Stormy seas

Thunderclouds forced an early end to Michigan Marina Day festivities last weekend at City of Grosse Pointe Neff Park. Events such as synchronized swimming and a home-made boat race took place Saturday, Aug. 14.

Racing For Kids hits Hill

Preparations are under way for the fourth annual Racing For Kids to the Hill event, Wednesday, Sept. 1, on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"This has been such a popular event for the past three years that we've actually had people calling up and asking when it's going to happen this year," explains Tom Buhl, co-chair of the event. "People see the racing flags overhead and want to make sure they don't miss this exciting once-a-year event."

The event gets its name from Racing For Kids, a Farms-based national charity, which uses the popularity of motorsports to generate awareness and funding for children's health care institutions across the country.

The Hill Association merchants and businesses sponsor a day-long street fair, which is free and open to the public.

There is a sidewalk sale, a scavenger hunt, games for children, moon walks, refreshments and activities for the whole family. Local band, "Whack the Mole," entertains. Dream cars are on display.

New rules brewing

By Kathy Ryan
Staff Writer

It was a beer summit without the good stuff as Grosse Pointe Woods city officials met to brew a new policy allowing alcohol at the community center.

The center, used for years by residents for bridal and baby showers, birthday and graduation parties, as well as by local non-profits for special events, has always had a "no alcohol" policy. That's about to change.

"We want to allow alcohol in the community center as long as it is in compliance with Michigan law," said Mayor Robert Novitke. "It will keep us competitive with other local establishments."

A draft of the policy, presented by Acting City Administrator Al Fincham and director of public works Joe Ahee, attempted to mesh current community center use guidelines with new regulations regarding alcohol. After reviewing the proposal, the city council asked Fincham and Ahee to simplify the policy and clarify exactly what libations will be allowed.

In order to serve alcohol at an event, the resident will need to pay an extra fee, though the amount hasn't been determined. Also, while the original draft banned "hard liquor," it was the direction of council to allow all forms of liquor. However, beer kegs will not be allowed.

Fundraiser for slain officer

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Law enforcement representatives from beyond Southeast Michigan came to Grosse Pointe Farms last week to raise money for the family of slain Taylor policeman Matthew Edwards.

"We're all here for one good reason — to support one another," said Constable Fred Brown, a 17-year veteran of Sault Ste. Marie Police Services in Ontario, Canada. "It doesn't matter if you're in Canada, the United States or England. We all do the same thing."

Brown and a couple hundred officers, their families and friends from an estimated 20 departments attended a fundraiser by the Grosse Pointe Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 102 corn roast last Wednesday, Aug. 11, at Pier Park.

Some $31,500 was raised through donations, raffles tickets, commemorative T-shirt sales and an auction, according to co-organizer and Farms Officer Frank Zielinski.

"One hundred percent of money taken in — T-shirt sales, food sales, the raffles — everything will go to Officer Edwards' family," said Eddie Tujaka, a lieutenant with the City of Grosse Pointe and a former Detroit police officer. "There's nothing that can take away from their loss, but this may make the rest of their lives a little easier."

The lodge, which consists of public safety officers from the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, holds a corn roast every summer.

This year, Zielinski and fellow organizer City Officer Joe Adams turned the local event into a fundraiser for Edwards' wife and two children.

"Officer Edwards was killed in the line of duty July 23," said Zielinski. "I called Joe Adams the next day. Here we are today."

Edwards' widow, Shannon, sent a letter on behalf of herself; son, Luke, 9; and daughter Moriah, 7.

"Words cannot express how fully grateful I am for your financial donations and words of support for my family. It brings great comfort to such a time of unspeakable loss to our family and our Taylor police department.

"Matt and I both know Jesus Christ is our personal savior. We will meet in heaven some day. My sincere desire is that you will have that assurance as well. May the Lord richly bless you for all your kindness and keep you safe."

Taylor police Corp. Brad Sepell read the letter to those grouped around the park pavilion.

He said he was overwhelmed by the large turnout.

"Being part of Matt's family in blue, it amazes me how communities stepped up way above and beyond what we would have expected," Sepell said.

Edwards' son turned 10 years old two days after the fundraiser.

Farms Officer John Mikesell attended the roast with his wife and daughter, Olivia, 9.

"We're supporting Taylor officers and the department during tough times they're going through," Officer Mikesell said.

He bid during a silent auction on a hockey stick for Olivia signed by Detroit Red Wings goaltender Jimmy Howard.

"It's part of her birthday gift coming up in September," Mikesell said.

"I'm a big hockey fan," Olivia said.

Gary Mitchell, retired public safety director in Grosse Pointe Shores, attended.

"We're all brothers and sisters," Mitchell said. "When one man goes down, it's important that we all come together to do things for the people he left behind."

"The Fraternal Order of Police is one big family," said Kelly Shimko, wife of Farms Officer Tom Shimko. "We support each other in good times and bad times. You couldn't ask for a stronger, more sup-

Anglers rounded up 94 fish during this year's fishing rodeo at Pier Park. Nearly 1,000 people attended the event. "Everywhere you looked around the park, all you could see were people with fishing poles," said Dick Graves of Grosse Pointe Farms, the second-generation organizer of last Saturday's 62nd annual Grosse Pointe Farms-City Family Fishing Rodeo. Graves and his sponsors worked all year amassing prizes for children competing in the rodeo, open to residents age 17 and younger from the Farms and City. "Everyone got a good prize," Graves said. ## Too good to be true ...

By Kathy Ryan
Staff Writer

It was a flash to the past for Grosse Pointe Park Police Chief David Hiller. He remembers scams worked by the Bunco Squad, referred to as confidence games.

"That was a long time ago, but it appears they're back," he said, as he held up a letter and check a Park resident received recently.

Both looked official, both were frauds.

According to Hiller, the Park resident did exactly the right thing when she brought the information to the department for investigation.

"If you have any doubt, any doubt at all, bring things like this into the station and we will be happy to verify the information for you," he said. "Don't be embarrassed."

In this latest scam, the resident received a letter from the North American Sweepstake Award Claim Unit, with an address of Niagara Falls, Canada. It tells the resident they have been named as one of the winners in the "UK & NORTH AMERICA CONSUMER PROMOTION DRAW" organized for customers at such stores as Kmart, Wal-Mart, Kohl's and several others. The amount of the prize is $55,000.

Along with the letter comes a check for $3,900, drawn on an existing bank in California which looks genuine. The check, the "winner" is told, is to be used to pay the tax liability of $2,700. The winner is instructed to deposit the check and to immediately forward the $2,700 to a Niagara Falls address. A phone number is also included, which, when called, immediately goes to voice mail.

Once the bogus check is deposited and the "winner" sends money to the Niagara Falls address, within a few days the "winner's" bank notifies them the check is bad, but they are still responsible for the $2,700 that was drawn on their own account.

"Oftentimes what happens is that people go ahead and deposit the check, and send the check for taxes on, then when they receive the notice from their bank that it's a scam, they don't tell anyone because people are embarrassed," Hiller said. "We're fairly confident there are other letters out there like this, but people are embarrassed to come forward."

Hiller noted that while people are becoming more and more educated on Internet fraud schemes and how to avoid identity theft, these old-fashioned scams are still around and apparently rather lucrative for those who work the scams.

"A scam like this works because it doesn't involve huge amounts of money," he said.

He reminds residents to never give out personal information like credit card numbers and Social Security numbers over the phone.

"If you have a question about someone calling, ask them for a number where you can call them back, but never give out any identifying information. And if there's any doubt, come by the station. We'll be happy to help you."

West Park Farmer's Market hosting festive day

The West Park Farmer's Market will host the annual Beer Taste Fest and Corn Roast this Saturday, Aug. 21, and market manager Jennifer Meldrum has planned something for everyone at the event.

Food vendors, water slides and musical entertainment will be on hand, as well as the usual market fare of fresh vegetables and produce, unique crafts and handmade items.

But it's the beer tasting and corn roast taking center stage that day for the adults, while the kids stay cool on the Kahuna Water Slide, an inflatable slip and slide and a mechanical surfboard.

Local band The Full Montefalcos will entertain throughout the day, along with a special appearance by a champion piper playing the bagpipes from 10 a.m. to noon.

Food will be served up by Smokey Joes, along with confections from Blue Pointe, kettle corn and fresh-squeezed lemonade.

The event runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the market, located in Grosse Pointe Park at Kercheval and Lakepointe. Wrist bands for the water activities are $5, the roasted corn is $1 for two ears and the beer samplings are free. There is a charge for an individual glass of beer, along with normal vendor fees for the food. Beer tasting roasted corn will be available from approximately noon to 3 p.m.

The market's annual Fall Festival is set Saturday, Sept. 25.

The investigation continues into a Detroit arson that injured seven firefighters.

Heroes

By Joe Warner
Editor

Four Detroit firefighters remain in serious condition after a burning building collapsed on top of them Friday, Aug. 13. The fire, which involved several businesses on Jefferson near Dickerson, just west of Grosse Pointe Park, has been ruled an arson by investigators.

City of Grosse Pointe resident and 6th Battalion Chief Lewis Roelans was just a couple feet from where the collapse "smashed on top of the men."

"It was devastating," he said. "You always know it can happen. The picture of them will be trapped in my mind forever."

Roelans has 37 years with the Detroit Fire Department.

"We risk our lives every day, along with the police officers," he said. "We have 90 to 100 fires a day in Detroit and most of them are arson. What's rare is a legitimate fire. It's our job to save lives and property and we don't think twice about it."

Detroit firefighters are on 24-hour shifts and Friday's early morning fire came at the beginning of Roelans' shift.

His wife of 32 years, Pamela, said she dreads days like Friday.

"After I heard about the fire, I tried calling him and couldn't get a hold of him," Pamela Roelans said. "I didn't hear anything until noon. It was just a horrible day."

The Roelans' daughters, Laura and Linda, both graduates of Grosse Pointe South, were among the many friends and relatives to call to find out if Lewis was among the injured as the blaze made national news.

"We are used to it, but you never get used to it," Pamela Roelans said, with a tear in her eye.

