GROSSE POINTE SHORES — The setting of the Grosse Pointe Chamber of Commerce's Legacy on the Lake at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House was particularly fitting this year. The fifth annual event June 20, honored members of the Ford family for their legacy of leadership, family tradition and community relationships inspiring and strengthening the well-being and vibrancy of the Grosse Pointes.

Bettejean Ahee, representing last year's honorees, the Edmund T. Ahee family, passed the torch — or in this case, a glass sailboat — to representatives of the Ford family. Other past recipients were the Cotton family, Edward J. Russell III and the Marlene and John Boll family.

Jody Ingle, grandson of Josephine and Walter Ford and son of Josephine Ford Ingle, spoke on behalf of the Ford family.

"The generosity and dedicated leadership of the Ford family and those here and those past is truly an inspiration," said Ingle. "For years, we, like many of you here tonight, have volunteered our time, resources and energy to cultivate our home and everything that encompasses. Thriving communities are built by a coalition of families like we have here tonight bound by purpose coexisting to create a legacy ...

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club and Pier Park are gearing up for their annual Regatta and Family Fun Weekend Friday, June 29, to Sunday, July 1, at Pier Park, 350 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Celebrating its 66th year, the event brings back activities and events — and adds a few new ones — for the whole family.

Weekend events start 6 p.m. Friday with the Children's Art in the Park sidewalk drawing activity, Party 7:30 p.m. at the Pier Park Community Center.

"It's a fun (sailboat) race because it's backwards from what the normal rules are," Vice Commodore Ric Schmidt said.

Friday's reverse regatta promises an exciting finish as boats in every division race at the same time.

Smaller, slower boats get the advantage of a head start, but by the time they get to the finish line, the faster boats are bearing down quick.

While most of the weekend is "for the kids," said Schmidt, in recent years the boat club has added a few events just for adults, including the Island Party

Shores solidifies 'understanding' for lake district overflow

By Melissa Walsh

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — As older communities like Grosse Pointe Shores correct underground infrastructure installed more than a century ago, Wayne County is removing itself from the sewer business.

Faced with this reality, Shores city council, during its June 19 meeting, approved an agreement with the Southeast Macomb Sanitary District, qualified by a memorandum of understanding to negotiate Shores-specific needs, to manage its lake district, or stormwater, sewer system.

The village's stormwater and wastewater flow through two separate systems.

"We've been dealing with these issues for many, many years actually," Shores City Engineer Jesse VanDerCreek told city council.

Exceeding the 3-cubic-feet-per-second limit, the village's storm water currently discharges into the northeast sewer disposal system in a Wayne County collection system.

Since metering lake district

VanDerCreek said, on three occasions the flow soared to 6 cubic feet per second, double the outlet capacity but directly proportional to rainfall.

Flow is measured from the Cook Road Pump Station outlet at Cook and Chalfonte, "where all of the Shores' sewer collection system is pumped by the

Where happiness is a warm puppy treat

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — In 2010, Lisa Bardy experienced life-transforming loss.

"My ridiculously sad story is my mom died. My dog died. So I quit my job and opened a store," said Bardy, 48.

One could write a country song about Bardy's loss, except it might sound more like a polka. Bardy, who now lives in Harper Woods, is Polish- and Slovak-American and raised in Hamtramck.

Rather than writing a lyric, Bardy's loss prompted her to quit her corporate job and open a dog bakery and boutique Memorial Day 2011, largely inspired by the special care she gave her late pet, Belle, that included homemade, healthy dog treats.

"I had no idea what I was doing, but (the store) opened," Bardy said. "I like to just jump right in. I think for me there's no other way. I had business classes in college, but nothing's happening until you just go ahead and do it."

Bardy said her store is continually evolving. In February, she introduced the Hamtramck-influenced "puppy paczki" and promises "puppy pierogi" in the near future.

She uses all wheat- and meat-free natural ingredients in her dog treats, including sweet potato, pumpkin, apple, carob and molasses.

"It's all the things we eat minus the bad stuff," Bardy said. "So if you bite into a brownie, you'll be disappointed because there's no sugar."

Bardy's assortment of dog goodies has spread by word, or bark, of mouth, leading to cake orders for celebrity dogs, including Farms K-9, Duke, for his last birthday party and Butler University mascot, Blue, celebrating the 2018 NCAA men's basketball tournament. Local therapy dog, harlequin Great Dane Lady Darla, is a frequent customer.

Bardy adopted her current pet dog, Nala, 8, shortly after the store's launch, who serves as an executive taste tester, but was "laid off" from her earlier role greeting the canine customers.

"(Nala) absolutely hates dogs in her store. So she can only come when I'm closed," Bardy said.

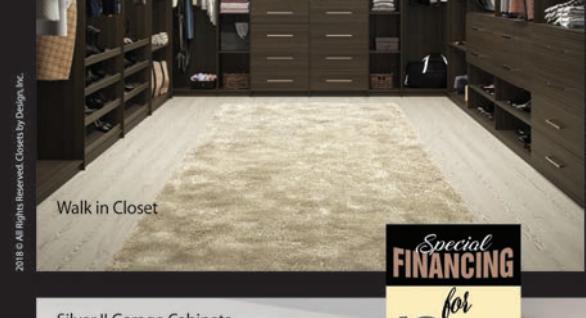

WDIV Local 4 named Bardy's business "best pet shop" the past three years. But Bardy said she doesn't consider her work in the store "work." Creating treats for dogs is a means to generating joyful living for herself.

"I held real jobs," Bardy said. "This isn't a real job."

Belding Dry Cleaners celebrates 100 years

By Anthony Viola
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — In 1918, just down Kercheval in Detroit, George Belding opened the doors to his dry cleaning business. Eleven years later, he constructed a new building and moved his operation to Grosse Pointe Park, on the corner of Lakepointe and Kercheval.

Today, 100 years after its founding, Belding Dry Cleaners continues to do business on the corner and is growing, said owner Joe Hebeka.

Hebeka, who took over for his father 11 years ago, said the reason the business has been successful for so long is because of the quality and service Belding offers.

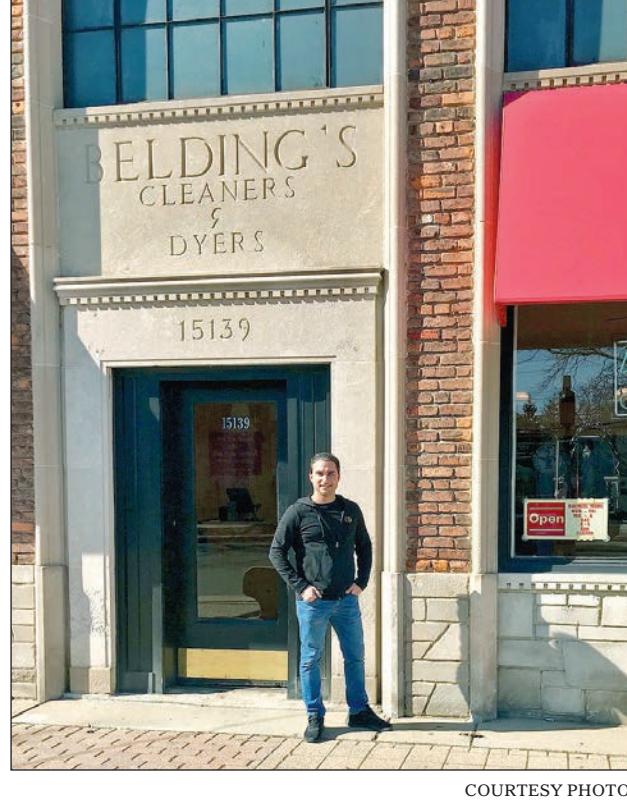

"We give probably the best possible quality you can have in this industry," Hebeka said, "a lot of personalized services and we are always reinvesting. I am always reinvesting in the business. Modern equipment, modern technology, giving my customers better and better products, always."

While the building is close to 90 years old, all the equipment inside is the industry's best, he said.

No dry cleaner in the area has the equipment we have," he said.

But for Hebeka, delivering a quality product isn't just about the machinery either. He said he wants to "make it as easy as possible on my customers."

With everything delivered right to the doorstep these days, he decided to offer free pick-up and delivery for his customers, he said.

"It takes two trips to go to the dry cleaners. That's two errands. There's dropping it off, then picking it up."

"We go right to your house. We hang it up in garages. We hang the clothes on front doors. We even go in some houses, hang them up for the customers."

He's continually reinvesting in the company, making sure the equipment is as modern as it can be. But, that doesn't mean Hebeka doesn't think about the past.

"I like to think back at what the street looked like when this place was built," he said. "I still have the original blueprints."

Hebeka believes the Beldings saw opportunity in the Grosse Pointes. Between 1920 and 1930, the population rose more than 300 percent, from approximately 5,000 to 20,000.

"That's why I think they relocated here, because it started to flourish," he said. "Grosse Pointe was booming; the money was coming in."

The business has been in operation since and Hebeka doesn't see it stopping any time soon.

"There will always be some form of this service where people need their clothes cleaned," he said. "Whether it be dry cleaning or wet cleaning or washing and ironing. Even when you go casual, still, there's some form of it that needs a professional touch. And that's what we offer."

