Jos. A. Bank and Brooks Brothers locations to close this month

GROSSE POINTE CITY AND FARMS —

With the sudden news of both Brooks Brothers on The Hill and Jos. A. Bank in The Village closing this month, some may be questioning whether the Grosse Pointe market is no longer able to support this type of men's clothing retail.

While corporate representatives for both retailers did not respond by press time to multiple requests for comment regarding why their leases were not renewed — and individual store management was not permitted to speak on the topic — the respective landlords stated the timing is rather coincidental and not indicative of any significant decline in sales.

Adam Steuer — asset manager for Versa Development, which owns the Jos. A. Bank space — reported he expects to see the retailer have a new presence in the next year in the Grosse Pointe market, despite also stating, "We entered negotiations (and) didn't come to an agreement that worked for both sides," in regard to rent.

It is Jos. A. Bank's only Michigan location closing at this time.

"This is very, very sudden, so we weren't expecting it," store manager Ciara Detzler said, as employees only recently were informed, despite Steuer reporting negotiations began the beginning of 2021. "We had just beefed up our staff for Christmas and we just added a few new employees and were in the middle of training and everything was going good. The store was hitting good numbers. It was very unfortunate. We were all very sad."

business in its location since Jacobson's, ironically filling the footprint where the Jacobson's men's department once sat.

"We still have the Jacobson's marble floor underneath ours," Detzler said.

Following closely behind its competitor, Brooks Brothers at 11 Kercheval on The Hill will close Saturday, Jan. 28, having opened at its location in November 1987, directly following the Punch and Judy Theater renovation.

The building is owned by the late Gretchen Valade and managed by Russell Development, which reported the retailer saw annual sales of more than $1 million and just last month had a figure of approximately $181,000.

"This factory store was one of the top five nationally in terms of sales for years," Ed Russell said. "... There was a little bit of a lull in 2021 certainly, and 2020, but they have since bounced back big

Stopping traffic near-crashes

GROSSE POINTE PARK —

According to Hoyle as outlined in state protocol, one of five elements required of a traffic control device is to "command respect from road users."

In the case of stop signs, familiarity breeds contempt.

"As you saturate an area with stop signs, you acutely defeat the purpose of what you're trying to accomplish," said Bryan Jarrell, director of public safety in the Park. "People get sick and tired of stopping every single block. That's when you find people starting to roll through them on a more frequent basis."

The caveat is part of discussions about traffic getting dicey at some intersections in the business district.

A solution may be to calm motorists by planting more stop signs.

"There's been a couple residents asking about potentially increasing four-ways; one is Beaconsfield and Kercheval; there's another at Charlevoix," said Councilman Tom Caulfield.

Randy Cousineau, owner of Pointe Hardware on lower Kercheval and a member of the Tax Increment Finance Authority board, has changed his commuting route to avoid potential pileups.

"I've had two close calls," Cousineau said. "I used to turn off Maryland to Charlevoix. I'm at the point now where, if I go that direction, I no longer go to Charlevoix. I turn on Verner. I've had too many issues."

His problem isn't due entirely to traffic.

"Part of it is the way cars are parked at the intersection," Cousineau said. "You can't see down he sketched throughout the course of the workshop, which detailed an option where a new public safety building could be constructed next to Joann Fabric. The designs then proposed a town-square-type greenspace on the land directly at the corner of Mack and Moross, with brick pavers crossing between it and the department building as a way to separate the spaces.

While some participants voiced support for a police presence on the corner and one suggested an out-of-the-box idea for a shared-use community building in which the department only would take up a portion, others remained solely concerned with the Mack and Moross intersection itself.

As the intersection is in Wayne County's jurisdiction, however, the master plan is limited in its effect.

"Some of our recommendations in the mobility section, we're speaking specifically to treatment of the Moross intersection," said Jane Dixon, associate planner with McKenna, which is leading the update process. "That being said, there's buy-in that has to take place with Wayne County ... There's going to be multiple levels of other governmental organizations that are going to have to sign off on any types of changes to the intersection."

The Hill

While the draft plan visioning for development on The Hill proposed exploring the concepts of allowing up to three-story buildings with apartments or condos above storefronts, as well as activating the cut-through space between the parking area and Kercheval, workshop participants were more interested in discussing the need for family-friendly restaurants, later cafe hours and places for young adults and teens to gather.

"One thing I love about The Hill is that my husband and I can go to restaurants like the Bronze Door or Dirty Dog," said a young mom who is new to the community, "but I have an 11 and a 13 year old who like to act a little nutty in public and we bypass The Hill every time, because there's nowhere to take them."

When encouraged to provide feedback on the height of buildings and additional living space, the response seemed positive, yet mixed with concern that there might not be enough parking to accommodate three-story buildings or residences.

Mack Avenue

A discussion prompt asking what residents like about Mack Avenue as it currently stands brought about a string of laughter when one participant anonymously commented, "Nothing."

Concepts proposed for development of the strip included the potential encouragement of four-story buildings — which saw support, but again concern about a balance of parking — and the popular suggestion of a need for a boutique hotel.

"I really do like the idea of having the taller building on Mack and also potentially a boutique hotel," one resident said. "We have so many beautiful venues for events and weddings, but people have to stay so far away and so I think that drives some of that business away."

Plan goals

During a separate interactive portion, participants were asked to vote on whether they agreed or disagreed with the current goals and objectives outlined in the draft plan.

◆ Supporting the enhancement of the existing urban tree canopy saw an approval rating of 4.5 out of 5;

◆ Increasing community-wide resilience in preparation for future flooding and storm events received 4.8 out of 5;

◆ Enhancing the vibrancy of commercial areas by encouraging diversity of businesses got 4 out of 5;

◆ Supporting a localized economy got 4.1 out of 5;

◆ Ensuring new development maintains the aesthetic standards of the surroundings got 4.5 out of 5;

◆ Continuing to maintain and enhance the city's high-quality facilities got 4.7 out of 5;

◆ Ensuring infrastructure remains supported, including roads, water, storm and sanitary sewer got 4.9 out of 5;

◆ Maintaining the unique and traditional look of the Farms by keeping design elements cohesive and true to form got 4.2 out of 5;

◆ Meeting the changing needs and preferences of residents through all stages of life by offering a variety of housing options got the least agreement with 3.6 out of 5.

As always, a brief discussion on the topic of bike lanes saw interest split down the middle.

"It could mean potentially striping bike lanes on just particular roads," Dixon said, "but I know in talking with the administration that they've done quite a bit of work and studies on the streets and striping and that a lot of that isn't necessarily viable just in terms of on-street parking and traffic flow."

Draft sections of the master plan update can be viewed on the project website — mcka.mysocialpinpoint.com/gpf-masterplan/ — which also offers the option to comment online.

The next step will be a public hearing before city council, which will kick off the 63-day public review period before the update is officially adopted.

Harland retires after two decades fighting fires

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — When Sundee Harland was hired into the Farms as a fire specialist in August 2002, she made history as the city's first female firefighter.

Although not a big fan of pomp and circumstance, she was sworn in outside the fire bay, between two fire trucks and an ambulance: symbolic of her transition from an eight-year career as a paramedic serving the Farms area for MedStar.

The two careers had similar draws for the young woman who became EMT-certified right out of high school at just 19 years old. Each presented challenges, excitement and a team environment. But firefighting offered one thing EMS did not: fire trucks.

"Who doesn't love a fire truck, right?" Harland said. "I mean, from when you're born, everybody loves a fire truck."

As Harland prepared to retire Dec. 31 — after 20 years of checking the equipment at the start of every shift, acting as the backbone of each fire operation and carefully cleaning upon every return to the fire bay — it was the fire engines that she was saddest to part with. After all, you can take the girl out of the fire truck, but you can't quite take the fire truck out of the girl.

"That's probably the hardest thing of leaving is I've been in charge of those trucks for 20 years," Harland said. "(I've been) in charge of their well-being, their maintenance, paper and then when you go see it for the first time come to life, it was pretty awesome," she said. "I got chills when I saw it."

The fire specialist has seen many a blaze throughout her years at the helm of a fire truck, but those that have stood apart from the rest in recent memory, include witnessing a steeple toppling over during a church fire in Harper Woods and the day a thunderstorm left 12 house fires in its wake throughout the Pointes at the same time.

"We ran out of trucks for a little bit, where trucks were having to hurry and pack up and clear and go to another one," she recalled. "You were literally clearing from one and going to another, clearing from for quite a few hours after the storm."

Unique among public safety departments, the Farms is the only Pointe with four dedicated fire specialists. Each serves 24-hour shifts, living in the fire department quarters, and is responsible for the operation of the fire engine at each emergency.

The four current fire specialists — Jason Osborne, Ray Krause, Larry Stocking and Harland — all were hired within a year of each other some two decades back.

"Our whole careers have been together," Harland said.

However, the family bond she has found at the Farms, while treasured, is not quite as "once in a lifetime" as it may sound.

"You start building it on with."

The highlight of Harland's career took place just recently in 2021, when two years of effort came to fruition in the form of a custom-built, $627,000 2021 Rosenbauer Commander Chassis, known locally as the new Fire Engine 3.

CONTEST:

"I am beyond excited for these mediums and look forward to showing off the best our Michigan creative community has to offer," Wysocki said. "We have some exciting jurors lined up and will announce them very soon."

All entries are due by 11:59 p.m. Friday, April 7.

Finalists will be announced Friday, April 14.

Contest winners will be announced mid-May, during a reception in Grosse Pointe at a location to be determined.

In the photography/digitalization category, one winner will receive $1,000; $500 will go to the runner-up. A Grosse Pointe News Readers' Choice award-winner will receive $500.

Ultimately, although Assistant Attorney General Dan Gunderson asked for a $250,000 10 percent bond, Berschback chose to set it at $250,000 cash surety bond without the 10 percent component.

"I think there needs to be additional safeguards because of the seriousness of the charges and the amount in controversy," he said.

Sutherland also will be required to wear a GPS tether and surrender his passport.

"$250,000?" Sullivan said, noting the possibility his client may then have to be incarcerated.

"Maybe he will, maybe he won't. It's a lot of money. I don't know if he'll be able to post that.

"The primary purpose of bond is to secure someone's appearance," he continued, asking the court to consider something more manageable.

"This is not a violent crime. This is something that allegedly happened over a period of time. Many, many years, in fact, that this thing is ongoing."

Berschback remained unmoved.

"That's my ruling," he said, before adjourning the court.

The Farms court later confirmed Sutherland posted bond.

The criminal charges were filed Dec. 29, 2022, the day before Gretchen Valade passed away in her Grosse Pointe Farms home at age 97. Her son, Carhartt CEO Mark Valade, sat in the front row at Wednesday's arraignment.

"The Valade family appreciates the diligent efforts of the attorney general's office in investigating David Sutherland's conduct and the filing of these criminal charges," Valade family spokesman Ron Fournier said in a statement.

"They are confident in the legal process and optimistic that justice will prevail and that no other members of our community will become victims of Mr. Sutherland."

A probable cause conference is scheduled before Berschback at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 25.

gated is a small fraction of the whole story," he later added. "I think once the whole story is told, once people hear it, there's going to be a much different climate and attitude toward this and toward him, my client, than there is right now."

According to the attorney general, Sutherland does not have a criminal record, has always appeared in court when required and does have a presumption of innocence. Berschback noted another factor in determining bond is the seriousness of the charges, as the amount being alleged is "staggering."

Ultimately, although Assistant Attorney General Dan Gunderson asked for a $250,000 10 percent bond, Berschback chose to set it at $250,000 cash surety bond without the 10 percent component.

For the past decade, Harland also has found a sense of home at her second job working intake and patient management at a drug and alcohol rehab live-in facility, which cares for as many as 150 people at a time.

"It just ended up being kind of a second-nature calling," Harland said.

... When you see somebody that comes in that's just so broken and I'm doing their admission and I see them that very first moment that I'm collecting their luggage and they're checking in, from three weeks to a month later that — they've got a lot of work to do still — but you see the light come back in their eyes.

... It's really a pretty cool thing."

