instructor Linda Wheeler-Jones. The U.S. tofu industry has almost tripled during the past six years.

A 911 caller reported seeing a man covered in blood.

When police arrived, witnesses said the man fired his shotgun in the air. "We literally begged him to drop the gun," said Public Safety Director Richard Caretti. He then pointed the gun at the officers.

Three officers fired at the man. He was declared dead on arrival by Bon Secours Hospital doctors. The man had inflicted two shots upon himself, in the wrist and neck.

♦ KERCHEVAL BUSINESS DISTRICTS DISCUSS JOINT MARKETING PLANS: About 100 merchants and business people from the Hill, Village and Park associations met last week to discuss ways to market themselves better not only to Grosse Pointe residents, but to people outside the area.

A Kercheval Avenue Directory is one step. The fold-out guide debuted earlier this summer.

Merchants also discussed marketing plans from billboard to direct mail to a Christmastime trolley.

♦ METERLESS MACK PROVES POPULAR: Two weeks into an experiment to determine if parking meters should remain on Mack, many Grosse Pointe Woods merchants are ready to make the change permanent.

Business is up 15 percent at Lochmoor Hardware. Edwin Paul of the Edwin Paul Salon said his business is the best it's been in 11 years in the Woods.

Mayor Robert Novitke met with business owners to discuss lessons from the experiment.

♦ ADMINISTRATION BUILDING GETS A LIFT: The Grosse Pointe Public School Systems' administration buildings will be getting an elevator and new restrooms.

The $964,000 renovations are intended to provide greater handicap accessibility to the adjoined buildings, constructed in 1905 and 1916.

Currently, building visitors must climb stairs to access offices.

♦ PLANNERS GIVE SHOP OWNER WRONG SIGNAL: Due to an interpretation of the Grosse Pointe Woods sign ordinance, the owners of a mom-and-pop gift shop on Mack have not been allowed to hang up a sign for four months.

The city ordinance allows signs to display 10 "message units," legalese for words, logos and ampersands. Planning commissioners took it upon themselves to decide whether things like hours of operation and credit card logos may be displayed.

Mayor Robert Novitke directed the planning commission to meet again and rethink their stance against the sign proposal.

♦ MARSHALL FIELD'S BRINGS NEW TRADITIONS: Eastland Center will never be the same when all the Hudson's signs come down, despite the fact that the staff, merchandise and location will remain unchanged. Marshall Field's might not have quite the same ring, but Hudson's older cousin from Chicago brings its own tradition to Detroit.

in Grosse Pointe," Bruce said. "Now the Neighborhood Club will very carefully, and yet with some alacrity, try to determine what are the best programs and facilities that the Neighborhood Club can plan for that will serve the constituents," Bruce said.

In the transfer agreement, the Neighborhood Club offered $50,000 toward the city's administrative, engineering and reconfiguration costs.

City Manager Peter Dame said the trade lets the city develop plans for Lot 3 with a lot shape that has more flexibility, without incurring any upfront expenditures of reconfiguring the lot upon transfer of the properties.

Until either side moves forward with plans, use of the parking lots will remain unchanged.

"To the casual parker, there will be no real difference at all," Dame said.

No timeline has been set for the Neighborhood Club, but Bruce said future expansion is something the club has been planning for years, since it purchased two homes adjacent to its property on Waterloo.

The club will work with consultants and rely on documentation such as a 2000 master recreation plan and 3-year-old strategic plan.

Council members approved the property transfer unanimously, each offering continued cooperation.

cessory buildings: playhouses and play structures. A playhouse, with at least two walls and a roof, counts toward the accessory building limit. But a play structure, like a swingset, does not.

The zoning ordinance had been under review for seven months. The timing also coincides with a new state law that required municipalities to rework their local zoning ordinances.

Planning commissioners held a public hearing and approved changes at their Friday, Aug. 4, meeting.

"These changes in our zoning ordinance will keep us out of trouble for a while and answer some questions that have come up in the past few years," said Village attorney Mark

McInerney.

Requests for athletic courts will be considered under special land use permits, which gives the council more say in regulating things such as lighting, screening and hours of operation. Garages with more than three bays will be given the same treatment.

At the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club's request, the council postponed voting on the section of the ordinance that regulates the village's Park/Club District. The yacht club is the only property that qualifies.

The section used to be two sentences, addressing permitted uses and parking.

Now, it is two pages, spelling out permitted uses, screening, setbacks, density and parking.

"Our zoning ordinance currently provides few requirements or standards for consideration, a situation that could arguably permit unregulated activity in this district," McInerney said in a memo to the council.

The GPYC asked for more time to study the proposed changes and how it might be affected.

"Some of the requirements in this amendment, we can't even comply with," said Mark Peyser, an attorney representing the GPYC. For example, under the new rules, the club would be 142 parking spaces short. Currently, required parking is based on overall square footage, but the ordinance proposes to change it based on the maximum number of people the fire marshal says can occupy the principal building.

The topic will come back to the council at its Tuesday, Oct. 17, meeting.

Kercheval Place update

By Rebecca Jones
Staff Writer

Coldwater Creek and Kercheval Place as a whole are close to becoming a reality.

The City of Grosse Pointe Council approved the sign design for the women's clothing store, which is scheduled to be the first of the shops and offices to open in the former Jacobson's building in the Village.

Mayor Dale Scrase complimented the design of the Coldwater Creek sign, which hangs on a bracket. He suggested that other Kercheval Place tenants could use a similar sign bracket.

Council members also heard an update about the construction process at their Monday, Aug. 21, meeting.

The exterior building construction should be finished by the third week in September, said Scott Bowers, architect with Bowers & Rein, on behalf of Kercheval Place owners St. Clair Associates.

Men's clothier Jos. A. Bank has selected a contractor and has a 90-day buildout plan, Bowers said.

Bowers said he has also talked daily with Trader Joe's, a specialty grocery store that is expected to occupy space at the back of the building.

Councilman John Stemple asked if other prospective tenants were ready to announce their arrival.

"We're getting quite a few now that we're putting touches on the building," Bowers said.

Coldstone Creamery is set to open at 11 a.m. Sept. 25 — to the surprise of councilman Kris Pfahler.

"You can eat ice cream at 11 o'clock?" he asked.

The Grosse Pointe City Council approved the new signage Monday night for Coldwater Creek women's clothier in the former Jacobson's building at the corner of Notre Dame and Kercheval.

"I was shocked," Arthur said of her poem, "Parking," being selected. "I think it's one of my better pieces, but I still don't know why they chose it. Poetry's very subjective."

"I definitely think I was beaten by the winner. She was very good — they were all up to a very high level."

At South, creative writing teacher Harry Campion and a panel of English teachers selected the most eligible poems for competition, open to Michigan high school juniors and seniors.

"It's a good one," said Brigham Narins, a Thomson Gale editor and judge, of Arthur's poem. "This one I like in particular because it deals with sexuality in a mature way. This presents the event of making out in a car without saying 'I'm making out in a car and it's a really important event to me.'"

"Most poems we see say that in a really flat way. This one sort of lets you discover on your own what the situation is and the person going through it."

Arthur's fictional poem discusses a loss of innocence and is about a former dancer who has an encounter with a young man in a parking lot. Although Arthur does not dance, she was inspired by the juxtaposition of dance and intimacy.

She also submitted a poem titled "Smoke," about a girl who looks into her mother's mirror, reflecting upon becoming her.

"It's basically just me expressing how my peers feel about their mothers," Arthur said. "I really like my mom, but a lot of people fear they're going to become their mothers. They have really negative and mixed emotions toward them."

Being able to conjure varying emotions and themes through poetry is one element of the unique art Arthur enjoys best.

"Poetry is an interesting mode of expression," she said. "It can be interpreted in so many different ways for people. I like to write poems that tell a story and expand a moment in time, like take a short story and turn it into poetry format."

The only aspect Arthur doesn't like about poetry writing is the laborious writing process.

"I enjoy revising the best," she said. "I like coming up with the idea and revising it and making it more effective than the actual writing part. It's kind of tedious to me."

Because Arthur has been busy working at the country club's golf shack making sandwiches, French fries and hamburgers, she hasn't had much time for poetry this summer.

"I have a couple ideas but I haven't started them yet," she said. "I think I'm just going to keep them to myself for now. It's hard to talk about an idea before you have it expressed."

For inspiration, Arthur looks to the writing styles of many authors instead of relying on just one author's approach.

"I recently read 'The Fountainhead' by Ayn Rand," she said. "I didn't necessarily agree with her ideals, but I thought her writing was incredible. It's very beautiful and well-paced. It's a 700-page book, but it still moves along fairly quickly."

"She has a really unique way of throwing images together and characterizing different people. Sometimes I think she characterizes too much because her main characters seem goofy because they're just so strong in their natures."

The future Wayne State University student became interested in poetry during the summer after 10th grade when she attended a week-long writing camp at Wright State University in Ohio.

Arthur stopped writing after camp but started again this year.

Campion, Arthur's advanced creative writing teacher, inspired her creative side.

"I've had a lot of really good English teachers," she said. "Mr. Campion definitely pushes you to get work done and improve your writing, but he's also really easy to talk to and a really friendly guy. He pushed me to get into slam poetry, where you take your poem and perform it."

Because Arthur is terrified of public speaking, performing slam poetry was an exceptional feat. During the weekend of May 19, she attended a poetry slam on Mackinac Island with three other South students and 11 high school students from different schools.

"It was a lot of fun," she said. "It was really interesting to see the other schools' way of (slamming). They started with the performance instead of the writing. We start with the writing instead."

In competitive poetry slams, a person has three minutes to recite a poem using only hand motions and voice fluctuations while reading the poem aloud. Performers with top scores continue until eliminated in a total of three rounds.

"Scores are based on five random judges' reactions," Arthur said. "It's on a score of one to 10. One, never write again. Ten, the judges loved it and were moved beyond belief. The guy that won wrote a poem about punching a squid. It was pretty cool."

This fall at Wayne State, Arthur will major in English and is especially excited for her creative writing and film classes. Career-wise, she would like to become an English professor, movie director, or video editor.

"I'm really excited (for college)," she said. "I was getting pretty bored with high school. I was excited to go. And I'll be able to stop making French fries, which is always good."

While poetry might not be included in her long-term professional goals, Arthur will continue writing on the side.

"It would definitely be a fun thing to be able to do," Arthur said of writing professionally. "But I'm not sure if I'd be good enough to get things published. I wouldn't be able to make a living doing poetry — but I definitely won't stop writing either."

Zoning Board of Appeal fees to increase

By Rebecca Jones
Staff Writer

expensive in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Homeowners who want to appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals may soon have to pay a $500 application fee, up from $175.

The increase is due to a new state law requiring more public notice for issues like variance requests.

The new law, called the Zoning Enabling Act, took effect July 1. As a result, Grosse Pointe Shores had to change five sections of its zoning ordinance, which was already under review.

A legal ad must now be published in the newspaper 15 days prior to the public hearing for rezoning, variances, appeals and special land use permits.

Grosse Pointe Shores will tack the cost of the ads onto the application fee residents pay, said Village Manager Mike Kenyon.

"We're not going to make any money on this," Kenyon said.

Ads typically cost about $300, he said. The village's original application fee is $175, which covers the cost of the city's review process.

Council members will officially establish the new fee structure at a future meeting.

The 15-day notice requirement also means homeowners' requests will be delayed, possibly up to six weeks, due to the board's monthly meeting schedule.

Grosse Pointe Farms will also make changes to its fee structure based on the average monthly publication costs incurred, said City Manager Shane Reeside.

Currently, those who appear before the Farms' ZBA typically pay a $400 application fee, which covers the city's review and consultant fee, and applicants are invoiced for the cost of necessary ads.

In addition to public notice, the Zoning Enabling Act sets standards for municipalities to use when considering variances.

Grosse Pointe Shores Village attorney Mark McNerney explained that a variance essentially gives "permission to break the law," and the new law defines how applicants must demonstrate practical difficulty or undue hardship before the board can grant permission.

The Village ordinance now states that any requested variance be the minimum necessary to meet the project's needs.

Dow gets parking variance

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

Peter Dow is anxious to lease one of his properties so the tenant can open a beauty salon/barber shop.

However, a big problem is parking and Bow wants to include five more spaces for customer parking near his building. To do this, he needs the Grosse Pointe Park Zoning Board of Appeals to approve a variance.

The ZBA did just that in a 5-1 vote after a lengthy discussion about parking in the south end of the city.

"I am thorough with my tenant checks, and I feel good about my new tenant and his beauty salon/barber shop," Dow said. "Unfortunately, the parking situation is poor behind my three storefronts on Kercheval in this end of the city. I need these extra parking spaces so my tenant can do business."

The business, located in the 15000 block of Kercheval, has only two available spaces. The new business will have two barber chair and three beauty salon chairs, giving the shop a maximum of five customers, if no one is waiting.

"We do have a parking situation there," councilmember Robert Denner said. "We need the extra parking spaces to help the businesses, which would benefit from more walking traffic up and down those blocks."

The beauty salon/barber shop will be open Monday through Saturday. Downtown thought the hours of operation will be 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day.