Last Friday, as Lewis Roelans led the 6th Battalion through the flames, he thought of the job he had to do.

"Once it collapsed, we had to get them to the hospital," he said. "We had to get them to the hospital as fast as we could. As we started out it was amazing what the Grosse Pointes did for us."

Public safety departments in the Grosse Pointes blocked off every intersection up Jefferson and Lakeshore to Moross across to St. John Hospital. Some of the firefighters were taken there, while others were transported to Detroit Receiving Hospital.

"The Grosse Pointes did their part to help us," Lewis Roelans said. "They did a phenomenal job and they deserve recognition. It was really incredible."

Describing a brotherhood feeling firefighters and law enforcement officers have, Lewis Roelans said people can't understand it unless you're part of it.

"When people need assistance, we're always there," he said. "It's our job. We rely on each other and our families to get us through. Any department would help another."

Pamela Roelans said she understands the camaraderie. Families of firefighters stick together too.

"It's tough when they're injured because everybody knows everybody," she said. "To have firefighters injured because of an arson fire just makes me sick. I can handle that my husband puts his life on the line to help others. But to think he's putting his life on the line for any other reason than an accidental fire, I can't deal with that thought."

"You can't be angry," she said. "An argument can't last because you never know if today's the day. You just don't know."

Lewis Roelans appreciates the support he receives from his family.

"It's tough for the (spouses) of policemen and firemen," he said. "She's been very supportive. You can't dwell on it. You can't think it might be the last time you're seeing them. You have a job to do and they have to live it too."

Pamela has lived it. She said it's hard to concentrate on anything other than the injured firefighters and how close her husband was to being one of the injured.

"He's saved lives," she said. "He would do anything to help and he's done that for 37 years. The girls are very proud of their father. He's my hero. They are all heroes."

OFFICER: Area businesses contribute to fundraiser

Wayne County prosecutor's office, credited high participation as the public's appreciation of law enforcement.

"People are here to support what police officers do day-in, day-out — putting their lives on the line for all of us and making sure our communities are safe," Bresnahan said.

When organizers spread the word about the fundraiser, numerous Grosse Pointe businesses and area professional sports teams contributed auction items.

"The outpouring is incredible: Detroit Tigers autographs, Red Wings jersey and hockey sticks, Detroit Lions footballs, jewelry, baseball mitt, a trip to Alaska," said Park officer and FOP 102 second vice president Leo Deraedt. "Everybody came forward to support the widow and family of officer Matthew Edwards."

Representatives came from the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores, Taylor, Clinton Township, Westland, Wayne, U.S. Border Patrol and Homeland Security. Officers in a Michigan State Police helicopter hovered over the park in salute.

Comments included:

◆ "It's all about the brotherhood," said Farms Lt. Andrew Rogers.

◆ "Officers always come together when there's a death to celebrate the life of an officer killed in the line of duty," said Detective Mike Narduzzi, a 15-year veteran of the Grosse Pointe Park public safety department.

◆ "It's a family of blue," said Southfield Officer Jill Becker. "I don't care what organization you're with, if you're supporting a family that has lost a loved one in the line of duty, I'm going to be there to show my support."

◆ Steve Petrik, a recently retired officer from Grosse Pointe Woods, said the fundraiser was for a great cause.

"Once in uniform, always in uniform," said Petrik.

He was shot early in his career during a traffic stop.

"Everyone knows it can happen to them," he said.

◆ Another retiree in attendance, Dan Fromczak, worked until 14 years ago as an officer in Grosse Pointe Shores.

"It's not just a job," Fromczak said. "It's a way of life. Ninety-five percent of officers I know are devoted to their jobs."

◆ City Chief James Fox took part. He helped man the grill.

"It's all for a worthy cause," Fox said.

◆ Fox's son, Brian, a law school student who wants to become a prosecutor, said, "I'm here to support the fallen officer and his family and to raise even more money for the family."

◆ "The turnout is unbelievable," said Dan Jensen, Farms public safety director.

◆ Farms reservists Ted Roney and Peter Swenson gave support.

"I'm just helping with a little money for the raffle for the fallen officer," Swenson said.

GUEST OPINION By Russ Harding

Wind power will blow household budgets

Michigan residents can expect to pay significantly higher energy bills in the future due in large part to state law that requires 10 percent of electricity sales in the state come from renewable sources, such as wind.

The Institute for Energy Research recently released a report titled "Energy Regulation in the States: A Wake-up Call," that found states with binding renewable portfolio standards have electricity rates nearly 40 percent higher than states without renewable energy mandates. The higher rates in states with a renewable energy portfolio standard may not be entirely caused by the mandates, although there is a strong cause-and-effect relationship to renewable energy mandates and higher electricity rates.

The New York Times reports Portugal produces nearly 45 percent of its electricity from renewable sources, up from 17 percent five years ago. The price of electricity in Portugal has climbed 15 percent in the last five years, and households there pay twice as much for electricity as does the average household in the United States

Michigan already has the 17th highest electricity rate among the states. Michigan lawmakers who support renewable energy mandates would do well to remember the devastating impact higher energy bills have on family budgets, particularly low-income households. Higher energy costs contribute to Michigan businesses being less competitive.

Renewable energy mandates come with a significant cost that Michigan businesses and residents can ill afford. Michigan lawmakers should repeal the current renewable energy mandate or at least suspend it until the unemployment rate falls to a more reasonable level — at least 6 percent. This is the kind of bold action needed to get Michigan's economy back on track.

Economics knowledge

Economics dominates public life and important policy discussions these days, but most people who rely on what they've learned in school are entering the intellectual battle unarmed.

Economics courses in high school are few and far between and often deal with little more than "consumer" issues: How to balance a checkbook, how to find the best deals in the market, or how to borrow money at the lowest interest rate.

Those are all useful things to know, but the mental tools and essential principles needed to analyze and evaluate the paramount issues of the day are too often missing.

Even a cursory examination of textbooks used in high school economics courses reveals a dismal level of understanding or outright bias by the text authors.

Students are sometimes reading citizens are under-taxed, government spending creates new wealth and that politicians are better long-term planners than private entrepreneurs.

It is not uncommon for texts to portray free-market competition and private property in a suspicious light while presenting government intervention with little or no critical scrutiny.

Economics is immensely important. Without it we miss an understanding of much of what makes us the unique, thinking creatures we are. Economics is the study of human

Shores public safety

To the Editor:

As a mostly lifelong resident of Grosse Pointe Shores, I have always felt privileged to live in this community because of its beauty and proximity to the lake, school system and, of course, stellar public services.

The Grosse Pointe Shores public safety department and emergency team should be recognized for all they do to keep this community safe and cared for on a daily basis.

Their handling of emergency situations is outstanding and was immediately and personally apparent to me on Wednesday, July 21, when I fell ill and needed emergency help.

Within three minutes — yes minutes — of calling 911, a team of paramedics and officers were at my home and helping me.

I would like to take this opportunity to personally and specifically recognize officers Ron Coste, Tony Spina, Sgt. Daniel Pullen and Chief Steven Poloni for managing my personal emergency and doing so with expertise and kindness.

I am so personally grateful to live in this community and to be protected by our fine public safety department.

Compassionate officers

To the Editor:

I wish to express my sincerest appreciation to the members of the public safety department of Grosse Pointe Shores. On many occasions over the past eight years they have responded to my requests for emergency transportation of my wife, Beverly, to St. John and Beaumont hospitals.

Their responses were always swift. They displayed both skill and compassion in tending to my wife's needs.

On Tuesday, Aug. 8, Beverly, my dear wife of 57 years, passed away at home at 8:30 a.m. after an extended and brave struggle with numerous health problems. The police officers were incredibly compassionate and respectful in their handling of the situation. My daughter Susan and I are most sincerely grateful.

The residents of Grosse Pointe Shores are blessed to have such fine individuals serving our community.

Thanks for kindness

To the Editor:

On behalf of Special Kids we would like to thank Wells Fargo Advisors of G.P., for collecting donations for us during the Sun Messengers Concert in the Village last Thursday night.

Their kindness helps to make a difference in our community. Thank you for helping the kids that need it the most.

GUEST OPINION By Pat Garofalo, Michael Linden and Ethan Berman

$10 trillion giveaway

Shortly after President Barack Obama came into office, Congress passed the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009.

The $787 billion stimulus package of tax cuts and increased federal spending bolstered the social safety net and led to critical job creation and economic growth, amid rising unemployment in the face of the Great Recession.

The economy at the time was on target to shed an astonishing 11 million jobs, according to estimates by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, but the CBO calculates the Recovery Act saved or created about 3 million jobs since its enactment. The president's stimulus package also provided tax cuts to more than 95 percent of American households, and kept millions of American families from falling into poverty.

Indeed, the Recovery Act and the other extraordinary steps the federal government took during the financial crisis helped avert a second Great Depression, according to a new study by Alan Blinder, Princeton professor; and Mark Zandi, chief economist of Moody's Economy.com and one of the top economic advisors to Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) during his 2008 presidential campaign.

So what do Republicans today think of this exceedingly timely rescue of the U.S. economy? They continually blast it as a failure, after all but three Republicans in Congress voted against the bill in 2009 — one of whom, Sen. Arlen Specter, later became a Democrat.

And what is their alternative plan to restart the economy so broad-based jobs growth can begin in earnest? When House Minority Whip Eric Cantor (R-Va.) was asked in December to describe the Republicans' "big idea" for creating jobs, all he could say was, "the big idea is to get to produce an environment where we can have job creation again."

All Americans can agree on that point, of course, but Republicans have also put their plans on paper. The Economic Freedom Act of 2010 — introduced by Rep. Jim Jordan (R-Ohio) and Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-Utah) and backed by the 116 member-strong House Republican Study Committee — makes it clear their job-creation plan is to double down on the failed economic policy agenda of President George W. Bush.

The bill calls for more deficit-funded tax cuts for the wealthy and deregulatory policies that allow corporations to do what they did under president Bush — act with almost complete disregard for consumers' financial well-being, the environment and worker safety.