Retirement for

Harland, as she intends to continue her work at the rehab facility, still will mean 30- to 40-hour work weeks.

For her, it'll feel like a part-time job, freeing up time to spend with her horse, go out to lunch with friends, take motorcycle trips with her husband and more frequently visit her aging parents in Florida.

"I live pretty simple," said Harland, who lives north of Port Huron. "I'm not real extravagant with things, so we have paid things off early in our life, so that if I wanted to retire young I could. And now the time is here and I can, so I'm going to. That's about the bottom line of it."

Continuing Harland's legacy as the calendar flipped to a new year, current Public Safety Officer Amber Hazelton has picked up the mantle — or fire hose — as the Farms' second female fire specialist.

School board president reflects, looks ahead

By Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer

A middle school science project and a love of photography led to a career Ahmed Ismail enjoys so much, he says his work at The Portrait Place is his hobby.

"The day after I had my hip replaced last November, I asked my wife to drive me to the office," he laughed. "She wouldn't do it, but I enjoy what I do so much it doesn't seem like work. I don't golf. I used to ski but can't do that anymore. This is my hobby."

Ismail, now in his fourth stint on the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of

Education, was elected president earlier this month by his colleagues.

"I think this district can be what it used to be and what people expect," he said. "People are so generous here when it comes to the schools and we need to give them what they deserve."

Growing up in the Harper Woods part of GPPSS, Ismail attended Poupard Elementary School, Parcells Middle School and Grosse Pointe High School, then was part of the first graduating class at Grosse Pointe North High School in 1970.

His bio on the GPPSS website says he considers himself a lifelong learner.

"That comes from my father," Ismail said. "He was an academic and instilled that in us from a very early age."

Imam Vehbi Ismail came to the area in the late 1940s and established the Albanian American Moslem Society. In the 1960s, he built the Albanian Islamic Center on Harper near Allard, the area's first mosque.

"His father's father was the leader of all Muslims in Albania," Ismail said. "Being the oldest son it was a bit expected of me to follow that path, but life took a turn."

That turn was a science fair at Parcells where Ismail decided to study the effects of radiation on fruit flies. It helped that his mother, Betty, who still lives in the Harper Woods house where the family grew up, ran the X-ray department at Hutzel Women's Hospital in Detroit.

"The doctors would put my jars on the X-ray machine and then I would take photographs of the mutations," he recalled. "I had all these jars in the basement of this banana mush-like baby food and that's what the fruit flies would feed on."

But first Ismail had to figure out how to document his research. Enter Studio Camera on Mack, then owned by Carl Joyner.

"I hopped on my bike and rode over there and he showed me how to take photographs through a microscope," Ismail said. "I was fascinated. The more I learned about photography, the more I liked it. He taught me everything he knew and I soaked it up like a sponge."

By high school, Joyner offered Ismail a job as a stock boy.

"I was always hanging around the place anyway so he offered me a part-time job," he said. "I just never left. Carl used to always tell me, 'slow your motor and don't be so rambunctious.' He was a true gentleman and a scholar. He was like a second father to me."

After finishing high school, Ismail thought about taking a job at Altman Camera in Chicago, which he said was the largest camera store in the country at the time.

"Carl told me he was thinking about retiring, so he sold me his third of the business," Ismail said. "He had two silent partners but they didn't really know anything about photography."

Ismail gave Joyner a down payment and agreed to a payment schedule.

"We went to see his attorney and the guy asked what I was putting up as security," Ismail said. "Carl told him I gave my word and we shook hands. That's how you did it in those days."

Business took off in the 1970s as camera companies started selling automatic cameras.

"When Canon came out with the AE-1, it really set the market on fire," Ismail said. "At one time I had 60 people working for me and we even had a human resources department."

Ismail began traveling to Japan several times a year, working as a consultant for Minolta so they could better understand the American market.

"In the mid-1980s Japan developed a machine that could print a photo in an hour," he said. "I bought one and we became the first one-hour lab in the area. People would stand on the sidewalk and stare through the window just to watch photos being printed."

Ismail married his wife, Mary Ann, in 1987, and they opened other one-hour photo labs around metro Detroit.

After moving back to the Pointes in 2000, Ismail decided to run for school board in 2004.

"I had so many great teachers growing up and such a great experience, I felt like I owed it to the community to get involved," he said. "We were probably only the second or third Muslim family to move into the area and people were so welcoming. We were the only family on our street without a Christmas tree in the window and no one ever said anything."

Ismail won re-election in 2008, but a stroke in 2009 forced him to resign. It was around then he and Mary Ann scaled back their business to the current iteration, The Portrait Place.

"It's fun because we've got parents bringing in their children who we photographed as children," he said. "Mary Ann takes most of the portraits. She's much better at it and far more patient than me. I work on things like retouching photos."

Ismail was elected to the board again in 2014, but chose not to run in 2018. That changed in 2020, due in part to board decisions he didn't agree with, such as closing Poupard and Trombley and moving fifth graders to the middle schools.

During his various stints on the board, Ismail also has gotten involved with taking training classes through the Michigan Association of School Boards, eventually becoming a mentor to board members in other districts. Of some 4,500 school board members statewide, only 113 have taken more MASB training, according to the GPPSS website.

Ismail has continued his support of the district outside of his board involvement. The Ismail Family Academic Excellence Award goes to one graduating senior at each high school every year and is done so in honor of a person Ismail thinks had a profound impact on his life. For South's ArtFest, The Portrait Place provides grants for complimentary printing services to top photography students.

Looking ahead to leading the board this year, Ismail said there is work to be done.

"I've lived in places like Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills, but nowhere are people more generous when it comes to the schools than here," he said. "But we've got challenges, especially with aging buildings."

Ismail recently has expressed concerns about some of the spending the district has undertaken.

"We have to be very careful," Ismail said. "Without our schools, Grosse Pointe is a vacuum."

It's nothing new for the location of a stop sign to flunk state requirements.

"I know there are a couple stop signs in the city that don't meet that criteria," Jarrell said.

"Granted they don't meet any of the criteria, but we can obviously put them where we see fit," said Councilman Brian Brenner. "It's often not obvious why you wouldn't."

Unlucky day

Two reports of bank fraud were made on Friday, Jan. 13, including one all the way from California.

Officers received a letter from the San Diego Sheriff's Office indicating that a complainant who lives there discovered $700 had been withdrawn from her bank account at a Woods bank using her debit card.

The woman told San Diego deputies that she was in possession of the card and no one else was authorized to use it.

Later that day, a resident in the 900 block of Hidden Lane reported three charges totaling $1,500 were made to her L.L. Bean credit card and that she did not make said purchases.

Park re-ups with crime-fighting group

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — Back in the ancient days of 2002, the City of Grosse Pointe Public Safety Department invested in a Live Scan, multijurisdictional fingerprint system that set quicksilver standards for identifying and confirming the criminal history of bad guys.

"It compares all fingerprints in the system (and) takes about 10 minutes," said Jim Fox, a detective lieutenant at the time who would ultimately become department director.

The City acquired Live Scan through CLEMIS, the Courts and Law Enforcement Management Information System.

CLEMIS is a database and information-sharing network. It evolved from its creation in 1969 in Oakland County to encompass a broad range of services critical to the daily operations of numerous law enforcement agencies in Michigan.

Members include all five Grosse Pointes, of which the Park renewed its contract with CLEMIS this month.

"CLEMIS is difficult to define," said Park Chief Bryan Jarrell. "It started a long time ago, but morphed into a very sophisticated county-wide database of access to all kinds of information by participating agencies. It's not just Oakland County. It has expanded over the years."

Membership is available to all Michigan public safety agencies.

Jarrell said, "Basically, everything we do on the operation side runs through CLEMIS — our computer-aided dispatch, report writing capability, records management system. It hooks into Live Scan, which is the state's auditing and fingerprint, so if we bring somebody in and fingerprint them, that is automatically transmitted to the state of Michigan. It does our mugshot capture."

On Monday, Jan. 9, the Park city council authorized the city manager and Jarrell to renew an agreement with Oakland County to continue providing information technology services to the city of Grosse Pointe Park through CLEMIS.

"All participating agencies have access to other agencies' information," Jarrell said. "So, if I'm investigating somebody here in Grosse Pointe Park, I can enter their name and any other participating agency that's had contact with that person and has done a report on them, we'll get that information. It is something very important to do."

"This is the backbone of what you do," Mayor Michele Hodges told Jarrell. "It is very important."

CLEMIS fees fluctuate every year.

Power cut to Farms home in attempted invasion

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — Around 4 a.m. Sunday, Jan. 15, a resident in the 200 block of Kercheval was awoken by a loud noise and found her power was out.

Shortly after, she saw a man with reflective pants in her backyard and called public safety.

Officers then discovered the suspect had broken the home's electrical meter with a gray brick in what appears to have been an attempted home invasion.

Cutting off the power may have been to "kill the alarms or maybe they think it would kill the camera system," Lt. Antonino Trupiano explained.

While the suspects were gone upon arrival, officers were able to piece together a timeline of events using outside cameras and footage taken on the woman's cell phone.

At 3:35 a.m. a black 2016 Ford Explorer reversed into the driveway of the home and stayed there for around 10 minutes until one suspect got out and looked into a window and side door.

Reentering the Explorer, it drove away only to return a short time later, turning off its lights and backing up close to the garage.

A suspect then entered the backyard and used a brick to break the electrical meter. There is no footage of him returning to the vehicle due to the power going out.

"We're making progress," Trupiano said. "We already have the vehicle."

Two of the three suspects — the driver never exited the vehicle — are described as a black man wearing a sweatshirt, reflective cargo pants, black boots and gloves, and a second black man wearing a baseball hat, North Face jacket, pants, New Balance shoes and a knit face mask.

OUR VIEW

Winter is coming for you and your mood, Michiganders!

Here are some ways to beat those winter blahs

In one of the least shocking findings to any of us from the Wolverine state, Michiganders are overwhelmingly deficient in Vitamin D, a new study reveals. We also are plenty deficient in Vitamins A and C, researchers found.

It's one of the physical prices we pay for living in one of the least sunny locations in America, with a blue mood serving as one of our biggest barometers now that winter is upon us.

Vitamin D also was the most searched supplement by those of us in the Mitten in 2022, according to a comprehensive study from DrugGenius.com, a drug and medication information site.

Whether our bodies or store shelves are short on "the sunshine vitamin," research continues to reinforce what many Midwesterners already know — gray skies and limited sunlight deplete our energy and make us inexplicably feel "blah."

If this describes how you are feeling lately, you are experiencing classic symptoms of seasonal affective disorder, or SAD, a form of depression triggered by changes in daylight and weather that arrive in the winter.

About 4 to 6 percent of people in the United States have SAD and as many as 20 percent may have at least a mild form of it, according to the American Academy of Family Physicians. Although we aren't scientists in this newsroom, we would venture to say if you go around your dinner table and ask each person if they feel more tired, less productive and a little more melancholy this winter, approximately 99 percent would answer yes, provided they haven't already nodded off during dinner.

Experts say women and young people are more likely to experience SAD. So are people who live farther away from the equator (like us!). People with a family history or diagnosis of depression or bipolar disorder may be particularly vulnerable to SAD.

So what can we do to help ourselves feel a little better? Experts from everydayhealth.com offer the following ideas.

♦ Turn up the vitamin D: While doctors do not say Vitamin D improves your mood specifically, it has shown benefits for bone and respiratory health, a reduction in cancer cell growth, and controlling infection and inflammation in the body. A lack of vitamin D also can result in fatigue, bone pain, muscle weakness, muscle

When the sun peeked out from behind the clouds Monday, Jan. 16, we sent photographer Renee Landuyt to capture the evidence at Pier Park in Grosse Pointe Farms. "The sun was already trying to hide and was very hazy by the time I caught up with it, but I like the colors of the kayaks, the trees, water and the hazy sun above," Landuyt said. "It is an interesting mix because, except for there being no leaves on the trees, it doesn't look much like winter. However, that is not foam on the shore — it's ice." Landuyt, whose assignments frequently send her into the outdoors, also noted that the sun behaves like it does not want to visit us in the winter months. "It seems that it doesn't want to stay long, like it is in a hurry to shine somewhere else until spring."