Smash and grab at Howlers and Growlers

GROSSE POINTE PARK — Public safety is investigating a brazen smash and grab at Howlers and Growlers on Charlevoix, which occurred 1:55 a.m. Friday, June 22.

According to Detective Michael Narduzzi, two unknown men drove a Ford Econoline work van through the east side window door and took the ATM, which was free-standing right inside the door.

According to Narduzzi, it took only 24 seconds for the suspects to steal the ATM and flee the scene.

The van, which was freshly stolen, and ATM were recovered a short time later in the 7 Mile and Gratiot area, said Narduzzi. The ATM had been pried open and $960 stolen.

There are no suspects at this time, but Narduzzi said police "have some good leads we are tracking down."

while shaping a better future for the next generation."

A challenge for Grosse Pointe, Ingle told the Grosse Pointe News, is "how we carry the past forward and embrace the future while maintaining our roots and rich heritage. ... Change is important and it's important to adapt to the future and attract young people and grow with people."

Ingle grew up in New York, but attended the College for Creative Studies, graduating in 2009 with a degree in automotive design "right when the automotive industry was imploding." An industrial designer by trade, he and his wife recently moved into a family home in Grosse Pointe Farms to raise their three children. His memories as a child visiting Grosse Pointe is "this lakeside community, lush and green ... this fantastic place, this dreamlike place, almost like an oasis."

In spite of the "up-and-down tumultuous journey" of the auto industry, Ingle sees a bright future ahead, in particular in light of Ford Motor Co.'s recent purchase of the long vacant Michigan Central Station.

"I think (the future) is changing," Ingle said. "It's going to be a lot more diverse and inclusive and it's going to be a lot more inventive and embracing (of) entrepreneurship. The ideas are going to come from lots of people, not a few people, and (that's) how we corral all those great Cook Road Pump Station and discharged to the Kerby Road interceptor," VanDerCreek explained.

Fall 2017 the Shores Finance Committee authorized the installation of four sewer-measuring meters for five districts. District E, the southernmost district, showed high dry-weather flow.

"Dry-weather flow is supposed to be 120 gallons per capita per day," VanDerCreek said.

"We're anywhere from double to 10 times that at the south end."

"As far as wet weather, when it rains, we're 10 times that all over the place and significantly above that at the south end."

In a video VanDerCreek presented to council — as evidence gathered during the project's televised monitoring — a gushing sound was heard from the manhole cover over the interceptor in district E, revealing an estimated flow of 80 gallons per minute during dry weather.

"Because we're close to the lake, we have a high groundwater table system," VanDerCreek said. "So our sewer system generally is under the hydrostatic pressure of the ground water. We all know the lake level is up and there's higher pressure on the system than there ever has been, so we're starting to see this kind of activity."

Work is underway to correct the system. Technicians are grouting the underground pipe joints and any voids in the pipe.

VanDerCreek said the memorandum of understanding drafted to accompany the agreement with the SEMSD includes language addressing inflow and infiltration issues via adoption of a five-year plan to analyze and correct infrastructure problems leading to overflow.

"We need to come into compliance," VanDerCreek said.

Also addressed in the MOU is the fee structure of the agreement, which stipulates charging the village $496,864 for additional flow capacity until the village corrects its infrastructure.

"We looked at it really hard from an engineering perspective, to identify how Grosse Pointe Shores was impacting that cost so that we would have to subsidize every basement in the district," VanDerCreek said. "In fact, we argued that the only basin we impact or exceed our allowed flow is the Milk River Basin."

Shores City Attorney Brian Renaud raised this argument to negotiate a reduction in fees prescribed in the agreement, which he described as "boiler plate" language, saving the village approximately $80,000 annually during the period the excess flow fee methodology is in effect.

"The way the memorandum of understanding has been developed is that as we move forward to reduce our excess flow to the system, this agreement and the fees and charges will go away," VanDerCreek said.

Bruce Bisballe said the village currently pays a sewer bill of approximately $750,000 per year to Wayne County. He said the agreement with the SEMSD will benefit the Shores, "so long as we in good faith go through a remediation plan to reduce the amount of inflow that's occurring, which we've already embarked upon three years ago when we entered the SAW (Stormwater, Asset Management and Wastewater) Grant."

"This all started when we televised the sewers, we cleaned the sewers and then we looked at what we were filming. We've tried to increase our allowable flow for years but with no avail. And remember, we're the only community in this entire district that's got a separated system. Our rain water and sewage water are separate."

"We've thought all along that Southeast Macomb Sanitary District — they're right here in a house on Jefferson just north of Eagle Pointe in St. Clair Shores — they'll do a better job," Shores City Manager Mark Wollenweber told the Grosse Pointe News.

The SEMSD will manage the village's storm water system, not its sanitary system, Wollenweber explained.

"Sanitary systems are a lot tighter than storm water systems," Wollenweber said. "Some of those, they just put clay pipe together and there's no sealed joints; there's no salter underneath. All that's got to be addressed. And it should be and everyone's in favor because it saves the environment."

"We've been working on repairs all along," Shores Department of Public Works Director Brett Smith said. "Back in the early '90s, we lined all of our sanitary sewers and currently we are completing a SAW Grant project, which cleaned and televised all of our sewers. We just got them, but don't have all the reports back yet."

As far as anticipating the Shores' sewer management changing hands, Smith added, "We've always found that it would be better to have someone that's a little more local to actually spend some time at the pump stations and have a handle on what's going on. So I think it's going to work out better for everyone."

and a new co-ed volleyball tournament.

Friday's Island Party is the boat club's largest fundraiser of the year. The 21-or-older party is open to all Farms residents and guests. Tickets may be purchased in advance for $40 at gpfbc.com or cost $45 at the door.

However, Schmidt said there is limited space so it's better to buy a ticket sooner rather than later.

The party features an open bar, food, live music and a great view of Lake St. Clair, Schmidt said.

Proceeds from the party are used for community events and park improvements.

The rest of the weekend is about the rest of the family.

Schmidt fondly recalls participating in the annual decorated bicycle parade as a kid, which starts 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

"I remember when I was a kid, getting all fired up to decorate my bike and come down to the park and be a part of the parade," he said.

Kids ages 3 to 11 are asked to meet at the Community Center parking lot 10:30 a.m. sharp with their Fourth of July decorated bikes. Detroit Tigers mascot PAWS acts as the grand marshal for the parade through the park.

The rest of Saturday is filled with family events, from a pie-eating contest at noon, with pies provided by Jerry's Party

Store, to face painting, the community favorite yellow ducky race and inflatable boat races, which "turns into a fun two-person team race in boats that often become unseaworthy," Schmidt said. "Somehow they always seem to get a leak at some point in the race."

At 6 p.m. Soul Provider performs live, then the traditional fireworks display, sponsored by the city, shoots off 10 p.m. over Kerby Cove.

For Susan Mills, boat club secretary, the weekend is all about community.

"I think it's a really great way to get people all in one area and be able to get to know each other," Mills said.

The whole weekend is really like that. It brings like-minded people together who want to have a good time and get to know people and you support each other ... It's the residents that make a community strong."

Commodore Paul Toenjes has been attending the event since he was a kid in the '60s. He said he remembers riding in the bike parade himself. But for Toenjes, like Mills, the weekend is about being with friends and family.

"I've always enjoyed just being with friends and family," Toenjes said. "We always knew lots of people. That was the whole weekend, a big party and being with friends."

Graham helps student-athletes

By Amy Graham
Special Writer

There are many families in Grosse Pointe who say Little League has meant a lot to them.

That is, in part, because the Grosse Pointes have a strong tradition of valuing the lifelong bonds that come from playing on a baseball team with kids who live right in their neighborhood.

Like most Little Leagues, Grosse Pointe Park Little League is run entirely by volunteers and has done so since it was founded in 1954.

The moms and dads of the Park donate their time and talents to coach the teams and organize everything from tryouts and uniforms to the concession stand. One particular Park dad and GPPLL coach, Dean Graham, has a lot to celebrate, as 17 of his former players, including his own son, Davis, enjoyed the thrill of playing for Grosse Pointe South in the Michigan High School Athletic Association Division 1 state playoffs.

Graham even coached a few of the boys who play for crosstown rivals, Grosse Pointe North and University Liggett School.

Graham himself is a product of GPPLL and Grosse Pointe South baseball. He played Little League 1971-75 and at South 1978-81.

"I began playing Little League baseball in Grosse Pointe Park in 1971, when I was just 8 years old," Graham said. "For me, GPPLL baseball was the catalyst for forming meaningful friendships and relationships from students from other local schools that I did not previously know."

"It was a blast. Baseball in Grosse Pointe is competitive, but it also is a community event every summer night, no matter which of the Pointes you live in.

"When my oldest son, Douglas, was 6, I begrudgingly hung up my golf clubs and decided very quickly that I wanted to give back to my son and to the sport that gave me so much joy as a kid."

Graham is now in his 15th consecutive year of coaching GPPLL teams, coaching his 12-year-old son, Wells, in his last year of Little League.

"Dean is an incredible asset to GPPLL," said Marty McMillan, president of the GPPLL board.

"His leadership on the board and his service to the community and bringing these kids the love of the game has been huge."