Two residents and the owner of Pointe Hardware & Lumber Co. opposed the variance, saying that the small business community can't afford another salon.

"Fixing the parking situation is a more creative use of city property," Denner said. "There is a need for more business because I think the more people we can get would help the other businesses."

A majority of the 120 golfers who participated in the inaugural Challenge Cup golf scramble took time to pose for the camera after the 18-hole event was finished. Grosse Pointe South beat rival Grosse Pointe North to gain bragging rights for a year.

Challenge Cup goes to South

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

The inaugural Challenge Cup golf outing between rivals Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South was a huge success, according to co-director Jim Saros.

South won the golf event played at Lochmoor Club, but it was the students of North and South's athletic teams who were the ultimate winners.

The South squad of Mike Stauale, Dan Bretz, Bruce Campbell, Mike Gemmete and Bill Rafoul posted a 16-under par.

Jim Saros and co-director Mike Stevenson raised between $50,000 and $75,000, which will be split equally between North and South's athletic funds.

"The event was an absolute home run," Saros said. "We had a lot of fun on the golf course, raising money for all of the dedicated boys and girls at North and South who participate in athletics. The competition was fierce and now Stevenson will have to wear my son's jersey during the North/South football game, as was our agreement."

School board members Ahmed Ismail, Fred Minturn, Brendan Walsh and Joan Dindoffer, Grosse Pointe Schools Superintendent Suzanne Klein, principals Al Diver (South) and Tim Bearden (North) and the new athletic directors, Brandon Sloane from South and Carmen Kennedy from North, were on hand for the event.

More than 200 men and women took part in the dinner and auction following the scramble. Saros said 110 local businesses sponsored a hole. Other businesses involved with donating items for auction were Travel World, Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers, George Koueiter & Sons Jewelers, Jim Saros Real Estate Co. and National Coney Island.

Harper Sport Shop donated the trophy and Ismail, owner of Speedy Photo, donated his work. Ismail took pictures of each group competing and gave each member a copy at the auction.

"Everyone involved with the event stepped up and made a tremendous effort," Saros said. "The rivalry was great between the golfers who had South or North ties, which was great. We're a great community here and after all, we're all friends."

Live and silent auctions were also held. Some of the items won were a weekend trip for two to Chicago, jewelry, Tigers tickets and Tigers playoff tickets (if they secure a playoff spot) and a suite to watch the Pistons and the Red Wings.

"Everyone said they had a ball at our inaugural Challenge Cup," Saros said. "I think we can double the revenue next year. We will see what can be done for that to happen."

The Challenge Cup can be viewed in Grosse Pointe South's trophy case until a year from now when the rivals battle for a second time.

Each year the winning team and year of the event will be engraved on the Challenge Cup.

GROSSE POINTE WOODS

Council OKs Cook Schoolhouse

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods Historical Commission members were all smiles after the city council approved the donation of the historic Cook Schoolhouse by owner Marc Alan.

In addition, City Administrator Mark Wollenweber said developer Larry Campbell is giving the city $26,000 to move the schoolhouse to a new, but not yet determined, location.

"It's going to be an exciting few months for our Historical Commission members and for everyone here in the Woods," councilmember Vicki Granger said.

City Building Inspector Gene Tutag said a structural engineer is coming out to inspect the schoolhouse from top to bottom.

Wollenweber also advised councilmembers that no asbestos was found in any sample taken from the schoolhouse and that a cost analysis will be performed to determine what the facility will cost the city in maintenance on a yearly basis.

Alan made the announcement last month.

"I'm not in this to make money," he said. "I want the city to be able to keep a historic building that our children can enjoy for years to come."

Councilmember Dona DeSantis-Reynolds is working with members of the Historical Commission to get Cook Schoolhouse a plaque signifying its historical value.

Term limits not needed

If you can't win in a fair election, change the rules. At least that is the philosophy of a handful of disgruntled Grosse Pointe Woods residents who are seeking term limits for their mayor and city council offices.

At Monday night's meeting where the mayor and council accepted and forwarded to the county and state a petition with some 650 signatures calling for two-term limits for the mayor and council, former Councilwoman Patricia Kukula-Chylinski spoke on behalf of the petitioners. Ms. Kukula-Chylinski lost in her bid last November to oust long-time incumbent Mayor Robert Novitke.

Also among those seeking term limits is Nancy Hames, a member of the Woods Planning Commission who failed in last November's election to become a city councilwoman.

Some would say this whole term-limits gambit is a matter of sour grapes.

Grosse Pointe Woods does have a system of term limits. It is called running for re-election every four years. Last November's challengers, however, failed to convince voters it was time for a change.

The truth is things are going comparably well in the Woods. The Mack commercial district is nearly 100 percent occupied. The City recently completed a major water main replacement along the busy thoroughfare with minimal impact on businesses and residents.

Vernier is getting much needed repaving from the gravel up, which is nearing completion. The Woods continues to be rated among the safest cities in southeast Michigan, and its taxes are among the lowest.

True, homes are not selling quickly, but that is the case throughout the Pointes, Birmingham, southeast Michigan and the state. There is little the mayor and council can do to turn around Michigan's economy. The proponents of Grosse Pointe Woods term limits might do better working on this fall's gubernatorial race than on a poorly disguised power grab.

No, we think term limits are a bad idea in any case, and particularly so in the Woods or in any of the Pointes.

At this time, it is not known whether the state attorney general and governor will approve of the petition language. But should the term-limits proposal make it to November ballot, we urge Woods voters to give it a resounding "No."

If necessary, we will oppose the measure come November.

Village getting squared away

Things are getting squared away in the Village commercial district in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The City council Monday night approved a property swap with the Neighborhood Club that is a win-win deal for both the City and the long-time community organization on Waterloo.

The Neighborhood Club's parking lot juts into the City municipal parking lot off St. Clair. Consequently, the club and the City have been stuck with L-shaped properties that limited their options for development.

By swapping property, the Neighborhood Club and the City end up with squared-off parcels. The club now has a bigger footprint available for a larger, much-needed facility, and the City has more options for its municipal parking Lot 3. This is especially important given the City's plans to develop municipal Lot 2 between St. Clair and Notre Dame.

The two swapped parcels are roughly the same size, so the City is not giving away valuable property. The swap also ensures the Neighborhood Club will remain in its current, long-time location.

Also at the Monday night meeting, the council approved facade and signage plans for the new women's clothier, Coldwater Creek, in the former Jacobson's building at Notre Dame and Kercheval.

We also understand building plans are near approval for men's clothier Jos. A. Bank at the opposite corner of the former Jacobson's building at St. Clair.

Further, the developer of the property, now called Kercheval Place, vows to continue facade and interior modifications that will allow several new storefronts on Kercheval and office use on the second floor.

It took a while, but things are looking up in the Village.

G.P. South's athletic addition

To the Editor:

I was rather disheartened to read about the $10.7 athletic addition to Grosse Pointe South High School in the article "New pool planned for 'The High'" in the Aug. 17 Grosse Pointe News.

I have watched for the last several years as the Grosse Pointe Board of Education struggles with operational deficits. This has resulted in early retirement for senior teachers that the principal of South High School called a "brain drain" and the strong possibility of a decrease in both the number of class periods and class selection.

Although the architectural renderings look wonderful and will fit the style of the main building, a funding system that allows for outstanding athletics but not support for outstanding education is obscene.

Woods term limits

To the Editor:

Unsuccessful council candidate Nancy Hames and some other misguided individuals are calling for "term limits" for Grosse Pointe Woods' seven elected officials.

They don't seem to understand that we already have term limits. It's called an "election," and it has worked very well for a long, long time.

Last November 2005, in fact, Grosse Pointe Woods voters "term-limited" Ms. Hames running mate, former council member Patti Kukula Chylinski, after two terms in office. Kukula-Chylinski ran for mayor and lost in a landslide to four-term incumbent Mayor Robert Novitke.

At that same November 2005 election, the voters also term-limited two of Kukula-Chylinski's running mates, including Ms. Hames, before they ever were elected. Voters instead wisely re-elected two veteran council persons, Vicki Granger and Al Dickinson. I won Kukula-Chylinski's vacant seat on the council.

It is not surprising that Ms. Hames, with assistance and counsel from her disastrous November 2005 losing team, is the prime mover of this 2006 term-limits drive. With only an embarrassing losing council campaign on her record, she's badly in need of a new dead horse to ride as she gears up for a repeat attempt in November 2007.

Last November, Ms. Hames was a lead singer in the chorus that continually yelped about how "bad" things were in Grosse Pointe Woods, and how they needed changes. Grosse Pointe Woods residents, alas, are pretty savvy about how "good" or "bad" we have it, and what is really important to our pocketbooks.

Our residents' 20-20 political vision easily sees through the smoke and mirrors of discredited issues like term limits and the questionable motives of those who push them.

Voters here wisely rely on accountable council representatives who deliver tangible, accountable results and reject candidate/critics and other politically motivated wannabes who produce nothing more than partisan baloney and empty sound-bite promises.

Thanks for love and support

To the Editor:

We would like to express our heartfelt appreciation for the tremendous love and support expressed by friends, co-workers at the Grosse Pointe Public School System, parents, students and the entire community during the recent memorial events for Karl.

The stories we have heard about the many lives he touched will be special memories for all of us.

His love for his family and friends, and the Maire Elementary school family is a legacy that will remain in our hearts forever.

Thank you for all of your prayers and many expressions of caring and kindness to our family during this difficult time.

This is truly a wonderful community and Karl loved being a part of so many of your lives.

Thanks community for success

To the Editor:

A huge thank you is in order to the 120 golfers, 150 dinner guests and the more than 100 sponsors community-wide who all contributed to the tremendous success of the North-South Challenge Cup at the Lochmoor Club on Monday, Aug. 14.

This event was most significant because it is a model for future fundraising — joint efforts and common goals. It was the first time ever that North and South high schools have joined forces to raise money for athletics, and the old saying rang true, "two heads are better than one."

It could not have happened without our very dedicated volunteers, strong community business participation and visible commitment from Superintendent Suzanne Klein, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, and the parents throughout Grosse Pointe.

We would like to thank the event chairpersons Jim Saros and Mike Stevenson and the North-South Golf Committee who brought this event from conception to reality in six short weeks.

We are grateful to all the business sponsors and we ask you to recognize and support them: Roy O'Brien Ford; Ray Laethem Buick Pontiac GMC; Bob Thibodeau Ford; National Coney Island; Rep. We plan to work together again in the future to continue to raise money for athletics.

Thanks Woods' officer

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to share information with the community on the excellent job the Grosse Pointe Woods Police Department did.

On May 29, the morning after Grosse Pointe North's Senior Prom, my son had a rollover accident. The police department acted quickly to get my son out of the car.

We were thankful he had dropped off all his friends and was alone in the car. But the most outstanding job came from Officer Nota who investigated the accident and discovered my son may have a medical problem.

In the last two months, my son has been tested and, as Officer Nota discovered, yes, my son does have a sleeping disorder, which he is now being treated for.

My son will be able to resume driving by this fall or winter. More importantly, my son was made aware of a medical problem which, untreated, could have caused his or others' deaths.

Many thanks go out to Officer Nota for his excellence in investigating this accident, for his excellence in asking questions and listening, for seeing something that his family and school did not pick up on, and thank you for saving my son's future.

Our community needs to be reminded at times that we have good police officers, we have good teens, and how important our officers are in supporting the future well-being of our youth.

I SAY By Brad Lindberg

On course, on glide path

There's a symbolic aspect to seeking respite from the summer sun by loitering in shade under the upturned nose of a parked Royal Air Force Lancaster bomber.

Looking from below at the four-engine World War II aircraft, two beefy landing gear prop the fuselage skyward. The pose recreates the defiant posture of an English bulldog sitting guard with forelegs outstretched and knees locked.

Not on my watch, the veteran aircraft seems to say.

This is the heavy bomber that helped shield England from Nazi Germany. To Brits, the Lancaster is as iconic of the all-for-one war effort as is the B-17 Flying Fortress to the U.S. Army Air Corps.

Both aircraft formed the core of an around-the-clock bomber offensive against Germany. Fortresses attacked by day. Lancasters took over at night. Fortresses flew higher and had more defensive machine guns, but Lancasters, some of which were built in Canada, could carry more bombs.

Examples of both aircraft where on hand two weeks ago to help make the Yankee Air Museum's Thunder Over Michigan air show a success.

The Yankee Air Force's B-17G "Yankee Lady" and B-25D two-engine medium bomber

Lancaster

"Yankee Warrior" preceded the weekend show with a 40-minute joy ride around metropolitan Detroit.

Aircraft took off from home base at Willow Run Airport and flew in echelon up the Detroit River. Most of us on board the B-17 goofed around and pretended to make bombing runs on freighters.

A few years ago the owner of a vintage WWII Grumman Avenger navy torpedo bomber sought permission from the U.S. Coast Guard to reenact a bomb run against a Japanese freighter transporting goods through the Great Lakes. Permission denied.

The crew of "Yankee Lady" was 3,000 feet above such restrictions. Sitting in the Plexiglas nose cone and hunched over the Norden bomb site, the trigger of a .50-caliber machine gun was within reach in case enemy fighters got any ideas.