After insulting the intelligence of the American people by presenting the same failed conservative economic policies that led to the Great Recession, they then advocate further ways to injure our economy with new budget-busting tax cuts for the wealthy and corporations. Such tax cuts led to the jobless economic recovery of 2001-2007, when jobs growth was an anemic 4.8 percent before the consequences of conservative economics over the next three years led to today's nearly 10 percent unemployment rate.

We calculate today's recycled conservative economic policy prescriptions would cost about $10 trillion in new deficit spending over 10 years relative to the current Congressional Budget Office baseline, which is the CBO's estimate of spending over 10 years figuring in no changes to current tax law and discretionary spending. This nearly $10 trillion surge in deficit spending would flow overwhelmingly to the rich and corporations, with the rest of us picking up the tab to pay the cost of borrowing these vast sums.

The Economic Freedom Act alone would add about $6.9 trillion to the deficit relative to current law, while the rest comes from Republican refusal to allow any of the Bush tax cuts of 2001 and 2003 to expire.

What's more, this spending would have considerably less "bang for the buck" than the provisions in the Recovery Act. The reason: The money would flow to a minority of Americans and corporations that would be least likely to spend or invest all of it in job-creating ways.

Republicans claim they will pay for their program by seizing any unspent Recovery Act funds alongside any remaining funds from the Troubled Asset Relief Program, the legislation passed in late 2008 to prevent the collapse of the U.S. and global financial system. But there is only $284 billion in unspent Recovery Act funding (much of which has already been allocated, including $50 billion dedicated to middle-class tax cuts this year), and another $180 billion of remaining TARP funds, $19 billion of which is being used to implement the recently passed Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform Act to protect Americans from some of the predatory lending practices encouraged by Republican-led deregulation under president Bush.

So the money the Republicans would use to cover their new $10 trillion in deficit spending does not come close to covering the astronomical cost of their proposal. Even if Republicans could seize all the remaining stimulus money and TARP funds, it would amount to less than 5 percent of their $10 trillion in tax cuts.

What's worse, this budget-busting plan would overwhelmingly benefit the same wealthy Americans who reaped the rewards of the last Republican-led tax cuts in 2001 and 2003, which sent the U.S. government into a deficit-spending tailspin and sowed some of the seeds of the Great Recession.

If the new Republican plans were to be enacted, the typical middle-income taxpayer earning an average of $40,000 per year would get a tax cut of $467 per year over 10 years, while the typical taxpayer in the richest 1 percent of the country — earning $1.4 million on average — would receive a tax cut of $157,500 per year over the same period, according to an analysis of the Economic Freedom Act by Citizens for Tax Justice.

In 2011, 42 percent of the tax benefits would go to the richest 5 percent of taxpayers. In 2012 that rises to 76.8 percent, with an astronomical 61.5 percent of those tax benefits going to the richest 1 percent of taxpayers. In effect, the plan is a massive redistribution of wealth up the income scale. This is not the way to create jobs.

I SAY By Amy Salvagno

The great name debate

I am admittedly indecisive when it comes to, well, everything. I could pay those closest to me to disagree, but it's tough to hide the truth. When our weekend date night rolls around, I'm out of ideas. Movie out or a cheap rental in? A stroll around the outdoor mall or the nearby park? Ice cream for dessert or creme brulee? On evenings when cooking isn't on my to-do list — a phenomenon that happens much too often — I never know what to grab in its place: Chinese? Pizza? Carry-out from our favorite eatery?

I seem to need second opinions on everything from what flowers and shrubs to plant in front of our house to the type of décor needed to dress up our living and family rooms to the gifts to buy for birthdays and holidays. I even seek suggestions about topics I choose for this column. In fact, I was so unsure of what to write this time that you were almost reading, "This page intentionally left blank." Much to the amusement of my editor, I'm sure. So you can imagine my ensuing panic when I realized I'd have to decide on the name our baby will forever bear. I'm having a hard enough time making a commitment to a nursery theme, which is only a short-term setup until the preschooler outgrows the cutesy newborn trimmings. A few weeks ago, upon learning my husband and I are going to have a girl, I stopped into a baby store on the way home from work, eager to purchase her first outfits. I couldn't wait to finally shop for my own little one after spoiling others' for so many years. But after walking in and out of the same aisles, overwhelmed by purple and pink layettes, I suddenly felt the urge to reach for my phone and dial my mom. Surprisingly, I'd forgotten how to buy baby clothes. I couldn't decide on pajamas with footies or gowns; dresses or sweater and pant sets; or whether I should stock up on socks. Surely she could tell me what to choose and what sizes I would need. She could make up my mind. But then I stopped, put my phone away, took a deep breath and refocused. Though it may have taken me a while, I finally settled on an assortment of pajamas to get our baby girl through her first few nights. And then I celebrated my mini victory, my first motherly moment. Unfortunately, it was short-lived. Later that night, when I pulled out the "100,000-Plus Baby Names" book — my first mistake, considering I couldn't choose between pink and purple — I slipped back into the old habit. Each name I considered I also second-guessed. Would family and friends like it? Would it fit our daughter as a toddler, a high school senior, a career woman? Would she be filled with resentment about her moniker and one day demand it be changed? After momentarily brushing these thoughts aside, I made my second mistake — I sent my mom a text with my wish list that included a name and its meaning I've long adored, but worried its rareness wouldn't catch on. And she vetoed every one. Of course I did the same when her list arrived in my e-mail inbox. Fortunately, this game, which my co-workers hear weekly updates about, has subsided for now. Though I'm not quite sure who is winning. I reason that whatever name we decide on, it could always be worse. We're not going with a unisex name or one that's off the 100 most popular list, so she won't have to go by her last name throughout her school years. And we're certainly not choosing to be part of the wackiest name contest, which Hollywood seems to be leading. Somehow, I can't imagine our daughter wanting to be named after a flower or a fruit — see Bluebell, Dandelion, Fuchsia and Petal Blossom Rainbow — or with no rhyme or reason, like Diva Muffin, Ever Gabo, Freedom, Java, Mars and Moon Unit. You can't make this stuff up, yet it seems a few celebrities did. As new parents, choosing our baby's name will be among the biggest first decisions we make. And I realize it should be an enjoyable experience, not one steeped in uncertainty. So this is one decision I've made, at least until tomorrow when I change my mind: when the baby's delivery day arrives, hopefully in early December, she'll have the perfect name waiting for her because it will be one only she can carry. And it will represent the first of many decisions we'll be making for her.

GUEST OPINION By Bill Kalmar

Old student's back-to-school reflections

Here it is, several weeks into August, with loads of summer days still staring us in the face. Yet, the "back to school" ads have been popping up for weeks. Every day brings advertisements for backpacks, tennis shoes in school colors, insulated lunch bags, computers, Master brand combination locks and, of course, the usual paper and pencil supplies. Heck, when I was in school, the only things we bought was a zippered pencil case, couple of Duo-tang folders, protractor and maybe a belt or a strap to wrap around some books we carried home. These days, going back to school resembles preparing for an extended trip or cruise. And students with their 90-pound backpacks look more like hikers in the Alps. We are raising a generation of weight lifters. Teachers and students are counting down the days until the first school bell will ring. Wonder who is most looking forward to that clang? Parents are gearing up for all the notes that will accompany their flock home during the first week. It's a marvelous time of the year. There have been many changes in education. Some school districts are examining the possibility of reducing high school to three years, theorizing the senior year is a "blow-off" year for many students. So now junior year will soon have that designation. High schools that had started classes at 7:30 a.m. have determined sleep deprivation was a problem and are now returning to a more reasonable time to ring the first bell. Another change I've not-ticed is the number of school districts applying for the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award. Administrators are looking for ways to improve their product and particularly in the case of charter schools, are seeking ways to differentiate themselves from the competition. Better yet, schools that achieved the Baldrige Award have become role models for other schools. The number of Baldrige applications from educational organizations is second only to applicants from health care. With that in mind, permit me to offer some advice and reflections from the point of view of someone who has matriculated and been educated beyond his intelligence: Students who are seniors in high school and anticipating pursuing a college degree should be prepared to submit at least three university applications. These should be signed by a counselor and immediately forwarded to the various universities. It's a nice boost to be accepted by an institution of higher learning early on. Then you can just sit back and enjoy your final year of high school — or maybe not. College entrance officers will monitor your performance, so this is not the time to dawdle. Once acceptance has been confirmed, it's a good idea to investigate securing a part-time job at the university. Working in the school's cafeteria or interviewing for a job offer should be on the student's "to do" list. I realize some parents frown on their child working, but with the cost of tuition, many families find this to be a necessity. And there's nothing wrong with a student working during holiday visits, particularly during holiday breaks and the summer. I like to think of this work as a class in "responsibility," which unfortunately, is not a required school course. Financial aid is an option for many students and should be explored early during the application process. However, if possible, loans should be avoided so upon graduation the student and family are not encumbered with a sizable debt — see "get a job" above. In fact, there is a movement afoot to make sure student loans do not outpace the graduate's ability to retire that debt. Administrators are examining the earning power of the student's degree to make sure it is in concert with the amount of loans outstanding. This is a new concept, and I'm not sure how it will be monitored. Suffice it to say if outstanding loans are in the six figures, I suspect a degree in pyramid exploration with a potential of paying less than $25,000 annually would be a problem. College students should set a goal of graduating in four years. When our three children went off to college, we anticipated a graduation date four years hence in the spring and stated we would inscribe that date on our calendar in anticipation of seeing them walk across the stage to receive their diploma. They did not let us down. Have I any advice concerning student living? Glad you asked. There is another movement to prevent students from "borrowing" those plastic milk crates we often see turning up in students' dorm rooms. Markets whose cartons have been pilfered are prepared to contact the authorities; given that, no one wants a student going off to school with a misdemeanor on his record. Just buy the cartons at your local office-supply store. While on the subject of misdemeanors, any student transgressions should not result in suspension, which is nothing more than vacation time. Let's have those malcontents perform some tasks on school grounds. I'm sure the biology teacher has a need for someone to clean the room after the customary frog dissections. Some high schools are announcing the "D" grade will be eliminated. Students will get an A, B, C, or F. This is supposed to send the message mediocrity will no longer be accepted. This is a good thing because, frankly, in too many schools we are seeing grade inflation. How else can we explain the number of high school graduates who enter college unable to construct a sentence and who have to register for a remedial English course? And speaking of mediocrity, Washington, D.C. school chancellor, Michelle Rhee, is drawing national attention for her ambitious reforms in the nation's capitol. Her nonsense management style includes firing teachers she feels are not producing student gains. Teachers not meeting certain standards will be released. All organizations have had employees who performed at unacceptable levels, and we know what happened to them. I think it's about time we put that same focus on teachers. We should also examine the issue of tenure. The idea that after a certain number of years teachers have a job for life and can't be released except for unusual circumstances is balderdash. No one should have job guarantees unless one is a Supreme Court Justice. So there you have it — some reflections on the upcoming school year. Makes me almost want to return to those simplistic days of parochial school, where a star on your forehead meant you were special. But lugging a 90 pound backpack might just be too much at my age. On the other hand, it might be fun to hear a Dean Vernon Wormer-type utter those famous words from "Animal House" — "You're on double secret probation!" Finally, since I just read that the average student consumes 1,500 peanut butter and jelly sandwiches by the time he or she graduates from high school, I think I'll make myself my 1,501st "PB&J," place it in my insulated lunch bag and stroll out to my hammock for a nap. ## ECONOMICS: Goods and services action in a world of limited resources and unlimited wants — a lively topic that cannot be reduced to lifeless graphs and mind-numbing equations that occupy the pretentious planner's time. Economics teaches us that everything of value has a cost. It informs us that higher standards of living can only come about through greater production. It tells us nations become wealthy not by printing money or spending it, but through capital accumulation and the creation of goods and services. It tells us supply and demand are harmonized by the signals we call prices and political attempts to manipulate them produce harmful consequences. Economics explains good intentions are worse than worthless when they flout inexorable laws of human action. It reminds us to think of the long-term effects of what we do, not just the short-term or the flash-in-the-pan effects. When people have little or no economic understanding, they embrace impractical "pie-in-the-sky" solutions to problems. They may think that whatever the government gives must really be "free," and that all it has to do to foster prosperity is to command it. Citizens are being asked every day to form judgments and cast votes for programs and proposals that are largely economic in nature. We should think about how we can provide the missing tools we need to make those and other such decisions, so that we don't dig ourselves deeper in the muck of poor thinking and bad public policy. I'm thankful the Mackinac Center for Public Policy helps fill the void created by the dearth of sound economics in primary and secondary education. Lawrence W. Reed is president of the Foundation for Economic Education and president emeritus of the Mackinac Center for Public Policy.