"He was our manager in 2011 when his 11-year-old team won the state championship. It was an incredible year for the Park, as the 10- and 12-year-old teams also won the state championship, as well."

Graham coached many of the boys from all three teams in the regular season. That "magic" 11-year-old Little League team consisted of many own son, Davis.

"I have played baseball for Coach Graham since I was 8 years old and actually he is the only voice I hear when I am on the field," said Naporano, one of South's team captains.

"In the semifinal game against Midland, I specifically heard his voice say, 'Hit a good strike,' and the pitcher threw the outside change-up, and I took it to right, which he taught me back when I was just 8 years old.

"He has always been there for me and I love having him as a coach."

"Coach Graham has coached me in both football and baseball since I moved to Grosse Pointe at age 9, and honestly I don't know where I would be without him. He means a lot to me, both as a coach and as a person."

Bolton had similar sentiments, adding, "I would not be the player I am without him and honestly he has taught me everything I know about baseball."

Graham's care and concern for his players did not end on the Little League field. In summer 2008, Graham and his former wife, Amy, took four children into their home as foster children, two of whom were players in GPPLL.

The GPPLL community helped the Grahams, who were already busy with four children of their own, with meals, rides to games and even laundry.

After Little League ended for that "magic" 11-year-old team, Graham went on to add players from the Farms-City and Woods-Shores Little League, and the "magic" team became the Grosse Pointe Red Hawks.

The success continued and the team won the Nolan Ryan state championship in 2013.

"After Little League, I had the pleasure of coaching players from the Grosse Pointe communities that we played against in Little League on a team called the Grosse Pointe Red Hawks," Graham said.

"This team was made up of kids from all of the Grosse Pointes, in hopes they would help bolster their respective baseball programs en route to a high school state championship.

"I picked kids going to Grosse Pointe North, U-D, Liggett and of course Grosse Pointe South, where my two sons would attend. Family bonds associated with this team will last a lifetime. We are rivals in some cases, but always our friendships and sportsmanship come first."

Pete Ciaravino and Anthony George, who played for Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League and are graduates of North and Liggett, respectively, played on Graham's Red Hawks team at ages 13 and 14. They also had a lot to say about Graham.

"A week or two ago my mom asked me what coaches meant the most to me and Coach Graham popped right into my head," said Ciaravino. "I've played a lot of sports since I was 8, and he was one of the best. He teaches a lot of strategic moves that give players the advantage and I always wanted to play my best for him."

"I play for Grosse Pointe North and he is a

Father and son take a moment after a Grosse Pointe Park Little League game.

South guy, but he always made me feel important and I always knew that he cared about me, not just the rivalry."

George, who was a key player for University Liggett School the last four years, added, "I've been playing and losing against Coach Graham since I was 9, and what I learned about him when I got to play for him is that his team always won because of how they were taught the game."

"We always played the game with composure and a steadiness that he instilled in us. He always made sure we were close and a part of his family. He never was fully a coach or fully a friend in our minds, but rather the perfect mix. That is what I think of when I recall the years I played both for and against him and I am so thankful I had the opportunity to do so."

Cam Shook, the starting pitcher for the state championship game against Woodhaven, was on this Red Hawks team and said, "Coach Graham has been instrumental at developing me as a baseball player; there is a special relationship we have built."

Graham also coached the starting pitcher from the state semifinals, Nathan Budziak.

"Coach Graham instilled a winning attitude into me from the time I started baseball at age 6," Budziak said. "He coached with a perfect level of seriousness, allowing for maximum development while also allowing us to celebrate the joy of victory and appreciate all aspects of the game."

"I set some goals with this group of boys that I coached since they were 8," Graham said. "Some of the kids graduated last year, but many remain. The goals were to love and respect the game, work harder than your opponents, get it done in the classroom, respect your parents and your peers and play in a high school state championship."

"Someone asked me why I decided to coach. Sure, I want to give back to the game, but more importantly I want to give back to Dan Griesbaum and the program at South, and young men like Joey Naporano, Pete Ciaravino, Anthony George, Jacob Hinkle, Jacob Bolton, Logan MacLean, Nate Budziak, Cam Shook and, of course, my own sons, Douglas, Davis and Wells Graham."

"Dean has been just an unbelievable supporter of the program and has coached these kids, worked on the field, been a Dugout Club president. He has done everything for the program and we couldn't be here without him," Griesbaum said.

How does his son feel about having his dad as a coach?

"I was lucky to have my dad coach throughout my youth and up until high school," Davis Graham said. "Growing up and seeing his love and passion for sports really affected me and made me who I am today. His ability to lead a team is the biggest thing I try to instill into my game today and hope to take with me as a player for Wayne State next year."

Future of Information

I had the opportunity last week to attend a fascinating — and scary — presentation by danah boyd (sic), an internationally recognized expert on ways people use social media as a context for social interaction.

It was the second in a three-part series, Future of Information: Media, Technology & Democracy, jointly sponsored by Knight Foundation and the Community Foundation for Southeast Michigan.

"Accurate, reliable, accessible information is important to how communities work," says Grosse Pointe Park resident Mariam Noland, president of the Community Foundation for Southeast Michigan. "Our goal is to start a conversation."

The Financial Times called Ms. boyd the "high priestess" of only social network sites. Indeed, she spends her days (and nights) reading the "good, the bad and the ugly" on the internet. She says much of what she reads she finds sickening, but that is her job. She tries to understand how people arrive at these extreme views.

She also talked about how mainstream media are sometimes tricked into either passing along fake news or amplifying it in attempt to debunk it. She cited the example of Oprah Winfrey passing along a false report there was a nationwide pedophile ring stalking our children. Later it was learned the online group made it all up to see if Oprah would fall for it. She did.

Ms. boyd noted the biggest coup for online trolls is to get the mainstream media to report their claims, if just to debunk them. The New York Times, for example, by merely debunking a false story or conspiracy theory, bumps the queries to the top of a Google search. Instant SEO (search engine optimization) without the cost.

Often, mainstream media's debunking efforts fail in their attempt to set the record straight. People don't like to be told their beliefs are false or they've been tricked. Defensively, they dig in their heels and go online for validation, which is easy to find.

For the mainstream media, it seems, it is damned if they do and damned if they don't when it comes to debunking falsities.

As a board member of the Crisis Text Line, Ms. boyd knows a lot about suicide and the media's handling of suicides. She says there is a spike in suicides anytime a suicide is reported in the media, particularly if the method is reported. She said Robin Williams's death was a turning point in media coverage of suicides.

The talk was followed by a panel discussion by Park resident and WDIV-TV anchor Devin Scillian. His panelists included Detroit Free Press editor Peter Bhatia and Garlin Gilchrist II, director of the Center for Social Media Responsibility at the University of Michigan School of Information.

Mr. Scillian asked his panelists, including Ms. boyd, if they would give the future of information a green light, yellow light or red light — green meaning everything will be OK; yellow, taking no stance either way; or red, meaning we are in real trouble. All the panelists picked "brown," meaning the future of information, especially via social media, is "concerning."

What color would you have chosen?

Ms. boyd's talk and more information on the Future of Information series may be found at futureofinfo.org.

OUR VIEW

Tariffs, newsprint $$ going up

On June 15, we were hit with our sixth newsprint increase since December. The increase is the latest in a volley of increases resulting from preliminary tariffs on Canadian newsprint sold in the United States in an increasingly tight newsprint market.

The $22 per metric ton of standard newsprint equates to an approximately 3 percent increase. Previously, we have seen increases of 5.3, 3.4 and 7 percent. Compounded, these increases amount to a 19.65 percent increase in newsprint since Dec. 1. Our annualized increase for paper to date is $23,500 — nearly a full-time salary for a weekly newspaper!

Earlier this month, Michigan Press Association President Brad Thompson, president and CEO of Inland Press, which prints the Detroit Legal News and numerous legal news newspapers across the state; Wes Smith, publisher of the View Newspaper Group that publishes 13 newspapers in Lapeer, Genesee, Huron and Sanilac counties and mid-Michigan; Todd Hagerman of Michigan Web Press, our printer; and Lisa McGraw and Jim Tarrant of the MPA staff, met with Congressman Dave Trott at his Troy office to discuss the newsprint tariffs.

Rep. Trott was open, the delegation reported, to the request that he consider supporting HR 6031 that would put the newsprint tariffs on hold, and he said he might even sign on as a cosponsor. There is good bipartisan support for the bill in the U.S. House and a similar bill in the U.S. Senate (S.2835) — together known as the PRINT Act. On June 20, Rep. Trott did in fact join as a cosponsor of the bill along with 18 other representatives. (Our senators, Debbie Stabenow and Gary Peters, are not listed among the 25 cosponsors of S.2835.)

On July 9, Grosse Pointe News publisher John Minnis, Detroit Free Press editor Peter Bhatia, Jeff Demers and Elaine Meyers of C&G Newspapers and MPA representatives will be meeting with U.S. Rep. Brenda Lawrence, who is not listed as a cosponsor of the PRINT Act.