We grinned while cruising over downtown office buildings. Bombs away. A premature left turn before reaching the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club saved the landmark.

Almost every week people pay up to $425 for a ride in Yankee Air Force bombers.

A man and wife drove all the way from Chicago to attend the air show. The couple arrived a day early to watch the Thunder Run through downtown Belleville. Thunder Runs describe a column of tanks and other armored vehicles parading through a hostile town asking for trouble.

On both days of the air show, WWII reenactors representing mechanized forces from the U.S., England and Germany presented mock battles. There were blank machine gun fire, cannon smoke, squeaking treads and the zoom of P-47 Thunderbolt and P-51 Mustang fighter planes making strafing runs.

A B-2 Stealth bomber made a flyby on Saturday. The Lancaster flew Sunday. It is the only flying Lancaster in North America and is based just a few hours drive away at the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum in Mount Hope, Ontario, near Hamilton.

Proposal wins U-M $1.3 million grant

Some university professors with excellent doctoral credentials spend years trying to earn federal funding to further their research specialties, refining and revising their proposal each time it gets rejected.

Dr. Theresa Lee, a psychology professor at the University of Michigan is familiar with that procedure. But for the second time in two decades, she earned a grant with her first application. Lee is the mentor to a former South student, whose research interests in circadian rhythms and attention will be advanced by the four-year award.

Blair Sutton, 21, of the Farms, originally planned to go to college to study classical piano. She had actively pursued the arts while a student at South, where she was president of the National Honor Society chapter there when she graduated in 2002.

But at the University of Michigan, she became increasingly interested in science after her sophomore year when she worked in a research lab. During her senior year, she presented her own original research, which also provided much of the preliminary data for the grant, at the National Society of Neuroscience Conference. She graduated this April with high honors with a degree in biopsychology and cognitive sciences.

"Biopsychology is the scientific study of the relationship between the brain and behavior. I studied not only how the brain is structured and functions, but how this relates to behavior and how behavior can in turn affect the brain," Sutton said.

The daughter of Julie and George Sutton recently learned of Lee's successful grant by the National Institutes of Health to continue work on circadian rhythms and attention.

Blair Sutton's research will apply to workers who frequently fly long distances around the world or work a third or rotating shift on their jobs

She is applying to graduate schools to begin working on her doctorate in the fall of 2007. She says there is a strong possibility that she will continue at the U-M since "there are very few programs in the world that would allow me to continue the same research."

Sticky fingers

While I have long held firmly to the belief that getting older is better than the alternative, so you should laugh your way through life; one of the petty annoyances of advancing years is that your finger tips go dry.

As a callow youth, I always wondered why my father would touch his forefinger to his tongue occasionally when he was turning newspaper pages. It didn't seem like a good idea unless you liked the taste of newspaper ink.

As an "older citizen," as the folks at Services for Older Citizens define us, I now know why. Your darn fingers are so smooth you can't pick up the next page. As the reader of four daily newspapers and several weeklies and half a dozen magazines, that assumes minor crisis proportions.

So I was delighted to read a while back in the New York Times that some clever fellows in Longueuil, Quebec, were producing something called Elite Magician's Hand Lotion, so practitioners of sleight of hand wouldn't be cursed with dry hands that could drop playing cards at the wrong moment.

At $8 a bottle that would reportedly last five to 10 years, it seemed worth a try; so using the modern magic of the Internet, I ordered a bottle from Guy Camirand in the Montreal suburb.

And I got an e-mail back asking if I was a practicing magician and advising me he wouldn't sell me a bottle if I weren't. Now while my wife, Beverly, feels I have a magical ability to disappear whenever there is heavy lifting to be done, I didn't ethically think that qualified. So I admitted I was merely an aging newspaper columnist having difficulty turning the pages of his daily and weekly papers.

I got a very nice French-accented e-mail back telling me something that every bank clerk who sorts money already knows. Camirand advised me to go to an office supply store and buy a product like Take Hold, which I found at Staples.

I did, and it works; so now I have a container at home and one in my office, and I even bought one for my mother-in-law, Betty Hall, who is every bit as devoted a newspaper reader as I am. And it cost less than $8.

So, you see, you can teach an old dog new tricks.

"I Wonder How Quickly A Good Serviceman Can Get My Air Conditioner Cooling Again?"

I have something exciting to tell you. I know it isn't fun having a problem with your air conditioner. But read on and you will discover an easy, convenient, and guaranteed way to minimize or eliminate your frustration.

My name is Jim Corrian and I know you want the right answers to the following four questions...

...number 1

You're probably wondering, "How can I be sure the serviceman is being honest and not just trying to take advantage of me?" Good question. One thing you can find out, is whether the serviceman is paid an hourly wage or a percentage of commission on the job. You always want your serviceman paid hourly. There is too much danger, if he is paid a percentage of the parts he sells you, for him to go "over-the-line."

...number 2

Next "How can I get a 'really good' serviceman that will be efficient and economical by fixing it right in minimum time?" Here is the best advice I can give you, find a serviceman who is getting paid at least $20 per hour or more...and, will give you a fixed flat-rate price for your repair before he starts.

There are two reasons for this. First, if he isn't making at least $20 per hour than he just doesn't have the skill or experience to figure out the hard problems quickly. Also, by giving you a flat-rate price his company rewards him for being accurate and fast...instead of how many hours he can charge you.

...number 3

"Am I going to have to take a day off work, or waste all day waiting for him to show up?" To avoid this problem you want to ask for an appointment time, or at least an "appointment-window." And here's the key...ask what their appointment time guarantee is. If they don't have one, chances are you're going to be cooling your heels for a while.

...number 4

And finally... "How can I make sure they stand behind their work and I don't end up paying for the same problem again in a few weeks?" The best thing to do is ask if they have a written 100% money-back satisfaction guarantee for any reason.

Well, that's about it. I hope this information helps you select a great service company.

Oh, one more thing...

As you might have guessed, my company has all the right answers to those questions, and I would love to have you as a client.

White House greetings for (almost) all occasions

Upon request, the White House will send out a birthday greeting or congratulations from the president on a 50th wedding anniversary, baby's birth, wedding or Eagle Scout Award.

Each year, the White House Greetings Office handles as many greeting requests as possible, endeavoring to mail out a happy birthday or congratulations message approximately 10 days prior to the personal event.

There are rules, as with everything involving the federal government. The White House will only send out special occasion messages to U.S. citizens.

White House birthday greetings will be sent only to individuals 80 years of age and above.

Anniversary greetings are extended only to those couples who are celebrating their 50th (and subsequent) wedding anniversary.

A limited number of special occasions, other than birthdays and anniversaries, exist for which the Greetings

Office will send appropriate recognition to U.S. citizens. These occasions include important events such as: weddings; baby's birth; Eagle Scout Award; Girl Scout Gold Award; and Bar/Bat Mitzvah or equivalent occasion.

Request must be received six weeks in advance of the event date. Greetings are generally not sent after the event date, except for wedding congratulations and newborn acknowledgments.

- ◆ Form of address — Mr., Ms., Mrs., Dr., Miss, etc.
- ◆ Exact date of occasion — month, day, year.
- ◆ Age (birthdays) or number of years of marriage.
- ◆ The requester's name and daytime phone number.
- ◆ Any specific mailing instructions if other than to honoree's address.

Negligent landlords come under fire

By Bob St. John
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park Councilman James Robson is ready to take swift action against landlords who can't maintain their properties. "Councilman Robert Denner and I have taken a lot of time looking into some of the rental properties in the city that are in shambles," Robson said. "They're an eyesore to the community and something has to be done to correct this problem." Several properties on Wayburn and Beaconsfield came into question by Robson, Denner and Park Mayor Pro-Tem Greg Theokas, as well as residents living on those streets, during recent council meetings. "I have walked down these streets recently and saw how dilapidated some of the rental properties are," Theokas said. "We need to send a message to these bad landlords that it isn't OK to let their properties go down the dumps in our community. We want people to come into our city looking for a place to move and feel they can live in Grosse Pointe Park." Park Director of Public Service Chris Reimel, Code Enforcement Officer Robert H. Hansen and his team walked up and down neighborhoods and cited 82 properties for violations. Of those, 67 cases have been closed, seven are still being investigated and eight are in court.

"Chris' department has done a good job of citing the violators in the city and for the most part, the landlords have complied," Park City Manager Dale Krajniak said. "However, we do have some property owners who will not answer our letters or pay their fines, and it's these properties we're concerned about."

One landlord has a warrant out for his arrest due to failure to pay fines and penalties. City workers have cut the lawn of that property on several occasions.

Other troubled properties are in the process of being sold or transferred to relatives.

"We have to do something about addressing the bad landlords," Krajniak said. "I think we're heading in the right direction."

For a landlord to rent a property, it must have passed an inspection by the city's building department. Once completed and the property gets approval, the landlord will receive a certificate of occupancy.

Pavilion donated to village

Park users will soon have shelter from the sun and elements, thanks to the Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation.

A four-season pavilion will be added to Osius Park by this winter.

Construction will begin as soon as the pool closes.

Foundation President Jon Walton announced plans at the Tuesday, Aug. 15, meeting of the Grosse Pointe Shores

Village Council.

Funding from the nonprofit group, and a partial match from the village, will pay for the $93,400 structure.

The GPSIF began working on this proposal earlier this year, seeking a way to enhance park facilities, Walton said.

"(We saw) the need to have an area in the park to provide a sheltered enclosure, both for picnickers in the summertime and events like the chili cook-off and the Halloween fest."

The 25-by-50 foot pavilion will have lighting and electrical service, radiant heaters in the ceiling and drop-down canvas covers to provide a wind break for fall events.

The GPSIF solicited bid proposals from five contractors. Two responded, and Monahan Company was the low bid. As is tradition with GPSIF projects, the village will contribute. The village's portion is $15,000. The council accepted plans unanimously.

"The pavilion goes right along with our plans for the park," said trustee Karl Kratz. "This is wonderful to see."

"People submit elephants, horses, iguanas, rats and their children," said Corinne Martin, president of the Grosse Pointe Animal Adoption Society. "The idea is it's supposed to be your best buddy. Most people submit pictures of their dogs or cats."

Business ads are also accepted until Sept. 10 and cost $75 each.

The day planner serves as the Grosse Pointe Animal Adoption Society's largest fundraiser of the year. All proceeds benefit the non-profit organization.

Day planners will cost around $15 and go on sale in late October. It will be available at community stores, adoption events and the organization's future office, 18519 Mack, Detroit.

Former Pointers' restaurant falls to French chef

By Michael Goodell
Special Writer

It's been 18 years since John and Peachy Rentenbach left Grosse Pointe to buy a French country restaurant on the shores of Glen Lake in northern Michigan.

Over the years, a number of their friends have followed them north, if not permanently, then at least annually, for a week or two. At first this was thanks to Peachy's infectious enthusiasm.

"You must come up and see this place," she would say, meaning the lake and its environs. People came; they saw, and they fell in love. Some of them purchased cottages; most of them came back year after year.

Of course, having La Becasse one of Michigan's finest restaurants nearby added to the attraction. As time went by, for many Grosse Pointers, "eating at Peachy's" was as essential a component of an up north vacation as climbing the sand dunes.

So it was with some concern that Grosse Pointers heard that the Rentenbachs had sold La Becasse. What would become of it? Would the food remain as good? Would the service remain impeccable? Would a dinner at La Becasse continue to be a two-hour respite from the world, a virtual trip to France without the hassle of clearing customs?

Happily, as anyone who has eaten at La Becasse this year can attest, all those questions can be answered in the affirmative. When the Rentenbachs sold their restaurant to Guillaume Hazael-Massieux, they found the ideal person to carry on their traditions.

Massieux, 36, was born in Paris. Though he was raised on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe, his tastes remained emphatically French, and when it was time to train as a chef, he studied at the Institut Paul Bocuse in Lyons, France. He has brought that training, tempered with cooking experiences to restaurants in New Orleans, Puerto Rico and Grand Rapids, to La Becasse in Glen Lake.

The restaurant looks the same, from the thick red curtain over the front door to the woodcock prints on the walls, to the tasteful, intimate deck out back. The staff is mostly the same, but when you enter the restaurant, you are greeted by Massieux's wife, Brooke, and the food is prepared by the owner himself.

Many of the same items are featured on the menu, including a complimentary olive dish, both baked and sauteed Lake Michigan whitefish, a selection of chops and veals, the bibb lettuce house salad with Peachy's famous sweet vinaigrette dressing, and, of course, profiteroles for dessert.

The special board is still hanging on the wall, and over the course of an evening, the waitstaff still hurries over to erase the offerings as they sell out. The place remains crowded in the summer time, and reservations are still mandatory.

Yet there are changes, too. Owing to his heritage and training, Massieux brings a more authentic touch to his preparations. The food is impeccable, and the sauces surprisingly light considering the depth of flavor they possess. The pan-seared breast of duck, served with duck leg confit and vanilla demi-glace, is Massieux's signature dish, and it alone is worth the drive. A frequent entry on the special board is the French Gravlax appetizer, served on toast points with a horseradish cream sauce and a shot of Aquavit.