No matter how long or short its visits may be, we will take whatever sunshine Mother Nature decides to give us in January.

aches or muscle cramps, so why not get those levels back up to snuff? (Editor's note: We only need to look at our Canadian friends who have been ahead of the curve for decades, taking the sunshine vitamin year round, knowing Mother Nature can't be trusted, even in the Great White North's pleasant summers.)

♦ Stay active: Though it may be the last thing you feel like doing, the more you stay social, active and on the move, the more your mind and body will positively respond. Participating in an exercise class, getting out and walking, contributing to a community service project, joining a new club or trying a new hobby might help fill your cup (see our latest Grosse Pointe News poll at right to see what Pointers are doing to move their bodies — or not — this winter.)

♦ Light Therapy: Also known as phototherapy boxes, these devices give off light that mimics sunshine and can help manage SAD symptoms, according to the Mayo Clinic. The box gives off significantly brighter lights than that of regular light bulbs and is in different wavelengths. Experts recommend sitting in front of the box for 20 to 30 minutes a day, which will stimulate a chemical change in your brain to boost your mood. It's recommended to use it within the first hour after waking up. The Grosse Pointe Public Library has light boxes available for check out. Head to grossepoinelibrary.org to place one on hold. Or check out this week's special section, "New Year, New You," to learn more about staying on top of your mental and physical health this winter.

♦ Make a doctor's appointment: Set up a day to go in and talk with your doctor to let them know you are feeling down. They can do an official screening for SAD and can provide ways to get back to feeling like your old self again.

♦ Plan a vacation: Our favorite advice? Head to a drug store or pharmacy and load up on the supplements your doctor recommends. But do so only after you have booked a week's vacation in Florida, the Caribbean or any place that can be described as "very warm and mostly sunny." Tell everyone it's the doctor's orders.

Additional ways to shake off your winter funk are to avoid alcohol (it's a depressant), sticking to a schedule and applying essential oils. Of course, get outside for 15 to 20 minutes whenever you see that golden, orb-like sphere in the sky, otherwise known as the sun, whenever it decides to grace us with its presence. Your body, mind and mood will thank you for it.

SNOWBALLERS ORDERED TO CLEAN UP THEIR MESS: The occasional softening of the snow in recent days has presented a temptation to a lot of well grown boys to do some snowballing that was of the malicious mischief order. He made them clean out the garage and entered six names on the police Day Book for future ref-

I SAY By Mike Adzima

The Lions hype was real and only getting stronger

Back in August, just before the start of the NFL season, I wrote an I Say about the Detroit Lions. It was during the height of the "Hard Knocks" hype that was leading into the season and I talked about how the national perception of the Lions seemed to be changing.

For so long, it felt like the Lions were lovable losers of the NFL. When "Hard Knocks" was released in the summer, it seemed as though more people around the country were recognizing that what the Lions have been building could be something special. It seems like a good time to reflect on that and see the progress that was made from the pre-season in August to now that season is over.

The Lions were like the darlings of the NFL coming into the season based on the "Hard Knocks" hype train that gained momentum thanks to big personalities like coach Dan Campbell and running back Jamaal Williams. Unfortunately, the hype train slowed down considerably in the first half of the season when the team started 1-6.

Even I was frustrated. Dan Campbell is a great motivational coach, but it seemed as if maybe his game management flaws could be his downfall. I was having my doubts.

Then it became one win turning into another and into another. Even a close loss at home on Thanksgiving to Super Bowl favorites the Buffalo Bills was a promising sign. The hype train was back on the tracks. We were in the playoff hunt.

If you follow the Lions, you know the story. More wins followed, but we came up just short of the playoffs in the end. Even though it stung a bit, the ending was still perfect.

Beating the Packers on Sunday Night Football a little over a week ago was the key to keeping the hype train that began with "Hard Knocks" rolling into next year. It almost feels like the beginning of the year all over again. People around the country and the national media seem excited for what the Lions could accomplish next season based on how the team ended the year.

Like I said in August, seeing so much love for the Lions from a national audience is a breath of fresh air. Not only are we receiving love from simply beating Aaron Rodgers and the Green Bay Packers and keeping them out of the playoffs (which felt almost like a playoff victory itself), but once again there is a belief this Lions team is truly talented.

Dan Campbell has further endeared himself to the fanbase and the football world, especially with his gutsy play calling during that final Packers game. Jared Goff may really be having his career resurgence at quarterback. Aidan Hutchinson looks to be quickly growing into a future franchise cornerstone pass rusher. Not to mention the many other young players — like safety Kerby Joseph who intercepted Rodgers in what may have been his last pass as a Packer — who are on the rise.

I wanted my friends who aren't from Michigan to finally think it's kind of cool for me to be a Lions fan. We may not be all the way there yet, but it is getting closer. All in all, this season still surpassed my expectations.

Finishing with a winning 9-8 record and barely missing the playoffs was more than I was expecting for sure. I was anticipating somewhere in six to seven wins, doubling the amount from the 2021 season. I am proud of this team and what they were able to accomplish this year, even if it was frustrating at times.

Now we look forward to the offseason where there probably will be at least a few people putting the Lions out as contenders to make a deep run in next year's playoffs. Who knows if it will actually happen, but I'm glad the feelings of hope and excitement I had in August are still alive and only growing.

SCHOOLS APPROACH FORK IN

ROAD OVER DRIVER'S TRAINING:

The driver's training program in the Grosse Pointe schools may have reached the end of the road. Due to reduction in state funding and a variety of other problems, providing driver's training to students is increasingly difficult for public schools, said Paula Jarvis, director of community education. In addition to funding obstacles, Jarvis said car dealerships no longer are willing to provide cars for the program, instructors are asking for more money and only about one-third of eligible students in the district each year enrolls in the program.

PARK 'EXPLORER' A NEW OPTION WITH 4-WHEELING POLICE VEHICLES: Calling it an experiment in police vehicle purchasing, the Grosse Pointe Park City Council voted to buy a Ford Explorer four-by-four sport-utility vehicle for the city's public safety department instead of a standard Crown Victoria automobile. While the Explorer will cost $5,000 more than the Victoria, Public Safety Director Richard Caretti said that spending the extra money was a good idea.

dipped below 10 percent. At this point, due to a dramatic decrease in state funding, combined with the district's desire to maintain programming and class size as is, and a still-struggling economy during the past few years, the bargaining units find themselves responsible for paying back 2.7 percent to fund equity, which dropped from nearly $17 million in 2009-10 to $7.3 million in 2011-12.

UNIONS TAKE CUTS: No one saw it coming. In 2009-2010, at the time of the last collective bargaining agreement, the Grosse Pointe Public School System's general fund equity bordered around $17 million, thought to be a safe enough number that the Grosse Pointe Education Association and other groups agreed to a clause in their contracts holding them accountable to make up the difference for any time the fund equity plays a pivotal role in his job.

Tax Increment Finance Authority plans for 2023

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — TIFA board members aren't dumb enough to believe everything they read on the internet.

They're guarded about accepting results of an online survey seeking the public's wants and wishes, praises and reproach of the Tax Increment Finance Authority district they represent.

"This survey is, at best, a list of suggestions made by respondents within and outside of the TIFA," said Board Chairman John Hughes. "There's no way to measure if one person responded 20 times or not. Be careful to place any importance on something that may have been mentioned more than once because there's no way of knowing if it was many different individuals or a couple of respondents' multiple comments."

"There were more respondents that weren't in the TIFA district than were in," said Member Randy Cousineau.

"I think that's because there's a lot of interest in people coming from outside of the TIFA district to our businesses; to the cleaners, restaurants and entertainment area, which is what we want," Hughes said.

"It's a good reference point," said Member and former councilman Jim Robson, attending his first TIFA meeting since being appointed to the board.

The authority retains taxes that are otherwise sent to the county and state. Instead, local receipts are used to encourage economic activity within its namesake residential and commercial district roughly bounded by Mack Avenue to Jefferson and from Wayburn to Beaconsfield.

Survey says

There were 293 responses to the seven-question survey conducted online during late 2022.

"Whenever you throw something on the internet, you get a wide range of comments and opinions, all of which are valid," said Warren Rothe, TIFA director and assistant city manager.

He was most interested in 109 responses to a question seeking projects and activities respondents would like the TIFA pursue.

Rothe gathered the suggestions into six categories:

- ◆ residential improvement and blight management, 26 percent;

- ◆ infrastructure improvements, 23 percent;

- ◆ streetscape and signage, 22 percent;

- ◆ parking improvements, 17 percent;

- ◆ business growth and development, 14 percent and

- ◆ opposition to parking expansion and house demolitions, 7 percent.

"When I see things like 'to improve infrastructure,' whether that is to improve alleys or sidewalks, streetscape projects, or wayfinding signage — all of that has common ground," Rothe said.

Some suggestions jibe with what he and the board already desire.

"Let's say there's a Charlevoix street improvement project," Rothe said. "That's not just our idea. Now, it's been articulated in the survey."

"There are a number of things beyond the scope of our charter and things we probably wouldn't consider, but there are a lot of good suggestions, which are things that are already considered," Hughes said.

Some 119 respondents indicated they live or work in the TIFA district as opposed to 174 living beyond its limits.

In answer to another question, survey-takers listed in descending order of importance investing in alleys and sidewalks, eliminating blight, and expanding funds available for residential and business improvement grants.

Responses to the question, "Do you find it difficult to find street-side parking in your neighborhood?" Rothe said.

surprised Rothe.

Most answers, 123, were 'no.' They accounted for nearly 42 percent of the total.

"Of all the questions, that is probably the one that could have been written better," Rothe said. "I don't think it captured what I was trying to glean from it. Another thing to keep in mind is more than half of the respondents did not report living or working in the TIFA. Making an inference, those are probably the people who said 'no' because, compared to other places in town, you wouldn't have too much trouble (finding parking)."

Some 96 respondents, representing nearly one-third of the total, said they found it difficult to find street-side parking. Of those, 58 didn't support a parking permit system while 38 did.

Priorities for 2023

Survey results will be considered along with suggestions by the TIFA board when setting the authority's priorities for 2023 and the budget for fiscal year 2023-2024.

"We have the opportunity to be almost a city within the city in how we engage with our community to ensure how our programming goes," Rothe said.

Hughes instructed the board to submit priorities to Rothe by Feb. 5.

"If I don't see anything, I will hound you," Hughes told the board. "I'm asking what initiatives are we going to focus on in residential areas — are we going to do more grants for garages, for fences? Are we going to have more grants for businesses or start thinking about the streetscape on Kercheval or on Charlevoix? Are we going to start considering what we can do in the business district on Mack? We cannot do them all. We have to prioritize near term and longer term."

"I want to see active and robust consensus building when we figure out our budget and projects for next year," Rothe said.

A turkey hangs out on the roof of a car in the CVS parking lot on Mack near Vernier.

Grosse Pointe gobble, gobble

By Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer

THE GROSSE POINTES — The holidays may be over, but the Michigan Department of Natural Resources wants you to keep turkeys on your mind.

The state is asking residents to report sightings of wild turkeys to help with its wildlife management program.

And it's not just a rural thing, either.

Peter Chupa submitted a photo to the Grosse Pointe News on New Year's Eve of a turkey sitting atop his vehicle in the CVS parking lot on Mack near Vernier.

He said the bird did not move until he got in his car and started it, as it was undeterred by the panic alarm or his two dogs inside the vehicle.

Sam Abdoo, meanwhile, posted a picture from Mack and Lochmoor to social media and quipped, "when you live in Grosse Pointe, even the turkeys use the crosswalk!!!"

If you do see a wild turkey, you can submit details, including date, location and number spotted, at www2.dnr.state.mi.us/ORS/Survey11.

According to an article by Audubon Great Lakes, the comeback of the wild turkey is one of Michigan's most successful conservation stories.

Urban development, habitat destruction and unregulated hunting decimated the wild turkey population to the point where it was almost impossible to find one in Michigan a century ago.