The PRINT Act seeks a further examination of the harm these tariffs will have on our nation's economy, local jobs and the distribution of news and information in local communities. Specifically, the PRINT Act would:

1) require a study by the Commerce Department of the economic well being, health and vitality of the newsprint industry and the local newspaper publishing industry in the U.S.;

2) require a report from the Commerce secretary to the president and Congress within 90 days that includes both the findings of the study and any recommendations the secretary considers appropriate;

3) pause any affirmative determination by the DOC or ITC (U.S. International Trade Commission) until the president certifies that he has received the report and has concluded such a determination is in the economic interest of the United States; and

4) halt the collection of cash deposits for newsprint imports currently under investigation at the Commerce Department until the president has made such certifications.

Because of the devastating impact of the tariffs on publishers, printers and other businesses, the bill has received widespread support from Stop Tariffs on Printing & Publishing, STOPP, a broad-based coalition that was formed to fight these crippling tariffs and which represents more than 600,000 workers in the U.S. printing and publishing industries.

The ITC is conducting its final investigation in this case, which includes a public hearing July 17. The commission will reach a final determination mid-September.

The newsprint investigation and interim tariffs were instigated by a complaint lodged by a small Washington State paper mill, Northern Pacific Paper. It employs fewer than 500 workers at its mill owned by the New York hedge fund One Rock Capital. Ironically, less than 5 percent of Canadian newsprint goes to the Pacific Northwest. More than 90 percent of Canadian newsprint is consumed in

Continuing to thrive

To the Editor:

The EastSide FC Board would like to thank Dr. Sarnaik and his family's support of EastSide FC over the years, including their volunteer coaching efforts. While we understand the frustration created by their recent experience, we believe the criticisms expressed come short of explaining the entire situation.

Our Select program is a competitive soccer program that, like most other sports, has tryouts to determine who is capable of competing at a higher level. The league mandates the maximum number of players rostered on Select teams. When possible, we try to have two teams within the age groups to allow for more youths to participate; however, there are not always enough players to field a second team. After experiencing the effects of short-rostered teams last season and consider-ports the athletic and team development of children with special needs. We also have winter academies for kids 3 to 7 years old and summer camps for all ages. Finally, we have successfully accomplished all this while maintaining costs at an affordable level that is well below similar programs in surrounding communities.

Our thriving Recreational program is an alternative for the players who don't make the Select teams or are not prepared to make the commitments required of the Select teams. Our Recreational program includes more than 1,000 kids every year, ranging from ages 4 to 14. We are in the early stages of dedicating professional training support to this Recreational program. As such, we are trying to foster development that could enable these players to elevate, if desired, to the Select program.

In addition, we have a TOP Soccer program that sup-

I SAY By Renee Landuyt

How will you live your dash?

spired. I was reminded to be mindful and pay attention to how I am living my life. If you haven't read it, "The Dash" begins:

"I read of a man who stood to speak, at the funeral of a friend. He referred to the dates on her tombstone, from beginning ... to the end. He noted that first came the date of her birth and spoke of the following date with tears. But he said what mattered most of all, was the dash between those years. For that dash represents all the time that she spent alive on Earth. And those who love her, know what that line is worth. ...What matters is how we live and love and how we spend our dash." (For the entire poem go to the dashpoem.com.)

I love the message. It tells us to be mindful of how we are living our dash. What does it mean to you to live your dash? How are you living your dash now? What would you change? This idea of living your dash means something different to each of us. How I live my dash will be different than how you live yours — and that's OK. To some, living their dash means going big, having a lot of things and going places. To some, it could mean living a more simple life by doing things like reading a book in their favorite chair, spending time with family and friends. To some, it could mean a series of things like giving back or volunteering. In other words, what kind of trail or life or legacy do you want to leave behind and what could you do from here on out to follow through with that intention? It is much better to think about it in the present than to say later in life, "I wish I had (fill in the blank)." What holds you back from doing something? Fear? I hope not. I know how that feels. I think everyone does. F. Scott Fitzgerald said, "You must never confuse a single failure for a final defeat."

I work on living as authentically as I can every day. I didn't do that so much when I was younger, but I do now. I stand up for those who cannot. I help those I can. I speak up and use my voice even if I am the only one in the room willing to do so. Confidence and believing in yourself will take you a long way.

How do I want to live my dash, however much

I have left? Hopefully, I have a lot of time left, but in the meantime I'll live my dash laughing, playing, taking photos, dancing, reading, listening to music and hanging out in nature. I will spend time with like-minded people and those who challenge my way of thinking. I'll take time to recharge. I will be silly but serious when I need to be. I will go places I have wanted to see and visit friends I haven't seen in a while. I will do little things and big things and I will find balance. I will find joy in every day. I will still have moments of complaining, but I hope to catch myself and learn from that. There will be times when I am cranky, but I'll give myself a break because we all have our moments of weakness, of failure, of bad choices.

But we also have our moments of triumph and bravery and amazement. Living my dash isn't just about what I have or where I am going, it's also about so many things that fill our days, our hearts and our lives. You don't have to do big things to live a big life. It is often small things that add up to a big life.

Get out there. Create a ripple in the pond no matter the size. Go live your dash, whatever it is. Pay it forward or pay it back.

So here's to you, Kathi, for living your life the way you said you wanted, the way that made you feel the most comfortable. Thank you for this last gift, the last reminder of paying attention to how I want to spend the rest of my dash.

Northern Pacific accuses the Canadian government of subsidizing its paper mills, allowing it to dump newsprint on the U.S. market. As we have said previously, this may have happened in the distant past, but today, all remaining U.S. newsprint mills are running at 100 percent capacity. Even if we wanted to "buy American," we could not.

We would again urge you to contact your U.S. representatives, ask them to become informed about the newsprint tariffs issue and speak out against the tariffs. To the Editor:

A broad theme is emerging. The school district says we want a bucket of money for this, a bucket for that. In 2014, it wanted a $50 million bucket for technology and security. The community said no, you can do better. Now it wants $111 million to keep kids safe, warm and dry. It also wants a fiber ring.

Where is the accountability chain for the taxpayer? It's time to stop the insanity. Pointers are being led down a reckless path. We hired our superintendent to address declining enrollment and maintain academics, not orchestrate a fiber ring. Besides, the jury is still out on fiber vs. wireless gigabit. Currently, the district spends $135,000 for 2-gigabit Comcast internet service annually. Shouldn't we wait?

The Residents for Responsible Spending group seeks to stop the insane spending. Join us — facebook.com/esidentsforResponsibleSpending/.

Eighth-graders present capstone projects

By Mary Anne Brush
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Academy eighth-graders capped off their year by researching and presenting on a topic of special interest to them. Their teacher, Bridgette Murray, assigned this capstone project to teach them research, time management and presentation skills in preparation for high school. One of the requirements was to create an action piece.

Among projects presented to parents May 22, were five standouts, according to Murray.

Sitting ducks

Alex Rollins's capstone project was called Hen House Nation. She and her father and a group of volunteers built and erected 24 hen houses in a marsh zone in Lake Erie in northeastern Ohio to see if these houses would help protect mallards from predators during breeding season.

"Ducks nest all across the United States, but actually 82 percent of the nests they build are destroyed due to predators and the outside conditions," Rollins said.

Each hen house was built from wire cylinders encased around slough grass, a nesting material, and fixed onto a steel post 3 feet above water to protect hens from predators. Rollins' group targeted 200 acres of marsh, spacing the hen houses at least one acre apart. Some were placed on deep water channels, while others were in shallow water.

Rollins plans to return to the marsh after breeding season is over to check the success rate of the nests.

Rollins grew interested in this project when she noticed at her family cottage up north ducks built their nests in flower pots at the end of their dock. She figured being above the water protected them from most predators.

"Basically ducks come back to the same nest every year when they've had previous nesting success," she said.

Tools for success

Olivia Valente chose to research children with disabilities because she believes "it is really unfair that some children who have disabilities can't attend the schools they want because many schools are not equipped to teach children with disabilities. Children with disabilities should not have so much trouble finding a good school to attend."

For her action piece, she wanted to learn about what tools children with disabilities needed to learn. She visited Barnes Early Childhood Center in Grosse Pointe Woods, observing a classroom with 3- and 4-year-olds with a variety of disabilities, including autism and speaking impairments.

"I really learned a lot about what special tools children with disabilities need to succeed," she said. "I now understand how important it is for children with disabilities to have the resources they need because without them, they would not be able to have the great education they deserve."

The last straw

Lorrie Savage did her capstone project on toxic ocean pollution, choosing this topic due to her love for the ocean.

Currently there are 5.25 million pieces of trash in the ocean and 100,000 marine animals are killed from ingesting or being tangled in plastic debris," she said.

"Quite honestly that is a huge problem and I want to fix this. The use of plastic products is overlooked in everyday life. Plastic products are used too much and obviously this is a huge problem."

For her action piece, she picked up plastic and trash in Puerto Rico while on vacation, including plastic bags, straws, cups and spoons. This "really opened my eyes to how much trash is out there," she said. She discovered in her research plastic bottles are on the list of top 10 items collected by the National Resource Defense Council.

"Plastic pollution is a huge problem that the world should pay attention to," Savage said. "It's affecting the earth, animals, humans and, of course, the oceans. We should all be working to prevent plastic pollution from drifting into the ocean."