The wine list is new — and different. Rentenbach's wine list was not lengthy, but the selections were a good value and always delicious. So too with the current manifestation. Perhaps more heavily skewed to French wines, it remains broadly international and features good values. Among our favorites are the Pascal & Nicolas Reverdy Sancerre "La Courtes," the splendid Jurancon sec, the Vincent Girardin Mersault Les Narvaux, the Le Rabault Sancerre Rouge, and the Matthews Cabernet Sauvignon.

For dessert, try the tarte tatin, an upside down apple tart, or the blueberry-lemon parfait, which is the chef's favorite dish. Or, for old times' sake, have the profiteroles.

Under the steady hand of Massieux, La Becasse remains a northern Michigan institution. For those who miss the flavorful sauces of Greg Murphy, the former chef, the good news is, "Murph" is gone but not forgotten. He opened a new restaurant just a few miles up the road, transforming the old Leelanau Inn into North: A Centennial Restaurant.

Liberated from the strictures of French country cuisine, "Murph" has morphed into an eclectic chef. Each of his dishes is fresh and savory and well worth a visit. Add the recently opened Windows, in Glen Arbor's Le Bear Condominium region whose culinary attractions now rival its acclaimed natural beauty.

Three Grosse Pointe 14-year-old girls find life on the tallship Unicorn a fun and challenging learning experience — especially at 4 a.m. in a squall with the motor out.

Pointe teens grow 5 days aboard ship

By John Minnis
Editor

Five days before the mast — not as long as author Richard Henry Dana Jr.'s "Two Years Before the Mast," but it was just as memorable for three 14-year-old Grosse Pointe girls.

Beatrice Tepel of the Farms and Katie LeVan and Alexis Stupanek of the Park got the adventure of a lifetime when they sailed a "tallship" recently from Chicago to Port Huron. They boarded Saturday, Aug. 12, and disembarked Thursday, Aug. 17.

During the five days, they learned teamwork and to conquer fears. Their voyage was part of the Sisters Under Sail program founded by Dawn Santamaria of New Jersey.

Santamaria, 46, hosts the Sisters Under Sail program for young women, ages 13 to 20, aboard the STV (Student Training Vessel) Unicorn. She and her husband, Jay, owner of a Manhattan human resources firm, purchased the topsail schooner in 1999.

"It was my husband's long-time dream to own a tallship," Santamaria says.

Now as executive officer, Santamaria spends more time aboard the Unicorn than her husband.

After a bow-to-stern refit down to its steel ribs, the boat is now used for corporate training and development, including a women's executive program, called Chart Your Course.

As a mother of four daughters, it was a natural for Santamaria to include younger women and teenage girls in the Unicorn's programs.

The Unicorn was built in 1947 as a fishing trawler. Its hull was fabricated from U-boats captured during World War II. The ship, originally named Eenhorn — Dutch for Unicorn — fished the North Atlantic for 32 years before being converted to a sailing vessel in 1979.

The 118-foot, 20-foot-beam topsail schooner went through several owners before it found a home with the Santamarias. It now sails out of Perth Amboy, N.J.

The Unicorn has been completely modernized with redundant electronics. It features four guest cabins, all with heads, showers and air conditioning.

"It is really nice," LeVan said of the accommodations. "I was surprised. We each had our own bed and a head."

owner. She manages the ship-board business (along with a professional captain and crew) and likes to help out in the galley.

"I cook on board. I like to cook," she said.

She must be good.

"The food was really good," LeVan said. "I was surprised how good it could be on a sailing boat like this."

Santamaria said the ship-board, all-girl setting is ideal for the teenagers to learn leadership and teamwork skills.

"There are no little boys to take the leadership roles away from them," she said.

Tepel, LeVan and Stupanek came at 4 a.m. 20 miles west of Mackinac when a squall popped up and the Unicorn's powerful diesel engine wouldn't start.

"It was scary," Tepel said. "I had night shift. I helped get all the sails down."

LeVan said it was "a little frightening, but it was fun."

The girls enjoyed a day on Mackinac Island while the ship's engine was being repaired.

The Grosse Pointe parents learned about the Unicorn and Sisters Under Sail program through the Grosse Pointe Academy's Action Auction, where a sailing adventure from Port Huron to the Detroit Yacht Club was included as one of the auction items.

The parents of Tepel, LeVan and Stupanek wanted their daughters to benefit from the Sisters Under Sail program, so they purchased the berths out of Chicago. Tepel and LeVan are best friends.

"It was a lot of fun," Tepel said. "I really learned how to use teamwork to get things done. We needed to help each other to get the sails up and down. Thing like that."

"I really liked it," said LeVan. "It thought it was a great experience, and it was really fun. I sail with Beatrice, but I've never sailed a big boat like that before. It was really a cool experience. I would do it again."

A veteran sailor of eight or nine years, Stupanek was really impressed with the tallship experience.

"It was amazing," she said. "I was kind of tentative at first. But we really worked together. I like standing watch and steering the boat."

She said it was at the end of her shift when "a little storm rolled in," she said, matter-of-factly. "We lost our engine when water got in."

"I would definitely do it again."

"They may not have profound, life-changing experiences," Santamaria says of those taking part in the Sisters Under Sail program, "but they have stretched themselves beyond what they thought possible."

Behind the lens

By Ann L. Fouty

Mary Abouljoud of Grosse Pointe Park lives for the moment and captures it through the lens of a camera.

A student at the College for Creative Studies, she said she has so much fun taking pictures, she wanted to share her joy with elementary students.

Abouljoud took her skills and donated one-time use cameras to the third-graders at Defer Elementary School to show them how they can use a camera to express their talents.

"I did it out of my passion for photography," Abouljoud said of the project.

She spent hours explaining to the class of 21 the rudimentary ins and outs of photography before giving them their assignment: take a family portrait and a series of self-portraits expressing both their internal and external self in two to four pictures.

"The first segment was an hour and a half of explaining how to use a camera," she said. "Composition, perspective, taking the photograph to have a message sent to viewers."

With cameras in hand, the children went about explaining themselves.

One boy took a picture of a tent canoping his favorite toys. This illustrated he enjoyed his privacy, she explained. Another took a picture of a clock which explained his love of time and the time he spends playing sports.

Abouljoud said the photo of the clock with a pendulum was a surreal expression of how he maximizes his time.

A family portrait taken by one young boy was a collection of items that meant something special to each member of his family.

One girl took a picture of her face in a mirror because, according to Abouljoud, she is conscious of her looks.

One self-portrait was a shadow and another was a picture of apple blossoms indicating this girl sometimes felt as pretty as a blossom, Abouljoud believes.

"I was a little taken back at their zealotness," she said. "It's remarkable. It shows what can be done outside the normal art."

When the pictures were returned, she met with each one, edited and mounted the final pictures for presentation to the class. Each child's work was evaluated. No negative comments were allowed.

Abouljoud said she believes photography is one skill they can carry throughout their lives.

South's SADD donates $2,000 to MADD

By Elizabeth Swanson
Special Writer

Grosse Pointe South's Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) presented the Macomb chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) with a $2,000 check in June in South's Clemenson Hall.

SADD raised the money at its second annual dodgeball tournament Friday, May 19, when 14 teams of South students raised $300 each to compete in the five-hour-long competition — from 7 p.m. until midnight — in the main gym.

"We wanted to raise money for MADD and to have kids do something that's worthwhile on a Friday night instead of putting themselves in a situation where they could make destructive decisions," said South senior Jonathan Sax, president of SADD.

"We came up with the idea last year and we were sort of influenced by the movie 'Dodgeball' that came out that year. There's another volleyball marathon that the student association puts on, and we wanted to do the same thing, SADD related."

The day of the tournament, students made team shirts. SADD provided beverages, food and an emcee. Teams also brought CDs.

Community businesses contributed to the dodgeball tournament by donating raffle prizes such as tuxedo rentals, haircuts and massages.

The winning dodgeball team won a suite at Comerica Park.

"It went much better this year than last year," Sax said. "Last year was kind of like the pilot. It was the trial to look back on. I think kids had more fun this year."

Last year there were 13 teams and $2,000 was also raised for MADD.

"We had about 150 participants in the dodgeball tournament," said SADD co-sponsor Doug Roby. "We really hope to make this a yearly event. Four teachers helped and three members who graduated from last year's winning team also came back."

This year, MADD will use the $2,000 to help fund the Victim Impact Panel, a program where victims tell drunk driving offenders how the crash affected their lives, said MADD president Pam Mertes.

"I think it's powerful when peers deal with other peers," Mertes said of the dodgeball marathon. "Sometimes, with adults, the message goes through one ear and out the other."

"Peer to peer is more powerful. I'm very impressed with this program and that they would want to do something like this. It tells a lot about the students at Grosse Pointe South."

Two new software packages engineered to operate the district's high school enhanced foreign language laboratories carry a combined $2,250 annual service fee.

The packages have been approved for installation at Grosse Pointe North and South High Schools.

Members of the board of education this month withheld support of the acquisition until maintenance and service costs were determined.

Upon learning of the annual expense and judging it within reason, a unanimous board followed through with an administrative recommendation to buy two new systems for a combined $75,990.

The equipment will upgrade the high schools' foreign language labs with computer-oriented Genesis Digital Language Learning Systems.

Each station accommodates up to 30 students and one teacher.

The systems are made by Edutronix, a company in Troy that supplies training and education software.

Lee Warras, district director of curriculum, assessment, instruction and technology, said Genesis is being used by public school districts in Bloomfield, Wayne, Westland and Oxford.

Warras said existing equipment and software at North and South labs is a decade old, functionally obsolete and beyond practical repair due to age, use and scarcity of replacement parts.

Edutronix won the sale through competitive bidding in which price and quality were considered.

Genesee's quality won over Pointe administrators despite it costing nearly $28,000 more ($14,000 each for both high school facilities) than another bidder.

Superintendent Suzanne Klein said the purchase will provide a wider variety of uses that the current set up.

Edutronix officials included in their bid a promise to provide the school system software updates during the length of the agreement.

"Updates consist of new releases of the specified version which provide functional enhancements and error corrections," according to the agreement.

Terms exclude new products and separately priced modules.

"The licensed user (the district) agrees that they have sole responsibility for the installation of any updates, new releases, functional enhancements or error corrections which are part of this maintenance agreement," according to the terms.

The bid featured three days of staff training.

Edutronix, formerly called Howard and Smith, was sold and renamed in 2003 to reflect the nature of the business. Howard and Smith had been in business since 1948.

District contracts with specialist

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A district retiree will return to his old stomping grounds this academic year to serve as a social studies curriculum specialist.

Glenn Croydon, a retired Grosse Pointe public schools administrator, will assume duties vacated by another administrator that is returning to teaching.

Croydon has been offered a 91-day contract at a daily pay rate of $562.

Upon completion of the contract, Croydon will have been paid $51,423, which school officials said was on par with a teacher at the top rung of the pay ladder.

"It's a good deal," said Boardmember Alice Kosinski. "It's already budgeted."

Boardmember Fred Minturn said the only vote against returning Croydon from retirement.

"Just because something's in the budget doesn't mean we have to spend it," Minturn said.

Minturn felt Croydon's duties could have been handled by current staff at no extra cost.

"We should always look to save money in that budget," Minturn said.

Croydon will serve as an independent contractor without the possibility of tenure. State and federal income taxes won't be withheld from his paycheck.

The terms became effective upon school board approval Monday, Aug. 14.

"In the event the social studies curriculum specialists (Croydon) shall cease or refuse to perform the services required of him, this contract shall become immediately null and void," according to the contract.

"(Croydon) shall (not) be considered as having employee status or as being entitled to participate in any plans, arrangements or distributions by the school district pertaining to or in connection with any pension, or other benefit extended to the district's employees."

Thieves arrested, one attempts to escape

By Rebecca Jones
Staff Writer

A Detroit man with a criminal history got his three teenage nephews into trouble when they helped him take money from a pharmacy in the 16900 block of Kercheval, City of Grosse Pointe police said.

After his arrest, one of the suspects tried to escape lock-up by crawling through duct work at the police station. Now he faces additional charges.

Police said the teens, two aged 16 and one 18 years old, distracted the store's 80-year-old clerk while the uncle opened the drawer of a cash register and quickly grabbed about $100 at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 16.

The four were in and out of the store in under one minute. "The clerk did not know that the money was taken," said Sgt. Ronald Wieczorek.

However, a pharmacist happened to be watching security footage in the back room and called police immediately with a description of the suspects.

Five police cars converged upon the group walking along Cadieux. The suspects threw the money on the ground.

All four were arrested. "They didn't have time to run," Wieczorek said. "If it wasn't for the alert pharmacist observing the security camera and giving that great witness statement, they might have gotten lucky, and they might have gotten away."

The uncle, a 41-year-old parolee, will be tried as a habitual fourth offender. His previous convictions include larceny from a building and receiving and concealing stolen property. He was being held on a $100,000 cash bond at the Wayne County Jail until his preliminary exam Thursday, Aug. 24.

The 18-year-old from Southgate who was being held in a Grosse Pointe Park jail cell during the investigation, tried to escape by crawling through the duct work of the facility.