The DNR explains that it bought 50 turkeys from Pennsylvania in 1950, and released them on the west side of the state, then bought more from Missouri for release in the southern part of the state.

Today, the DNR says wild turkeys can be found in every county in the Lower Peninsula and several areas of the Upper Peninsula, with a population estimated around 200,000.

Regulated turkey hunting, starting in 1965, also has helped their numbers thrive.

According to the DNR:

- ◆ Only males make a gobbling sound.

- ◆ Males use the gobbling sound to attract females, along with strutting and fanning their tails.

- ◆ A group of turkeys is called a rafter and usually consists of only males or only females.

- ◆ Females lay about a dozen eggs at a time that incubate for a month.

- ◆ Turkeys can only fly a short distance, but can run up to 55 mph.

- ◆ Turkeys do not migrate.

ULS community service

The boys and girls varsity hockey teams at University Liggett School partnered with the ULS Detroit Community Service Club (headed up by team members Avery Slanec and Tori Nugent) to serve lunch to guests at The McWarm Shelter at St. Margaret Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores on Wednesday, Dec. 21. Backpacks filled with gloves, hats and toiletries were handed out, and the ULS Detroit Community Service Club made 50 blankets to hand out. The shelter at the church is open every Wednesday from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. to allow guests to shower, wash clothes and get lunch. The Knights played cards with the guests, talked and ran a raffle for gift cards and other items.

Park's newest store brings chic West Coast vibe to workout gear and accessories

By Meg Leonard
Associate Editor

Finding a place to shop where the chic energy of Aspen and Lake Tahoe meets the hip, West Coast vibes in workout gear is just a short walk or car ride away thanks to Grosse Pointe Park's newest addition in retail, Corner Active and Leisure.

"We are taking casual to the next level," store manager Aimee Shortz said. "Think elevated active and leisure wear that gives you a very polished look."

The store, located at 15124 Kercheval, opened its doors Dec. 15, and offers men's and women's active wear and clothing, shoes and accessories. It's an extension of many of the popular clothing brands available at The Corner Studio and Corner Studio Pilates and Lagree, workout facilities in the Pointes with a steady flow of clients devoted to yoga, cardio and Pilates-based fitness classes.

Though it's located in the Park, Corner Active and Leisure offers customers clothes and accessories with a cool West Coast vibe.

gear and ski accessories with items ranging from leggings, sports bras, jackets, fanny packs, backpacks, sweaters, sunglasses and winter hats. There's also Seavees Shoes for both men and women.

Shortz said the store prides itself on providing an ample supply of female-founded brands, including the ultra-popular Love Shack Fancy, Lerin, Alala and Year of Ours. Many of the brands are based in California, so it only makes sense the store's vibe follows suit.

So far, the store's foot traffic has resembled an L.A. rush hour as well.

"We have had lots of people popping in and checking us out since we opened," Shortz said. "We have worked really hard to curate an awesome selection, especially in men's athletic and leisure wear, which no one else in town really has."

The menswear lines include shorts, T-shirts, sweatshirt, shackets, flannels, sweatpants and shoes from brands such as Goat USA, Alo and Pit Viper.

According to Shortz, anyone from the teen set to adults can find something in the store.

"We have timeless pieces, all at a good variety of price points," she noted.

The store plans on switching up its inventory seasonally, with plans to add tennis attire from EleVen, a line created by Grand Slam tennis champion Venus Williams, as well as swimwear for spring and summer.

Corner Active and Leisure is the creation of Nancy Cotton, who also owns Corner Studio and Corner Studio Pilates and Lagree, both located on Mack. She is married to Grosse Pointe News owner Sean Cotton.

"We opened a shop to sell the kind of clothes we all actually want to wear — clothes that are soft and flattering and comfortable — while still looking and feeling your best," Nancy Cotton said of her inspiration to open the store.

"We love being a part of all of the good things happening in the Park," she said. "The neighborhood businesses have been so welcoming and we look forward to being open for special events like Chili Fest in February.

"We hope everyone finds us super welcoming and decides to pop in."

The store is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturdays and noon to 4 p.m. Sundays. It is closed Mondays.

Plans also are in the works to host a Galentine's event at the store, from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 8.

time."

The main factor, according to Russell, in Brooks Brothers closing its chapter in the Grosse Pointe community can be traced back to July 2020, when the company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy and was bought out by Simon Property Group, which is one of the largest mall owners in the country.

When the group acquired the franchise, there were approximately 250 factory outlets and retail locations in the country. Today, that number is closer to 150.

Russell's theory is, "Basically what (Simon Property Group) is saying is, we're happy to have these retailers in our malls, but we're not retailers. We're not operations people, so anything that is not in a Simon Property Group mall, we're going to take a hard look at."

This could be evidenced by the fact that since filing for bankruptcy, the retailer did not want to commit to a long-term lease for the Kercheval location. The Brooks Brothers location at Somerset Collection — a mall not owned by Simon Property Group — also closed in February 2022, while the next closest location to the Pointes at Great Lakes Crossing Outlets remains open and is owned by the group.

"We can't operate with a retailer that basically can tell us within 30 days that they're leaving the space," Russell explained. "... So when they decided that they would just go month to month, we started pursuing and marketing the space, but really without any motivation in pushing them out until they found another location."

Russell Development's motivation, in keeping with Valade's commitment to retaining retail in the Pointes, went so far as to present three alternate locations in The Village — including Jos. A. Bank and the Calico Corners space — to the group, but to no avail.

"The Village is the retail node of Grosse Pointe and there were opportunities there and they just felt that expanding or relocating to a non-Simon Property Group location just wasn't benefiting them even though they were making money," Russell said. "... They really didn't have a serious motivation to stay in our market, which is unfortunate."

Steuer also confirmed Brooks Brothers will not move into the Jos. A. Bank space.

Coming soon

While nothing has been finalized, Steuer anticipates being ready to announce a new tenant at 17030 Kercheval soon.

"There's been some good retail interest we've had in the past month," he said. "... The Village is still a very attractive place for retailers and we've seen that with market interest."

For its part, Russell Development already has sealed the deal for one of its current tenants to expand into the space at 11 Kercheval come spring.

With the Brooks Brothers, PNC Mortgage and Punch and Judy buildings also in the midst of exploring the creation of a historic district, along with the Central library branch, Russell assured the closure is unrelated.

The student-curated World War I exhibition, which runs from 5:30 to 7 p.m. in the school's main lobby and auditorium, will feature exhibits that take an in-depth look at the Armenian genocide, food shortages during the war, submarines, the birth of plastic surgery and espionage during the war.

"Students spent the semester doing in-depth academic research and the next step is translating that knowledge," he said. "In other words, how do historians communicate their findings from research? In this case, the students are presenting to a larger community through a museum exhibition."

The only committee that drew much discussion was the Trustee Colleen Worden questioned the need for it, noting that curriculum matters are already handled by the Educational Programs Leadership Committee, made up of teachers, administrators, parents and students.

policies."

Vice President Lisa Papas said she thinks the committee could help by taking a broader view of how the district's curriculum fits together from one grade level to the next and is not intended to "micromanage" teachers.

The other three committees — Community Engagement, Finance and Facilities and Policy and Contracts — were approved 7-0.

Ismail said he sees the Community Engagement Committee working in conjunction with the district's communications team to conduct town hall meetings, working with real estate agents to reach out to families with school-aged children thinking about moving into the district and engaging residents who do not have children in GPPSS.

The Finance and Facilities Committee will basically continue the work handled previously by the Facilities Committee, while the Policy and Contracts Committee will take on the role of the previous Policy Committee.

Superintendent Jon Dean noted that committee will deal with ongoing contracts for services, while collective bargaining agreements with employee groups would remain at the board level.

"This seems duplicative and my concern is that it might overstep the EPLC," Worden said. "If you look through our website, it gives a pretty good instruction of the curriculum that we have, how it's come to be and the state guidelines."

President Ahmed Ismail, who suggested the four committees, said he does not see the committee supplanting the EPLC.

"This is just an extra step to give the board more input on the information we get from the EPLC," he said. "It's a chance to review that information before it comes before the full board. Curriculum is our business and I think it deserves the same attention as facilities or facilities."

"Listening to this conversation I feel less anxious, but the EPLC gets a lot of input and asks tough questions," she said. "When its recommendations come before the board they've been fully vetted. We don't want to end up in a situation where people's expertise is being undervalued."

The committee was approved by a 6-1 vote, with Worden dissenting.

Hayes to retire; The Helm searching for new ED

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

When Peggy Hayes accepted the job of executive director of The Helm in 2018, she made its board of directors well aware she only planned to stay five years.

True to her word, Hayes officially will retire from her post Feb. 17 — five years and five days after her first day on the job.

"I love this place," she said. "It's a wonderful job, a wonderful place to work. It's not a job really, it's a calling. I'll miss it, but I needed some time in my personal life to smell the roses. My mom is 95 and getting to a place where she's needing more attention."

Hayes came to The Helm after a lengthy career in health care and retail marketing/communications.

"This was going to be my 'ease into retirement' job," she said. "I knew it would not be simple, but it was a crazy five years. It was challenging, but I got here and I couldn't wait to get to the next thing. These five years have just flown by. That's a testament to the people we serve, the board I work for and the staff that's here. This is a family place.

"... I left a corporate job — it was a good job, good money — but this job lets me feel like I'm making a difference in people's lives. There's a heart to this job that you don't get in other jobs."

One of her first accomplishments as executive director was unveiling the organization's new name, rebranding it from Services for Older Citizens to The Helm at the Boll Life Center.

Since then, she's been instrumental in several other changes, including expanding programming with evening classes, which were stopped by the pandemic; adding inter-generational activities such as gardening and grandparent/grandchild workshops; implementing summer barbecues; offering outdoor games; installing a bocce court on the front lawn; completing a basement renovation; adding a whole-building generator and more.

Despite the organization's growth in programming and opportunities — which Hayes said was her proudest accomplishment — the improvements did not come without challenges, most notably the COVID-19 pandemic.

"Going through COVID was the biggest challenge; there was no precedence," Hayes said. "Having to figure that out was scary. We serve a vulnerable population. Those were challenging years.

"... But during COVID, we were here for people when they needed us," she added. "We did what we had to do to continue serving. We were closed for nine months, but the core staff was still here, planning how to keep working, how to keep our services like Meals on Wheels moving. We even expanded some things at that time. We never missed a beat, but it was a very challenging time."

Also during her tenure, Hayes produced five galas, each one more successful than the last. Even in 2020, when The Helm was forced to go virtual with its gala, "the community supported us," she said. "Every year, the galas have grown.

I'm expecting good things for them this year.

"We are so well-positioned now," she added. "The organization really did move forward and expanded what we do.

Now we're just poised for that much more. I'm confident the organization will continue to move forward."

Hayes said she'll be a part of that process — helping Marianne Langlois, who will serve as interim executive director, settle in, as well as helping train her official replacement.

"I'll be here for some of that," she said. "I hope to be able to help out here and continue the legacy of what we do.

"... None of this could have happened without a phenomenal staff and board," she added. "I will miss a lot of the people here; I made a lot of friends. Working with this staff has been so great. I'm thankful to the community for their support. And getting to know the seniors and finding ways to help them is such a pleasure, too."

She added that a proper senior center is essential for every community and it has not escaped her that not every community has one.

Realtor, library team up for new lecture series

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Higbie Maxon Agney Realtors and the Grosse Pointe Public Library have teamed up to present a free lecture series focused on the architectural and historical treasures of Grosse Pointe.

"Higbie Maxon Agney was looking at the current lecture series in the area," said Katie Doelle, a marketing consultant with HMA. "The Historical Society has its Bicknell lecture and the Artists Association has its lecture series. We thought there was room for one more."

Doelle, the author of "Grand Estates of Grosse Pointe," has presented at the GPPL before and thought it was the perfect place to host the series.

"They were happy to meet with us and take it from there," she said. "We're both happy about providing free lectures to the community. We have created topics we thought people would be interested in in the areas of history and architecture. Hopefully it will be a popular series and carry on."

