BoE approves new budget

By Ted O'Neil
Associate Editor

THE GROSSE POINTES — On a day when temperatures outside topped 90 degrees, the discussion inside grew just as heated as the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education passed the 2024-25 fiscal year budget at its meeting Tuesday, June 18.

General fund revenues are expected to be $101,676,319, with expenditures of $102,676,319. That means the district will have to spend $1 million from its fund balance, which will drop fund equity from about $9 million to $8 million.

The final vote was 5-2, with President Sean Cotton, Vice President Ahmed Ismail, Treasurer Terry Collins, Secretary

Lisa Papas and Trustee Ginny Jeup voting in favor. Trustees Valarie St. John and Colleen Worden voted no.

The budget includes some $5.5 million in cuts, primarily related to the end of about $4.5 million in COVID-related federal funding. A majority of the cuts come from not filling 18 vacant teaching positions, most due to retirements and one teacher layoff.

Superintendent Andrea Tuttle said she believes the budget can be balanced in future years by not filling vacant teaching positions since the district is below the state average for student-to-teacher ratios. She added the new budget does not cut any programming for students.

It includes step increases and a 1 percent pay raise for teachers and staff.

Temps began to flair after Worden said she would not support the budget due to what she called its lack of detail.

"It doesn't say what teaching positions are being cut or at what

House fire in the Park

GROSSE POINTE PARK — There are as many questions about how a multi-alarm house fire on Lakepointe started Saturday night, June 15, as there are about why it reportedly took firefighters so long to put out. No one from the city's administration, public safety or public works departments responded to written requests for interviews or information about the incident that ended with destruction of a house behind a house in the 1400 block plus a garage next door containing a parked car. Both structures abut the alley. Despite help from firefighters from the City of Grosse Pointe, Farms and Detroit, flames grew intense enough to melt the car's front wheels, char a utility pole and evergreen tree across the alley, soften and deform vinyl siding on numerous nearby residences and garages. A neighbor agreed with a TV news report and residents' chatter about officers taking a while to find working hydrants and water pressure sufficient to battle the fire. Park officials stated on the municipal Facebook page, "(The) 1400 block of Lakepointe does have working fire hydrants.

Due to the nature of the fire, our firefighters had to pull (water) from multiple fire hydrants, which is not uncommon. As an example, once the second hydrant on the street was tapped, the hydrants began competing with one another from the same water supply. To counteract this, additional hydrants on adjacent streets need to be accessed."

Rite Aid on Hill to close

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — As Rite Aid proceeds through bankruptcy court, its Grosse Pointe Farms location at 107 Kercheval has become the next domino to fall in phased closures throughout Michigan and Ohio.

The anchor store on The Hill will remain open until July 28 — liquidation of merchandise already has begun — while the pharmacy department will close its shutters Thursday, July 11.

"Rite Aid's been in bankruptcy since October of last year," said Don Spencer, pharmacist at the location since 2012. "Everyday you come to work expecting the worst and then finally it happens."

"We kind of thought we might've been spared, because we survived all the initial closings and all these other rounds of random closings here and there, but then when the news came out about what their plans were, it was a bit of a shock."

Helm secures senior millage ballot proposal in Pointes

By Laurel Kraus and Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer and Associate Editor

GROSSE POINTE CITY, SHORES & WOODS — Councils in the remaining three Pointes last week joined the Farms and Park in approving a six-year, 0.35-mill levy proposal for the Nov. 5 ballot.

"While even a bingo game provides important socialization opportunities, millage dollars will be used to fund expansion of important essential health and wellness services," Helm Executive Director Krista Siddall said, "as well as many new services we feel are needed in the community — adult daycare, off-site programming throughout the community, home visitation programs and new expanded evidence-based programming."

Voters in four of the six communities The Helm serves — the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods — will need to pass the proposal for it to take effect.

Ballot language in the City of Grosse Pointe is as follows:

Having a bash getting splashed

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — Dressing for success has a different meaning when sitting on a trap door over a 350-gallon dunk tank full of water.

For Mayor Pro Tem Tom Caulfield, it meant wearing a suit and tie.

"The mayor pro tem should be in a suit and tie," he said.

He and other municipal and business leaders volunteered as fall guys for last Saturday's Patterson Park playscape fundraiser during the first of three Kercheval After 6 street fairs scheduled this summer.

Caulfield was dunked at least a dozen times by people lined up to throw a ball at the tank's bulls-eye, opening the trap door.

"It was a riot, especially when the kids did it," he said.

Patrick Gleason, the newest recreation commission member, said he was dunked at least a dozen times.

"Smiles on the faces of each of the kids was worth it," he said. "It's a good cause."

Money raised by the dunk tank, one of many attractions and activities during the three-block fair in the Kercheval business district, helps fund efforts by playscape-backers to restore the 10,000-square-foot, wood playscape which volunteers built 33 years ago.

"We raised about $1,900 so far," said Howard Bouton, co-chairman along with James Ceuninck of the recreation commission playscape subcommittee. "Online donations continue."

As befits a playscape, restoration is being done in baby steps.

"Our current project is power washing, staining and getting pea gravel and sand spread out," said Paisley Mackie, a subcommittee member.

"It's my understanding that we need about $200,000 to $250,000 to fix everything and set up the current structure to survive the long term, by which I hope to mean 10-plus more years," Bouton said.

As happened a generation ago, volunteers are doing the work.

"It's a team effort," said Ceuninck, the other co-chairman. "We have the subcommittee together and have put together a wonderful website (pattersonplayscape.org). It's great to be part of bringing it back to life. We've been having so much fun with it."

"I really love the playscape," said Mackie, mother of two children aged 4 and 2. "They love it."

Gleason prepared documents for the Friends of the Patterson Playscape to have non-profit status.

"I'm happy to be part of it, but it is minor compared to what they did," Gleason said, referring to work by co-chairs Bouton and Ceuninck.

Volunteers are invited to set aside all or part of Saturday, Aug. 24, to restrain the structure.