Great Lakes Maritime Museum

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Oliver Hazard Perry was only 28 when his fleet defeated the British during the Battle of Lake Erie in the War of 1812.

Perry's victory message, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," and a dying comrade's rallying cry, "Don't give up the ship," inspire U.S. naval forces to this day.

"The Battle of Lake Erie was the most important battle in American naval history between the Revolution and the Battle of Midway," said Christopher Gilchrist, executive director of the Inland Seas Maritime Museum. "If Perry had lost, the Northwest Territory would have gone back to Britain."

Britain would have retained control the lake.

"When you control the water, you control the Great Lakes region," Gilchrist said.

By the time the 200th anniversary of Perry's victory is celebrated Sept. 10, 2013, Gilchrist's museum will have joined forces with other maritime institutions to establish the National Great Lakes Maritime Museum in Toledo.

Opening day is May 1, 2011, on the Maumee River across from downtown.

"Great Lakes history is a critical element of American history," Gilchrist said. "Our mission is to preserve and make known the history of the Great Lakes."

Rechristening

As part of the coalescing of maritime attractions, the 100-year-old Great Lakes freighter Willis B. Boyer Museum Ship is scheduled for restoration and relocation next to the museum.

"That's moving full speed ahead," said Paul LaMarre, Boyer executive director and manager of maritime affairs for the Toledo-Lucas County Port Authority. "Our goal is to serve as the capital of the Great Lakes past, present and future."

The 617-foot Boyer, launched in 1911 as the Col. James M. Schoonmaker as a member of the Shenango Furnace Fleet, is scheduled for drydock in October.

Boyer's black hull and olive green superstructure, representing its final owner, Cleveland-Cliffs Steamship Co., will be repainted Schoonmaker's original bright green hull and white superstructure.

"On July 1, 2011, the Boyer will be rechristened as the Col. James M. Schoonmaker," LaMarre said. "It will be done by the colonel's grandson at the exact moment the colonel's daughter, Gretchen Schoonmaker, and his mother did it 100 years earlier. Schoonmaker will serve as the centerpiece of the National Great Lakes Maritime Museum."

Damn the torpedoes

"It's set," said Toledo Mayor Michael Bell of the museum. "We have grants to get this going."

The center will lock down one end of the downtown riverfront while a forthcoming casino bookends the other.

"We're trying to leverage the advantages we have with our great riverfront," Bell said. "We have two anchor points. We're going to try to develop our city in the middle. Restaurants and destination points are important for our city."

In addition to participation by the port authority, another player is the Great Lakes Historical Society.

"The society brings an established endowment and proven fundraising capabilities," LaMarre said. "We've been appropriated $1.2 million by the Ohio Cultural Facilities Commission for exhibit construction."

Gilchrist looks forward to moving the Inland Seas Museum from Vermilion, Ohio, about 30 miles west of Cleveland, to the larger, forthcoming facility.

"Our current permanent exhibit area is about 4,000 square feet; a tiny, little museum," Gilchrist said. "The building we are going to occupy will have about 12,000 square feet of permanent exhibit space."

A three-fold increase allows the display of large artifacts, including lighthouse components.

"The Edmund Fitzgerald inflatable life raft from the shipwreck is too big to exhibit in Vermilion," Gilchrist said. "That will become a centerpiece."

More expansion plans already are under way.

"We have plans of going to about 45,000 square feet with exhibit space, our research library and shipwreck research center," Gilchrist said.

The institute's Peachman Lake Erie Shipwreck Research Center conducts archaeological surveys and public education programs.

"We excavated the steam engine from the Gen. Anthony Wayne, lost in 1850; probably the oldest steam engine found on the Great Lakes," Gilchrist said. "It was buried under sev-

Free at last

The 533-foot freighter Sidsel Knutsen came within 50 feet of violating the Voyager restaurant's parking lot tow-away zone during an Aug. 3 grounding in the St. Clair River in downtown St. Clair.

Four tugboats freed the stranded Norwegian tanker shortly before 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 10, from a sand bank at the mouth of the Pine River.

The ship's pilot intentionally grounded the vessel away from narrow shipping lanes when it lost power downbound due to an engine room fire.

"The pilot set her down on the mud to stabilize her for safety considerations," said Frank Frisk of the Great Lakes Maritime Center in Port Huron. "He did a good job."

An anchor took hold and the bow grounded. The stern swung left, coming to rest with the ship pointing upstream.

Frisk watched tugs free the ship from atop the sand in six feet of water.

"I know most of the people in the tugs and the pilot on board," said Frisk, a native Grosse Pointer and retired Great Lakes freighter cook. "I'm trying not to bother anybody while trying to find out what's going on."

BREWING: Community center may allow alcohol as soon as September

While six council members approved allowing all forms of liquor at the community center, Councilwoman Lisa Pinkos Howle said she would not vote in favor of allowing liquor at the center.

"When the idea first came up, I was for it," she said. "But I'm having second thoughts. Residents have told me they don't believe it is a good idea. I have not had anyone tell me that they will now use the community center because alcohol is now going to be allowed. I can no longer support this."

While there was concern over possible problems with guests who have over-imbibed, Fincham said the center's proximity to the public safety department should put those concerns to rest.

"If there is a problem, the desk attendant can call us and we'll be right there," he said. "Also, our officers routinely walk through the building at night, and we can make our presence known."

Councilwoman Vicki Granger disagreed with Howle.

"I have heard from several residents that they are in favor of the alcohol policy," she said. "In fact, the issue was raised by the senior citizens commission and the beautification commission was unanimous in their support. I have heard that residents would welcome being able to entertain this way at the community center."

Fincham said the city's liability insurance would cover the addition of alcohol and agreed with council the policy should be simple and reasonable fees should be charged.

"We're not trying to push people away, we're trying to bring them in," he said.

Novitke charged Fincham and Ahee with putting together a policy the council could evaluate in September so it could take effect as soon as possible.

"We can always re-evaluate the policy once it is in place," he said. "But this is really a benefit for our residents and I'd like to see it in place as soon as possible."

Students credit musical theater experiences with college successes

By Amy Salvagno
Staff Writer

It's a dream they've long clinged to, since the days of reenacting fairy tales and nursery rhymes on a makeshift stage for an audience of few.

They envision their name in lights, on the pages of "Playbill" and scrolling across the movie screen.

Many students who embraced music and theater in high school have today found themselves chasing the same in college, with Broadway and Hollywood in their sights.

And they chalk up successes and exclusive opportunities in the arts primarily to experiences and lessons learned from their alma mater.

Jon Manganello, a sophomore at the University of Michigan School of Music Theatre and Dance, says the expectations placed on him and others in Grosse Pointe South High School's Pointe Players primed him to pursue his acting aspirations.

"The exciting part was it was really student-driven," he said. "We had a wonderful group leader, (South drama teacher) Lois Bender, who has been involved in Grosse Pointe Theatre and is really, really talented, but it was up to the students to make it happen. That prepared me most out of everything for what I'm doing now."

Manganello won a supporting role in the locally-filmed "Mooz-Lum," featuring Danny Glover, due out soon. He is also featured in a commercial for Ford Motor Company.

"People think of a successful actor as being on Broadway and being in movies, but it really is a matter of initiating and making your own theater," he said. "I learned a lot about that."

The undergrad, who recently returned from a road trip to the Big Apple, is already checking out New York real estate sites.

"I'm looking forward to it and moving to a city where theater runs wild through everything and the city revolves around it."

Fellow Pointe Players alumnus Sean Buckley, now a student at Western Michigan University, also has aspirations for the New York life.

"I always really liked acting and performing and it's something I wanted to do," he said.