"There's lots of things you can do to help," she continued. "You can ask lawmakers or city councils to have a day where you don't use plastic today. Or you could go to a coffee shop or Starbucks and ask them not to put out plastic straws. I didn't know this, but plastic straws are a huge thing. I didn't know they were so bad for the earth. We can try not to use plastic bags. When we go to the grocery store, we can use canvas bags and we can try not to use plastic bottles."

Stray dog epidemic

Bode Neumeister did his project on stray dogs in Detroit. In his research, he discovered there are more than 50,000 stray dogs in Detroit.

"That number really shocked me," he said. "I knew there were a lot, but I didn't know there were 50,000. ... A lot of these dogs are neglected and abused. The stray dogs are actually attacking the residents of Detroit because they're scared and they're just following their instincts. But it's not safe for them to be on the streets and attacking residents."

Neumeister said Detroit Animal Control euthanizes 90 percent of the stray dogs they capture.

He decided to support an organization called Detroit Dog Rescue, Detroit's first no-kill, non-profit animal shelter. For his action piece, he conducted a supply drive, collecting and delivering a car trunk full of supplies for the shelter.

Acts of kindness

Ava Said selected gun control and gun violence for her project, "Shooting a Hole in the Second Amendment."

"There are more than 350 million guns in circulation in the United States, so that's approximately 111 guns for every 100 people," she said. "I chose the topic of gun control for my capstone (project) because the rate of gun violence has gone up and innocent people are losing their lives every day. ... Highly publicized shootings like Las Vegas and Chicago caught my attention and brought my interest toward this issue at the beginning of the year. People are just now beginning to have an impact on making a change by pressing for stricter gun laws.

Raising awareness regarding this rising gun violence, especially in places that were held sacred in the past, is one way citizens

Ferry Science Olympiad team makes a splash at tournament

Ferry Elementary School, the first elementary school in the district to launch a Science Olympiad team, was a viable contender in the Wayne Oakland Science Olympiad tournament.

Amid strong competition from more than 30 elementary schools throughout Wayne and Oakland counties, the team earned recognition in a number of events and, with the support of parent coaches and faculty liaison James Fisher, received medals in four events, including a first place in the year's most popular event, Water Rockets.

This was Ferry students' third year participating in the tournament held Saturday, June 2, at Schoolcraft College. The team was founded in 2015 by head coach Carrie Dollar when her daughter, Alice Dollar, was in third grade. Dollar teaches biology at St. Clair County Community College.

"I love science, and so does my daughter. Science Olympiad looked like a great way for us to work together on a team and spread our love of science to others," Dollar said.

At the elementary level, schools may choose to participate in up to 16 events. In Water Rockets, students were required to build a rocket out of plastic two-liter bottles, cardboard and other materials. Water was added to the rocket, then pressurized before launching. Scores were based on how long the rocket stayed in the air.

With guidance from parent coach Shay Miller, teammates Alice Dollar, Shelby Miller and Spencer Miller launched the team's rocket. The rocket remained airborne 27 seconds. No one came close to Ferry's score, according to parent coach Carrie Hays. The closest was 20 seconds.

Other medals were fifth place, Source Code — Marissa Ford and Henry Ash; sixth place, Grasp A Graph — Antonio Said and Brandon Eshman; and sixth place, Reflection Relay — Madison Hays, Spencer Miller and Alice Dollar. Up to 16 students may participate in a tournament. Other participants were Aidan Burney, Tejas Deonikar, Bevin Finley, Keira Finley, Eduardo Gutierrez-Guillen, Stephen Listman, Shelby Miller and Peter Moe. Additional team members included Rowan Gulewicz, Analise Schroeder, Gus Schroeder and Katie Scott.

The team received a grant from the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Public Education in the spring and was recognized at the May 21 regular meeting of the Board of Education.

Teacher of THE WEEK

Sharon Gallacher

School: Ferry Elementary School

Years at Ferry: 9 (23 in GPPSS and 28 overall)

Grade: Kindergarten

Nominated by: Gloria Hinz, principal

Principal's quote:

"Sharon Gallacher has embraced Ferry School's Leader In Me journey. Her vision to acknowledge everyone's story and embrace the differences among the members of our community, led Sharon to the creation of Ferry's Diversity Den. She has worked with staff, students, parents and high school students to create an area in the school that showcases the diversity that is celebrated at Ferry."

What do you enjoy most about teaching?

I love spending time with my students and sharing in their lives. I adore the enthusiasm, innocence and joy they bring to learning. I relish learning about their pets, songs, stories and favorite things to do. Every day is an adventure in kindergarten and I treasure the special relationships I am able to build with my students and families.

The growth and development that my young students make is so exciting to be a part of. At the end of each year it is rewarding to see how they have grown in independence and confidence. Kindergarten truly is a magical grade to teach.

Describe a teaching accomplishment you're proud of or a "teachable moment" you experienced.

There have been so many special moments in my 28 years of teaching. Here are three I would like to highlight.

I was sworn in as an American citizen at Maire Elementary School. It was a wonderful celebration of democracy. I am proud to have shared this teachable moment of GPPSS history with students, parents and staff.

Currently, I am working with Ferry students, staff and families and some art students and staff from Grosse Pointe South High School to create a "Diversity Den" resource center to promote and celebrate all cultures, identities and inclusion at Ferry. I am excited to be creating this legacy and thankful for the encouragement and support from my principal and the Ferry community.

to their high school graduation ceremony. It was a proud and inspiring experience.

Please share a book or person that has inspired you or your teaching.

My parents have been a big influence in how I have embraced and developed my teaching career. My mother, Jean, was a role model of patience, kindness and nurturing. My father, Roy, taught me hard work, diligence and to appreciate the gifts everyone has to offer. They both taught me to be proud of who I am and where I came from.

School board applauds volunteers

Since 1984, the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education has recognized volunteers who stand out from the rest with their dedicated service. Ten recipients of the distinguished service award were honored at the April 23 regular meeting of the board. Each awardee received a golden apple.

"One of my favorite nights of being a board member is recognizing the people who come into our schools and make life just a little bit better for our students," said Treasurer Judy Gafa, who served on the selection committee along with Secretary Cindy Pangborn and Trustee Kathleen Abke.

Jacquelynn Armstrong stepped up for Kerby Elementary School by running "Bricks for Kids" lunchtime enrichment classes, helping on pizza days to keep the line moving smoothly, organizing indoor recess games and taking inventory of needed supplies, starting a Destination Imagination science club after school and serving as the PTO fundraising co-chairwoman. She organized the Fun Run, local restaurant nights, school dances and the spring ice cream social.

Susan Artinian is a retired special education teacher and lawyer who volunteered two days a week at Defer Elementary School, providing assistance to students no matter the subject, from helping them stay on task to reviewing one of the seven habits from the Leader in Me program. Whether reviewing sight words, stretching out sounds in words, working on pencil grip, re-teaching math games or taking extra hats and art smocks home for washing, she was always willing to stop and listen when a child wanted to be heard, according to her nominators.

Maire Elementary School recognized two exceptional volunteers. Paige Domzalski coordinated the bike safety program for many years with the public safety department and Bikes, Blades and Boards, initiated the wreath sale for the Maire PTO, coordinated family movie night and meal trains, served as a classroom party planner, field trip driver and playground supervisor and stepped in to help administer spelling tests. She also helped coordinate fifth-grade promotion and served on the PTO nominating committee.

Cathy Lee looked to see where help is needed and plunged in to do the work, according to her nominators. She initiated the volunteer clinic/office assistant role, offering to stay for the afternoon after her clinic duty to assist the school secretary. Whether helping with kindergarten lunch duty, playground supervision, spelling tests, paper copying, math centers or safety patrol, Lee helped out on a weekly basis.

Active at Grosse Pointe North High School four years, Lesley Graham also volunteered at Pierce Middle and Monteith Elementary schools, where she coordinated the fifth-grade class memory book and made sure all students received it for free. At North she procured thousands of dollars in donations and acquisitions for the Parents Club annual spring fashion show. She served as vice president of events for the Parents Club and co-chaired The Best for the Best auction.

Randie Kohler has a child in both programs at Barnes Early Childhood Center and also is active in the Ferry Elementary School PTO. At Barnes she started a Facebook group, brings snacks and lunches for teachers during conferences and at holidays and was willing to help wherever needed.

Lindsey Novak created a sign-up genius for rainy day boxes so each classroom teacher would have a bin of games, arts and crafts on indoor recess days. She coordinated lunchtime enrichment activities and payments, organized a collection of recess games and began a gardening club for students. In her spare time, she is a Girl Scouts Leader and PTO vice president.

Renee Palazzolo has been active at Defer nine years and Pierce Middle School six. As a class adviser at Pierce several years, she helped plan and run student Fun Nights. She served as Pierce PTO vice president and will be president next year; a role she held at Defer — where she also ran three successful fundraisers: the Pumpkin Patch on the front lawn, Bingo Night and the Fun Run. Palazzolo is an active member of the Mothers' Club of Grosse Pointe South High School and volunteered on the Fashion Show committee.

Jeff Somers has provided Mason Elementary School with a fresh leadership perspective as the current PTO president. His focus on a student-centered approach creates a team atmosphere that all parents want to be a part of, according to his nominators. Several new initiatives he created with the PTO this year include the Willy Wonka Winter Formal, the first all-inclusive school dance.