"We will need at least 40 volunteers on staining day," Bouton said. "That will get us through the addition of new 0.35 mill levy ($0.35 per $1,000.00 of taxable value) for the period of six years, to collect approximately $163,639.00 in revenue in the first year, to be disbursed to the Grosse Pointe Active Adult Commission for the purpose of supporting services to older citizens, including transportation, activities and facilities directed toward the improvement of the overall health and welfare of older persons?

If approved, an Active Adult Commission — like the Grosse Pointe Public Library Board, made up of one designee per city and an additional at-large member — would serve as the policy-making body.

"The commission ... which is made by the designees of the various councils, has the ultimate authority to define what the contract is," City of Grosse Pointe city attorney Charles Kennedy said. "(The Helm) is going to have ideas on how they think it should be operated and they're going to present that to the board, hoping the board will agree with them, but it doesn't have to. The designees of the various cities ultimately control the money."

Residents of any community that does not approve the millage likely will be charged a higher, compensatory rate for use of The Helm's services than those that do.

"It may be that the membership fee is six times what somebody else's membership fee is," Siddall said. "Or if there is a membership fee, then they waive it for the communities that pass it and then have a much larger one for the communities that don't."

The possibility of the organization's services becoming only available to communities which pass the millage also has arisen.

"My preference to that and our board's preference to that would be no, because we serve all of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods," Siddall said, "but we're going to have to decide if only four are passed out of the six."

City of Grosse Pointe City Council Monday, June 17, approved the ballot language 5-0, with councilmen Chris Moyer and Terence Thomas absent.

"My concern initially was that there was not a mechanism in place to properly administer those public funds," Mayor Sheila Tomkowiak said.

"With this agreement now and the way it's been scrutinized ... I feel comfortable that if it does pass, this will be properly administered."

Grosse Pointe Woods City Council at its committee of the whole meeting Monday, June 17, voted unanimously to put the millage question on its consent agenda for its regular meeting the same night, which it then approved.

"Although we hope to have your individual support, all we're asking is that you give voters the opportunity to decide for themselves if they want to support our senior citizens," said Prudence Cole, president emeritus of The Helm's board of directors.

"We are the comprehensive and primary provider of services for our seniors."

She also said The Helm's philanthropic efforts — which so far have been the organization's only source of funding — will continue. If the millage passes, it will allow for expanding programming, including adult day care and home visits.

"We understand the concern about taxes, but we can't continue just with philanthropy," Cole added.

"And cities that don't approve the millage will end up paying one way or another."

Without millage

approval, she noted there would be more ambulance runs, a deteriorating housing stock and more police calls for safety checks as the population in the Pointes ages.

"The Helm has a real impact on Woods residents," Councilwoman Vicki Granger said. "The reality is older people want to stay in their homes longer. I think this is in the best interests of our residents."

Just after the Woods council adjourned its meeting, Cole received a call from Siddall letting her know the City of Grosse Pointe council approved putting the millage on the ballot the same night.

"We're not safe yet," Cole said. "We still have to get the community to vote for it."

Cole and The Helm began pitching the idea of a millage to city councils last year but faced a chilly reception.

"I was surprised because I thought it made so much sense," Cole said, "but we took that feedback, did our homework and came back with a new picture."

Grosse Pointe Shores City Council approved placing the millage on the ballot by a 4-2 vote after a lengthy discussion at its meeting Tuesday, June 18.

Voting yes were councilmen Donn Schroder,

John Dakmak, Robert Barrette and John Seago. Mayor Ted Kedzierski and Councilwoman Danielle Gehlert voted no. Councilwoman Sandra Cavataio was excused.

"The Helm charges $60 a year for a membership and now they're asking everyone in the Shores to pay $126 a year in taxes," Gehlert said in explaining her vote. "We've got 46 percent of our residents under the age of 40 and 70 percent under the age of 64. I don't think it's fair for our residents to be taxed for something they don't use."

Kedzierski said he understands the need for senior citizen services, noting he's been thinking of selling his two-story home and buying a ranch as he gets older.

"It's a tough decision because it's easy to spend someone else's money," he added. "We have some real challenges. Our pension costs went up $190,000 last year and we just sold $8 million in bonds so we have to be cautious."

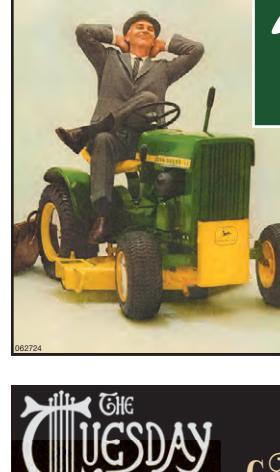

Shroder said public comments on the matter were persuasive, with five people speaking in favor of the millage.

"I don't think this would have passed without your comments," he said. "It's up to the residents to decide."

Dakmak said although he voted in favor of the measure, he is unsure how he'll personally vote on it come November.

"I was very close on this one," he said. "We have to be very careful how we spend people's money, but the polling data is enough to let the people decide."

Harper Woods City Council will vote during its next meeting Monday, July 8, whether to include the proposal on its November ballot.

15139 KERCHEVAL, GROSSE POINTE PARK

First KA6 sets tone for summer

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — Lily Riddle, 3, doesn't talk to strangers, but she's nice to them.

The sun hadn't come close to setting on the first Kercheval After 6 street fair this summer when Lily, standing with her parents near the bandstand, gave a man walking by a blade of grass and, by doing so, wrapped him around her little finger.

"That's typical," said her mother, Becca Riddle of St. Clair Shores. "She likes to share anything she finds."

"She's very friendly," said her father, Travis Riddle, a Park public works department employee.

Cool people refer to Kercheval After 6 as KA6. The one Saturday evening, June 22, in the Kercheval business district was the first of three scheduled this summer.

Nearby Park resident Josh Noseda, a banker, walked to the scene to join friends.

"It's in the neighborhood, it's family-friendly with good fun, good drinks and good food," he said.

Trenton Chamberlain, new president of the Grosse Pointe Park Business Association and district restaurateur, feels good about the event drawing people from numerous area cities.

Above, Jason Melville holds his 4-year-old daughter Holly in his lap who was delighted to slide down the 30-foot-tall, 65-feet-long Velocity Super Slide.

Below, Malek Haurani and Tommy DeGemmis had their caricatures drawn by Andrew Sigman.