The 6-foot-2-inch, 200 pound man was caught above the dispatch area. He later told police he tried to escape because he was innocent of the larceny charges. Police are now seeking additional charges and restitution for the damaged duct work. The suspect is being held on a $30,000 bond in the county jail.

The two 16-year-olds, from Eastpointe and Detroit, were transferred to the Wayne County Juvenile Detention Center and later released to their parents.

Honda for a drug debt

A 26-year-old bailed out of the passenger side of his Honda on Kerby near Grosse Pointe Boulevard at 2:50 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 20, and ran to the Grosse Pointe Farms police department.

He told police he was carjacked on the way home from a drug house in Detroit.

Officers put out an alert for the vehicle, and Grosse Pointe Park officers pulled over the driver on Kercheval near Wayburn.

The 52-year-old driver, who was arrested, told police he worked for a drug dealer and had been ordered to drive the victim home and return with his 1992 Honda Accord in exchange for a debt for crack cocaine.

The victim lives in White Lake Township, but led the driver to the police station instead.

Driver with gun arrested for OUIL

A 42-year-old Detroit man was arrested for drunken driving and possession of a firearm while intoxicated at 4 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 19, in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Officers pulled over the driver for speeding 52 mph in a 35 mph zone on westbound Mack.

The man told police he had a permit to carry a concealed weapon and was carrying a Glock semi-automatic in his waistband.

He refused to submit to a portable breath test at the scene, but later registered a 0.09 percent blood alcohol level. He faces four charges.

Underage drinkers cited; drugs found

A 20-year-old driver from Grosse Pointe Woods was pulled over in the area of Mack and Moross at 1:15 a.m. Friday, Aug. 18. She failed sobriety tests and registered a 0.096 percent blood alcohol content. She was arrested.

Her passenger, a 19-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man, was cited for being a minor under the influence of alcohol.

Searching the 2000 Volkswagen Jetta, Grosse Pointe Farms officers found beer, including an open can underneath the passenger's seat, prescription drugs belonging to neither of the suspects, as well as a pipe with suspected marijuana residue. More charges are pending against the driver.

Graffiti on building, teens questioned

No one saw them do it, but Grosse Pointe Farms officers noted that at about the same time graffiti appeared on scaffolding on Kercheval, three 17-year-olds were walking on the Hill. Two are from Grosse Pointe Farms. The third is from Eastpointe. Another officer reported seeing the teens at about the same time the night before.

Man caught with three cell phones

Grosse Pointe Farms police were called to investigate a 26-year-old Detroit man who was peeking into cars and entering businesses in the 18300 block of Mack for no apparent reason at 12:45 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 15.

The man had two outstanding warrants. While searching him, officers found a screwdriver and three cell phones.

Back at the station, officers got in touch with the right owner of one of the three phones. A 66-year-old Warren man told officers that he had left his cell phone in his unlocked van for 15 minutes while making a delivery.

Officers are still looking for the owners of the other two phones.

Car thief gets away

A car thief got away, but Grosse Pointe Farms police recovered the 1996 Dodge Caravan he was driving.

At 2:30 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 19, when an officer pulled behind the Caravan on Kercheval, the driver made a sharp right turn onto Ridgemont and ran from the van.

Neighboring departments set up a perimeter, but were unable to find the suspect.

The van had a damaged ignition. Its owner, a 55-year-old Detroit woman, had not yet reported it stolen.

Stolen truck found in Detroit

On Monday, Aug. 14, Detroit police officers recovered a white 2004 Dodge Ram truck that had been reported stolen from Grosse Pointe Farms.

The vehicle went missing Aug. 2. A Novi man told police he hid his keys under the driver's seat while he ate at a restaurant.

Speeding driver had suspension

A 20-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms man was pulled over for driving 46 mph in a 30 mph zone near Moross and Beaubre at 10 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 20.

His license was suspended for a previous drunken driving conviction. Grosse Pointe Farms police arrested the man. His dad posted the $200 bond.

Subscription revoked

Two door-to-door salesmen from Ohio were arrested on Briarcliff at 5 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 17, in Grosse Pointe Shores.

A woman called police to report their activity. Neither man had a permit to solicit in the village. Both were released after posting $200 cash bonds.

One woman told police that after watching officers arrest the two men, she wanted to cancel the subscription she just placed with them. An officer voided the woman's check for $126, but kept it for evidence.

Beggars can be choosers

Around 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 16, a man claiming to be a recent high school graduate from Grosse Pointe Shores told a Lakeshore resident that he was selling books to raise money to attend baseball camp in Hawaii.

The woman said she didn't want to buy a book, but she would donate $30 toward his team. The man replied that the smallest amount he could accept was $38. So the woman wrote him a check for that amount.

Later, she began to doubt his story and called police. They could not find anyone with the suspect's name at the address he gave. Officers advised her to cancel the check.

Entrepreneurs advised of rules

Five 12-year-old boys were caught going door-to-door along Blairmoore at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 15.

They were trying to drum up customers for their business, in which they spray paint addresses on curbs.

The officer gave the boys permission to finish their contracted jobs but told them they had to stop soliciting until they got a permit.

Child stuck in elevator

An officer from Grosse Pointe Shores was called to a home on South Deeplands to help a 4-year-old girl and a dog that were stuck in an elevator at 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 19. The officer was able to get it open.

Shoplifter admits previous crimes

Two women were caught shoplifting in the Village on Thursday, Aug. 17.

A 53-year-old Fraser woman was attempting to steal a pair of jeans from a store in the 17100 block of Kercheval. Clerks recognized the woman as a shoplifting suspect from another occasion and called police.

Police caught the woman returning to a parked vehicle where her cohort, a 48-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods woman, was waiting.

The Grosse Pointe Woods woman confessed that she had just stolen two sleeveless turtle-neck tops from a store in the 16900 block of Kercheval and admitted to other crimes. The woman also had a warrant for her arrest in Detroit for shoplifting and was on probation for similar charges. She was taken back to jail.

Break-in attempted

A resident in the 700 block of University Place reported that someone damaged his screened-in porch trying to break into his home between 2:30 and 5:30 a.m. Monday, Aug. 21.

Nothing was missing. The resident told the City of Grosse Pointe police that his dogs may have prevented the crime.

Honest drunk crashes car

A 50-year-old Detroit woman was taken to the hospital after crashing into a parked car and registering a 0.293 percent blood alcohol level at the scene.

A City of Grosse Pointe officer saw the woman's 1996 Dodge Neon parked across the front lawn of a home in the 700 block of Rivard at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 15. Its front bumper was against the passenger door of a 2003 Pontiac station wagon.

When the officer asked if the driver had been drinking, she replied, "a lot." The woman had an empty pint of Five O'clock gin in her lap, and the officer noticed that she had urinated on herself.

The woman also complained of chest pains.

She was taken to the hospital that night, but faces charges for drunken driving, no proof of insurance and no registration.

Man runs away with video games

A video store employee called the City of Grosse Pointe police after a man ran out of the store with some 20 Gamecube video games at 2:45 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 17.

The suspect got into the passenger's side of an older, gray four-door sedan.

Driver caught with marijuana

A 19-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man was arrested for possession of marijuana at 8:35 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 20 in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The officer pulled over the vehicle because it had only one headlight, and he recognized one of the passengers, who had previously admitted to smoking marijuana.

When the officer asked the driver if he had any drugs on him, he responded, "No, I don't even have any pockets."

The K-9 unit responded and found two baggies — about 2.3 grams' worth — of suspected marijuana near the vehicle.

The driver admitted it was his. He was arrested and released on a $200 bond.

Items stolen from condo carports

Even cheap chairs are not immune from being stolen.

A resident in the 600 block of Cadieux reported a folding lawn chair, valued at $5, was stolen from a condo carport overnight Sunday, Aug. 13.

A resident in the 500 block of Notre Dame reported that eight plastic patio chairs and $15 worth of returnable beer cans were stolen from his carport area overnight Saturday, Aug. 12.

Tractor stolen from garage

Someone stole a tractor from an unlocked garage on Lakeside Court between 4:20 p.m. and 4:55 p.m. Aug. 20, according to City of Grosse Pointe police.

Attempted theft

On Thursday, Aug. 17, at 7:12 a.m., subjects in an older model minivan attempted to steal a newer Chrysler van parked in front of a home in the 800 block of Lakepointe in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The vehicle could not be started.

Smashed window

Overnight on Friday, Aug. 18, a landscape stone was thrown through the window of a 1997 Ford Crown Victoria parked in the driveway of a home in the 1000 block of Beaconsfield in Grosse Pointe Park.

Vehicle stolen

Between Wednesday, Aug. 9, and Friday, Aug. 18, a 1998 Oldsmobile Cutlass was stolen from the street in front of a home in the 1100 block of Beaconsfield in Grosse Pointe Park.

Grosse Pointe Woods

Altercation fallout

On Saturday, Aug. 12, at approximately 4 p.m., an 11-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods boy took the brunt of several punches from another 11-year-old boy who was a guest at Lake Front Park.

The altercation took place at the activities building near the basketball courts.

According to reports, several boys who were guests at the park were walking through the activities building, bothering people, including the Woods boy who was playing basketball with his friends.

The boys were asked to leave the building, but not the park. A short time later, the group returned, which is when the altercation took place.

According to the father of the injured boy, it took St. Clair Shores police 50 minutes to respond after 911 was called.

"My son saw the boys coming and unfortunately was the one at the door," the boy's father said. "He sustained several bruises, a couple of large bumps on his head and a very sore jaw. This shouldn't have happened. These boys should have been kicked out of the park in the first place."

St. Clair Shores police officials could not comment on the incident since it involved juveniles.

Woods City Administrator Mark Wollenweber and other city officials reviewed a videotape of the incident and said it took the St. Clair Shores police 12 minutes to respond and the fight was between two boys.

"We have identified the individual who was responsible for the fight and he has been banned from the park for good," Wollenweber said. "We will keep a lookout for these individuals from here on out and they will not be allowed into the park."

Weaving Explorer

On Saturday, Aug. 19, at 2:39 a.m., a 37-year-old St. Clair Shores man was pulled over after a Grosse Pointe Woods police officer noticed the vehicle he was driving was weaving on Mack.

The officer asked the man a first time if he had anything to drink. The man replied he had two or three beers.

He was asked a second time and he replied he had four or five beers at Comerica Park watching the Detroit Tigers/Texas Rangers game.

The driver also said he had a couple of beers at a bar after the game.

The officer could detect a

Cracked windshield results in arrest

On Saturday, Aug. 19, at 11 a.m., a 21-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man driving a 1994 red Lincoln Towncar was pulled over in the 1600 block of Edmonton in Grosse Pointe Woods because the windshield of the vehicle was cracked.

A LEIN (Law Enforcement Information Network) check revealed the man's driver license status is suspended.

He was arrested for driving with a suspended license. At 12:35 p.m., he posted a $100 bond and was released.

Ignores stop sign

On Friday, Aug. 18, at 10:21 p.m., a 21-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man driving a 1995 tan Mercury was stopped for disregarding a stop sign at Brys and Helen.

A LEIN check revealed the man had an expired license. He was arrested.

Stop banging

On Friday, Aug. 18, at 7:40 a.m., a 40-year-old Detroit man was pounding on the door of his ex-girlfriend, a 40-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods woman.

The woman, who had a restraining order against the man, called police to arrest him.

Grosse Pointe Woods police officers arrived to find the man and the bike he was riding.

During a search of the man's jacket, officers found a toy gun revolver, prescription-strength Tylenol pills and a security badge.

A LEIN check showed the man had a warrant out for a parole violation on a robbery charge out of Lansing.

The man was arrested and turned over to Wayne County Sheriff deputies on the restraining order violation.

Really drunk

On Friday, Aug. 18, at 2:31 a.m., Grosse Pointe Shores police notified Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers that a 1993 dark green Cadillac had hit a car and was traveling on Marder.

Woods officers located the car and stopped it on Mack and Roslyn.

The officer detected a strong odor of intoxicants coming from the driver, a 38-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man.

He said he just left a bar and had a few drinks. The officer also noticed the man had urinated on himself.

The driver performed a portable breath test, which registered a .22. The man was arrested for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Wrong way

On Thursday, Aug. 17, at 2:05 p.m., a 30-year-old Dearborn Heights man driving a 2005 white Chrysler Pacifica was stopped for driving the wrong way on a one way street in Grosse Pointe Woods.

A LEIN check revealed the man had an outstanding misdemeanor warrant out of Walled Lake with a $500 bond.

The man was arrested.

TEST DRIVE By Greg Zyla

Chrysler sets a new standard with the 2006 Pacifica. Defining the crossover between minivan, SUV and sedan, this safety utility vehicle has been dubbed a "Sports Tourer."

'06 Chrysler Pacifica Limited AWD

This week, we're driving Chrysler's top of the line Pacifica Limited AWD — base price: $36,885; price as tested: $41,920.

We don't dare use the word "station wagon" in describing this vehicle, so let's just say it's a "crossover" between a SUV, minivan and family sedan offering expanded cargo and passenger capabilities.