The first lecture takes place at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 25. Doelle will present about Grosse Pointe architect Leonard Willeke.

"He's not a household name, but once you start digging down, you see how much he accomplished," Doelle said. "He built at least 40 homes in Grosse Pointe, including 22 Webber Place, which was one of his earliest projects and his biggest project. He built seven homes on Balfour, including four speculative homes, in the 1920s.

"That's when his life became interesting and complicated," she continued. "Despite his success, he was a victim of the Great Depression. He didn't work for three years and had to reinvent himself with new projects."

Those new projects included designing furniture, cars, gardens and other items.

Willeke and his wife lived in Grosse Pointe more than 50 years. His residential projects, Doelle said, are held in high regard and remain true works of art.

The University of Michigan's Taubman College annually presents the Leonard B. Willeke Design Prize, one of the most prestigious awards at the college, to recognize design excellence and innovation through an annual portfolio competition.

"The gazebo at Three Mile Park (Patterson Park) was designed by a student on behalf of Leonard Willeke," Doelle said.

Doelle, who for six years has written a weekly blog highlighting the historic architecture of the Pointes, said her lecture will be unlike the posts she's written about Willeke the last few years.

"I managed to find information that's never been out there before," she said, "so I'll be presenting new information about him."

Her lecture, she added, will be of interest to any-

New PSO is super qualified

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Chief Bryan Jarrell introduced the Park's newest patrol officer, Emily McGrath, at the Monday, Jan. 9, council meeting.

Jarrell didn't have time during the meeting to list all of McGrath's certifications that qualified her for employment.

"I would like to highlight a few," he said.

McGrath is certified in radar traffic enforcement, Taser use, first aid, CPR and Title IX regarding sexual harassment on college campuses. She is trained in implicit bias and how it affects law enforcement.

She also has a certification from the Emergency Management Institute and another on threat pattern recognition.

McGrath completed an eight-week skills program from the Lake Superior State University School of Criminal Justice, Fire Science and Emergency Medical Services.

"Plus many, many more," Jarrell said. "Now, she has to live up to all of that."

"Chief, just hand over your stripes now," joked Mayor Michele Hodges, implying McGrath is prepared for a swift rise through the ranks.

"I might as well," Jarrell answered.

McGrath earned an associate degree in law enforcement and homeland security from Lake Superior State University and a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, graduating with a 3.79 GPA.

Her on-the-job experience consists of seven years with the Oakland University Police Department.

Before patrolling the Park on her own, McGrath will attend a fire academy starting late February.

"We hope to have her serving the citizens of Grosse Pointe Park in a solo capacity by June," Jarrell said.

She joins PSO Korrine Farmer, hired last October, as the Park's second female officer.

At least four Park officers attended McGrath's debut.

"That is a fantastic testimony to the culture you're creating, for them to be here," Hodges said.

Members of McGrath's family also attended, including her father, Andy McGrath; stepmother, Allison McGrath; cousin, Anna Frank; and mother, Susan Tasich.

"It's wonderful that you're all here," Hodges told them. "You have our support."

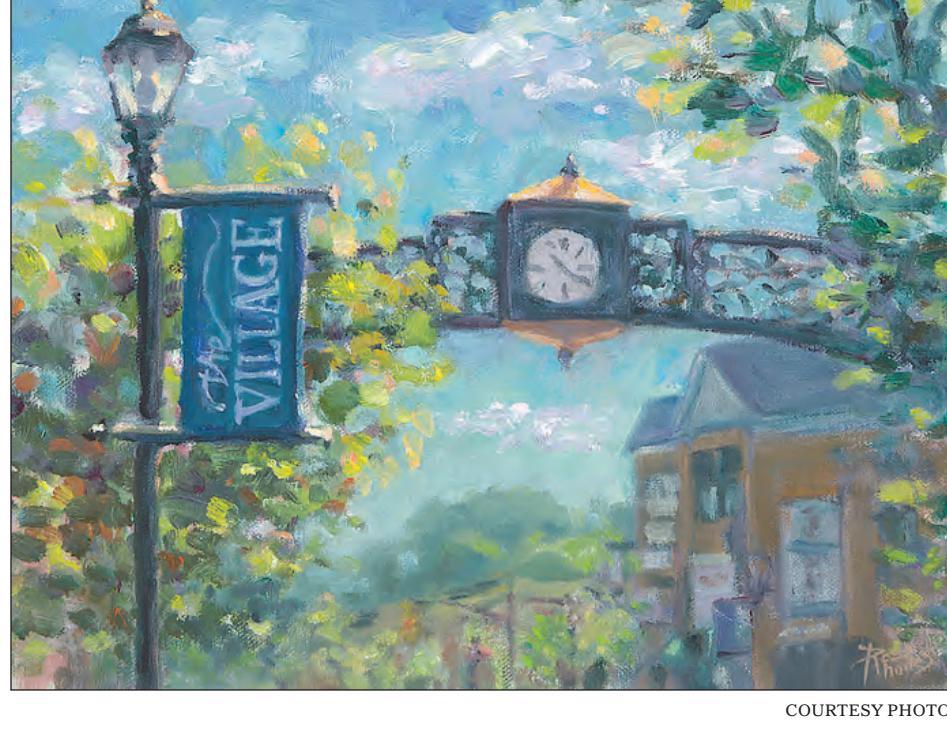

It didn't take McGrath long to decide she wanted to work in the Park.

"I did a ride-along here and fell in love with the city," McGrath said.

"We found Peggy from a referral from a board member at the time," said Prudence Cole, board president. "I believe networking is more effective than a classified ad. I asked them to let us know of great candidates. Now my job will be helping the interim (executive director) manage this place; Peggy will help with the transition.

"My expectation is, in the past we found directors by going out and finding people," she added. "We're at a point in our evolution that people can find us now. We are a stable, mature, well-run organization. People should be interested in running it."

Cole said the job is ideal for someone who is closing out a career, but not quite ready to retire.

"This would be a great place to work," she said. "Five to eight years is a good length of time to lead an organization and bring about change."

The top qualities the board is looking for include leadership experience, experience working with boards, caring about senior citizens and having knowledge of development and successful fundraising experience.

"Twenty percent of our funding is from the government, but every year the county threatens to cut back," Cole said, noting the importance of fundraising through events like The Helm's annual gala.

"There are a lot of new initiatives this year we're going to be doing," she added. "The new executive director will have a lot on his or her plate."

One such initiative is implementing a senior day care program, for people with aging loved ones who cannot or should not be left by themselves during the day. Other plans are in the works as well.

Heading the three-person search committee is Vice President Cheryl Wesen, M.D., who will be joined by Volunteer Services Director Heidi Uhlig-Johnstone and a second board member.

"We're finalizing that right now," Cole said. "They'll be doing the interviews and making the recommendation."

Though the search committee will have big decisions to make in the coming weeks and months, Cole said she is prepared for the change.

"Peggy told us when she took the post, I'll do it for five years," Cole recalled. "I'd hoped she'd forgotten. When she called to tell me (she was retiring), I suspected that was the case, so I wasn't surprised.

"I honor people making those decisions," she continued. "There's a lot of life past working and that's what we support here. Peggy was wonderful to work with. She worked very hard and was very dedicated. She brought great stability here and improvement."

Cole said she'd love to see a new executive director in place by March 1, but doesn't want to rush the process. Resumes may be emailed to ed@helmlife.org or dropped off at The Helm, 158 Ridge, Grosse Pointe Farms. For more information, call (313) 882-9600.

As for her retirement, Hayes said she's looking forward to having some down time, though she doesn't plan to sit still very long. After an abbreviated rest, she plans to find somewhere to volunteer.

"I still have the urge to serve," she said. "There are lots of organizations I

Maria Miller appointed interim president, CEO of The War Memorial

Maria Miller, chief financial officer of The War Memorial, has been appointed interim president and CEO, effective Feb. 1.

Miller's appointment was upon the recommendation of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association Board of Directors, led by Board Chair Donna Hoban, M.D.

"The War Memorial will greatly benefit from Maria's energy and commitment to the institution and its community," Hoban said. "Her knowledge as a financial leader in the nonprofit area will provide vision and continuity over this transition. I am grateful for her willingness to step into this role."

Miller will continue to serve in both capacities until the successful replacement of a permanent president and CEO for the Fred M. Alger Center at The War

Maria Miller

Memorial, its community foundation and Les Braves Park and Gardens — scheduled to open spring 2023.

Miller joined The War Memorial team in March 2022, having been a financial leader in the nonprofit sector for 20 years, most recently as vice president of finance at Beaumont Health. At Beaumont, Miller oversaw finance for the Beaumont Grosse Pointe campus, successfully leading the hospital to favorable financial results on operations. She additionally led finance for the system's diversified operations, including up to a dozen of distinct off-campus business lines worth $700 million.

During her 10 months with The War Memorial, Miller has stabilized the finance structure, automating and streamlining functions for maximum efficiencies. She has established the financial framework for the upcoming community foundation.

"I'm extremely humbled and grateful to the board of directors for their faith in me as interim CEO," Miller said. "I am excited to continue the vision set forth by the board and leadership at TWM and look forward to partnering with our community to continue to provide memorable experiences."

Newly appointed President and CEO of Frederik Meijer Gardens & Sculpture Park, Charles Burke has served as leader of The War Memorial since 2014. His work has empowered the total transformation of The War Memorial as a regional impact organization welcoming more than 300,000 patrons with more than 3,000 events annually, all while incubating more than 65 nonprofit organizations.

Several new and innovative programs were envisioned under his leadership, including significant growth in all aspects of the institution's array of sustainable business lines, including community engagement through arts and cultural events and classes; humanities programming; online and television broadcasts; strategic alignments with the nonprofit sector; hospitality events and services; endowment and governance administration; and brand advancement.

Rounding his tenure, Burke's leadership led the institution to receiving a Top Workplace award by the Detroit Free Press at the end of 2022. The War Memorial placed 11 out of 90 small businesses in Michigan.

"Charles has done an admirable job leading The War Memorial and I am grateful for his vision and service to the institution and his enduring commitment to the community," Hoban said.

"Collectively, we are eternally grateful for his impactful tenure championing The War Memorial."

Additionally, Nikki Charbonneau, who was named chief administrative officer in May 2021, has been promoted to chief operating officer.

For the last 20 months,

Charbonneau has seen the management of all day-to-day operation, including hospitality, facilities, community engagement and human resources. She has been an instrumental member of the renovation and completion of the Fred M. Alger Center at The War Memorial and has worked with Burke to indemnify the institution's vision, mission and entrepreneurial endeavors.

Charbonneau has been with The War Memorial since 2016, additionally serving as vice president of hospitality and patron experience.

"I am lucky to have this amazing staff at TWM and am eager to collaborate with them," Miller said. "I am confident my life experiences and passion to serve the community with integrity and grace will benefit this incredible institution and all that is in store for the future."

AAUW to host luncheon speaker Saturday, Jan. 28

Hybrid warfare, colonialism, imperialism, war crimes, genocide, destruction of international legal norms, propaganda and disinformation, forced deportations of millions, energy as a weapon, confiscation of Ukrainian grain to artificially create famine and chaos in Africa and Asia.

What is Russia's war on Ukraine really about?

For hundreds of years the Russian Tsars and leaders of the USSR have waged wars against Ukraine with a goal of conquering its territory and assimilating its people, thereby erasing Ukraine's sovereignty, culture and history. However, such actions are forbidden and criminalized under accepted UN Conventions, the Law on War and international law. Nonetheless, since the Russian Federation's most recent invasion of Ukraine on Feb. 24, 2022, the world has come to realize that accepted international norms of territorial integrity, sovereignty, self-determination and even democracy are being challenged.

The American Association of University Women Grosse Pointe will host, "It's About more than it Seems: The Story of Ukraine," at 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 28, at Village Grille, 16930 Kercheval, City of Grosse Pointe. The luncheon will feature keynote speaker Natalie Melnyczuk, NATO representative to Ukraine.