The key is "community," he said. "Community is a group of people with like-minded needs or wants. Having like-mindedness and people supporting us and continuing to support us as we grow is key."

In the same way Lily Riddle seemed born with the affability of a golden retriever, Luca Fishaw, the 2-year-old son of Justin Fishaw and Laura Szymanski of the Park, is an infant geologist.

His parents stood patiently while he played with cups of pea gravel at an information booth about restoring the Patterson Park playscape.

Restorers are raising funds to, among other things, buy pea gravel for parts of the playscape site.

"He likes being out in public," Szymanski said of Luca.

"Anything that's not normal entertainment, he wants," Fishaw said. "He wants rocks, flowers and things he shouldn't touch."

The couple has been to KA6 before.

"We come to support local businesses, see people and friends," Fishaw said.

Windmill playscape dedication Saturday

GROSSE POINTE PARK — A free lunch awaits attendees of the playscape ribbon cutting at Windmill Pointe Park 11 a.m. Saturday, June 29.

"It's encouraged, but not required, to register in advance for a lunch ticket if you attend the ceremony," said Chad Craig, director of parks and recreation.

Register by emailing Craig at ccraig@grossepointepark.org.

"Tell me how many family members will be attending," he said.

"Attendees have an opportunity to appear in a group photo and enjoy the new playground. We'll follow that up with lunch."

Menu options are a hot dog or cheeseburger, chips and soft drink provided by the snack shack.

Members of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation funded the playscape and construction.

"We're very grateful for this project and the hard work, time and effort that foundation member Bob Lucas put into this project," Craig said. "Bob was asked by the foundation to head this up because he was heavily involved with the tot lot through the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club (at Elworthy Field, City of Grosse Pointe). It's been a longtime coming to upgrade and replace current play amenities at Windmill Pointe Park."

Children began enjoying the playscape during winter warm snaps.

"On days when weather was nice enough, people were down there using it, for sure," Craig said. "We wanted to wait for a formal ribbon cutting until leveling the ground and seeding grass."

The playscape isn't far from other foundation projects at Windmill: the Tompkins Center (1986), Dolores and Paul Lavins Activity Center (2003), the fountain and zero-depth kiddie pool (2008) and Tompkins Center atrium (2018).

From the Park to Paris

Pointes rower qualifies for 2024 Olympics

By Mike Adzima
Sports Writer

Representing the United States and rowing in the Olympic Games is something Grosse Pointe Park native Sorin Koszyk has been aiming for ever since he first got into a boat. He missed out on making it to Tokyo three years ago, but now the dream has finally been realized in 2024 as Koszyk is headed to Paris to row in this summer's Olympics.

Koszyk and his rowing teammate, Florida native Ben Davison, secured their spot on Team USA at the 2024 World Rowing Final Olympic Qualification Regatta in Lucerne, Switzerland, in May by finishing first in the men's double sculls final.

"What got us there was just trusting in our training and being consistent all year," Koszyk said. "Knowing that we were definitely fast enough and should have qualified last year, we just trusted in that and kept our heads down and just trained consistently."

Waiting to qualify until just a couple of months before the Olympics started was not quite what Koszyk had planned during his years of training. Koszyk and Davison would have liked to have locked up their Olympic qualifying spot last year at the 2023 World Rowing Championships, but were unable to finish high enough to do so.

Koszyk attributes the underwhelming performance in those races partly to lingering issues with a back injury. Despite last year's disappointment, everything seems worth it now for him and Davison.

The teammates began rowing together in early 2023, while they were both training out of the California Rowing Club in Oakland, Calif. Being a two-man team, Koszyk and Davison must have a lot of trust in each other. As Koszyk sees it, it is mostly about teamwork and simply just being fast.

"The biggest thing is being really in sync with the person sitting in front of you because I sit in the bow," Koszyk said. "I have to follow him and have to call any sort of pushes that we're going to make. ... There isn't a whole lot of strategy. You're just going as hard as you can and hoping

This will be Koszyk's first appearance in the Olympic Games and the second for Davison, who rowed in Tokyo in 2021.

what you put down is going to be faster than anybody else."

Out of the two teammates, Davison is the one with previous Olympic experience. He raced as part of the eight-man boat for Team USA at the Olympics in Tokyo three years ago, finishing in fourth place.

While making the Olympics has always been a goal for Koszyk, the reality that he will soon be there does not have him filled with nerves. This summer's games in Paris will be the biggest stage Koszyk has ever rowed on, but he knows in order to be at his best, he needs to treat the Olympics like he would any other race.

"Personally, I'm not nervous," he said. "I think the nerves were primarily for getting qualified because it would have been three years' worth of effort for nothing if we didn't qualify. ... We kind of know how fast we can go, so it's just a matter of executing it on race day and being healthy and ready to go."

The Paris Olympics begin with the opening ceremony July 26, and Koszyk will start rowing the next day in the men's double sculls heats July 27. If he and Davison end up making it to the final, that will take place Aug. 2.

The support from Koszyk's friends and family will be stronger than ever during his Olympic races, even if he wants to just treat it like any other race. Still, he knows how special of a stage it is and will have some time to take it all in and savor the experience once it is all said and done.

"I think while we're there, we're going to be pretty locked in on racing," Koszyk said. "The regatta will finish up early on in the program so we have a week or so where we're going to be done. I'm looking forward to spending a few days there with friends and family and getting to check things out after the racing."

As the news of the closure spread last week, Farms residents took to social media to lament the impending loss of their favorite pharmacist. Many have said they'd like to follow him wherever he ends up next.

The appreciation is mutual.

Spencer, who lives in Canton, said his time behind the counter on The Hill has been the highlight of a career in pharmaceuticals that began in 1984.

"Some people say, 'Why do you drive so far?'" he noted. "I said, 'Well, it's worth it.'

Don Spencer has served as pharmacist at Rite Aid on The Hill since 2012.

"It's 42 miles, I think, exactly. It can be a challenge sometimes in the winter, but it's always been worth it to me to have the opportunity to take care of these people."

Over the years when needed, Spencer has been known to drop off prescriptions at customer's homes on his own way home.

During the pandemic, he also made visits to housebound patients who requested vaccinations.