Introduced in 2004, Pacifica is available with two or three rows of seating for five or six passengers. The base five-passenger model starts at $25,415, and has bucket seats up front and a split folding bench in the second row. Six-passenger models, like our tester, replace the second row bench with bucket seats, and then put a 50/50 split bench in the rear.

Our Limited AWD features a monochrome exterior, leather seats, wood grain trim, power sunroof, heated mirrors, ParkSense rear park assist, power adjustable pedals with memory, and a tire pressure monitor as standard fare. Additional standard features that we really like are a power liftgate, dual zone air conditioning, 4-wheel disc ABS, heated front and second row seating, 19-inch tires and aluminum chrome clad wheels, load leveling height control and an Infinity 200-watt, 6-disc dash-mounted stereo system.

Most important is Pacifica's great safety rating. Five-star front and side-impact ratings and four-star rollover ratings from the government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration find this vehicle listed as a "best pick" by the insurance industry. The side curtain air bags that offer important head protection is standard on our Limited and optional on lesser models. Just make sure when you buy whatever Pacifica you decide on, the side curtain air bags are part of the deal.

On the road, expect car-like manners from Pacifica.

Although we feel the Pacifica drives more like a Dodge Grand Caravan than an SUV, the 2006 Pacifica is improved dramatically underneath when compared to the 2004 introduction year model. Sibling Mercedes-Benz E-Class lends its rear 5-link fully independent suspension setup to Pacifica, where it's ready for any road impurities. This is a definite improvement when combined with the front MacPherson strut independent suspension, making for a wonderful, secure ride.

The AWD setup is fully automatic, and utilizes full front wheel drive in normal conditions. However, when Mother Nature turns things nasty on the highway, Pacifica can transfer 90 percent of the power to the rear wheels if the front wheels lose traction.

Pacifica AWD's curb weight is 4,720 pounds, and when mated with the new 3.5-liter overhead cam V6, the 250 horsepower generated seems just enough to move Pacifica along. However, when adding passengers and/or cargo, our tester felt in need of a few more horsepower. It's not that Pacifica is a slug, far from it. It just doesn't feel peppy enough when called on in situations ranging from freeway merging to passing. In 2007, Chrysler addresses this concern and gives Pacifica a new 4.0-liter 24-valve V6, while the 3.5 becomes the standard engine in the lighter base model only.

The only transmission available for 2006 is the 4-speed automatic, which works OK in this application, but I'd rather at least see a five-speed for better fuel economy. Again, Chrysler addresses this, and will offer a six-speed automatic with the 4.0-liter engine in 2007.

Some of the options on our Pacifica included a $1,695 Navigation System, very nice $990 Home Entertainment DVD with a 7-inch screen in the second row of slats, a $195 Sirius Satellite radio, and a recommended $700 385-watt, 5.1 surround stereo upgrade. With destination and a few other minor options, the bottom line came in at $41,920.

Important numbers include a 116.3-inch wheelbase, 23-gal-lop fuel tank, EPA of 17 city and 22 highway, 3,500-lb. maximum towing capacity, and 13 cu. ft. of cargo volume with rear seat up. Cargo expands to nearly 80-cu. ft. when all seats are down, so don't fret any runs to whatever outlet you need visit.

Overall, we like Pacifica very much. It's a good looking, has a well-done interior, rides great and can be purchased in a variety of dress based on economic abilities. Lastly, with Mercedes-Benz influence finding its way into Pacifica, we rate it a high eight on a scale of one to 10.

Likes: Affordability, crossover attributes, good looks, secure, safe ride.

Dislikes: 3.5 V6 too small for loaded Limited, fuel thirsty when pushed.

20A | AUTOMOTIVE

AUTOWIRE.NET By Steve Schaefer

From its QuietTuned interior to its warm-walnut burl wood tones and chrome accents, the 2006 Buick Lucerne CX has been designed for elegance.

Buick's fate may be in the new Lucerne

Buick has been busy lately introducing new models with new names. GM is working hard to retain the loyal, but mostly geriatric customer base while expanding into areas currently served by the likes of Lexus and Infiniti. It's a huge task, and the Lucerne, as the flagship sedan, has a lot riding on it.

Buick has played the heritage card by reintroducing the famous cruiserline ventiports. Now, the fender holes are cast in a single piece, and they are slim shadows of their former chrome plated glory from the 1950s. While the ventiports evoke the past, the Lucerne's overall proportions are handsome 21st century modern, and Buick has shelved the wall-to-wall tail lamps that have been a brand identifier for decades.

The Lucerne replaces the venerable Park Avenue. The name goes with the recently introduced LaCrosse, which took over for the Regal and the Century. The Lucerne model has a nearly two-inch-longer wheelbase than the Park Avenue, yet it's 3.5 inches shorter nose to tail. That helps to create more modern (read European) proportions, while guaranteeing rear seat occupants generous leg room.

Inside, comfort abounds, with softly upholstered seating and padded, curving surfaces in a clean, tasteful arrangement that breaks no new ground. As part of GM's overall interior improvement project, the surfaces and materials are nicer, panel gaps are tightened up, and the overall impression is pleasant and substantial. The effect is still a few steps below Lexus or Audi, but it is a big move forward. Nothing squeaks, buzzes, or rattles, and with Buick's QuietTuning program, it's blissfully quiet in there.

QuietTuning attacks sound where it is normally generated in a car. First, the body structure is stiffened, and then the body gaps are minimized. Wind sealing gets rid of annoying whistles and air rushes, and even the rearview mirrors have been sculpted to banish noise. The engine uses a double isolated mounting system; laminated steel is employed, and extra sound insulation is strategically placed. My Platinum Metallic tester flew down the road like a rocket while sounding more like a cloud.

You can finally get a V8 in a Buick again, news that would impress my late grandfather, who believed in eight cylinders in his Buicks. The big powerplant is 4.6 liter, 32-valve dual overhead cam smoothie, displacing 275 horsepower. However, with the price of (regular) gas approaching $3.15 at this writing, you may want to opt for the venerable 3800 V6 engine, which puts out 197 horsepower. The V8 has EPA ratings of 17 City, 25 Highway, while the V6 betters that by 2 mpg. My tester, with the V8, averaged 14.6 mpg.

All Lucerne's come with GM's rugged four-speed automatic. You shouldn't have any trouble with it, but in this age of five- and six-speed automatics, that seems a little ratio deprived.

Buick offers three models: the CX, the more luxurious CXL, and the sportier CXS. The CX and CXL get the V6 standard, but you can order the V8 in the CXL as an option, as in my test car. The CXS gets the V8 exclusively.

The model levels are distinguished by, among other things, their different suspensions. The CX has the standard suspension with 16-inch wheels. The CXL models get a boost to 17-inches and a more finely calibrated suspension. The CXL V8 models get firmer damping and GM's magnetic assist steering system. The CXS, as the sporty brother, has blingable 18-inch alloys and Magnetic Ride Control.

Magnetic Ride Control uses magnetically charged particles suspended in a synthetic fluid in the suspension system. This arrangement can respond nearly instantly to changes to the road surface, which banishes the floaty, land yacht feeling of earlier models for good.

It wouldn't be a Buick without luxury appointments, and there are all the usual ones here. There was still room for $3,995 worth of options on my car, including heated and cooled 8-way power seats, stability control, and heated windshield washer fluid. The $795 Entertainment Package upgraded the audio to Harmon/Kardon, and dropped in XM Radio. This sharp, clear broadcast system is always welcome for its variety and superb sound quality. The 36 audio presets in my tester could be mixed and matched in any order from AM to FM to XM.

Rest assured, you're safe in the Lucerne. Six air bags come standard, including front and rear curtain air bags for maximum head protection in a crash. The new passenger side air bag can deploy in two different shapes and pressures depending on the crash impact, seat position, and whether you were smart and used your seat belt.

The car's body structure is ready to absorb impacts, and the anti-lock brakes are set to work with traction control to help avoid accidents in the first place. In case of an emergency, GM's OnStar system is ready to receive your distress call. If it doesn't get a response after the air bags are activated, the system will dispatch help to your location automatically.

Prices for the CX start at a reasonable $25,990. The CXL moves up $2,000, and the CXS comes in at $34,990. Including options and $725 for delivery, my tester rang in at $33,945. There are some other luxury cars in that range, but few if any can match the Lucerne's size for the price.

Some pig.
When 18-year-old Gina Riebel was in third grade, she liked "Charlotte's Web" so much it made her cry.

"It made me cry — a lot," she emphasized.

The story of how a blue-ribbon pig at a state fair avoided the slaughterhouse due to a magical friendship with a literate spider inspired Riebel to name one of her pigs Wilbur.

Where's Wilbur now?

"He was in the freezer and now he's gone," Riebel said.

So much for life imitating art.

Don't think of Riebel as hard-hearted.

She loves her pigs (and lambs and horses). She wakes at 7 a.m. to feed them. She grooms them. She cleans their pen twice a day. She takes them on walks — including Daisy, one of two prize pigs Riebel is entering in the 2006 Michigan State Fair.

It's just that the soon-to-be-college freshman from Armada is a country kid.

She grew up learning the difference between sentimentality and the real world. She knows where meat on the dinner table comes from.

"I started showing pigs when I was 8," said Riebel. "It taught me responsibility. It takes dedication. Every year I've gotten better. I have a goal and try to achieve that goal every year."

She'll draw on her upbringing as a freshman this fall at Michigan State University, where she also hopes to graduate from veterinary school and care for farm animals.

The Michigan State Fair began in 1849 as a way to show off the state's agricultural products. In addition, fairs provided a marketplace of ideas between country cousins and city sophisticates. The tradition holds at the fairgrounds on Woodward and Eight Mile through Sept. 4.

Legislation to return the start of school after Labor Day has cleared the calendar for increased attendance at the Michigan State Fair.

"We think it has a chance of going over the top," said John Hertel, completing his 13th and final year as fair general manager.

Paid attendance last year dropped 52,000 from the year before, yielding a nearly 10-year average attendance of about 340,000, according to minutes of fair board of directors meetings.

Now that school begins after the Labor Day holiday, there's nothing keeping youngsters from wrapping up summer vacation with a day at the fair eating cotton candy, riding midway rides and petting animals.

"This gives families more chances to enjoy the fair," Hertel said. "This is the most family-orientated place I can think of in Michigan and the greatest family value in Michigan."

Season admission tickets and all-day tickets for the fair's 63 midway rides have been introduced this year to spur burgeoning attendance that has made the fair self-reliant in three out of the last four years.

Hertel said profits the last two years totaled $400,000.

"The fair did OK competing against school starting," Hertel said.

Weekend attendance was healthy, but numbers withered on days school bells rang.

"Our weekdays were hurt tremendously because kids couldn't come," Hertel said. "Now we have a chance for big weekdays and big weekends."

The revised school year resulted from legislation introduced by State Rep. Edward Gaffney, R-Grosse Pointe Farms.

"It's a win for children, parents and families," Gaffney said. "It gives one last long weekend without interruption to spend time together, whether in the Detroit area or northern Michigan."

School had traditionally started after Labor Day. Switching to a preholiday schedule a number of years ago resulted in a start-and-stop calendar.

Although the teachers union opposed Gaffney's legislation, he said schools will come out ahead due to increased tourism and commerce.

"Ultimately, the school aid fund will be the beneficiary because sales tax is estimated to be an extra $10 million," Gaffney said.

"I can clearly say what Ed has done has not only helped the Michigan State Fair tremendously, he has helped the future of tourism in Michigan," Hertel said. "You have to give Gov. Jennifer Granholm a lot of credit for signing the bill. She had a lot of pressure from one of her biggest supporters, the Michigan Education Association, which has always opposed this legislation."

Hertel said the change will have an impact for years.

FAIR: Enjoy last of summer cause of the 63 rides, and like going to your grandfather's farm because of the Miracle of Life and livestock exhibits," said John Hertel, fair general manager.

Rachel Douglas, 12, will be at the fair showing her 8-pound bunny, Peaches. Peaches won a blue ribbon at the Armada Fair and will weigh 15 pounds when adult.

"Peaches is special to me," said Douglas, of New Haven. "She's a big baby. She likes to roll around in the dirt."

Douglas gets up at 5:30 a.m. every day to feed her rabbits. On school days, she finishes chores in time to catch the 6:30 a.m. bus to class. School over, she rides home and cares for the rabbits all over again.

"I'll get up and do it because I know I have to," Douglas said. "It's responsibility."

Randy Hodges, owner of R&R Suffolks sheep farm in North Branch, has forsaken an urban 9-to-5 lifestyle for the demands of tending his flock.

"I feel I've accomplished something at the end of the day by raising an animal that I can eat or sell for meat," he said. "I've had an every day, eight-hour per day job. I hope I never have to take another one."

Douglas is resigned to the waning tradition of family farms.

"I don't blame young people for not getting into it," he said. "My kids won't. It's a 365-day per year job. There are no vacations from feeding the animals. It's a hard way of life and there's no guarantee you're going to make money at the end of the year. But I like it."

He said urban sprawl in southeast Michigan is eating up farmland. He wants people to realize that without farmers, people are going to get hungry.