Melody VanArragon, an accompanist who worked daily with Brownell's eighth-grade choir during fourth hour, went beyond that one-hour commitment, coming in before or after school to work with students individually or in small groups. She also stepped in when needed. For example, when vocal music and drama instructor Carolyn Gross was injured at the vocal music festival in the spring, VanArragon arrived at school the next day to make sure students had results from the festival and to assist the substitute instructor with that day's lessons.

zens can begin to put kindness above violence."

One success story she discovered in her research was Australia.

"In 1984, 24 people died (from a mass shooting)," she said. "After that, they pressed for stricter gun laws and background checks. Their gun violence has decreased enormously and drastically."

For her action piece, Said organized a walkout for Academy middle school staff and students March 14, the day of the national walkout when students across America stood outside their schools for 17 minutes in honor of 17 people who lost their lives in Parkland, Fla.

"With help from Mrs. Murray, we came up with 17 acts of kindness," she said. Said read these acts of kindness — making a friend smile, speaking words of positivity, giving someone a hug, helping a friend with homework, clearing a classmate's lunch tray, talking to someone who might look lonely — and concluded with the words: "Even the smallest acts of kindness can make a difference. People are power." This was followed by a moment of silence and a prayer.

"I've learned a lot throughout this project and learned how people are affected by everyday gun violence," Said said. "I hope in the future we can live in a world not worrying for our safety and truly be at peace with one another."

Rock Steady Boxing gives hope to Parkinson's patients

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

St. Clair Shores resident Dave Wurm was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease five years ago. He heard about Rock Steady Boxing — a boxing program specifically designed for Parkinson's patients — and signed up hoping to slow the disease's progression.

"I see people (with Parkinson's) all the time, some worse than others," he said. "I don't want to be a burden to my wife."

"They say vigorous exercise three times a week is what you need to see results," he continued. "It's been really helpful. My agility is better. My gait is better. Cognitive issues I had are better. We do a lot of agility and fine motor skills work. My memory is a little better, too."

Wurm said he owes the improvement to Cristi Henderson, who started her own Rock Steady Boxing affiliate — Rock Steady Boxing Metro Detroit — in February after completing training for the program last September. She decided to offer Rock Steady Boxing after a friend's father was diagnosed with Parkinson's.

"When she told me her father was diagnosed, I thought it was no big deal — he's older, he'll just deal with it," Henderson said. "Then I decided to research Parkinson's. The more I read, the more I thought, 'This is horrible.' It's horrifying."

Henderson's friend — Services for Older Citizens Assistant Executive Director Deb Miller — said her father would drive 90 minutes three times a week to attend a boxing class, "and he started seeing massive improvements in his dexterity, balance, cognitive skills, overall happiness," said

Henderson, an Air National Guard veteran. "I thought, 'So there is something you can do.' It's perfect — I already teach boxing, for three years, and I've been a fitness instructor for 15. This gave me purpose again."

Henderson said she's had "overwhelmingly positive" feedback from clients since starting Rock Steady Boxing. She changes goals each week and focuses on intense workouts that keep her clients moving.

"People with Parkinson's have issues with balance, dexterity, eye-hand coordination, just taking a step," Henderson said. "It's all due to a lack of dopamine. Dopamine is what the brain uses to send muscles the signal to go.

Speed, vocalization, endurance are all affected by Parkinson's. Boxing works on all of that.

"This is non-contact, so they're not hitting each other or me," she continued. "We work on all those things — balance, speed, dexterity, eye-hand coordination, vocalization."

Added Andrea Joy, who assists during Henderson's classes, "It's stuff everyone should work on, whether they're old or young."

Henderson leads students in stretches before and after each workout, which can be modified to serve people with all levels of Parkinson's.

"I'm very passionate about this," she said. "I absolutely love it. It's a perfect blend of my love for fitness, my military background and I love helping people. ... The best thing is nobody takes it so seriously. It's not about how fast you are or how hard you hit. It's that you're here and you're doing it."

"Whatever it is, I need it and it's working," Dave Wurm said.

Making progress

Miller is an advocate of Rock Steady Boxing after seeing her father's symptoms not only decline, but reverse. She said it's done more than any medication she's seen.

"Doctors say, 'You have Parkinson's, here's some medication, it won't kill you, but there is a progressive decline and you'll slowly lose your abilities, but just come back and we'll adjust your meds,'" Miller said.

Added Chris Wurm, Dave Wurm's wife, "Some medications have side effects that are almost worse than Parkinson's progression."

With Rock Steady Boxing, the Wurms already have seen more than just physical progress.

"This helps him mentally," Chris Wurm said. "I want him doing this as much as possible. That's where we see the biggest change. I don't want to quit working to stay home with him and he wants to stay independent. This is the best way."

"What hitting a heavy bag does with Parkinson's is it makes the brain fire new neural pathways, but you have to maintain a high intensity," Henderson said.

Taking action

Henderson said 60,000 people a year are diagnosed in the U.S. and 1.5 million are living with Parkinson's — and that's just how many have been identified. Experts estimate by 2040, 120,000 to 130,000 people will be diagnosed.

"The Michael J. Fox Foundation raises money to look for a cure," she said. "In the meantime, we need to do something now to help Dave keep kicking."

At this point, Dave Wurm has had to give up golf and other hobbies, such as jewelry making and photography, but he still enjoys gardening.

Miller told him to not give up hope.

"My dad is playing golf again after four years," she said. "He had lost his balance, his motor coordination; he couldn't grip the club. With Rock Steady Boxing ... he's golfing again. He's regained his independence and the dignity to be able to do something himself."

During one lesson, Henderson taught students how to fall, which came in handy when Dave Wurm took a spill walking the dog.

"He just tucked and rolled and he was fine," Chris Wurm said.

"My husband physically can look really good. That part of the program is wonderful," she continued. "But he has mental issues, brain fog brought on by taking certain medications for too long. ... There are so many issues with Parkinson's that are compounded. Without this program, I would not be working still. I would have to be a full-time, stay-at-home care partner."

She said she's been inspired by her husband's progress to start taking boxing classes herself.

"It's wonderful and I love it," she said. "Exercise keeps the stress level down, which has been huge."

"It's really good that he does this," she continued, noting she and her husband notice a difference when he misses a session. "This is not where we thought we'd be at this age at all. We thought we'd be traveling the U.S. You never know what life's going to hand you. ... He loves this, so he looks forward to it. It's great he has something to look forward to."

Henderson's Rock Steady Boxing class is offered noon to 1:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Heavy Hitters Kickboxing Gym, 20748 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods. For information, call (313) 575-8480.

Down the road

Just down the street from Heavy Hitters, Mac Gallagher offers his Rock Steady Boxing program — Rock Steady Boxing Grosse Pointe — at Max Box. He introduced the class last November after working with a man with Parkinson's.

"I saw the way he changed from when he walked in to when he walked out," Gallagher said. "The closest thing I can compare it to is the Tin Man from 'The Wizard of Oz' — the frozen face, stiffness of movement. After a 40-minute workout, there was a bounce in his step."

Gallagher said he's been aware of Rock Steady Boxing a long time.

"Then I saw firsthand that there's really something to it," he said. "If I can do something to help people, that's what I'm going to do."

"When training for the Rock Steady Boxing program, the belief is, of all

The advantages of pre-planning a funeral

Q: I've heard of people making all the arrangements for when they die. I understand, but are there specific reasons why I should preplan my cemetery property?

A: Making final arrangements is far more difficult when a loved one has passed than if you plan for it now. By preplanning you will relieve loved ones from making a sudden and emotional decision.

There are 50 decisions that must be made in literally 24 hours to prepare for final arrangements and a funeral.

For an individual or couple, being able to make those decisions with a clear mind is vitally important and a blessing for loved ones. Most people who do wait until the time of need will spend a significantly higher amount of money on average because they are making emotional purchases.

Like anything, burial and cremation costs rise each year and double every 10 years. By preplanning you lock in prices before they increase. Also, preplanning allows you to make payments, whereas if a death has occurred, all money is due up front before a burial can occur.

These decisions can be made by you now so your family won't have to guess what you really wanted.

Making your final arrangements is a final act of love you can give family members. They may not understand the full impact until the day you pass, but they will be grateful for the gift you left them.

I offer, at no obligation, "The Emergency Record Guide," which compiles all the necessary information for your family regarding your wishes for your final resting place, as well as all the important personal and financial information that will be needed at the time of your passing.

Helping boost the monarch population

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Harmony Swanson was 3 when she first showed interest in raising monarch butterflies.

The City of Grosse Pointe resident and self-professed animal lover this year is raising her biggest kaleidoscope of butterflies, with 65 caterpillars in various stages of metamorphosis.

Her mother, Lauren Swanson, encouraged the hobby.

"When I was 3, my mom had already raised a bunch of butterflies," Harmony said. "She said we should get some milkweed and plant it and raise monarchs. Eventually ... all these caterpillars started showing up."

That was 2011. The 10-year-old said she's been learning ever since, through experience and research.

"There's a lot of predators out there who want to eat these guys," she said. "I have such a deep connection with animals, I wouldn't want to see even a caterpillar get hurt."