"I know one customer who makes the world's best strawberry jam," he added. "She brings me jars of it and it's just the most delicious stuff. My wife and I, we actually refer to it as crack jam because it's so good."

Chain pharmacies like Rite Aid typically are not associated with the small town and personal approach Spencer intentionally cultivated more than a decade.

Many customers he knows by name, having watched their kids grow up, go to college and start families of their own.

"Even if they're not coming to pick up a script — they're just coming in to get a Band-Aid or a snack — I still talk to them, smile and wave, ask them how they're doing," the pharmacist said. "That's my approach. That's how it's always been and that's how it's going to be."

Set to turn 60 in a few weeks, Spencer does not yet know what is next for his career. He may seek part-time work.

"I've had people tell me that even though their insurance tells them they need to go to CVS, they still want to come to see me," Spencer said, "and those little things like that tell me that I'm doing something right."

"So I just want to thank them all for letting me be part of their life and I will truly miss them all."

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

Grosse Pointe Public Safety, (313) 886-3200.

Grosse Pointe FarmsSleeping inside

When a resident informed officers of a 52-year-old Detroit man seen entering a vehicle parked at a local auto shop at 1:22 a.m. Saturday, June 15, the man was located sitting in the backseat of a Ford Transit Connect. He was arrested for trespassing and released with a court date.

The man three days earlier had been advised on trespassing for sleeping inside an unlocked vehicle in the same parking lot.

Unlocked

After being left unlocked and with the keys inside, a black GMC Yukon was stolen from Country Club Lane at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, July 15.

Security video shows two men arrive in a Silver Chevrolet Camaro before one suspect begins checking vehicles in the area and ultimately drives away in the Yukon.

$2 short

For paying only $1.97 for a doughnut and soda worth $3.97 at a business in the 19000 block of Mack, a 52-year-old homeless man was cited for trespassing at 6:08 p.m. Monday, June 17.

He left the business before officers arrived and was located sitting on a front porch in the 400 block of Allard eating the doughnut.

Shots fired

After a 65-year-old Detroit man called officers to the 18000 block of Mack at 10:14 p.m. Wednesday, June 19, with a report of being shot at, he then said he heard gunshots but was unsure if they were directed at him.

A LEIN search showed the man had a Wayne County felony warrant for possession of controlled substances, for which he was arrested.

Found items

A men's mountain bike was found near Kercheval and McKinley at 10:30 p.m. Thursday, June 20.

An empty Kate Spade purse was found near McKinley and Ridge at 11:36 p.m. Sunday, June 23.

Both items are being held at the station.

Unlocked

An unlocked vehicle parked in the 400 block of Colonial was rummaged through between 8:20 p.m. Thursday, June 20, and 8:30 a.m. the next morning.

No items of value were taken.

No plate

After being pulled over on Mack at 12:35 p.m. Friday, June 21, for driving without a license plate displayed, a 62-year-old Detroit man was cited for failure to transfer plates, as well as driving on a suspended license.

Trying luck

Thieves were seen pulling on door handles and entering one vehicle in the 100 block of Touraine at 10:05 p.m. Sunday, June 23.

While two other individuals waited in a car, one suspect is described as a tall, thin black man wearing all black. Officers were unable to locate the suspects or vehicle involved.

Grosse Pointe ParkLarcenies from autos

◆ During evening or overnight hours of Friday, June 14, a black purse containing $80 was stolen out of an unlocked vehicle parked curbside in the 600 block of Pemberton.

The purse was recovered but not the cash.

◆ Security video at 2:15 a.m. Saturday, June 15, showed an unknown male enter an unlocked vehicle parked at a house in the 700 block of Lakepointe.

Investigation revealed a checkbook and the ignition key missing from the vehicle. Both were found in the area.

Police said the suspect wore a checkered jacket, baseball hat and shorts.

◆ During the same period and in the same neighborhood as two other larcenies from parked autos last week in the Park, someone stole a $400 Canon camera from an unlocked vehicle in the 1200 block of Maryland.

The incident happened between 9 p.m. Saturday, June 15, and 10 a.m. the next day.

◆ A wallet containing credit cards was reported removed from an unlocked vehicle while parked overnight Wednesday, June 19, in the 1300 block of Three Mile.

“(It was) taken from a driveway without keys,” police said. “Evidence on the vehicle suggested it was a push steal,” meaning thieves pushed it to start the engine.

◆ Park officers used the car’s tracking system to recover it on Haverhill in Detroit.

Three days removed from the first theft last week of a Chevy Impala in the 1300 block of Whittier, a second — a white 2020 model — one was taken from a driveway overnight Sunday, June 23.

Failed car theft

Two unknown black men wearing black and red hooded sweatshirts, respectively, are accused of trying to steal a woman’s 2013 Kia Soul at 11:16 p.m. Monday, June 17.

The car was parked on the street in the 1400 block of Wayburn.

◆ Security video at

suspects break the window and enter the vehicle,” police said. “(She) yelled and the suspects fled the area on foot. Further investigation revealed the suspects damaged the steering column in attempts to steal the vehicle.”

the car’s driver-side window smashed last week while it was parked in the 1300 block of Beaconsfield.

She told police the incident happened between 12 and 7:40 a.m. Wednesday, June 19.

Drunk and sleepy

At 3:16 a.m. Tuesday, June 18, a 31-year-old Roseville man being investigated for running a red light on Jefferson and stopping in the roadway near the intersection of Balfour was arrested for drunken driving.

“(He was) asleep behind the wheel,” police said.

Impalas stolen

Police categorized it as a “push steal.”

A 2017 Chevrolet Impala was stolen overnight Tuesday, June 18, from a driveway in the 1200 block of Charlevoix with two bottles of wine and two packages of meat in his backpack, according to a clerk.

Surveillance video recorded the theft at 8:34 p.m. Wednesday, June 19, according to police.

OUR VIEW

Our kudos to The Helm

Congratulations are in order for the staff and board of directors of The Helm at the Boll Life Center.

They have secured approval from the city councils of all five Pointes to place a millage question on the November ballot. They should be recognized for their persistence and willingness to listen over the past 16 months.