The sophomore has already gotten his feet wet on the WMU stage with performances in "As You Like It" and this fall, "Take Me Out," in which he landed a leading role.

Buckley was accepted into the musical theater program with just 13 other students nationwide.

"I think just the overall experience of performing and having the opportunity to perform, as well as working with talented students and directors at South, prepared me. There was a lot of competition, too, which helped me prepare for auditioning in college."

University Liggett School alumna Quinn Scillian says the close-knit program at her alma mater allowed her more opportunities to "get out there and get those bigger roles."

"You have to work your way up like you do anywhere, but you definitely get more stage time," says the sophomore at the University of Michigan School of Music Theatre and Dance. "At Liggett, there was a real concern for actually turning out actors. One thing that (drama director) Dr. (Phillip) Moss really stressed was just really getting down to a lot of raw emotion, even underneath all of the costumes and dancing or singing."

Charlie's Angels? No, it's Jon Manganello, center, and a few other aspiring actors, from left, Lauren LoGrasso, Maria DeSaro, Quinn Scillian, K.C. VanElslander and Camille Langston. The Grosse Pointe South and University Liggett grads, now away at college, are pursuing a love they explored from stage during their high school days.

Scillian, who is working with two casting agencies, says she's enjoyed spending the summer heading out on auditions.

"I'm having a really good time with this. My goal right now is to hopefully keep acting when I'm done (at U-M). That would be ideal."

And an expansive college resume can't hurt.

Last year, Scillian was one of two freshmen girls cast in the school's production of "Uncommon Women and Others," by Tony Award-winning playwright Wendy Wasserstein.

And in the spring, when the school's film department auditioned freshmen for a short that aired at the Traverse City Film Festival, Scillian landed one of the parts.

"(Festival founder) Michael Moore made a deal with U-M that we would have the only student film in the entire festival. So we got to meet him and do a little schmoozing and have our movies in the festival, which was really wonderful."

Fellow Liggett alumna Camille Langston didn't get a bite from the acting bug until her sophomore year of high school.

"I went to an audition and thought, 'Wow, this is amazing' and it was something I really wanted to learn about. There was an instant attraction," she said.

A 2010 graduate, Langston is heading off to the University of Evansville in Indiana to double major in acting and theater marketing. She said the program mirrors what Liggett offered: the chance to experience everything, rather than focus on one subject.

At Liggett, she was involved in the winter musicals, "Godspell" and "Into the Woods."

"Our director was really helpful in the college process and selecting the program that was right for us," she said of Moss. "I really learned a lot about time management. One of the speeches that the director gives us each year is, in the real acting world, if you're five minutes late, you're docked pay."

"He treats us as if we're professionals, while not being a ruthless tyrant, so I feel like I can talk to him and ask him questions and not feel afraid."

Langston said she also enjoyed the support from her acting peers.

"What I liked that wasn't specific to Liggett is meeting other thespians in Michigan," she added, acknowledging the theater festivals she and her schoolmates attended during the winter semester. "It's really nice to see other teens interested in theater and who are serious about it."

Another 2010 grad, Alexandra Papas earned a scholarship to the School of Music at Grand Valley State University.

"My plan is to get a teaching degree so eventually I can move to New York and start auditioning for shows," said the double major in voice and early childhood education.

At South, she landed lead roles in "Pippin" and "Hello Dolly," sang in the choir and gained invaluable experiences.

"I learned time management — and how to change costumes quickly," she laughed. "We learned a lot of different styles of dancing through the show choirs. And I really love the trips. I got to meet my grandma on a trip to Greece."

"And you're with all the people you perform with, which is important because of the communication you need to have on stage. I learned a lot about time commitments and being dedicated to everything."

Aside from a passion for the performing arts, these students share another commonality: work outside the school stage with a professional instructor.

Many say the instruction from voice and acting coach Wayman Ezell has given them an extra edge, in addition to the skills they've taken from high school theater.

"With Wayman, I learned a lot. He made my voice more mature," said Papas, who will be involved in GVSU's yearly opera. "I'm just waiting to see where the music takes me. I'm hoping to be able to do what I hoped I would always do and been dreaming about since I was three."

Though Maria Dasaro, a 2008 South grad, is studying public relations at Wayne State University, she still takes time to stay involved in music and acting.

Last year, Dasaro landed a role in Grosse Pointe Theatre's "The Boyfriend," and when she can, she sings for weddings and other events.

She began working with Ezell her junior year at South. "I always loved music and theater was my passion, and the second I started with him, my range grew. He took me completely out of my shell," she said. "He's very devoted."

"These young people are pursuing the performing arts as a professional industry and mentoring for that industry needs to be sought out by working professionals as opposed to educational professionals. The classroom alone simply doesn't cut it any more," Ezell said. "Talent is a given. And the students of Grosse Pointe certainly have that talent, but they very much need outside, individual private sessions because their

Bell rings late for district's youngest

By Amy Salvagno
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe elementary school teachers will have an early start to their Monday mornings this fall – and they're jumping for joy.

The 2010-11 school year gives educators from Trombly to Mason a scheduled 45 minutes extra at the beginning of each work week, a time they've long wished for, according to Leo Warras, executive director for instructional services.

"One of the biggest complaints we've heard is there's just not enough time for teachers to meet throughout the year to talk about instructional issues," he said. "They'll be able now to meet together, either as grade groups or other groups, to work on curriculum or review test scores ... it gives them a consistent time to do that."

Each Monday, the bell rings at 9:05 for students, followed by lunch from 11:56 a.m. to 12:46 p.m.

Warras said the most significant change for families is the dismissal time — it remains the same as any other day during the week, at 3:38 p.m.

Last year, when the district first introduced late start Mondays for elementary schools, students were let out of class 27 minutes earlier than the rest of the week. And the bell rang to start the day just 15 minutes later than it did Tuesday through Friday.

Teachers arrived at 7:50 a.m. to meet with colleagues. Now they'll assemble around 8:15 a.m.

Monique Beels, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction, said the dedicated time includes an agenda teachers follow and a feedback sheet they turn into building principals that lists what they've achieved during the weekly meetings.

"It's very well documented as far as what goes on in that time. There are norms they follow ... it's all pretty prescribed," she said.

The 45 minutes are invaluable, Beels added.

"Teachers are looking at the curriculum, what standards and benchmarks are set, what things are most important and essential. They're studying totals for their students, for their class and for their school. And they're setting up strategies to help students achieve goals," she said.

"They also go over assessments they've given and whether students learned what they expected them to, and if they didn't, what they will do, and how they challenge those students who did to go further."

The first day of the new school year for elementary students is Tuesday, Sept. 7.

competition is doing exactly the same thing." Dasaro says her involvement in South's performing arts program has prepared her for more than just a career. "All the stuff I learned, all of the practices, all of that helped me in everyday life," she said. "The program is very intense. You learn time management and self discipline and how to present yourself. "And the people skills are great. They challenge you a lot, but after, you feel like you can take on anything." Michigan State University senior Lauren LoGrasso realized what her passion was after graduating from South, where she only scratched the surface of the performing arts world. "I want to pursue acting. It's been a dream of mine and I could never forgive myself if I didn't follow it," she said. "If I'm going to have an absolute passion for something, why not pick acting? I'm going to stick with it as long as it makes me happy." LoGrasso has energetically thrown herself into a variety of roles, from commercials to campus sitcoms to Shakespearean stages. She was a company member of the Michigan Shakespeare Festival, and earned spots in "The Tempest" and "As You Like It." At MSU, she was the narrator for "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," for which she earned a Pulsar Award from the Lansing State Journal as Best Supporting Actor. This summer, LoGrasso was part of the Young Playwrights Festival at MSU and was cast in a commercial for MSU Federal Credit Union. In the fall, she'll star in MSU's production of "Evil Dead." She is a member of a campus sitcom and has a daily radio talk show at MSU. And she won best actress the past two years for her roles in a telecast. "When I left high school, Wayman and my parents encouraged me and led me to make the choice to major in acting," LoGrasso said. "Wayman helped me take what I had and really turn it into something I could make a career of. "I feel like this is an experience of my soul. Acting is the best way to illustrate this horrible, beautiful thing that life is. I understand it now on a deeper level."

proud owners and restorers. It's safe to say everyone, including auto historians and collectors, learns a lot at this magnificent show.

Organized in tidy circles and lines, cars and motorcycles stood at the ready July 25 as visitors streamed through the entrance at Meadow Brook Hall and down onto the field of automotive dreams.

Authentic classics to concept cars, American faves from the 1950s and 1960s and exotic European two-seaters shared the grounds with speedsters, limousines, woodies, brassies, museum pieces and celebrity cars.

Among the most talked-about and unusual vehicles was the DiDia 150, an aluminum-body finned car completed after seven years in 1960 at an estimated cost of $95,000 for celebrity crooner Bobby Darrin. Michael Manns of Manns Restoration in Festus, Mo., was on hand with his son, John, to talk about the work he did on the DiDia back in 1981.

The car, he said, had been donated to the Museum of Transportation in St. Louis at a Cardinals ball game by Darrin. It sat at the museum for several years — long enough for the paint to crack and peel. Manns' operation restored the car, and it has won awards at prestigious shows and concours, including Amelia Island.

CONCOURS: Handsome Studebaker

now 93 years old, made a special appearance at the show. He was greeted with awe and applause.

A short distance from the DiDia, former Grosse Pointers Dick and Joyce Thams and their family sat with the Thamses' 1930 Lincoln L, a dual-cowl phaeton by the Locke company. Thams suggested his might have been the only Locke-bodied dual-cowl phaeton the company did that year. Consumers, he said, were losing interest in phaetons, with their permanent side "windows."

Thams, now of Gaylord, has owned the marvelous tricolored Lincoln L with its 383.8-inch flathead V-8 and great "curb appeal" less than a year. He bought it at an RM Auction sale in Hershey, Penn., in the fall of 2009.

"This car was built for display at the top auto shows and was introduced at the auto salon in New York in 1930," Thams said. "A good part of it is original."