"Together we will examine why Russia invaded Eastern and Southern Ukraine in 2014, launched a broader war against Ukraine in February 2022, and how its goals and calculations have and have not changed since then," she said. "We'll also consider the surprising resilience of the Ukrainian people and how the roles of women and education in Ukraine have contributed to this resilience."

For 30 years, Melnyczuk, a Detroit native, has worked as an analyst, academic and diplomat for U.S. think tanks and universities, implementing USAID development projects, as NATO representative to Ukraine and in the Political and Security Policy Division at NATO HQ, and as a consultant.

Her expertise is in Euro-Atlantic security, with regional expertise in Ukraine, Russia and Eastern Europe. Her focus has been on building understanding between nations through collaboration and cooperation to ensure their mutual stability and security, and in understanding the emergence of hybrid threats and building democratic resilience to counter those threats.

Cost for the luncheon is $30 per person. Checks may be made payable to AAUW GP and mailed to AAUW GP, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI 48236. Attendees must include their name, email address and phone number.

Chamber welcomes new staffer

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

The Grosse Pointe Chamber of Commerce has officially welcomed its newest team member, Abigail Turnbull, to the position of membership and events coordinator. She started the post Jan. 9.

In her new role, she'll be planning events, as well as "planning the calendar for the rest of the year," she said, "what we've done before and what more we can add."

The Grosse Pointe native, who graduated from Grosse Pointe South High School in 2015, has a background in retail, sales and marketing. After earning a degree in finance from Michigan State University's business college, Turnbull had internships in marketing and financial services and spent four years with a financial services firm.

"I was happy, but I didn't want to stay there forever," she said. "It was a great team there and I'm grateful for the experience, but I wanted to do something more rewarding in a community I love so much. I started looking for something that was more me naturally."

A conversation with Chamber President and Executive Director Jennifer Boettcher led to her new post.

She said she was drawn to the position due to its flexibility, "of making the position my own and figuring out what is needed in the chamber," she said.

"I want to meet new people and figure out what I can do for them," she continued. "And I love planning events and attending events. Now it's my job, so it's exciting."

Turnbull will be key in recruiting, engaging and retaining chamber members and stakeholders through chamber programs, events and committees. Among her goals are adding more structure to networking events and providing more information to chamber members.

"I want to recruit new members and be a resource," she said. "I want members to come to me with questions. I want to learn as much as I can from Jenny, too. She has so much experience. She's a face in the community and she knows what's going on."

She hopes to relieve some of Boettcher's work load as well.

"I'm so excited to have Abigail as part of the team with her expertise and knowledge," Boettcher said. "She's already changing so much. She's what we needed to move this chamber forward. Being a Grosse

Pointer, she's knowledgeable of the area and familiar with Detroit and St. Clair Shores. Her knowledge will be fantastic for membership."

Turnbull, who lives in Detroit, also hopes to bring her experience working with nonprofit organizations to her role with the chamber. For the literacy nonprofit Beyond Basics, she established a junior board called Leaders for Literacy. She's a part of the Detroit Athletic Club's Intermediate Council, which works with Crossroads, Life Remodeled and other agencies. She's also a new member of the Junior League of Detroit.

Despite her commitments, Turnbull finds time for relaxation and a selection of hobbies that run the gamut. In her free time, she enjoys exercise, trying new restaurants and traveling; just last year she and her family visited Spain and Scotland. She also took up glass-blowing in 2021, through the College for Creative Studies.

"It's an expensive hobby, but I enjoy taking classes," she said. "I took classes at Pewabic, too."

For now, her focus is on settling in to her new role. She invites members and prospective members to reach out to her at (313) 881-GPCC, Ext. 102, or aturnbull@grossepointechamber.com.

"I'm excited to be here," she said. "I'm open to any questions, any suggestions. I want to reach out to different members and see what their needs are and what their ideas are. I think a lot of them want to be heard and haven't been able to in the past. Now that we're coming out of COVID, I want to make sure that what they want out of their chamber membership is being met."

Coming up

Tickets still are available for the chamber's annual membership dinner, which takes place 5:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 2, at The War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms. Tickets are $80 per person and include cocktails, dinner, an open bar and a presentation.

In lieu of its Pointer of Distinction awards, the chamber will present three scholarships to high school entrepreneurs.

"We wanted to encourage entrepreneurship," Boettcher said. "So we're having the Youth Entrepreneurial Scholarship Awards. Students were allowed to apply if they wanted to start a business or if they have a business in place. They give us their business plans, a short video about how entrepreneurship will impact them and other information about their business.

"Three winners have been chosen," she added. "They'll be at the dinner, giving a short presentation on their business plan, sort of like 'Shark Tank.' Then they'll each get a $2,500 scholarship toward their business."

"This has been a fun component of my first week," Turnbull noted, "reading about what these kids have done. I'm excited to meet with them and hear about their business plans and dreams."

While the scholarships focus on students this year, Boettcher said next year she hopes to open the program to entrepreneurs of all ages.

To purchase tickets to the annual dinner, visit grossepoinchamber.com or call (313) 881-4722.

Detroit Riverwalk looks for three-peat in Best Riverwalk in America contest

After winning the last two years in a row, the Detroit Riverwalk is in the running once again to be named best in the country as part of the 2023 USA TODAY 10Best Readers' Choice Awards contest. The Detroit Riverfront Conservancy is asking supporters from throughout the Detroit community and beyond for their daily votes to help the Detroit Riverwalk win the prestigious Best Riverwalk award for a third year.

Voting can be done online at 10best.com/awards/travel/best-riverwalk-2023/

The winning riverfront will be determined by public daily online voting, which concludes at noon Feb. 6. Individuals can vote once per day, per device. Results will be announced Feb. 17.

"We are incredibly honored to have won this award in 2021 and 2022," said Mark Wallace, president and CEO of the Detroit Riverfront Conservancy.

"The community came together in force again to vote us No. 1 last year and we are hoping for a three-peat in 2023."

Nominees for USA TODAY 10Best Readers' Choice Awards were selected by 10Best editors, along with a panel of urban planning experts. There are 20 riverwalks across the country in the competition, including Smale Riverfront Park (Cincinnati), Chicago

Riverwalk, Charles River Esplanade (Boston), Waterfront Park in Louisville, San Antonio River Walk, Canal Walk (Indianapolis) and others.

10Best.com provides users with original travel content of top attractions, things to see and do and restaurants for top destinations in the U.S. and around the world.

The Pulse Of The Pointes

Protecting your home over the holidays

Dear Gabby: Over the holidays, my husband's cousins came into town. I invited them to stay at our house for four days so we could all spend some quality time together.

Everything seemed to be going well until after they left. The room they stayed in is completely and utterly trashed. There are stains all over the carpet, trash everywhere, the sink is broken, and they broke one of my favorite lamps. I'm not sure what to do about the situation. I understand that physical damage can be fixed, but I really want to say something. How would you handle this?

— Shocked in the Shores

Dear Shocked,

This is truly unfortunate. As you mentioned, it's not just the physical damage, it's the lack of respect for their hosts and someone's home.

If they are grown adults, there is truly no excuse. If there are children involved, sometimes the stress of the holidays, not being in your own home, etc., can come into play.

Regardless, they are relatives and you are stuck with them. In this case, I would let it go.

However, there should be no invitation to stay next time. Perhaps a list of hotels in the area would be more appropriate.

Late husband's infidelity still humiliates his widow

DEAR ABBY: My husband was the love of my life. I lost him to COVID eight months ago. We were together for 20 years. I know without a doubt that my husband loved me, but during our marriage he had several affairs. He was always sorry for his indiscretions and would shower me with gifts and vacations in the aftermath.

I was able to forgive him for all his affairs except the last one. It was with a tramp from our church, and it damn near ended our marriage. In fact, I told him to get out and we were done. He begged me to change my mind and swore this was the last time. I agreed to stay, but things were never the same. We left our church because of my embarrassment about their affair, so we lost our friends.

My problem is, since his passing, I have become very angry all over again. I'm furious at him for this affair and dream about ripping the face off the "Church Lady." How do I let go of this anger so I can grieve the loss of my husband and remember the love and good times we shared instead of this nasty affair?

— MISSING MY MAN IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR MISSING: I'm glad you wrote, because it's important you give yourself the opportunity to vent about your feelings. A constructive way to do that would be to talk with a licensed therapist or with your spiritual adviser.

Did you ever discuss your reason for leaving the church you loved with the pastor there? If you didn't, that might be a place to start.

You also mentioned that in leaving, you left behind valued friendships. It may be time to renew them. And please, stop feeling embarrassed because of your husband's transgression. He was weak and he was human, and the sooner you can accept that, the sooner your rage may lessen.

We Tried It!

by Anna Lizer

Lately I have become really lazy with "getting ready" and my morning makeup routine. I guess maybe it's my kids and their school and activities, and this pesky job of mine getting in the way of self care. So when I kept seeing ads for this Laura Geller makeup that is a simple powder but looks like sort of an airbrush foundation I had to try it. I really had low expectations, because I'm in the middle of experimenting with some other beauty products and so far am having no results. I got the Laura Geller Baked Balance-n-Brighten color correcting foundation powder, which is their best seller, and according to their website, has sold more than 4 million of them. It looks kind of like marbled powder with some shimmer — nothing that special. I used a big fluffy makeup brush and put it on directly after applying moisturizer. I ordered the medium shade and it seemed to be the perfect color — it kind of gave coverage like a foundation along with some shimmer and a warm glow. Color me impressed.

According to their website, somehow the powder is self-adjusting and infused with hydrating antioxidants. I have to agree, it definitely self-adjusted to my skin tone. I like it so much I just went to the website to order more of it — and I ended up getting suckered into a discounted eyeshadow palette and lip oil. I'll be sure to report back should that also be worth buying. I have to give this makeup 5 out of 5 because it's so easy, not expensive ($36 but 30 percent off right now), and looks great. You can find it at www.laurageller.com. Image from the Laura Geller website.

Mid-day pick me up

Trying your hardest to be extra healthy in January is a thing. We strive to bring the New Year in with great intentions and goals of becoming our perfect selves.

I, for example, decided to cut out snacks after dinner and commit to the following: exercising daily, dry January and not flying off the handle with my kids as much.

So far so good except for the last goal. But that takes baby steps. In all honesty, sweet cravings are one of my biggest downfalls around 2 p.m.

The recipe I'm sharing today solves my mid-day sugar craving. These protein bites are filled with natural peanut butter, sweet dates and protein powder. They are just enough to satisfy you and put a smile on your face at the same time.

There is a handful of dark chocolate chips added which makes them feel like you're eating dessert. But dark chocolate in moderation is healthy, right? Pair them with a hot cup of coffee and you'll be good to go the rest of the day.

These bites come together quickly in a food processor. They are then rolled in unsweetened coconut flakes for additional texture. If you don't have a food processor, chop the dates finely and make sure to microwave the peanut butter for about a minute to soften it up so it becomes easier to mix together.

Combine ingredients in a large bowl, shape into balls and roll in the coconut. If you choose to add your favorite protein powder, you may need to add some water, a little at a time so the mixture isn't too dry and crumbly.

These snacks were a bigger hit with my family than I was expecting. Since they are so easy and fast to make, our after school snacks are now covered!

Cheers, Mombeau

No Bake Peanut Butter Protein Bites (Yields 24)

1 ½ cups old fashioned rolled oats

1 cup all-natural peanut butter

6 pitted dates

2 tbsp protein powder (optional)

½ cup dark chocolate chips

1 cup unsweetened coconut flakes

Start by measuring out your nut butter. Spray the inside of your measuring cup with cooking spray so the peanut butter will slide easily out. If using a microwave safe cup, heat on high for 30 seconds. Pour the peanut butter into a food processor along with the oats, protein powder and roughly chopped dates. Process the mixture together until almost smooth. Once smooth, add the chocolate. Pulse until the chips are a bit broken up. If the mixture seems too dry or crumbly, add a teaspoon of water at a time until you get the desired consistency. It should be almost like a firm dough but not wet.

Add the coconut flakes to a separate plate to begin rolling. I like to use my tablespoon to make the balls. Grab a tablespoon of the mixture and roll into balls with your hands. The heat from your hands will warm up the mixture so you can easily roll them in the lined cookie sheet. Refrigerate for at least an hour to set. Store in an air-tight container and best if kept in the fridge.