Harper Woods City Council is slated to make its decision on placing the millage on its ballot next month, but that is now a moot point. An interlocal agreement drafted by city attorneys and city managers stipulated four of the six municipalities had to agree to put the question before voters in order for it to move forward. That occurred the evening of Monday, June 17, when the Woods and City both voted in the affirmative. The Shores did the same the next evening, while the Farms and Park had done so previously (see story, page 1A).

The six-year, 0.35-mill proposal would mean around $1.2 million in funding annually for The Helm. Its current budget is similar, with the bulk of that money — around $700,000 — coming from donations. Another $300,000 comes from grants and $100,000 from program fees.

While grants are helpful, they can't be counted on every year and generally are seen as seed money to develop new programs, rather than a continual funding source for operations.

Staff and board members from The Helm began visiting city councils early last year, seeking approval of a 0.5-mill proposal for the primary ballot in August 2023. The response was lukewarm, to say the least. They were met with everything from mild support to outright rejection. And questions. A lot of questions.

Council members across the Pointes wanted to know how The Helm arrived at 0.5 mills, exactly what the money would be spent on and who would control the purse strings.

The timing also raised concerns. The presentations didn't begin until mid-March, less than five months ahead of the primary. Council members knew how many months, if not years, they put into making decisions to ask voters for millage approvals, detailing the scope of work, how much to ask for, how long of a duration and how to effectively persuade voters to give their support.

The decision to retrench came after just two months and it was the right thing to do. If the councils had voted in 2023, all of them most likely would have said no. Such a setback would have been negative publicity for The Helm and perhaps cost it years before broaching the subject again.

In regrouping, The Helm decided instead to ask for 0.4 mills. That was reduced to the current 0.35 in consultation with city administrators while drafting the interlocal agreement. That meant they had the support of city managers regarding the dollar amount, who in turn have the ear of their respective city councils.

The agreement put to rest the question of handling the finances. It would create that." Tomkowiak last Monday was one of five council members — two were absent — voting yes to place it on the ballot.

Helm leaders do expect to see a dropoff in donations if the millage passes, especially among smaller amount donors. That makes sense because homeowners on average would pay an additional $45 per year in taxes in the Woods on the low end and $126 in the Shores on the high end. The City and Park both come in at $65, with the Farms at $82.

We could not blame those who stop writing checks knowing the money is automatically being charged to them, especially those who vote against the millage.

The larger donations, those in the five-figure range and above, most likely will continue. Those primarily come from foundations that are obligated by law to give away a certain percentage of their money each year.

The Helm's request is not out of the ordinary. The Michigan Legislature in 1978 approved letting municipalities ask for up to 1 mill to support senior services. Some 72 of the state's 83 counties have such a millage in place, as do several individual municipalities.

We are unsure if Wayne County has ever considered the issue, but we would strongly object to such a measure. As with the county school tax, the Pointes would be donor communities, paying more than we get in return. There's also the question of financial instability in many of the 43 cities throughout the county. The Detroit bankruptcy and Highland Park's refusal to pay its Great Lakes Water Authority bills come to mind.

While the really hard work for The Helm's leadership may be just beginning, they've shown they can handle it.

Closed minds create closed schools

To the Editor:

Excuse my laughter after reading comments by Grosse Pointe Park Councilwoman Christine Gallagher and Mayor Michele Hodges decrying the decay and vandalism at the once proud Trombly Elementary School. Gallagher wistfully said she hoped the Cotton family will make it "an elementary institution once again."

My somewhat sarcastic laughter is due to the fact that a solution was presented last year when The Hill Pointe School held a public forum in GPP to propose a classical K-5 school in Trombly. More than 120 people attended, but not one school board member or GPP council member was present, despite widespread invitations.

Whether it's weak council leaders, overprotective school board members or church leaders who have empty school buildings, all appear to share the same goal: stifle educational innovation and school choice in favor of the status quo. Unfortunately, this comes at the expense of the hundreds of families that seek school choice for their children and whom these leaders supposedly represent.

I reject the premise by any city council that they have "no power" when it comes to GPPSS buildings. Though there is a division of power between the school board and the councils, of

I SAY By Renee Landuyt

Animals, like humans, grieve too can alter their behavior becoming depressed and listless. Cats or dogs, when they grieve, can have a decreased appetite and lose interest in playing. Dogs have been known to stand sentry at the graves of deceased loved ones.

Elephants have grieving rituals such as surrounding the elephant that is dying and attending to them even after death like a vigil. Scientists have observed them showing empathy, trying to help dying elephants crying out in distress.

Monkeys will guard their deceased loved ones, screaming out in grief. They will gather in groups, hugging one another.

Jane Goodall witnessed a young chimp named

Flint pass away only a month after the death of his mom, Flo. Flint was so despondent after she died that he stopped eating or socializing and it got to the point where he just couldn't survive.

Giraffes wrap their necks around one another in a hug-like fashion when grieving.

Crows send out an alarm call to alert other birds in a response to a dead crow. Some birds can exhibit grief by appearing listless, having posture that droops, and some remain near their babies for a while after they die.

When they grieve, wild animals can wander aimlessly and might also reorganize the pack or group. Female orcas have been seen carrying their dead infants through the water for days trying to keep them afloat, eventually dropping the dead calf.

Researchers have observed magpie behavior of burying their dead under a pile of twigs as though it was a funeral. Some scientists are reluctant to say this is grief because they don't know what motivates this behavior. I say it is grief because these behaviors are only motivated by the death of one of their own and this behavior isn't displayed when death isn't present.

Ellie Laks, founder of a farm sanctuary in California, called The Gentle Barn, says animals have taught her about life, death and everything in between. She recalls a story about one of her cows named Witness. When it was time for Witness to go, she laid down and did not move, making soft moaning sounds. Laks called the veterinarian but before he got there, she says what the cows did next was amazing. All the cows followed the lead of the matriarch cow named Karma, and formed a circle around Witness. Karma went first and came up to Witness and rested her chin on Witness' back. She stayed there for several minutes saying her final goodbye.

When Karma stepped back into the circle, the next cow did the same thing, and the next and the next until every cow had a turn to say goodbye. Once they all had a turn, they wandered off with one cow staying behind with Witness and every so often they rotated, taking turns. When the vet arrived, the cows left Laks and the vet to be with Witness in her final moments. Laks said she would never forget what she experienced that day.