On Saturday, July 24, RM Auctions held its annual Meadow Brook sale, this year featuring some 100 cars ranging in value from an estimated $10,000 to $15,000 on a handsome 1941 Studebaker Commander sedan to the $850,000 winning bid on the 1953 Chrysler "Thomas Special" Coupe, designed by Virgil Exner and with Ghia coachwork.

By the way, that Studebaker Commander, offered at no reserve, went for $20,900.

Jenny King is an automotive writer who lives in the City of Grosse Pointe.

More photos, pages 7 and 9A II

This colorful 1930 Lincoln L phaeton with dual cowl and gorgeous paint job may be the only one of its kind built for Lincoln by Locke that year. Owners Richard and Joyce Thams of Gaylord bought it at auction in Hershey, Penn. in the fall of 2009.

8A II | AUTOMOTIVE

TEST DRIVE By Greg Zyla

The 2010 Toyota Highlander Hybrid comes complete with the hybrid electric package that assures much better fuel mileage, especially in the city.

2010 Toyota Highlander Hybrid 4WD

$46,174.

Pretty much identical to the 2009 model, Highlander is listed by the EPA as a midsize SUV/Crossover that seats up to seven passengers.

With stiff competition in this segment, Highlander is very competitive with the likes of Honda Pilot, Hyundai Santa Fe/Tucson, Mazda CX9, Chevy Equinox/GMC Terrain, Dodge Journey and Ford Flex all vying for consumer approval.

Highlander Hybrid is available as a base model ($34,900) or the upscale Limited, and both are mechanically identical.

Overall, Highlander has been around since 2000 as an extension of the now full size 4Runner. In 2001, Highlander became a stand-alone midsize, even though the first models were longer than the 4Runner, which today is Toyota's full size SUV.

Now built in Princeton, Ind.,

the Hybrid joined the Highlander lineup in 2005, with a second generation appearing in 2007. After experimenting with different engine combinations, Highlander Hybrid now relies on a 3.3 liter V6 engine with a combined electric/internal combustion horsepower rating of 270. With Highlander's more than two-ton gross vehicle weight, I feel the current 270 horse package perhaps is the best fit of all and quite peppy when the accelerator is pushed to the floor. Notable is all Highlander Hybrids come with 4WD underpinnings.

Standard for 2010 is an electronically controlled Star Safety System that includes vehicle stability control, traction control, and anti-lock 4-wheel disc brakes with electronic brakeforce distribution. New this year is an economy mode that limits throttle opening and also slows air conditioning force while under heavy acceleration. This is a nice feature, although I wonder how many mpg the ECON mode really adds and if it is worth the reduction in acceleration.

There is also an "electric EV mode" which allows electric-only driving at lower speeds for a limited distance. The only transmission available is a fuel mileage enhancing continuously variable automatic, and towing is limited with the Hybrid to 3,500 pounds. Non Hybrid V6 Highlanders can tow up to 5,000 pounds.

Inside, passengers find excellent second row legroom and a third row seat that easily folds under for a flat cargo area. The third row is actually somewhat spacious and offers good legroom. Rear cargo space behind the second row is very good with third row flat although when all three rows are utilized, there's just a little over 10 cubic feet for your grocery order.

Safety features are many, and result in near perfect 5-Star government crash ratings. All expected air bags, including side curtain for all rows, are standard, as are all the powers, rear backup camera system and 6-disc in-dash stereo with XM Satellite capability. When it comes to amenities, they are all here, from a power lift gate with jam protection to 10 cup holders. Leather heated seating, beautiful light wood dash, door panel and console trim, great looking instrumentation and easy to reach controls make driving even more relaxing.

Options on our tester included a $2,775 Navigation system with voice activation. It adds a JBL AM/FM upgrade, Bluetooth hands-free phone, 9-speakers and a subwoofer. For $2,010 more, our tester featured a moonroof, and a three row air conditioning upgrade.

An anti-theft system for $210 and cargo nets for $49 round out the option list.

Underneath, Highlander Hybrid offers a unitized fully independent suspension and fully automatic 4WD system. Toyo 19-inch tires and beautiful alloy wheels help set off the exterior looks.

Important numbers include a wheelbase of 109.8 inches, 4,640 pound curb weight, up to 94.1 cubic feet of cargo capacity with seats down and 17.2 gallon fuel tank for premium grade gasoline.

I like the Hybrid for obvious reasons, however consumers who don't need a 4WD Hybrid that lists for more than $40K may want to drive the 4-cylinder powered base Highlander, which starts at $25,855 in 2WD form and delivers 18 city and 27 highway EPA numbers. You can buy a lot of fuel for the price difference and generate better highway fuel mileage, too.

Likes: Excellent quality, well laid out interior, roomy third row, a true green vehicle.

Dislikes: Price is high with options, highway mileage just OK.

Round Island lighthouse is one of the most photographed lighthouses in Michigan.

Yet, for decades, the lighthouse, with a view of the Straits of Mackinac, Mackinac Bridge, Mackinac Island and Mackinaw City, was neglected, attacked and abused by wind, waves, weather and vandals.

No one took an interest in the landmark, except, according to the Michigan Department of Tourism, 400,000 tourists who annually travel by the lighthouse on their way to the island. They stood on a ferry's deck to capture a picture of the red and white sentinel. But they provided only a passing interest, not a dedicated interest, which it desperately needed.

Boy Scout Troop 323 of Freeland began the clean-up for the lighthouse's centennial in 1995. They were joined by their parents and the Mackinac Island Historical Society and are refurbishing it ever so slowly, but ever so determinedly.

More people than not, who visit the site, have a personal story about the lighthouse, said David Mack of Saginaw, who has been coming to the island since 1995. And Mack has his own story.

Mack's saga began when he accompanied his Boy Scout son, a member of Troop 323, to clean the structure and grounds in preparation for the lighthouse's anniversary.

Mack's son is 30 now and out of the scouting program, yet Mack continues to journey to the island for a week every July.

"The scouts and their parents fell in love with the island and the project," he said. "The parents formed the preservation society."

Through the work of the society, Friends of the Round Island

Lighthouse, and the Mackinac Island Historical Society, the lighthouse — built in 1885 and commissioned in 1886 — is being refurbished.

Detroiter Frank Rounds supervised construction of the $15,000 lighthouse. The beam was automated in 1924 and the building painted red and white. The United States Coast Guard took responsibility for it, and all United States lighthouses, in 1939.

The beacon was powered first by oil, then electricity. Today, the sun provides power channeled through roof-top solar cells and storage batteries to keep the light flashing every 10 seconds during the shipping season.

The Light Keepers Coast Guard decommissioned Round Island Lighthouse in 1947, replacing it with a less attractive and unmanned light closer to Mackinac Island. During the next 40 years, vandals and weather took its toll on the brick building.

The U.S. Forest Service took possession in 1958 and Round Island and the lighthouse became part of the Hiawatha National Forest.

In October 1972, a violent storm washed out the southwest corner of the lighthouse, damaging the foundation and endangering the entire structure.

Members of the Friends of Round Island Lighthouse, Mackinac Island Historical Society and the Hiawatha National Forest undertook initial repairs, including installing tons of foundation sustaining riprap between 1974 and 1976. Funding was provided by private donations, the two societies and government money.

The lighthouse's reputation grew and its 378-acre island became part of the 1980 movie as a picnic site for Jayne Seymour and the late Christopher Reeve in the film, "Somewhere in Time." Renovations continue and will be stepped up when a memo-random of understanding is signed between the Friends of the Round Island Lighthouse and the U.S. Department of Forestry Aug. 21. The memorandum is a process to determine the purpose of the lighthouse and the vehicle by which preservation would be done, explained Pat Eckenstahler of Long Beach Ind., and professed lighthouse aficionado. "One goal," she said, "is for better public access; and education and preservation."

Once a year, Round Island Lighthouse is open to the public.

On July 10, about 300 men, women and children were ferried by a Halcyon Charter boat. Guests were transported about halfway between Mackinac and Round islands, transferred to a rubber dingy and taken within feet of the island's shore.

Members of the preservation society and Boy Scouts greeted guests who had tramped up the sharp riprap in wet shoes and craned their necks to see the lighthouse up close and personal.

What's the attraction of Round Island Lighthouse?

"People have a lot of attachment. A couple from Maine drove here because they can get in," Eckenstahler said.

The three-story building is not much to see, holes in the walls, deteriorating wainscoting and empty rooms with worn floors. However, the visitor can feel the water's force and hear the whoosh of waves as freighters pass close enough to see rivets on the ships' sides.

Touring the edifice, Mack points to the three layers of brick with wood beams mortared together, providing stability. The faded white-wash wainscoting is beech wood, he said, and the ballisters embellishing the stair rails has a sunburst pattern, common in the 1880s. The plastered walls are made of gypsum and horsehair.

Three lighthouse keepers were assigned to the lighthouse at once and their families lived on the island. The three men kept the fourth level Fresnel light operating from the spring thaw to the winter freeze.

The original machinery for the light's operation and the foghorn were housed on the first floor, though much of it was removed and used as scrap during World War II. A single air compressor remains.

A pipe, long gone, would have connected to the compressor to sound the foghorn, mounted outside on the second floor of the 57-foot tall lighthouse.

In a corner of the tower base is a cabinet, or chase, housing weights. The descent of the weights rotated the lens. It functioned just like the inner workings of a grandfather clock.

The second and third floors were designated living quarters. All in need of repair.

Nathan Yax, a freshman at Freeland High School, was serving his first year as guide on the second floor. He said he found the trip fascinating and used his imagination of what life would have been like more than 100 years ago.

"I see and imagine all the history from the first when it was built to now. I'm coming back next year," he said.

Yax is building his own Round Island story and providing a service for others to build memories ... and take photographs.

CAREGIVING By Terri Murphy

Seniors susceptible to heat

The United States Center for Disease Control estimates every year about 300 people in the U.S. die from heat-related ailments.

In addition, thousands of Americans suffer from dehydration, heat stroke and heat exhaustion. Summer draws people, including seniors, outdoors to enjoy the sunshine and outdoor activities with family and friends.

Seniors are more susceptible to heat, as their bodies return to normal slowly and their cooling mechanism is not as efficient as younger people. Hence seniors should be aware of health problems related to summer heat and the preventive and safety steps they should take to avoid these problems.