To attract egg-laying butterflies, the Swansons have planted 32 stalks of milkweed, the leaves of which are the exclusive food source for monarch larvae. Hatched butterflies drink nectar from milkweed flowers as well. However, the plant is toxic to other animals.

"Caterpillars can eat it, but other animals will get sick and die if they eat milkweed," Harmony said.

Their crop of milkweed has qualified the Swanson yard as a monarch way station and the family has received a certificate of appreciation from Monarch Watch for contributing to monarch conservation.

Harmony Swanson has raised monarch butterflies since she was 3. These images are from 2011, '12, '13, '14, '15 and '17.

"Thousands of monarchs get killed every year from people destroying their habitats and through construction projects," Harmony said. "We don't want them to become endangered."

Harmony said she enjoys every aspect of raising monarchs, though it comes with some challenges.

"The first step is finding them, which can be hard, depending on where they're located," she said. "Plus, when they're babies, they're so tiny. It can be difficult."

Nevertheless, on her first search of the summer — around Memorial Day — she found 53 caterpillars in one day.

For the most part, Harmony sits back and lets the caterpillars do their natural thing. She does, however, spend an hour a day cleaning waste from their mesh-topped glass enclosures and changing out milkweed leaves. It's delicate work, as many are in the chrysalis stage, hanging from the mesh tops.

"Caterpillars are wanderers, so you have to put them in something sealed," Lauren said.

The glass also keeps the other Swanson pets from getting too close. Two cats, two rabbits and an albino rat bring the Swanson's pet total to 70, Harmony said, though most of those will fly the coop in a few weeks.

It takes two weeks for a newly hatched caterpillar to spin into a cocoon, Harmony said, and 17 days for a butterfly to hatch from a cocoon. This kaleidoscope is the first of three cycles Harmony plans to raise this summer.

"At the end of summer, when it starts getting colder, they'll migrate to Mexico," she said. "In Mexico, they eat, lay eggs and start up a population. Then (the new butterflies) come back in the spring and lay eggs here when it's warm."

The Maire student and her mother encouraged others to plant milkweed to help save monarchs, which are the only butterflies that migrate.

"When I was a kid, I used to collect bugs," Lauren said. "I caught a monarch and I killed it to display it. My mom found out and got mad — and I felt bad. So as an adult, I thought I'd give back. It's been a karma thing, giving back. And they're a great project for kids."

"So fill your garden with milkweed and save butterflies," she continued. "And don't use pesticide; butterflies will start dying."

For Harmony, who started her own YouTube channel — Fairy Dust Animals — caring for animals is a no-brainer.

"If you want to have a pet, you've got to give it your full attention," she said. "You have to be willing to give up some of your energy to having a pet. And I am giving my energy to 70 of them."

Swimmer raises funds for suicide prevention

Grosse Pointe Gators team member Kiernan Tague, 11, recently participated in the Gators' 10-Mile Challenge June 9.

Not only was he the only member of his team to complete the full 10 miles, he also used the challenge as a means to raise funds for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention.

While still short of his goal, Tague has a Go Fund Me page — <https://bit.ly/2JUQNZ3> — where donors may contribute.

Tague began swimming 8:10 a.m. and finished his 660th lap around 12:45 p.m. His mother said he took plenty of food, water and goofy photo breaks.

"Kiernan was the only swimmer on his team who swam more than a mile," wrote Elizabeth Puleo-Tague, his mother, on the Go Fund Me page, "so he's pretty darn proud of his accomplishment, as well he should be."

"At least 20 times throughout the weekend, Kiernan thanked me for letting him swim the full 10 miles," she continued.

Additionally, he told her, "I'm really glad I did it, Mom. And I'm really glad we raised that money. It feels good to be part of something bigger than yourself. And to know that what I'm doing helps make a difference in the world."

Janice Horne Wright

Janice Horne Wright passed away Saturday, June 9, 2018, at the Homestead Village Retirement Community in Pensacola, Fla. She was 101.

Born in Pensacola, to Frank and Effie Horne, Jan spent most of her adult life in Grosse Pointe, with her beloved husband, the late Charles Wright III. She also was predeceased by her siblings, Suzanne Yarbrough, Winnie Merritt, Frank Horne, Lois Kemp and Louise Horne. She is survived by her children, Linda Turek (Jim), Adena Testa (David), Chuck Wright (Jenny), Louise Wright (Curt Leibbrand) and Robin Linzell (Ron); 10 grandchildren; 13 great-grandchildren; sister-in-law, Lenice Horne and three generations of nieces and nephews.

Jan lived life to the fullest and handled adversity with strength and courage. She taught her children the importance of kindness, tolerance, responsibility and good manners. Large family gatherings, especially picnics, gave her the greatest joy.

Jan's sense of humor and outgoing personality endeared her to a legion of friends. She told wonderful stories about her experiences and liked offering pearls of wisdom such as, "There's no such thing as boredom." She was proud to have voted in every presidential election beginning at the age of eligibility. She had an indomitable spirit and sense of adventure, even riding on Disney World's Space Mountain as an octogenarian.

A lifelong learner, Jan challenged herself to develop new skills and hobbies. She was an avid bridge player who constantly studied the game. She was equally talented at the piano and sewing machine. Gardening was another avocation and she delighted in flowers, often stopping along the way to rave about beautiful blooms, crepe myrtle being a favorite. She had a passion for all the arts, most of all music. She loved being part of the Wednesday Morning Music Club in Grosse Pointe.

When her children were grown, Jan became an ardent traveler. She took many memorable trips, appreciating the world's wonders and diversity. She rode a camel in Egypt and explored Europe on her own by Eurorail. A best friend more than two decades was her Siamese cat, Trouble, who kept her company on many drives to and from Florida.

During her youth, Jan was a strong swimmer and basketball player. As an adult, she enjoyed playing tennis. Always a big sports fan, she especially rooted for the Detroit Tigers and in later years, the Tampa Bay Rays and Pensacola Blue Wahoos.

Jan devoted much time to the service of others. As a member of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, she participated in the outreach ministry, taught Bible classes, chaired the fair one year and played in the handbell choir. She was elected as one of the first females to serve in the positions of deacon and elder. She went on numerous church group mission trips, once meeting Mother Teresa in India.

Jan was an active community volunteer. She served on the board of directors of the Children's Home of Detroit well into her 80s. She helped found a music school which was incorporated into the College for Creative Studies in Detroit. Some of her happiest volunteer hours were spent at the Grosse Pointe Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop. Her other affiliations included Tau Beta Association, Colonial Dames of America, Questers, Country Club of Detroit, Pensacola Country Club, Bridge Club of Pensacola and First Presbyterian Church of Pensacola, where a memorial service for her will be held in September.

Donations in Jan's memory may be made to First Presbyterian Church, 33 E. Gregory St., Pensacola, FL 32502; Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI 48236; or a charity of the donor's choice.

Stephen Joseph Miller

Stephen Joseph Miller, Esq., of Grosse Pointe Park, passed away at home Sunday, June 17, 2018. He was 71.

Steve is survived by his wife of 47 years, Paula Miller; children, Frank Miller (Tania and Aiden) of Calgary, Jake Miller (Kate Sharkey and Cecilia, Judah and Penny Kate) of Ann Arbor; Sarah Miller of Ann Arbor and Matt Miller (Christina and Lorelai, Victoria and Teddy) of Seattle.

Steve grew up the oldest of Joe and Charlotte Miller's eight children, primarily in Charles County, Md. He achieved the rank of Eagle Scout while attending Gonzaga High School, then continued his Jesuit education at Wheeling College in West Virginia where he met Paula. His interest in law led him to Columbia Law School in New York, then the U.S. Navy as a judge advocate general corps officer.

After his and Paula's honeymoon traveling Europe, Steve completed officer training school in Rhode Island, then served his commitment at Miramar in San Diego. The next 10 years saw moves to New York City and Pittsburgh before finding their permanent home in Grosse Pointe Park where the couple raised their children.

The children attended St. Clare of Montefalco school, where Steve began coaching soccer. Never playing the sport growing up, he taught himself the rules of the game and found strategies that earned his teams more trophies than could be displayed. When his sons attended University of Detroit Jesuit High School, Steve advanced his coaching career there, eventually leading the freshman squad several years.

As a corporate attorney, Steve formed lasting friendships with protégés and clients who sought his experience in minimizing loopholes within contract law, especially concerning land lease and oil and gas rights.

He will be remembered as an excellent attorney, successful coach, generous and loyal friend and proud, adventurous parent and grandparent and an especially devoted, spiritually joyous husband.

A remembrance of life gathering will be 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, June 29, in the hall at St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church, 1401 Whittier, Grosse Pointe Park.

A funeral service is 10:30 a.m. Saturday, June 30 at St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church, 1325 Champaign Road, Lincoln Park.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Michael's Elevator, 1325 Champaign Road, Lincoln Park, MI 48146.

In Florida, he worked many happy years with Graphics Illustrated until his retirement. He had resided in Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe Farms, Lighthouse Point, Fla., and Boca Raton, Fla., and on his beloved boat "JaCar."