Chablis, an acquired taste that remains in the alternative motif

A friend and wine-maker once convinced me that certain kinds of wines taste better with certain kinds of music, and that the wrong pairing makes for discord.

I thought of that years ago when I attended a small dinner for lovers of Chablis. I refer to that utterly sublime white wine from the French district called Chablis (shah-BLEE) and thus the word should be capitalized.

Chablis is a place name in France, and this country agrees that the name can only appear on products so long called Chablis here that they are grandfathered in. Chablis, one of the world's least understood fine white wines, is a delicate all-chardonnay wine that's radically different from most California-zed chardonnays.

Chablis, in its finest

Chablis is a dry white wine made from the Chardonnay grape in northern Burgundy, France.

It is rarely served cold. Cool, however, it elevates delicate foods to heights they would never reach on their own. It's for quiet voices and subtle flavors.

By contrast, most almost no oak aging.

That, more than any other particular trait, is the hallmark of the district, along with minerality, regionality and reserve.

I recently tasted two

crisp examples of 2021

Chablis. Both were elegant and superb, but neither was likely to excite those who love the buttery-ness of "rich" California chardonnays.

Fortunately for those of us who prefer Chopin to Elton John, Chablis remains a treat in the alternative motif. However, one sad fact remains: way out here on the West Coast, it's extremely difficult to obtain any decent Chablis.

The best of them go to those who adore these wines in Europe. What little quality Chablis of an exceptional nature that does get to this country, most of it stays on the East Coast. Including the wines of Bordet.

Forty years ago, it was difficult to control the temperature of fermentation, so there was a lot of year-to-year variation. Today more modern equipment now populates the winemaking areas of many high-caliber Chablis wineries, so even in poor years, good wines can be made.

Which allows for more evidence of top-rate Chablis' terroir personalities.

Chablis also has weathered several stylistic storms over the decades, including one in the mid-1980s when there arose a wave of interest by some wineries to age some of these wines in oak barrels. Malheurlement!

That unfortunate decade of "oaky Chablis" saddened purists and robbed the many wines of some of their exciting minerality, replacing that trait with a sort of lugubriousness that simply did not represent Chablis.

Many 1980s versions of Chablis were more like rap versions of Schumann lieder!

Bordet admitted that the oaky period was sort of squirrely for the district of Chablis, which began to lose some of its supporters who wanted the lean, delicate, crisp, tart Chablis of old.

Is Chablis for most Americans? Heavens, no! It's an acquired taste that calls for a quiet appreciation of understatement, white tablecloths, crystal and precision.

More to say about this exciting topic!

The Corner Studio offers infrared sauna

COURTESY PHOTOS

The Corner Studio has grown to become two fitness studios, and an athleisure boutique that all promise a total mood boost when you visit. From friendly staff to diverse fitness offerings featuring cardio and functional training experiences, they strive to inspire and strengthen all who enter — preparation for living your best life.

As if that's not enough, they also offer infrared sauna sessions, which provide tangible health benefits in addition to elevating one's mood.

You may have heard about some of the benefits of the infrared sauna: heart and circulation health, anti-aging abilities, detoxification, weight loss, pain relief and many others. For the mind, the infrared sauna boasts relaxation and a feeling of restoration not easy to find in our stress-laden world.

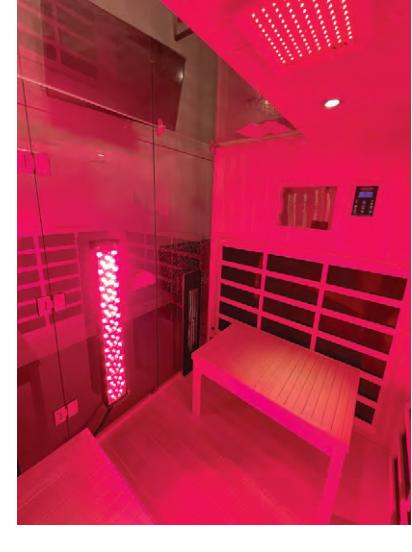

How does it work?

Infrared saunas use heat and light to relax and detoxify the body. As your core temperature rises, your body begins to perspire, taking with it some of the toxins within. The heart rate rises, exercising the cardiovascular system, increasing circulation and even burning calories.

The tissues become oxygenated, providing relief from aches and stiffness.

It works fast too, treatments usually show benefits with as little as 15–20 minutes of use.

The Corner Studio is happy to be able to provide these sessions for clients. Along with their many other programs and classes, the sauna rounds out the relaxation aspect of their full range of options for those seeking better health and wellness in 2023.

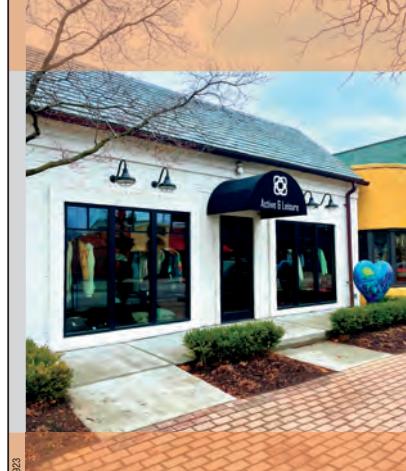

Sessions are each 30 minutes long. Single infrared sauna sessions run $30 each. Packages are offered as well, with a two-session package for $50, and a five-session package for $100.

To schedule a session, contact The Corner Studio at thecornerstudiogp.com or call (313) 821-4374. The sauna is located at 19565 Mack Ave. in Grosse Pointe Woods.

DID YOU KNOW?

A small study published in the Journal of Hypertension found that drinking black tea could improve cardiovascular function.

Pan-Seared Salmon

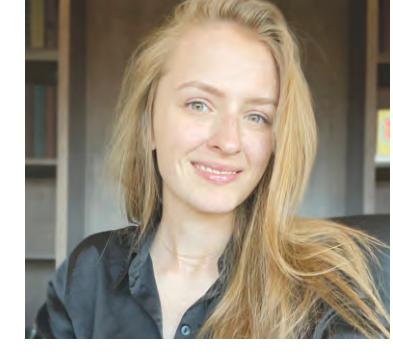

2 salmon fillets
1 Tbsp extra virgin olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Heat oil in a pan over medium-high heat. Season salmon with a few grinds of salt and pepper. Place salmon in pan and cook for 3-4 minutes without moving it (longer if the filet is thick). Flip salmon and cook for 4 more minutes, or until desired done-ness. Medium salmon will register at 135F.

Cucumber Tomato Salad

2 cups cherry tomatoes, halved
1 english cucumber, diced
1/4 red onion, sliced thinly
1 cup basil leaves,
2 Tbsp extra virgin olive oil
1 Tbsp white balsamic vinegar
1/2 Tbsp Italian herb mix
1/4 tsp sugar
Salt and pepper to taste

Health note on salmon: Cold-water fatty fish like salmon are great sources of omega-3 fatty acids. Higher intakes of omega-3's are associated with lower risk or improved attenuation of various health issues including cardiovascular disease, type 2 diabetes, Alzheimer's, dementia, some cancers, age-related macular degeneration, and arthritis. The current recommendation for fish consumption is at 2 portions per week, with at least one of those being a cold-water fatty fish like salmon.

Center, Ralph Fiennes as Chef Slowik in the 2022 movie "The Menu," directed by Mark Mylod

MOVIE REVIEW "The Menu"

2022 - Rated R
1 hr 47min

I knew next to nothing about this film before watching it. About the only thing I heard was it had something to do with a high-end restaurant and it starred Ralph Fiennes. I've enjoyed everything I've seen him in, so I figured it would be worth watching. Bingo!

I'll admit I'm a bit of a foodie. I enjoy cooking and eating good food, but I find pretentious, over-the-top food prep amusing—meals involving foams and blowtorches are absolutely comical. I think the creators of this movie shared my cynicism.

"The Menu" is centered around Chef Slowik (Fiennes), one of the most celebrated chefs in the world. Diners pay $1,200 a person to dine at his prestigious restaurant Hawthorne. We meet Tyler (Nicholas Hoult) and Margot (Anya Taylor-Joy) dockside, as they wait for the boat that will take them and their fellow diners to the private island that's home to his restaurant.

Margot is a last minute substitute partner for Tyler. When she lights up a cigarette, he admonishes her for smoking because it will dull her taste buds and reduce her sensitivity to the subtleties of the food she'll soon be partaking in. It's this attitude that gives you a hint of what you're in for.

A small cadre of interesting characters joins them. As the evening unfolds, we slowly learn about their personalities and occupations, and the reason they've been handpicked to attend this special evening of culinary indulgence.

After they're dropped off at the island, their shuttle leaves and they're there for the long haul.

The group is welcomed by Elsa (Hong Chao), a no-nonsense maître-de who takes them on a brief tour of the restaurant and its grounds before their dining experience begins.

Among the diners are a group of financial consultants who were involved in funding the restaurant, a couple of restaurant/food critics, and a cheesy movie star, played by John Leguizamo.

The kitchen is staffed by a large crew of highly skilled prep cooks who snap to attention every time Chef claps his hands—which he does to announce each course before serving them. His descriptions of the courses starts out fairly tame, but get more outrageous as the meal progresses.

It's here that the satirical nature of the films is most entertaining. One small example is a course of spreads. They're served on what looks like an artist's palette—about a half dozen colorful samples of high-end spreads, perfect for spreading on artisanal bread. Only here's the catch. No bread is served with this course. And to make it even more ridiculous, the bread that should accompany the food is described in great detail and we get a brief look at the non-existent delicious loaf!

Then the events take a dark and sinister turn. I won't describe what happens next except to give a small example of what's coming. One of the courses features custom-made tortillas. They each contain an image produced by a newly acquired printing machine. Each guest's tortilla has an image on it that reveals a dark secret that they think no one else knows about.

For the financial group, their tortillas feature a list of their illegal transfers of funds into overseas accounts. And that's just for starters. It's obvious that Chef has done quite a bit of research to find out about their embarrassing activities. It's at this point where you know you're in for a wild ride where just about anything can happen. And it certainly does!

If you're looking for a very entertaining movie that's a bit out of the ordinary, I think you'll enjoy "The Menu." It's full of surprises, is well written, and has great acting, especially from Ms. Taylor-Joy, "The Queen's Gambit."

If you're hungry for some more traditional food centric movies, here are a few of my favorites: "Big Night," "Babette's Feast," "The Chef," "Chocolat," "Like Water for Chocolate," and "Ramen Girl."

Note to parents: The movie is rated R for language and gore.

In theatres and currently streaming on HBO Max.

from dummy and went up with the king after East followed low.

West won with the ace and returned the jack of diamonds to South's queen. Declarer later tried a club finesse that failed, and so went down one.

The critical clue that declarer missed (aside from the fact that East did not put up the ace when the singleton diamond was led from dummy) was that East had passed as dealer and was therefore highly unlikely to hold the ace of diamonds after showing up with the A-K-J of spades and a singleton heart on the first five tricks.

Once South assumes that West has the ace of diamonds, it becomes clear that instead of covering dummy's ten of diamonds with the king, he should play low from his hand. In the actual case, even though West wins the trick with the jack, he is stymied.

A diamond return, whether high or low, allows South to score two diamond tricks with the help of a ruffing finesse and in that way would eliminate his potential club loser. A spade or club return also allows South to avoid the club loser — again with the aid of a ruffing finesse in diamonds.

Either way, it turns out that East's pass as dealer reveals that West has the ace of diamonds — and it is this significant clue that should enable South to find the winning line of play.

Card-reading — the art of diagnosing how the unseen cards are divided — is the backbone of good card play. Knowing where the missing cards are located is like playing a hand with all 52 cards exposed, and to play a hand well when all the cards are in view is seldom a difficult challenge.

Consider this deal where declarer went wrong. East won the spade lead with the jack and continued with the A-K. South ruffed the third spade, drew trump, led the ten of diamonds and went up with the king after East followed low.