First to note is the faster you move, the faster your body heats up. This is why seniors should take it slow in the summer, especially when it is hot. Plan outdoor activities for early mornings when it is cooler. As much as possible, stay in shaded areas or under covered porches.

Air conditioning should be used when it is very hot and fans are not enough. If air conditioning is not available at home, consider visiting public places like shopping malls, libraries, etc., that have air conditioning.

Proper ventilation is essential. Some seniors prefer to keep windows closed for security reasons even when a cool breeze is blowing. This problem can be easily solved by installing safety latches so they cannot be opened from the outside. They are inexpensive and can be bought at local hardware stores.

Dehydration accelerates during the summer months. Some medications cause loss of fluid and electrolytes from the body, such as diuretics, antibiotics and other medications.

Seniors, as well as others, should check with their doctors and pharmacists to find out if their medications have any such side effects.

Seniors on low carbohydrate diets should be careful and consume a lot of fluids, as the extra protein in their diets can cause the body to heat up quickly. As such, everyone should also take extra fluids during summer months to compensate for dehydration.

Seniors should plan ahead for outings. Wear light colored, loose fitting, cool clothing (preferably cotton) and head coverings like hats or caps. As the senior's skin is sensitive, they should use high SPF sun blocks (30-plus) and avoid direct sun as much as possible.

Seniors should avoid caffeine and alcoholic beverages as much as possible, as they accelerate dehydration. Drinking plain water may not be adequate as the body also loses sodium and potassium salts through sweating. A sports drinks can be used for this purpose or drink a homemade one. Be aware of exhaustion symptoms which include mild nausea, lightheadedness, faintness, vomiting, clammy or cold hands and excessive sweating. The symptoms of heat stroke include strong pulse, body temperature above 104 degrees, hot, dry skin and mental confusion. Contact an emergency team or 911 immediately when heat stroke symptoms are detected, as this situation calls for immediate medical attention. In the meantime, keep taking rehydrating fluids.

These summer safety tips for senior citizens can help prevent most heat-related health problems.

Heat waves are often deadly for seniors. If you know of any older people living without air conditioning, check on them at least twice a day when the temperature reaches 90 and above.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Ed Lazar

Parental liability and underage drinking

This is the first of a two-part series on parental responsibility for underage drinking.

Q. Are parents responsible for the consequences of underage drinking in their home? If so, how serious are those consequences?

A. Children love to celebrate. Whether at a family graduation party or a spontaneous late night get together, some teens celebrate with alcohol. What's worse, 65 percent of children under age 21 who say they drink admit they get alcohol from family and friends. That means they get it from their parents, their friends, parents, or older siblings.

Make no mistake about this: If you provide alcohol, directly or indirectly, to someone under the legal drinking age, you can be held responsible for what happens after they have consumed it. Even when children are old enough to be held liable for their actions, their parents can still be held equally responsible and subjected to severe and permanent consequences. Those consequences can be punitive, civil, or even criminal.

Here is a sad, but common, example. There are many variables, but this is a realistic situation and some plausible consequences. Eddie's parents were going to the cottage for the weekend. Eddie is 17 and a really good teen. He gets good grades, listens to mom and dad most of the time, and gets along with everyone at school.

Just as his parents were leaving, Eddie asked if it he could have Glenn and Brandon over to play video games and spend the night. Since she knew both boys, mom said OK, but also said no one else is allowed over and absolutely no drinking.

Eddie agreed and immediately sent a text to his buddies, "sall good c'mon over" Later Brandon got a text from another friend, Marky, "What r u doing 2 nt?"

Brandon responded, "at Eddie's his folks r gone."

Marky, "k c u ltr." At 10 p.m., Mom called Eddie, "How are you?"

Everything OK?"

"Yep, Glenn and Brandon are here, and we ate."

"Okay, honey, not too late, and remember your promise. I love you, good night."

"Love you too, mom!" At 11 p.m., Marky showed up with his girlfriend, Monica and her friend, Stacey. Eddie was surprised, but not really worried. Within an hour, there were 13 teens in the house and 10 others had already come and gone. Eddie noticed the empties starting to accumulate, "Hey, who brought the beer?"

Marky piped up, "We all brought something!"

Eddie felt conflicted and out of control. He was too embarrassed to call his mom, didn't know who else to call and tried to manage the situation on his own.

By 3 a.m., Eddie, Glenn, and Brandon cleaned up after the party that "never happened." Empty beer cans and liquor bottles were to be found in the Dumpster behind a fast food joint during a snack run.

At 11 a.m., Eddie was awakened by a text from Jenny, Stacey's friend, "U hear bout M M & S?" Eddie's heart sank and his stomach tightened.

Stretch the summer food budget

This week I'm stretching your summer food dollar by turning leftover Italian sausages from the grill into a hearty meal for four (or more!)
Without leaving my kitchen, I paired the already cooked sausage with pasta, garlic, canned tomatoes and fresh herbs. Delicious.

1 pound linguine, cooked to al dente
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, quartered and thinly sliced
8 to 10 garlic cloves, thinly sliced
3 to 4 cooked Italian sausages, halved and sliced 1/4 inch thick

1/2 cup chopped basil leaves

- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
salt and pepper to taste
Begin by cooking the pasta according to package directions for al dente. Meanwhile, in a large no-stick skillet, heat olive oil over medium heat. Add the onion and cook and stir for about eight minutes. Add the garlic and sausage and cook for another five to seven minutes. Add the tomatoes (with juice) and bring the mixture to a quick simmer.
Place the just cooked pasta in a large bowl and top with the sausage tomato mixture from the skillet. Throw the basil and parsley over the sauce and toss until everything is well combined.
Toss in the parmesan cheese. Taste and season with salt and pepper. If you're looking for a little heat, toss in a dash or two of crushed red pepper.
With last night's sausage, you can have dinner on the table tomorrow in less than 30 minutes.
Really. Really good too.

PASTOR'S CORNER By The Rev. Ben VanArragon

The things we don't want to hear

In an Aug. 7 New York Times op-ed, Pastor G. Jeffrey MacDonald addresses the problem of clergy burnout and attributes it to the escalating expectations of American Congregations.

In "Congregations Gone Wild," MacDonald wrote: "The pastoral vocation is to help people grow spiritually, resist their lowest impulses and adopt higher, more compassionate ways. But churchgoers increasingly want pastors to soothe and entertain them. It's apparent in the theater-style seating and giant projection screens in churches and in mission trips that involve more sightseeing than listening to the local people."

Whereas his assessment of the demands of American church-goers tends to be a little reductionist and a lot scathing, MacDonald makes a point that bears further reflection.

MacDonald references a few career preachers, himself included, whose congregations have exerted significant pressure for them to stick to positive, uplifting sermons intended to make them feel good. MacDonald contends that clergy have a God-given responsibility to challenge their congregants, to examine themselves critically and strive to live better lives.

In truth, everyone prefers a comforting, uplifting message. Whether you're talking to your physician, your professor, or your pastor, you want a positive evaluation. You want good news. None of us wants to hear we need to change. None of us wants to hear if we don't change, there will be dire consequences.

The story of a king who only wants good news is told in 1 Kings 22. Ahab, a king of Israel, has decided to go to war against an old enemy. He invites the king of his sister kingdom, Judah, to join him. The king of Judah complies, but asks Ahab first to secure God's blessing. So Ahab gathers his entourage of "prophets" (read yes-men), who whip themselves into a religious frenzy and declare unequivocally that God will back up the mission.

The king of Judah, understandably skeptical, says, "Don't you have any real prophets?" Ahab responds, "Well, there is this one guy, but he never tells me anything I want to hear." To which his ally says, "Why don't we ask him anyway?" Ahab sends for the prophet, who says, "God has told me that if you go to war you will die." Ahab turns to his friend and says, "What did I tell you? Never tells me anything I want to hear!" Ahab pursues his intended course of action, with disastrous results.

People have always sought approval from God and God's messengers. Those appointed the task of interpreting and delivering God's word encounter outrage when they dare suggest that someone's actions run counter to God's word. What we ignore, to our detriment, is that God's word has been given to help us. God's clearly stated will is every human being live — and live to the fullest. God gives us what we need to live in harmony with God, with each other, and with our world. God's word includes warnings in line with the warnings you'd receive from your doctor, your coach, or your teacher. Sometimes God's word corrects, guiding us along a path toward a deeper relationship with him. Sometimes God's word convicts us of a habit that, left unchecked, will kill our relationships and our spirits. When you hear or read God's word, pay attention to the parts you don't want to hear. They may save your life.

Scott takes tennis game to college level

By Bob St. John
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North graduate Joe Scott is quiet, but he wields a big shot when it comes to playing competitive tennis.

The 18-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods resident has spent most of his youth playing tennis and now he takes his game to the next level, college.

"My parents always tell me there is more to life than tennis," Scott said. "I know that is true, but I also believe that many life lessons can be learned on the tennis court."

"Daily practice takes hard work, discipline and motivation. It teaches me that I must work hard to be good at anything, even something I love."

He signed a letter-of-intent to play for head coach Reggie Sanderson at Saint Joseph's College.

The student-athlete extraordinaire blazed the tennis courts, winning 50 matches his sophomore and junior seasons, and finished his academic career with a 3.5 grade point average.

"I worked hard in high school and did the best I could in my classes and in sports," Scott said. "I think I earned a spot on St. Joe's tennis team and now I get a chance to play at the next level."

"We're excited for him," Scott's mother, Mary Scott,

said. "Greg, his father, and I, and his sister, Katie, will miss him when he's gone, but he is not that far away, so we will be able to see some of his tennis matches. "St. Joe's is a great fit for Joe and he will do well in college." His current coach, Brian DeVirgilio, said, "Joe is ready for college tennis. He is a hard worker. He has improved his serve, moving the ball around the court and his ground strokes are better. He has grown and matured as a tennis player and I think he will do well at St. Joe's."

Sanderson, said in a press release, "Joe will certainly be an impact player in our program. I have had the privilege of meeting with Joe and watching him compete on several occasions. He is ready to make the transition into the college game physically, mentally and emotionally. His academic record is just as impressive as his tennis resume. He is a great find for Saint Joseph's College."