This isn't about anthropomorphizing and giving animals human qualities, this is real emotion displayed by these animals.

And, who are we as humans, to say that because they are animals, it isn't grieving?

We need to understand that animals grieve in their own way, just as humans do and attachments and emotions are part of their language, as it is part of ours, and part of the web of life whether you are two-legged, four-legged, winged or webbed.

course they have a voice, and responsibility, to engage in all discussions and/or innovations to improve our community's public education offering.

If the GPP city council really wanted to solve the Trombly problem, they would at least sit with supporters and founders of The Hill Pointe School and any others who have educational innovation options.

Until then, it's simply a lot of wishful thinking and hot air, not leadership.

MURRAY SALES

Grosse Pointe Farms

Harmful effects of smartphones

To the Editor:

I echo the sentiments of the community member who made a public comment at the June 18 Board of Education meeting about the harmful effects of smartphones and social media on student mental health.

The speaker referred to a book by social scientist, Jonathan Haidt, titled "The Anxious Generation: How the Great Rewiring of Childhood is Causing an Epidemic of Mental Illness." According to Haidt, "phone-free schools and more free play...would be more effective than all of the other measures schools are now taking, combined, to improve the mental health of their students."

Free play is a necessary component of healthy child development. Unfortunately, pressure to improve test scores resulting from educational reforms has led to misguided reductions in recess, a trend that the American Academy of Pediatrics reported in 2013 could be counterproductive to academic achievement. It also warned that withholding recess may hinder a child's ability to acquire important life skills such as communication, cooperation, negotiation, problem solving, and perseverance, all "necessary socially structured means for managing stress."

Growing awareness of the harmful effects of social media has prompted a phone-free schools movement and a call by U.S. Surgeon General Dr. Vivek Murthy to place warning labels on social media platforms. He noted that these harms "are not a failure of willpower and parenting; they are the consequence of unleashing powerful technology without adequate safety measures, transparency or accountability."

Fortunately, people from across the political and ideological spectrum are coming together to face this important challenge—to form a united front in promoting online safety and healthy child development.

Park farmers market reaps what it sows

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK — Vegetables from Michelle Whittaker's garden are as home-grown as they get.

"I turned my backyard into a farm," she said. "I have about eight grow-beds. I cordoned off a section with gates for tomatoes, cucumbers and squash."

Whittaker, owner of Luv Roots, came from her house-now-farm in Redford Township last Saturday to set up a shop at the farmers market on lower Kercheval.

"I sell at other markets and got a call asking if I'd be interested in Grosse Pointe," she said. "Absolutely."

Customer Zoë

Masterpole of Detroit bought enough basil to make caprese sandwiches.

"We were in the neighborhood," said her husband, Arron Sepulveda. "There are nice shops to visit. We saw the farmers market was happening and needed things for home. Lucky enough, there were things we found here."

To complete the recipe, all they had to do was turn to a neighboring stand where the people from Cheese to Please on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods displayed products from the trunk of a Volkswagen Beetle.

For bread, another turn to Hillside Hearth bakery, also based on Mack in the Woods.

Owner and baker Kevin Rentenbach said he gets up at 2 a.m. to prepare fresh products for the day.

"Bread, croissants — we try to bring top-sellers to the market," he said.

"There are wonderful

"It's quite a drive, but it's worth it to check out new things and opportunities," Tavia Whittaker said.

"So far, it's been a wonderful experience."

products," said Eva Dunwoody, a Park resident buying a ham and cheese croissant.

She's a fan of the market.

"It supports the neighborhood," Dunwoody said. "It's walkable. Very nice."

"I thought it would be a great business opportunity to branch out and get more customers," Rentenbach said.

Whittaker named her company with help from artificial intelligence.

"I put in what I wanted the company to represent — loving, organic, things like that — and it shot out 15 or 20 names," she said. "I love rooting, so that one stuck out."

For Eva Dunwoody, part of the market's appeal is being within walking distance of her house. She bought a croissant from Kevin Rentenbach, owner-baker of Hillside Hearth on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Silent vigil in Woods

June 7 was Wear Orange Day in honor of victims and survivors of gun violence.

Around two dozen people showed up for a silent vigil in front of Grosse Pointe Woods city hall on Friday, June 7.

Attendees wore orange and placed signs that read, Uvalde, Columbine, Sandy Hook, Oxford, Pulse, Parkland and Las Vegas. Some held signs with the name of who they were wearing orange for.

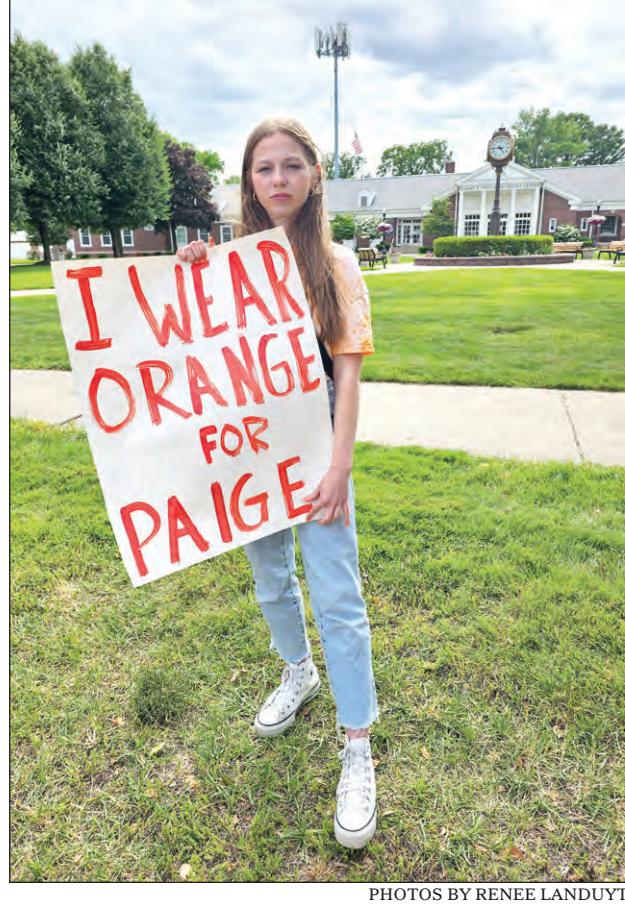

The people who attended the silent vigil came together with a simple message: there's more we can do to end gun violence. We wear orange to symbolize the immeasurable value of a human life. Orange is the prominent color for gun violence prevention awareness.