Jack was a keen athlete and an avid competitor throughout his life, as a hockey player, ice boater, bicyclist, racquetball champion, powerboat enthusiast, sailor, boater and sculling. He was a sports car enthusiast who raced his personal vehicles and co-founded the Corvette Club of America in 1957. Delbert Martin Herman

Former Grosse Pointe Shores resident Delbert Martin Herman, 77, died peacefully Friday, June 15, 2018.

Born June 21, 1940, to Ruby and James Reagan Herman, Delbert was raised in North Little Rock, Ark., during which time he obtained, under obscure circumstances, the nickname "Butch."

Delbert attended the University of Arkansas, earning a bachelor's degree in business administration, a law degree and a lifelong enthusiasm for pigs.

Upon graduation, Delbert was a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army. He was a proud veteran and loved the flag. After his service, Delbert worked his entire career as a partner in the accounting division of Ernst and Young. He was a trusted colleague and calming presence during "busy season," always at the ready with a bad joke or, when that inevitably fell flat, jelly beans.

He was an avid golfer and member of Lochmoor Club and Country Club of Detroit. Known for his prodigious, if often errant, tee shots, Delbert cherished the friendships and memories he made in Michigan. Above all, Delbert loved his family: wife, Harriet; brothers, James (deceased) and his wife, Sue and Kenneth and his wife, Pat; son, Christopher; daughter, Cynthia; daughter-in-law, Shellie; granddaughter, Ruby Adelaide and all his nieces and nephews.

"Big-D" enjoyed great days swimming, doing the Sunday crossword, singing, playing golf, eating good food and general mischief with his family and friends.

In his last years, Delbert battled Parkinson's disease/fronto-temporal lobe dementia. Although robbed of his quick wit, he never lost his singing voice or his kind and loving spirit.

The family extends its profound gratitude for the caregivers and staffs of Hospice, Parkinson's Society, Interfaith and

The Gathering Place of The Woodlands whose dedication allowed Delbert to live his life at home with his family in The Woodlands, Texas.

PASTOR'S CORNER

By Roger Skully

Philosopher Martin Buber has collected a number of pithy tales of the masters of the Hasidim, a movement in Judaism that began in the 18th century which emphasized joy as a contrast to scholasticism. This has become one of the most prominent movements in current orthodox Judaic practice. These vignettes stand on their own as a testament to human faith. The following story is from his collection, "Tales of the Hasidim, The Later Masters." Here, he recounts a story told of Rabbi Moshe Leib of Sasov. As I am a cantor — one who chants the prayers of the synagogue service — this story resonates well with me.

"The rabbi of Sasov was entertaining two singers at his house. Their singing was excellent, but — as is so often the case with singers — they were mischievous fellows. Once, his wife put some coffee on the table for him, but while he was getting ready the two of them drank it up and filled the pot with water. His wife did not have another warm drink to serve him, for things were none too plentiful in that house. She grew very angry at the ne'er-do-wells and cried: 'What do you need singers for? All they give you is trouble.'

"He said, 'Their beautiful songs waken my heart so that I can hear the angels sing.'

All times are difficult. We need music and beauty today for the same reasons Rabbi Moshe Leib stated. I do pray, every week, that beautiful music will assist prayer and vice versa.

Skully is the cantor at the Isaac Agree Downtown Synagogue.

Health Pointes

The road to a healthier, happier life

Are you ready to begin a healthier and happier life? Do you want to be a part of creating a healthier and happier community? Then please join us in this community effort as we address obesity, diabetes and cardiovascular disease in our communities.

With support from Beaumont Health, community members will work together to develop programs, strategies and policies to address health and wellness in our schools, community and workplaces. Over the summer, Beaumont will discuss with mayors, city councils and school superintendents the opportunity to partner together to promote health and wellness by becoming part of the Beaumont Healthy Communities Coalition.

Come fall, coalition members, including residents and representatives of local government, schools, business, health care, social service, faith-based and other community organizations, will begin to meet regularly, create action teams and work collaboratively to support development of new programs, events and land use that promote healthy living in their communities. This coordinated, collective approach allows individual members to have a greater influence on the health of their community than they would achieve by acting individually.

Healthy Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods is a Beaumont Health initiative that targets the communities' priority health needs derived from a Community Health Needs Assessment. For more information, contact Suzy Berschback at suzanne.berschback@beaumont.org. The mental health and substance abuse task forces are led by Mary Jo Harris, community organizer for CARE of Southeastern Michigan, mharris@careofsem.com. GROSSE POINTE SOUTH

Shook ready for Naval Academy

By Bob St. John
Sports Editor

Cam Shook is no stranger to pressure.

The 2018 Grosse Pointe South High School graduate recently helped the baseball team win a Division 1 state championship, pitching a gem in the title game victory over Brownstown Woodhaven.

But it wasn't his kick on the mound that caught college scouts' attention, but rather the football field.

He began the football season as the Blue Devils' punter and place kicker. He delivered on the football field, making 12 of 19 field goal attempts, and had a 42.8 yards per punt average. He also had 65 percent of his kickoffs turn into a touchback.

Shook also set a school record with a 54-yard field goal in the Blue Devils' win over Utica early in the season.

He has worked hard at his kicking game, attending several camps.

For all of his hard work, Shook earned a scholarship and will punt for the

Cam Shook

U.S. Naval Academy this fall.

"My goal for several years was to earn a scholarship and play college football," the 18-year-old Shook said. "I worked hard at my game, knowing I had to be impressive to college scouts, and I am proud of earning a scholarship to the Naval Academy."

"I loved my visit, the coaches are sincere and they want me to succeed."

Shook has a chance to be the Midshipmen's starting punter in the fall. Two other punters are on the squad, creating a three-way competition in training camp for the starting spot.

Shook turned punting into an art form for South football head coach Tim Brandon. There were several games where his precision punting helped the Blue Devils win games.

"Cam is an outstanding young man, as his induction into the Naval Academy proves," Brandon said. "He is also one of the hardest working, most dedicated football players I've had the honor to coach. I'll never forget driving by the football field one late Sunday afternoon in March and seeing from a distance someone shoveling snow from the 30 yard line. Fearing there was something 'going on' I stopped to check. It was a young (freshman) Cam with a bag of footballs and a tee getting ready to do his kicking practice for the day. This is the type of young man and athlete he is. He will be sorely missed. Not only his talent, but his infectious smiling attitude."

"Coach Brandon is a great coach, a great mentor," Shook said. "He is always there and he wants what is best for us."

Air Force, Wisconsin,

Michigan State, Purdue, Harvard and Stanford also showed interest in Shook, but in the end he chose Navy and head coach Ken Niumatalolo.

"I love the Navy, the campus and the great education I will receive, which is why I chose to be a Midshipman," Shook said. "It's not going to be easy and it will be a lot of hard work, but I will work hard and use my time management skills to strive."

Navy has a 13-game slate this fall, starting with a road game Saturday, Sept. 1, at Hawaii, and ending with the annual tradition game against Army Saturday, Dec. 8, at Lincoln Financial Field, home of the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

The Midshipmen compete in the American Athletic Conference. Their division foes this season are Memphis, Southern Methodist, Temple, Houston, Cincinnati, Central Florida, Tulsa and Tulane.

In non-conference games, Navy faces

Shook is interested in aeronautical engineering, but also said economics and political science are not being ruled out as possible majors.

Before he started playing football, Shook played baseball. He was in the starting rotation this season for head coach Dan Griesbaum.

Shook pitched 51 1/3 innings, finishing 8-2 with a 1.63 ERA, 48 strikeouts and 15 walks. In the post season, he

"Cam is one of the most focused players I have ever had," Griesbaum said. "When he sets his mind to accomplishing something, it gets done. His performance in the state playoffs will be remembered for a long time. He is most deserving of a state championship."

UNIVERSITY LIGGETT SCHOOL

Lax field named for Thanasis

University Liggett School named the new varsity lacrosse field in memory of George Thanasis, a student-athlete who passed away unexpectedly after his graduation in June 2017.

George Thanasis

In addition, the school created the George Thanasis Scholar Athlete Award, given to three-season varsity athletes who maintain a grade point average of 3.5 or higher.

Last fall, the Class of 2018 initiated a fundraising campaign to name the school's lacrosse field in Thanasis's memory and dedicate a new scoreboard in his name.

The campaign raised more than $500,000 and has been supported by almost 200 people, including the congregation at Assumption Greek Orthodox Church, where Thanasis was an altar boy and participated in many church activities.

"George made the decision to participate in three seasons of Liggett athletics, while maintaining a rigorous academic workload and his commitments to the classroom," said Athletics Director Michelle Hicks. "This award is an opportunity to honor other student-athletes who do the same. I'm thrilled that George's example will be honored in this way."

Thanasis played on the school's soccer, basketball, hockey and lacrosse teams. He was a strong student-leader and talented musician. He planned to attend Kalamazoo College.

"When I think of George, I think of his smile," said Liggett boys' varsity lacrosse coach Mike Costanzo. "He had a carefree and friendly personality and had the ability to make others feel comfortable. He loved life, and it was evident in everything he did. It was an honor to know him."

"George was smart and talented and worked hard in the classroom and on the field, but he also was a good friend who was thoughtful and kind to everyone he met," said Bronk. "He truly exemplified the meaning of a Liggett 'student-athlete,' and his classmates and teammates admired and respected him immensely."