"If you want a cheap, reliable source of food, you better keep some of us around," Hodges said.

Hertel said the state fair is a perfect way to say farewell to summer.

"We have a whole bunch of new things," he said.

For the first time, adults can buy $25 season tickets to attend the fair as often as they want. Season tickets for children 12 and under cost $10.

In addition, $25 single-day, pay-one-price tickets are being sold for the fair's 63 midway rides. Patrons can ride as often as they want all day, all night on any weekday or weekend day.

"On top of that, you can bring a picnic lunch to the fair," Hertel said. "With all the bargains and new things we have, I think this is going to be the best Michigan State Fair we've ever had."

Three buildings honored by historical society

Three buildings were given a bronze marker by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society at its annual meeting. The markers designate the structures' historical significance to the community.

Bellmor 15420 Windmill Pointe Grosse Pointe Park

Bellmor is a cut stone and brick English Tudor-style mansion built in 1928 by J. (John) Bell Moran and his wife, Serena Murphy Moran, on land his father gave him as a wedding gift.

It is modeled after the great 16th century Tudor manor house, Compton Wynyates, which is also the inspiration for Meadow Brook Hall. The 15,000 square foot mansion was designed by noted architect Robert O. Derrick.

The care and detail supplied by the day's best craftsmen can be found in every part of the residence.

The French fleur-de-lis and Irish rose patterns, representing the ancestries of the Morans, are repeated throughout the home in such places as pressed plaster ceilings and exquisitely carved and detailed oak paneling.

Stained-glass inserts in the large windows which grace the main stairway represent a coat of arms of both families of the original owners.

Magnificent brickwork and stone carvings are some of the notable features found on the exterior.

Foremost is the carving of the Griffon, the first ship from the Old World to enter Lake St. Clair, which is represented in limestone above the portico.

After sitting empty in the 1970s, the mansion avoided the wrecking ball only after the owner could not secure a demolition permit.

It was featured as the Junior League of Detroit's Designers' Showhouse in 1990.

Current owners Randy and Judy Agley have restored the home.

Christ Church Grosse Pointe

When they moved into the home in 1999, the woodwork was almost black from years of neglect. Over a period of 18 months, the Agleys refinished many of the home's original features while adding a modern heating and cooling system and redesigning the flow of the main floor to be more functional for 21st century living.

15520 Windmill Pointe Grosse Pointe Park

This Georgian Revival mansion was designed by Detroit architect Alpheus W. Chittenden for John Battice Ford in 1903. Ford was the grandson of Captain John B. Ford who founded Michigan Alkali Co. (now BASF) in Wyandotte in 1889.

The home was originally built on the riverside of East Jefferson in Indian Village. It remained there until 1928 when J. B. Ford's son and daughter-in-law, Frederick S. and Esther Ford, moved it by truck to Windmill Pointe. Esther was the daughter of Pewabic Pottery's co-founder Horace J. Caulkins. The Fords lived in this home from 1929-1951. Chittenden was the first Detroit architect to embrace the Georgian Revival style at the turn of the century and is known for his grand city mansions and country estates. His work is noted for its impeccable attention to architectural detail.

The Georgian-style provided successful early 20th century businessmen with a sense of status.

This house represents a departure from most of Chittenden's Georgian Revival residences as it is faced with carefully distressed limestone rather than the usual red brick. Typical Georgian style details include the quoins (cornerstones), belt course, and modillions (ornamental brackets) under the roofline cornice. Chittenden combined the Adam style with Italian Renaissance Revival to create the river façade.

The original faced in Indian Village was far more ambitious than the present architecture.

Christ Church Grosse Pointe 61 Grosse Pointe Blvd. Grosse Pointe Farms

Christ Church Grosse Pointe was a mission of Christ Church Detroit.

The present church was designed as the chapel of what was planned to be a much larger cathedral.

Work was started in 1924. The architects were Mayers, Murphy and Phillips of Betram Grosvenor Goodhue

15520 Windmill Pointe

15420 Windmill Pointe

Associates of New York who also designed Christ Church Cranbrook. The church is built like those of the milled ages. There are no nails, just wooden pegs; no plaster, just stone and mortar.

The narthex, with its great curving stairway, was designed in the manner of the chapter House of Wells Cathedral in Somerset, England, built in 1077. The cloister, which was not enclosed until 1957, was inspired by Canterbury Cathedrals.

The stained-glass windows were made by Willet & Sons of Philadelphia and the church boasted an organ built and installed by Casavant Freres of Quebec.

The architects chose sandstone from the quarries at Clearville, Pa., for the exterior because of its iridescence in the sunlight.

Gray limestone from Indiana was chosen for the inside because it was restful. The floor is also sandstone.

Because the church is one of the few built during the Depression, many artisans were available to beautify it with intricate wood carving and detailed stonework.

The year 2000 brought about the completion of the 32,000-square-foot Christian Education Wing and five new stained-glass windows, designed by Willet & Sons, were installed.

PASTOR'S CORNER

One answer

The Bible story of Elisha defusing the warring Syrian armies determined to conquer the Israelites, is especially relevant for the world today. When Elisha led the temporarily blinded Syrians into Samaria where the Israelites were encamped, the King of Israel asked Elisha, "Shall we smite them (kill the Syrians)?" That certainly would have been gratifying to a warlike attitude thirsting for revenge. But Elisha had a much more effectual plan for stemming the vicious cycle of war. He told them not to hurt the Syrians. Then he made what might have seemed an astonishing suggestion: feed the Syrians and send them back home. Such a suggestion today might be met with incredulity. But reading further into the story, we learn that they did exactly as Elisha suggested. The story goes on to say that "the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel." What had stopped this merry-go-round of warring was the willingness to treat their adversaries with respect and kindness instead of responding with hatred and revenge. The guidance throughout the Bible teaches us how to deal successfully with whatever human difficulties may arise, including war. The prophet Malachi urged his readers, "Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother...?" (Malachi 2:36-37) And Jesus taught his disciples, "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." There is no basis for war when love displaces hatred. What motivates war? Fear of losing homes, safety, and/or resources? Revenge for wrongs done? In what way would having the same heavenly Father be the basis for the kind of love, respect and kindness that will displace a warlike attitude? A human parent teaches children to treat one another with brotherhood and mutual support, disciplining and guiding them not to act hatefully against one another. A human parent would assure the children that they would have a home, support, protection and care. Should we expect our heavenly Father to do less than what a human parent provides? Isn't God's infinite power and goodness sufficient to meet these human needs? The Bible is full of stories confirming the practical efficacy of trusting God with our needs. Mary Baker Eddy discovered that the teachings of Jesus and the prophets in the Bible can be effectively applied to resolve problems arising in daily situations. She called her discovery Christian Science. She saw the universality of one God governing all mankind, irrespective of culture, religion, history and nationality. She wrote in her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," (page 340) "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself,' annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry, -- whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed." The basis of treating one another with mutual respect and kindness is older than the First Commandment: We have everything we need when we look to God, precluding any motive for strife. Our universal heavenly Father is perfectly capable of caring for us, providing a secure and bountiful home for us all, irrespective of current events, history and politics. Our task is to trust that. As we do so, we can all contribute to the peace process in our world. Donna Fay is a member of the First Church of Christ Scientist, Ann Arbor.

CAREGIVING By Terri Murphy

Loneliness solved

The classic Beatles' lyrics read as follows: "When I find myself in times of trouble, mother Mary comes to me, speaking words of wisdom, let it be. And in my hour of darkness she is standing right in front of me, speaking words of wisdom, let it be."

They are powerful words that strike the soul. Seemingly, let it be, and a higher force will help make things work out for the best. This biblical connotation is a common misconception. In truth, Paul McCartney had a dream one night when he was paranoid and anxious. He saw his mom who had been dead for 10 years. She came to him in his time of trouble, speaking words of wisdom. This brought him peace when he needed it.

What does this have to do with this article? Well, this song deals with times of trouble, facing them, leaving them behind, and moving on in life. With that in mind here is some information regarding senior loneliness and our growing times of trouble:

◆ In 2000, approximately 9.5 million elderly lived alone. This number is expected to exceed 11 million by the year 2010.

◆ About 70 percent of American adults do not live in the same hometown as their parents.

◆ In Great Britain, more than 30 people die alone in their homes every day.

◆ A recent study by MetLife stated that 97 percent of Americans do not want to leave their homes.

◆ A quote from a CEO of a large voluntary organization: "Few understand the multiple impact that loneliness can have. It can be the difference between life and death. "Housebound and deprived of human contact, older people go down hill rapidly in both physical and mental terms."

As long as seniors are mobile enough to get out and drive and socialize, loneliness can be prevented. It's when a driving spouse dies or when an individual living alone can no longer drive that it becomes the seed for loneliness.

Here are some typical quotes from seniors living alone:

◆ "It's a very lonely existence. Most of the time the loneliness can be excruciating and painful."

◆ "I have very few friends. They're either ill or they've passed away or moved."

◆ "My husband died years ago and my children are very busy with their work and families. I don't see them very often."

So, here are some alternatives for facing these times of trouble, leaving them behind, and moving on with a positive outlook on life:

1) Assisted Living Facilities
Moving into a managed facility allows seniors to make new friends who are no more than a walk out their door and down the hall. However, in many cases moving from the family home can actually heighten depression. In addition, these facilities can be very expensive.

2) Add A Room
This is a growing trend in our country and often is the best solution for all. The senior either takes over an existing room in the home of a loved one, or a whole new addition is added that is separate but attached to the existing structure. Economically this is usually the best option for all. Typically the only downside to this arrangement is if the senior has to move from their geographic area, thereby giving up friends and making them more dependent on their loved ones.

3) Roommates

This can be a good arrangement. Not only does it potentially solve loneliness issues for two or more individuals, it can be a great economical solution as well. Clearly the downside and challenge is no different than other living arrangements, which is finding the right "roomie."

4) Home Care

For seniors who want to stay at home as long as they possibly can, this is typically the best solution. Not only can professional caregivers provide personal services on a periodic basis, they can be hired to live on the premises and even stay overnight if conditions warrant it.

The true beauty to this solution that is often overlooked by loved ones is that hiring professional caregivers can alleviate the mundane duties of care that are often provided by family members. Such relief allows the loved one to actually spend time visiting — not maintaining. The downside to home care is clearly cost. Unless the senior has some form of long-term care insurance, it is a 100 percent out-of-pocket cost. However, it is typical to have flexible schedules with these professional caregivers allowing for a limited number of visits and hours per week.

Whatever alternative is selected, it's important that someone does something. Be proactive.

As a closing thought, I'll leave the reader with McCartney's beautiful words. Keep in mind his source of inspiration and the resultant call to action.

"And when the broken hearted people living in the world agree, there will be an answer, let it be. For though they may be parted there is still a chance that they will see, there will be an answer, let it be."

Terri Murphy is a professional caregiver living in the City of Grosse Pointe.

Know the score for strong bones.

By: Sachchidanand Kaveeshvar, M.D.

It's no secret that osteoporosis is a silent disease that most commonly strikes post-menopausal women over the age of 50. But knowing the score — your T-score — can help determine your risk of developing the disease so you can take steps to prevent or slow down its progression.

Your T-score is a determination of how close or how far from average your bone density is. Doctors commonly measure bone density, which is an indicator of how much calcium is in a certain volume of bone.

Luckily, there are ways to increase your bone density. First, be sure to consume calcium-rich food like dairy products and broccoli, and take calcium supplements if necessary. Also, take vitamin D, maintain a healthy weight, do weight-bearing exercise like walking, and don't smoke.

While post-menopausal women are most likely to have osteoporosis, women with a family history, and even some men, can develop the disease. Check with your physician to find out whether you should be tested and treated.

To learn more about the score for strong bones, please attend an educational session on September 14 from Noon - 1 p.m. at Henry Ford Medical Center - Pierson Clinic. Lunch will be provided.

STATE OF THE ARTS By Alex Scuzek

Stratford's 'Twelfth Night' was worth the wait

Stratford's 2006 revival of "Twelfth Night" opened late this season, but it was well worth waiting for. Casting of the unusually large number of major roles is exceptionally strong, as only a well-staffed troupe like Stratford's can offer. In addition, an exotic setting enhances the fantasy character of this delightfully preposterous plot.

The decision by Director Leon Rubin and Designer John Pennoyer to set this production in 19th century India when it was under British rule puts the play in a fresh new perspective. A domed tower, scalloped arches, bejeweled costumes of fabrics in vibrant colors, and incidental music from that ancient sub-continent lend an air of unreality that is particularly alluring for the place that Shakespeare called Illyria. It is highly appropriate as the setting for this zany tale of a mistaken identity, a girl masquerading as a boy who falls in love with a prince and is the target of a Countess's affection, and a forged letter that wreaks a suitable revenge on a disagreeable puritan. These may be familiar as some of Shakespeare's favorite comic devices but here, in this exotic setting, they seem fresh and new.