Dawana Davis, Arielle Anderson's mom, and Micaela Fraser and Mary Fraser, Brian Fraser's sister and mom, carry signs saying they wear orange for their children and brother who were killed in the shooting at Michigan State University on Feb. 13, 2023.

"My parents and I will continue to fight for an end to gun violence in hopes that no other family will have to experience the pain that we feel," Micaela Fraser said.

"Despite the fact that my amazing daughter Arielle is an angel in Heaven, I will continue to fight for her and other victims of gun violence," Davis said. "This must end."

Mariissa Ford holds a sign saying, "I wear orange for Paige" in honor of Paige Stalker whose life was cut short by gun violence in 2014, when 30 rounds of bullets were fired into the car she was in with three other kids.

the Planning Commission scheduled a public hearing next month about the latest proposed updates to the zoning ordinance.

Members anticipate hearing mostly about short-term rentals.

The ifs, whys, wheres and hows of whether short-term rentals should be allowed, regulated or banned in the city has generated the bulk of public comment during months of commission meetings, city council meetings and community engagement sessions while the ordinance is revised to address modern issues.

Latest updates are the main topic during a hearing scheduled 7 p.m. Monday, July 22, at City Hall.

"I don't think it's going to be the last one," said Warren Rothe, commission secretary and assistant city manager.

"We're close to getting to the finish line on a good deal of this ordinance." According to the draft. On the other hand, principal-residence, or owner-occupied, operations would be allowed in commercial and residential districts.

Both must meet municipal licensing standards in addition to state laws. Both also are treated in the draft as legal, nonconforming uses. Proprietors hoping to open new ones must win over the commission.

The draft proposes to allow investor-owned STRs already operating in residential districts to continue doing so — under a practice called grandfathering — but forbids the establishment of new ones. Such terms are intended to eventually rid residential neighborhoods of investor-owned SRTs by attrition.

"No new ones would be allowed, ever," Rothe

the Planning Commission scheduled a public hearing next month about the latest proposed updates to the zoning ordinance.

Commissioners discussed the third and current draft of the ordinance June 17. Only two members of the public attended, both regulars with nothing new to say.

Short-term rentals are defined as any dwelling rented or sublet on a premises for 28 days or less.

Section 3.14 of the draft separates short-term rentals into two categories based on ownership and whether the owner lives on the rental property or elsewhere.

"One is investor-owned, the other is principal residence," Rothe said. "Investor-owned is where the principal resident is not the owner of the property. A principal resident owner is a principal resident."

Investor-owned STRs would be allowed only in commercial districts, according to the draft. On the other hand, principal-residence, or owner-occupied, operations would be allowed in commercial and residential districts.

Both must meet municipal licensing standards in addition to state laws. Both also are treated in the draft as legal, nonconforming uses. Proprietors hoping to open new ones must win over the commission.

Delgado new principal at North, other positions to be filled

By Ted O'Neil
Associate Editor

Sara Delgado

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — Sara Delgado, principal at Parcells Middle School for the past year, will assume the same position at Grosse Pointe North High School after being approved by the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education at its meeting Tuesday, June 18.

She replaces Kate Murray, who resigned earlier this month.

"Not only am I excited for her to further her professional career but also to bring her exceptional talents to the North team," Superintendent Andrea Tuttle said in announcing Delgado. "She has consistently and effectively demonstrated positive leadership and possesses all the necessary qualifications."

Delgado spent 12 years with GPPSS, starting in 2007, before resigning in 2019 due to her husband's job transfer. She began as a traveling Spanish teacher and taught at Monteith Elementary School before serving as principal at Kerby Elementary School.

"I appreciate the confidence from you and from the board of education," she said at last week's board meeting. "The students, staff, parents and community members at Parcells have been nothing short of amazing and I will continue to be connected to Parcells as a parent there and will work with the new principal to ensure a smooth transition for them."

Delgado and her husband, Alejandro, live in the Woods with their three children, two of whom will be at North in the fall and one at Parcells.

When Delgado resigned in 2019, it was due to her husband being named chief financial officer at General Motors Mexico in Mexico City. When COVID hit and he was able to work remotely, they returned to their home in the Woods.

She coordinated the OneGP virtual learning program for GPPSS during the 2020-21 school year, then spent two years as director of elementary instruction for Fraser Public Schools before being appointed principal at Parcells.

"One thing I seek to bring on a daily basis in any school community is a sense of calm," she said. "Grosse Pointe North has been led by a strong team of administrators and teachers for a long time. My No. 1 goal is to maintain that tradition of rigor and excellence while offering all of our stakeholders a sense of stability and continuity during this transition."

Delgado said Parcells families have reached out to her after hearing the news.

"The general consensus is that they're disappointed to see me go, but are glad in a couple of years their kids will be back under my care," she said. "Having those relationships will make their transition to high school easier."

The district now has to fill the remaining administrator vacancies at North. Assistant Principal Katy Vernier is set to become the new principal at Kerby, while Michelle Davis and Geoffrey Young resigned as athletic director/assistant principal and assistant principal, respectively.

Tuttle said about 50 people applied for those positions and roughly 11 were interviewed for both.

"Our interview process has been inclusive and comprehensive, including coaches, parents, central office, teachers and staff," Tuttle said.

After three rounds of interviews, Tuttle said the district has reached a consensus on who they plan to offer the positions to, including two external candidates, but cannot name them as reference and background checks are still being performed.

Tuttle did say Kevin Shubnell will be offered either the athletic director or assistant principal role, based on what the team needs. He has been serving the past two years as North's dean of culture and community and varsity baseball coach.

"He applied for both positions and has been very humble and gracious and said he'll go wherever needed," Tuttle said. "When I announced his potential placement to the North team, it was met with a resounding ovation."