West won with the ace and returned the jack of diamonds to South's queen.

North takes care of business against Blue Devils

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

There are few ways better to begin a season than with the hot start Grosse Pointe North's girls varsity basketball has registered. Thanks to a four-game win streak, the team entered last Wednesday's game against Grosse Pointe South atop the MAC Red.

But despite this momentum, the team knows anything can happen when these heated rivals meet on the court.

Even with the intensity brought by a cross-town rivalry matchup, North proved they can dominate on any given night, regardless of the opponent, as they cruised on to a 58-24 win.

North, which turned Wednesday night into its ninth win in the first ten games of the season, jumped out to an early lead and never slowed down. A lopsided first quarter had the Norsemen leading by 20 after the first eight minutes. When the teams went to the locker rooms for the halftime break, North led by nearly 30 at 37-8.

The Blue Devils had their best quarter on offense in the third, more than doubling their scoring from the entire first half. North was still ahead by 30 entering the final eight minutes, and with the game well in hand they secured the victory by 34.

"The area we've probably improved the most in is the ability to score and move the ball and get open shots," North girls basketball coach Gary Bennett said. "The girls have done a good job sharing the ball, finding the most open person...and taking good shots as opposed to forcing them."

Junior Jenna Winoewicki led the Norsemen in the win with 19 points while senior Sophia Borowski had 14. Fellow senior Annabel Ayrault had six points before leaving the game in the first quarter due to injury. Madison Benard continued her strong sophomore season for South, as only Blue Devil in double digits with ten points.

Both teams took the court again last Friday in more MAC Red action. North defeated Port Huron 48-26 while the Blue Devils hosted Dakota and fell 56-42.

South hits the court at home at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 19 to face Port Huron. The Norsemen are also at home that day at 6 p.m., as they welcome Eisenhower.

Athlete of the Week

Most basketball fans in the Pointes are probably familiar with the Richards name. Those paying close attention the last couple of years have been sure to notice the rise of Karter Richards.

The son of Grosse Pointe South girls varsity basketball coach Kevin Richards and brother of former Blue Devils hoops standout Kamryn Richards, Karter Richards is now out making his own mark in the family's basketball legacy at South.

"I've been in the gym since I was in diapers," he said. "I'd be at my dad's practices and watching those and seeing some of his really good teams play, I started to like it and began playing travel. My dad really sparked my passion for basketball and it's been like that ever since."

That love for basketball has turned into Richards being a rising star, getting noticed throughout the state and the country. So far in his junior season, Richards is consistently surpassing the 20-point mark game in and game out, most recently with 25 points on Wednesday, Jan. 11 against Chippewa Valley, and with 27 points on Saturday, Jan. 14 against River Rouge.

His season high to this point came on Dec. 29 when Richards racked up 31 points in a blowout victory over Saline. If his sophomore year was his breakout season, this

That strength has helped Richards' confidence in doing things like attacking the rim, ground to be a perfect all-around scorer.

"I'm really trying to work on my mid-range game," Richards said. "This year I've been getting to the rim and scoring from three, but I need to work on that middle part so I can be able to score at all three levels."

Luckily, Richards has plenty of people around him to work on his game, including teammate and Blue Devils' backcourt partner, Anthony Benard.

Benard and Richards' friendship goes back many years before their time playing together at South. Benard's dad, Steve, now the head coach of South's varsity boys basketball, would work with Richards growing up, as their families ran in the same basketball circles. Richards and Benard would play together just to practice and occasionally in AAU. With Richards now a permanent fixture in the Blue Devils' starting lineup and often at guard alongside Benard, that longtime chemistry helps elevate both players' games.

Things could have been better for both the Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South boys hockey teams going into their head-to-head showdown last Friday night. Both sides entered the game having lost at least three games in a row and could have used a rivalry win to bounce back.

Ultimately, the Blue Devils prevailed in dominant fashion. South took down the hosting Norsemen 8-0 for its second win over its crosstown rivals this season. Goals by Anthony Zaccagni and Harry Wright helped build an early lead for South that continued to grow. The second period saw the Blue Devils expand a 2-0 lead into a 7-0 lead. Wright, Christopher Mourad and Samuel Koch were among the goalscorers who helped to put the game out of reach.

Despite the loss in the rivalry game, the Norsemen bounced back on Monday and claimed their first win of the new year against Port Huron Northern. North returns to the ice at 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 20 when it hosts Port Huron at Big Boy Arena. The Blue Devils visit Cranbrook at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 19 before heading to Ann Arbor at 4 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 21 to take on Skyline at University of Michigan's Yost Ice Arena.

South cheer goes full out to grab fourth place at Stevenson Invite

By Meg Leonard
Associate Editor

Hitting the mat short-handed due to various injuries, Grosse Pointe South's varsity competitive cheer team powered through that roadblock to earn a fourth-place finish at the Sterling Heights Stevenson Invite Friday, Jan. 13.

The team put out three strong routines, improving by 24 points from their competition against Port Huron two days before, despite having only one day to practice in between. The Blue Devils directly competed against eight teams at Stevenson from among a field of 30 squads.

The team gained the most improvement from Port Huron to Stevenson in the third round, a two-minute, 30-second routine consisting of stunting and tumbling.

"The girls had to work very hard to improve their routines and scores since they have a small team for a Division 1 school and have been trying to overcome injury after injury," said South varsity cheer head coach Ashley Gerbi via email. "They continue to push through and set new goals for themselves each practice."

Gerbi said the team has set a season goal for more people to throw and land their back tuck, the highest Round 2 tumbling skill.

"The long-term goal is to have 12 kids on the mat doing back tucks," she said. "The coaches' goal is to have enough kids on the mat so that we meet our mandated number for a Division 1 school, which is 12."

With unexpected injuries plaguing the team this season, Gerbi said the team is eager to get everyone healthy to see what the team can achieve with a full roster.

"If you don't meet your mandated number, you automatically get 10 points deducted from your score," she explained. "In order to have the 12 kids on the mat, they must all have the same tumbling skills and level."

But Gerbi said she is impressed by her team's resilience in the face of adversity in their young season.

"I think a strength of the team is that they roll with the punches and adapt to whatever they need to," she said. "Each competition so far we've had to put different kids out, due to injury, and this is not ideal because consistency is important in order to improve.

"Even with all of the last-minute changes, the kids have so far improved their score in each competition. We like to break down the judges' scores and help them see what areas we can improve in order to increase our score, even if it's just by a few points."

Next up on South's schedule is a MAC league meet, hosted by South at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 25. Grosse Pointe North will compete in the event as well.

"We've yet to put 12 girls on the mat this season, but we will be at home for competition on (Jan. 25)," Gerbi said. "I am looking forward to seeing them at their full strength and to see them take the floor confidently."

Skaters seek edge for state finals spot

The Grosse Pointe Unified figure skating team took the ice last Thursday at St. Clair Shores Civic Arena for its second of three competitions in the Michigan High School Series. Skating alongside six other teams in the district, Grosse Pointe needed a strong performance in order to help itself move into position as one of two teams that qualifies for the state finals at the end of the season.

The A Team for Grosse Pointe finished in third place overall. The team took second place in moves and third in spins and jumps. The B Team finished fourth overall, placing second in jumps, fourth in moves and fifth in spins.

The team has one more opportunity to secure a spot in state finals with a third and final event of the series, scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 9 at Suburban Ice Macomb.

Knights conquer Everest, North and South pile up MAC wins

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

League play is in full swing as the boys varsity basketball season moves through January. Grosse Pointe North, Grosse Pointe South and University Liggett picked up at least one win in their respective divisions last week, as all three squads continued what has been a successful winter so far.

ULS

Two days after losing its first game of the season to Cranbrook, the University Liggett boys basketball team was back on the court at home last Thursday looking to get right back into the win column. The Knights had a Catholic League foe waiting for them in Everest Collegiate and found themselves locked in a tight battle for much of the evening.

Liggett and the Mountaineers traded blows, finding themselves tied with less than two minutes to go. Clutch free throw shooting ultimately helped the Knights return to their winning ways and secure a 52-44 win.

It seemed clear from the opening tipoff there was not going to be very much separating the two teams Thursday night. Liggett jumped out to a small early lead, making its first few baskets while the Mountaineers struggled to get on the board in the opening minutes. However, Everest quickly found its form and got back on pace with the Knights, making it just a two-point lead for Liggett at the end of the opening quarter.

Both sides kept going back and forth before halftime. The Knights managed to stay out in front, but Everest was always close behind. Liggett's lead remained at single digits at the halftime break as it was out in front 23-19.

The Mountaineers continued to try and narrow in on Liggett's lead coming out of halftime. Both teams had a strong third quarter in terms of offense and the Knights were once again able to hold onto a slim advantage of two points entering the final eight minutes.

The close battle continued throughout the fourth quarter and into the final minutes of the game. With just under two minutes to go, Everest hit a three-pointer to tie things up at 44. However, it would be the last points that the Mountaineers would end up getting. Liggett's offense carried it forward and clutch free throws at the end pulled the Knights back ahead and ultimately led to an eight-point win.

Junior Preston Barr

and senior Jarren Purify led the way for Liggett in the win tallying 14 points each. Ian Flynn, who has been having a breakout junior season, finished with eight points.

The Knights hosted Our Lady of the Lakes on Wednesday, Jan. 18 after press time. They are on the road for their next game at 7pm Friday, Jan. 20 against Lutheran North.

North

The Norsemen picked up two wins last week to remain tied for the top spot in the MAC White division. North first hosted Romeo Tuesday, Jan. 10 and earned its second league win with a 46-36 victory.

Adam Ayrault led the team with 22 points in the win, while junior standout James Phillips finished with 15. Rocco Cardinale ended up just shy of double digits but put on yet another solid performance scoring nine points.

Following the win over Romeo, North went on the road last Thursday night to take on Warren Mott. The Norsemen overcame the last-place Marauders, thanks to a 30-point performance from Ayrault to help seal a 73-58 win.

Phillips had 19 points to go along with Ayrault's 30. Sophomore Leo Peretti also made it into double digits, ending the night with 12 points.

"He's been bought in with everything we've done from the start,"

North boys basketball coach Rob Johnson said about Ayrault. "One thing I've challenged him to do this year is to be more active defensively and be a better rebounder and it's a part of his game that's pretty underrated. We know how he is offensively. He can get going any time and he's in a groove right now."

North hosted

Eisenhower Wednesday Jan. 18 after press time and is home again at 7pm Friday, Jan. 20 to take on co-MAC White leaders Port Huron Northern.

South

Last week was a busy one for the Blue Devils, which saw them take on two MAC Red opponents, then take a break from league play over the weekend.

On Tuesday, Jan. 10 South faced Stevenson on the road looking to pick up another league win. The Blue Devils did just that with a 62-49 win that was propelled by 24 points by Karter Richards and 21 points from Anthony Benard.

South followed up that win with a victory at home last Thursday over Chippewa Valley. The Blue Devils moved to 3-0 in the MAC Red with a blowout 64-33 win, with Richards once again leading the way with 25 points. Benard finished with 15 while senior big man Alex English tallied nine points.

Richards surpassed the 20-point mark again on Saturday when the Blue Devils took on River Rouge in the Horatio Williams Freedom Classic. Taking on a non-league opponent, South ended up taking a 66-59 loss in overtime in what was a close game.

Richards had 27 points Saturday, while Benard had 15 points and even assists. English had eight points and brought down eight rebounds.

South hit the road to L'Anse Creuse North Wednesday, Jan. 18 after press time, but returns home at 7pm Friday Jan. 20 to host Dakota.

plus. When he does not have the Benards to work with during South games and practices, Richards' own family certainly plays a big role in helping him grow on and off the court.

What it all comes back to for Richards really is family. The ones who have helped him fall in love with basketball and learn the game over the years. Basketball is in Richards' blood, as it is for everyone else in the house. The game brings the family together and ultimately has Karter Richards knowing that someone always has his back no matter what.

"I always have someone in my corner, if it's my dad or my sister or mom and even my coach me, or are there when I just need to talk about something. It's a huge benefit."