The impact is immediate as the play begins with Duke Orsino (Sanjay Talwar) cueing a small ensemble of sitar, tabla and singers with the play's opening lines, "If music be the food of love, play on." The costumes, architectural hints and dancing girls bring to mind the style of India's native film productions, product of an enormous industry known as Bollywood. But we know at once that we are embarked upon a fairy tale adventure and even can accept that the Indian prince's elocution falls a little short of the company's overall standard of clarity. Chalk it up to the native accent. He is clear and persuasive enough in telling of his unrequited love for the Countess Olivia and seems to be clutching at a straw when he engages the young Viola (Dana Green), masquerading as a boy, to gain access to Olivia and woo for him. The twist of that plot is that the Countess Olivia, not in the least interested in Orsino, promptly falls for Viola disguised as the boy Cesario.

The standout performance is by Brian Bedford as the famous, or infamous, Malvolio who is completely seduced by a letter. It purports to be from the Countess Olivia, whom he serves as steward. In it is the famous quote, "some are born great, some achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon them" persuading him that the Countess loves him. Bedford's reading of the letter and his self-deluding conclusion that he should woo and marry Olivia is a gem of comic performance. His timing, pauses, grimaces, tone of voice are classic examples of his art as comedian.

Not that he rules this comedy alone. The merry trio of the drunken Sir Toby Belch (Tom Marriott), Sir Andrew Aguecheek (Don Carrier), and Maria (Diane D'Aquila) provide major comic relief. Carrier's Aguecheek is particularly original as he appears in Scottish kilts, talks in a brogue and plays a bagpipe, while being encouraged mischievously by Sir Toby in the romantic pursuit of the Countess. The trio's antics in their late night revels and their merciless treatment of the hapless steward provide lots more fun.

Olivia's court jester Feste (Andrew Massingham) distinguishes himself from the other comics by providing a more thoughtful and whimsical view of all the goings-on. His treatments of the songs, "Come Away Death" and "When That I was and a Little Tiny Boy" remind us that all the wooing and frivolity are no more than passing fancies.

Meanwhile, Viola and Countess Olivia (Seana McKenna) play straight man to the comedians as they pursue their own serious amours and they accomplish it with beautiful sincerity and eloquent delivery of Shakespeare's poetry. Viola, having just come ashore from a shipwreck in which she believes she lost her twin brother, disguises herself as a youth and manages to win a place as servant to the prince.

The youthfulness of Green and seemingly greater maturity of McKenna suggest an especially interesting aspect to the relationship of an older woman falling for a youth. It becomes downright madness when Viola's brother appears on the scene, not drowned in the shipwreck, and mistaken everywhere for his sister in her disguise. But this is a situation that demands resolution which brings the play to an end with swift recognition and happy couples sorted out. The one exception is poor old Malvolio who curses the lot of them and enjoys only a symbolic revenge as the curtain falls (or as required on the festival stage, the lights go out).

Even in this improbable tangle of relations, the characters manage to project very real and affecting emotions to create an evening that combines tenderness with episodes of high humor in a well-crafted performance. "Twelfth Night" is presented in repertory at the Festival Theatre through Oct. 28. Call (800) 567-1600.

A LA ANNIE By Annie Rouleua-Scheriff

Grill it up fresh for weekend

I was hanging out with my dear friend Chuck Kaess (star of WMTV's "Who's in the Kitchen") earlier last week, around the grill as a matter of fact. We whipped up an Italian feast in just minutes. Really. Here's the recipe for the main course, fresh seafood and spicy sausage in tomato-wine broth. Right on the grill.

Fresh seafood and spicy sausage in tomato-wine broth

3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
8 to 10 cloves garlic, sliced or coarsely chopped
1 1/2 cups white wine
1 28-oz. can whole plum tomatoes, (broken apart using your fingers) with juice

1 dozen fresh littleneck clams (or more), washed
1 lb. hot Italian sausage (5-6)
1 2-lb. bag fresh mussels, washed
1 lb. raw shrimp, peeled and deveined, tails on, tossed in a little olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup packed fresh basil leaves, torn
Crushed red pepper flakes to taste (optional)

Prepare the grill to medium-high. Place a large, grill-safe Dutch oven-style pot on the grill and add the oil. Allow the oil to become very hot and add the garlic. Sauté for 4 to 5 minutes, until golden brown. Add the wine and the broken tomatoes with juice. Allow the mixture to heat up for a few minutes. Add the clams, cover and cook for 10 minutes or so. Meanwhile, place the sausage on the grill and cook until crispy on the outside and done on the inside, 10 minutes or so. To the pot add the mussels, cover and continue to cook. Remove the sausage from the grill to cool slightly. Place the shrimp on the grill and cook for just a minute or two on each side. Cut the cooked sausage into one inch pieces (on the diagonal). Add the sausage and the grilled shrimp to the pot. Stir well. The clams and mussels will start to open. Season with salt and pepper, cover and cook until all the shells have opened, another 5 minutes or so. Remove the pot from the grill and stir in the fresh basil leaves.

Serve with crusty bread, pasta or garlic bread off the grill (my choice, multi-grain). The tomatoes and white wine marry well in this flavorful broth. Add or take away the seafood to your liking and substitute with sweet sausage if you don't like it hot. Bring the taste of Italy to your back yard and celebrate summer.

District won by Woods-Shores

Ten-and-11-year-olds also take sectional title and win three state tourney games

The Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League 10- and 11-year-old all-star team was the best in District 6 and the third best in Michigan this year.

A 7-3 victory against Grosse Pointe Farms-City gave the Woods-Shores team the District 6 title.

Woods-Shores then defeated St. Clair 9-1 and 3-1 to win the Sectional championship, and advanced to the state tournament in Jackson, where it won three of five games in double-elimination play and finished third in the state.

Woods-Shores won all three of its games in district pool play. It opened with an 11-9 victory against L'Anse Creuse, then beat Macomb Township 11-1 behind the strong pitching of Andrew Astalos and Richard Borland.

Chip Wujek and Jonathan Dixon turned in solid performances on the mound as Woods-Shores completed pool play with a 9-5 victory against Grosse Pointe Park.

The first-place finish in pool play sent Woods-Shores to the semifinals, where it used a 12-hit attack and shutout pitching from Astalos and Evan Hayden to defeat Harper Woods 13-0.

Woods-Shores jumped out to an early lead against Farms-City on walks to J.P. Lucchese and Wujek and a sacrifice by Borland. In the second inning, Jack O'Neil and Tony Allemon singled and both scored on David Kracht's hit.

Wujek started on the mound for Woods-Shores and blanked Farms-City through the first three innings and recorded four strikeouts. He retired the side in order in the sixth to secure the win.

Farms-City scored three times in the top of the fourth to cut the Woods-Shores lead to 5-3.

In the bottom of the inning Allemon and Cody Parafin reached base and scored on Astalos's single. Lucchese doubled and Borland singled to cap the scoring.

ON SAIL By Sandra Svoboda

Sailing clinic is impressive

Wow. After spending last weekend at the Bayview Yacht Club Women's Invitational Regatta and Clinic, all I can say is "wow."

On Saturday, nearly 60 women came to a clinic to learn about sailing from some of the sport's most active women racers.

On Sunday, 24 boats crewed exclusively by women mixed it up on the race course.

All weekend, they had energy, enthusiasm, a willingness to ask questions and learn, sports(wo)manship and an overall amazing attitude toward each other, themselves and the sport unlike anything I have seen in four decades of sailing.

The event had the best of many aspects of today's sailing world.

A number of women heard about the clinic and regatta on the Internet and "chatted" about it for months ahead of time on an online forum called "Sailing Anarchy."

Last weekend, the "anarchists" came together in person from the Detroit area, Maryland, Canada and elsewhere. They introduced themselves, sailed together and transformed their virtual friendships into real ones.

Sailing Anarchy doesn't always demonstrate the best of the sport and is definitely an "adult" board. But in this case, it furthered the discussions and participation in sailing in nothing but a great way.

The weekend also demonstrated the value of stepping out of your comfort zone and trying something new — something we don't always do in today's results-oriented world.

Women who normally sail big boats tried sailing on a small one. Women who race with all men raced with all women. Women who have never touched the helm steered races.

Women who knew nothing about the rules manipulated magnetic model boats to understand race course scenarios.

The weekend also showed the value of having some instruction in a sport you are already somewhat accomplished in. (Some of the men who sat in on some of the clinic practically demanded a similar seminar they can attend! Stand by guys...)

A lot of women sail but they probably learned the sport in casual racing or cruising and then stepped it up, all along doing a limited number of positions on the boat.

They often have never had a "systematic" way of learning sailing. They get on a boat and race. They are told to do things and they do them. But they never quite get the "why" of what they're doing which would immensely further their understanding, enjoyment and skill in the sport.

Here's an example. I wrote about a Grosse Pointe sailor earlier this year named Tom Dawson. He and his wife, Lori, own a sailboat. He campaigns it. She has rarely raced but does understand the basics of sailing. Last weekend she spent Saturday at the clinic and Sunday racing in a competitive one-design class.

During the on-the-water clinic portion, the women raced four races. Lori trimmed sails, called wind, looked for marks and steered.

She has never helmed a boat in a race. She only bumped one other one last week. She shook a little. She complained a little. But she did it.

During the race day, she hoisted the spinnaker 11 times (10 times in races, once in practice). She hiked. She reminded the skipper about mark rounding technique. She applied what she learned the day before. She was a valuable member of the team.

Her husband and two children watched from a power boat and cheered at the awards ceremony.

She called me this morning. "I want to learn knots. I want to learn how to rig a boat. I want to know more about this," she said. "When can I go sailing?"

I hope there is room for two sailors in that family.

I was walking on the dock last weekend when I heard "SVOBODA" in voice that could only have been Burt Jones, a legendary sailor who lives in the Woods. "You made a mistake in your column," he said. "You left out Blake Griffin's crew. How could you do that? You know better."

Yes, Burt, I do know better. Kevin Ginnebaugh and Nick Ridenour were his crew. Sorry for the omission, guys!

formances throughout district play," said Woods-Shores manager Dick Borland.

"It was evident that they were well-prepared, focused and played as a team each day."

In the first game of the sectional, Woods-Shores used a 15-hit attack, solid defense and strong pitching from Astalos, Dixon, Hayden and Wujek in a 9-1 victory against St. Clair.

In the second game, Astalos singled and scored the first run on Lucchese's double. St. Clair tied the game in the bottom of the third and it stayed 1-1 until the sixth.

Lucchese led off with a single and Wujek and Dixon followed with bunt singles. With two out, Parafin delivered a two-run single to give Woods-Shores the 3-1 victory.

Dixon pitched a complete game for Woods-Shores.

Woods-Shores opened the state tournament with an exciting come-from-behind 11-10 victory against South Portage that featured a seven-run rally in the sixth inning.

Trailing 8-4, Lucchese and Astalos doubled. Wujek, Andrew Remus, Dixon, Kracht, Nick Rahaim and Hayden followed with singles to give Woods-Shores an 11-8 lead.

South Portage came back with two runs in the bottom of the sixth, but Wujek struck out the last three batters to preserve the win.

A strong Ypsilanti team beat Woods-Shores in the second game, 6-0, but Woods-Shores bounced back to beat Commerce Township 6-5.

Remus had two key hits to help stake Woods-Shores to a 5-4 lead, but Commerce tied the game with a run in the top of the sixth.

In the bottom of the sixth, Lucchese led off with a single and scored the winning run on Wujek's double.

Woods-Shores came from behind in its next game to defeat Tecumseh 2-1 in eight innings.

Tecumseh scored a first-inning run that held up until the sixth when Remus doubled home Wujek with the tying run. Dixon shut out Tecumseh after the first inning.

In the bottom of the eighth, Wujek reached base on an error, O'Neil walked and Allemon drove in Wujek with the winning run.

Woods-Shores' tournament run ended with a 9-1 loss to Traverse City. Ypsilanti beat Traverse City 4-2 in the final.

"I am so proud of these young men because of their commitment to the game and their positive, unselfish attitudes," said Dick Borland. "Each and every day they came prepared, executed and refused to quit."

"This team could not have accomplished so much without the dedication from all the coaches and parents who were very supportive and positive throughout the tournaments."

Dave Kracht, Glenn Parafin, Todd Remus and Tim O'Neil were the coaches.

two Forest Akers golf course on the Michigan State University campus. Bennett opened with a 75 on the first day and was in third place, two strokes off the lead. On the second day, playing the more difficult West course, Bennett shot 76 while the two players ahead of her each came in with 83s.

At an awards dinner following the tournament, Bennett also received the Sportsmanship award for the tour, and she was awarded the $3,500 Bo Mann Memorial Scholarship. She also was honored as the stroke-average leader in the girls 16-and-older division. Her average for the year was 79.2.

The Sportsmanship Award was voted on by the tour staff and a news release from the Game of Your Life Foundation said of the two winners (Matt Malloure of Farmington Hills was the boys winner), "their actions and attitudes exemplify all the good things golf stands for. Both will be winners in the game of life because of their respect of others and their friendly personalities."

Grid scores available

EAST LANSING, Mich. — High school football fans will be able to obtain scores of varsity contests on game days throughout the regular season, through the Michigan High School Athletic Association Web site.

ing each contest.

The system will update each football school's record, and results can be viewed as a statewide list, or by conference.