Scott's college tennis career starts Aug. 20, just one day after all freshmen move into their dorm at the campus in Rensselaer, Ind.

After a couple of weeks of practice, Scott and St. Joe's travel to Goshen for a match Sept. 12 before hosting Purdue Calumet and Calumet College Sept. 18.

The abbreviated fall schedule ends with a home match against College of DuPage Oct. 10 and the major portion of the slate starts with a home match Feb. 12 against Earlham.

Scott and his teammates travel to Mobile, Ala., for a spring break trip March 5 to March 12 and play at Adrian March 20. The dual match schedule ends with an away contest April 16 against Northern Kentucky.

"Playing tennis (at St. Joe's)

for hours every day will be great," Scott said. "There is nothing else I would rather do."

"I choose St. Joe's because it felt right. They have a good academic program and a good reputation. I liked coach Sanderson from the minute I met him. He is really positive and encouraging. He also competes in USTA tournaments and actively practices with his players. The team was really friendly and made me feel very welcome."

Scott played the United States Tennis Association circuit this season, earning a ranking as high as fourth in southeast Michigan.

GROSSE POINTE NORTH

Hamzey mastered North, ready for U-M

By Bob St. John
Sports Editor

Kamille Hamzey is the definition of confidence.

The 2010 Grosse Pointe North graduate pursued her studies and track career with gusto.

She combined a 4.0 grade point average and intense athletic skills to finish high school with a convincing slamdunk.

"I had a lot of fun at North," the 18-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods resident said. "I worked hard to get good grades and worked hard in sports. Basketball is my favorite sport, but I also enjoyed cross country and track.

"I made the most of my opportunities in high school and I plan to continue that in college at U-M."

Hamzey applied to several colleges, including Michigan State, Northwestern, Oakland and Loyola-Chicago, but it was the University of Michigan all the way.

"I didn't want to go too far away from home and U-M is perfect," Hamzey said. "It's far enough away so I can be independent and live on my own, but it's also close enough where I can come home if I need to."

Hamzey will also see several other North graduates at U-M, including one close friend, Christine Bedway, who played alongside her on the basketball team.

Hamzey grew up in the Pointes, attending Monteith Elementary and Parcels Middle School before enrolling at North.

Despite not being the tallest, Hamzey, who stands 5-feet, 3-inches, used her speed and tenacity on the court to shine on her Macomb Eagles AAU team and then during her time on junior varsity and varsity basketball squads at North.

"I think many people underestimate me because I'm short, but that is OK because I worked hard to be a competitive basketball player at every level," Hamzey said. "I had a lot of fun playing basketball, especially for coach (Gary) Bennett.

"He was tough, but he taught us how to play basketball and be a great teammate and person."

Hamzey made the transition from being a role player last season to a starting guard on this year's Norsemen squad that set a record with 24 straight wins after losing the season opener.

"A lot of people didn't think we would be very good since we lost so many seniors from last year's team that went to the state quarterfinals," Hamzey said. "We proved everyone wrong by playing as a team.

"This was a great experience," she said. "We went a long way this season, won another league title, another district title and won another regional title.

"Losing that quarterfinal game to Renaissance was a tough loss and we cried after it, but in the locker room coach Bennett looked at us and was proud of the effort we gave.

"We were a close team and even closer after that game. Our season was over, but we felt we won with that effort. It was a great moment."

Sharing Hamzey's experience were fellow seniors Ariel Braker, Kayla Womack, Sarah Bigam and Bedway; juniors Ariel Golden, Michaela

Liddane, Nicole Strickland and Kia Tyus; sophomore Gabriela Causley; and freshmen Emily Armbruster and Taryn Kiah.

Hamzey earned All-Conference Honorable Mention this season, helping the Norsemen win the Macomb Area Conference Red Division with a 10-0 mark.

She also earned the team's Hardest Worker and coach's "Complete Trust" award.

During her senior year, Hamzey scored 84 points, grabbed 31 rebounds, dished out 26 assists, had 19 steals and made all 13 free throws attempted. During her two years on the varsity team, the Norsemen finished 45-7 and she earned the "Most Improved" honor after her junior season.

"Kamille was an absolute pleasure to coach," Bennett said. "Totally focused, no-nonsense all of the time and she had a tremendous work ethic. Her work ethic always gave me an emotional lift when I was feeling frustrated or down because I value that part of athletics so much.

"Her outstanding work ethic would show up most at the defensive end of the court. I always trusted that Kamille would 'dig in' on defense, 'sustain her effort' and 'refuse to lose,' all core concepts in our defensive system.

"There is nothing I enjoy more in basketball than watching a player put her whole heart and soul into playing tough defense and with that in mind, it is easy to see why Kamille's effort means so much to me personally.

"Kamille's attitude was exemplary at all times. As a junior, Kamille rarely played any meaningful minutes. As a senior, she was a starter on a team that won 24 games in a row. Not a ray of light fell between how she acted her junior year compared to how she acted her senior year. She was exactly the same. She has a great attitude, is a great teammate and a great young lady."

Grosse Pointe North 2010 graduate Kamille Hamzey, right, has a passion for basketball that lifted her to new heights during her senior year.

"I'm going to try intramural basketball at U-M and see how it fits in my schedule," she said. "I'm also going to continue running."

Hamzey has been an avid runner since entering high school, which led to a stellar track career.

She was a team captain and state finalist this spring and the most valuable athlete, a regional champion and state finalist her junior year.

She was also a state finalist during her sophomore and freshman seasons, as well as a MAC Scholar Athlete each season under head coach Charles Buhagiar.

During her two-year cross-country career, she was a captain as a senior and a state finalist (alternate) her junior year. She also earned MAC Scholar Athlete letters, both seasons under head coach Scott Cooper.

Hamzey's ability to shine in athletics, as well as in the classroom, has made her a complete person as she enters the next chapter of her life, college.

"I liked the balance I had in sports and in the classroom," Hamzey said. "I did the best I could at everything and that has prepared me for U-M.

"I'm a little nervous being away from home for the first time, but my family is close."

Hamzey's father, Michael, was a runner and mother,

Debra, a cheerleader. Her stepfather, Emmett, has also been a big supporter during her time in athletics.

"My mom has always been there for me and this year she helped out a lot during my track season," Hamzey said. "It was nice to see her take such an active role and I appreciated it.

"It will be emotional when I leave for U-M, but I know they are always close."

She will settle into her new dorm room the week of Sept. 1 and classes start the following week.

Her first semester class schedule consists of Spanish, biology, literature and American culture.

The Grosse Pointe Figure Skating Club is running a fundraiser from 10 to 11 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 28, at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink.

The open house forum includes public skating for $5. The admission ticket is also a raffle ticket for prizes such as a free eight-week basic skills session, skating accessories and other like prizes.

There will also be a bake sale featuring items made by the instructors.

"We are hoping this is the perfect opportunity for people who have young children who are interested in getting their child on the ice to see if skating lessons are for them, as well as for an older child or adult who has always wanted to try skating," Grosse Pointe Skating Club Director Theresa Gehrke said.

'There is no greater satisfaction than seeing the joy on a child's face when they master a maneuver.'

Club Director

The skating club has been serving the Grosse Pointes and surrounding communities for 36 years.

National figure skating

judge Allen Lomax, a prominent member of U.S. Figure Skating for more than 50 years, founded the privately owned ice skating club.

Lomax was also a founding member of the Cleveland and Detroit Skating Clubs.

Grosse Pointe Skating Club instructors have taught hundreds of children and adults the basic skills of ice skating in a fun atmosphere.

"Sadly, with the economic downfall over the last few years the club has suffered great financial loss," Gehrke said. "We are in danger of having to close.

"The students and instructors would be devastated if we were unable to share our love of ice skating.

"There is no greater satisfaction than seeing the joy on a child's face when they master a maneuver that has taken them a while to learn.

"Skating helps children develop great character while teaching fierce determination as they persevere to achieve their goals.

"All of this contributes to greater self confidence."

Among the best

Grosse Pointe South's Hannah Meier was named to the Michigan Track and Field Dream Team. Her performance in the 800-meter run at the state finals not only won the race, but set a new state record with a time of 2:08. In addition, Meier's times of 4:45 in the 1,600-meter and 56.6 in the 400-meter run rank her among the top high school track athletes in the nation. Meier anchored the Blue Devils' 3,200-meter relay team that placed second and she set three individual school records. She was also involved in setting more than 15 meet, league and relays records during her freshman season.

SCOTT:
Grad ready for college

Through countless hours of practice under the tutelage of DeVirigilio, Scott has gained the confidence needed to compete at the collegiate level. As a left-hander, Scott has developed a solid kick serve and has the strength to hit winners from any place on the court.

"St. Joe's is about five hours from home, so my dad won't be able to attend most of my matches," Scott said. "He is my biggest support system. He is always, always there for me."

"My dad has spent hundreds of hours driving me to lessons, practices and tournaments. He has fed me thousands of tennis balls to practice specific skill sets. He's the best and I will really miss him."

Scott's parents have been there every step of the way. Some of his tennis success is directed to the time he spent running cross country at North under the guidance of Pat Wilson and Dan Quinn.

"It helped me get in great shape and my coaches were always positive, even though I wasn't one of the top runners on the team," Scott said. "They always encouraged me and were excited when I ran a personal best."

Scott earned several varsity letters at North. The path to his tennis career started at age 5 when his mother signed him up to play at Lake Front Park. He joined the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club's tennis program at age 9 and started with DeVirigilio at age 12.

"Coach played college tennis at Ball State and his experiences definitely have helped me be a better tennis player," Scott said. "He is a great coach and I have learned a lot."

He is not sure what his major is and said he is undecided.

"There are so many great careers," Scott said. "I love the environment and animals and I really enjoy spending time with senior citizens. So, a career in one of those fields would be great. Whatever I do, I would like to make a positive impact in my community."

Scott's father, mother and sister will escort him to St. Joe's where the proper send-off will occur.

Handshakes and hugs will be exchanged that will also include a big smile from 2-year-old sister, Katie.