The board voted 7-0 to allow Tuttle to make an offer to Shubnell for one of the positions. The vote was 6-1 giving Tuttle the same authority on the remaining positions. Trustee Valarie St. John was opposed, saying she preferred having a special meeting to further discuss those offers.

Tuttle said the principal position at Parcells has been posted, but there might be a need to appoint an interim.

"We are committed to making sure Parcells is in highly capable hands, as it has been," she said.

Windows repaired

Trombly Elementary School's broken windows are fixed. A photo in last week's Grosse Pointe News showed plywood covering nine of the vacant school's rear-facing, first-floor windows. This week, appearances are back to normal. "We have a great facilities director, Ben Matteson," said Ahmed Ismail, a member of the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education. "He jumped on the project and arranged to have the windows replaced." A repair crew also installed clear protective sheeting over each formerly broken window. "Ben does a phenomenal job for us," Ismail said. "I don't know what we'd do without him."

schools," she said. "Parents want to know that information. I'd also argue in this situation that we've been paying for three superintendents. As much as I appreciate Dr. Tuttle, she is paid one of the top superintendent salaries in the state. That's a slap in the face when we're only giving teachers a 1 percent raise."

Worden was referring to the fact former Superintendent Jon Dean was paid $195,000 as part of his separation agreement when he retired last summer and the district paid Christian Fenton to act as interim superintendent for five months.

How to combat the summer slide

With summer here, parents and educators face the perennial challenge of the "summer slide," where students lose some of the academic progress they made during the school year. English Language Arts (ELA) skills are particularly vulnerable to this regression. However, technology offers innovative solutions to keep young minds engaged and prevent this backslide. One such solution is using generative AI, such as ChatGPT, to create student-specific literature tailored to individual interests, making daily reading both enjoyable and educational.

The Promise of Student-Generated Literature

Imagine a typical student moving from fifth to sixth grade. This student, like many others, has unique interests and a vivid imagination. By leveraging generative AI, parents can help generate original stories that captivate their child's attention. For instance, if the student is excited about an upcoming swim meet between the Gators and the Norbs, generative AI can create a story set around this event. The narrative could include the buildup to the meet, the excitement of the competition and the camaraderie between teammates. This personalized approach ensures the student remains engaged and motivated to read every day.

Engaging Daily Reading

Setting aside 15 to 30 minutes a day for reading is a manageable and effective strategy. With generative AI, parents can produce short stories or chapters that align with their child's interests. Here's how it can work:

- ◆ Short Fiction: Stories about fantastical adventures, such as a young wizard discovering a hidden lair beneath their school in the Scottish Highlands.

- ◆ Historical Contexts: Narratives set in different historical periods, like two young detectives solving mysteries in ancient Egypt.

- ◆ Hobbies and Interests: Stories based on the child's hobbies, such as a tale about a robotics competition or a thrilling swim meet between the Gators and the Norbs.

Reading two or three prompts, each generating a few paragraphs, can take about 15 to 30 minutes, depending on the child's reading speed and comprehension level. This daily reading habit helps maintain and improve their ELA skills over the summer.

Enhancing ELA Skills Through Enjoyable Practices

Using generative AI to create student-specific literature not only keeps children engaged but also enhances essential ELA skills:

- ◆ Vocabulary Acquisition: Generative AI can introduce new words within the context of a story. For example, if the story is about a swim meet, words like "competition," "relay," and "freestyle" can be highlighted. AI can provide definitions and usage examples, helping students learn new words in context.

- ◆ Sequencing: AI can generate questions to assess understanding of the story's sequence. After reading, the AI can ask, "What happened first at the swim meet? How did the Norbs prepare for the final race? What was the outcome of the relay?"

- ◆ Inference: AI also can create questions that require students to infer meaning or predict outcomes, enhancing critical-thinking skills. Students could be asked,

"Why do you think the Norbs chose to practice in secret? What do you think will happen in the next swim meet?"

Research supports the importance of maintaining reading habits over the summer. According to a study by the Northwest Evaluation Association, students who read regularly during the summer maintain or even improve their reading skills, while those who do not can lose two to three months of reading progress.

Gradually Increasing Complexity

As students become more comfortable with these practices, parents can gradually increase the complexity of the tasks. With generative AI, it's easy to adjust the difficulty level by specifying the reading grade level. Here are some ways generative AI can help increase complexity:

- ◆ Reading Level Adjustment: Instruct the AI to "write the story at a fifth-grade reading level" or "write the story at a sixth-grade reading level." This change will naturally incorporate more complex vocabulary and sentence structures appropriate for each level.

- ◆ Example for Fifth Grade: "The Gators practiced every day for the big competition. They were excited and a little nervous."

- ◆ Example for Sixth Grade: "The Gators trained daily for the upcoming contest. They felt both excitement and a bit of anxiety."

- ◆ Increasing Vocabulary Difficulty: The AI can use more challenging words appropriate for higher grade levels.

- ◆ Example: For fifth grade, the story might use "competition" and "team." For sixth grade, it could use "tournament" and "squad."

Balancing Traditional and Generated Reading

While generative AI offers a wealth of personalized and engaging content, it also is important to balance it with traditional reading. Classic literature, non-fiction books and even comics provide diverse perspectives and writing styles that enrich a student's reading experience.

Encouraging a mix of AI-generated stories and traditional books can help foster a well-rounded reader.

Additionally, balancing screen time with paper reading is vital for young readers. Printing AI-generated stories for paper reading can reduce screen strain and offer a tactile reading experience. Furthermore, generative AI's capability to read stories aloud provides an auditory dimension to learning, benefiting auditory learners and offering a break from screen exposure.

Preventing the summer slide in ELA skills is a challenge that can be effectively addressed with the help of technology. By using generative AI to create student-specific literature, parents can establish a daily reading routine that is both enjoyable and educational. This approach not only keeps children engaged but also enhances essential ELA skills, ensuring they return to school in the fall ready to excel. Embracing this innovative method, balanced with traditional reading, can transform summer reading from a chore into an adventure, fostering a lifelong love of learning.

Existing owner-occupied STRs also are grandfathered, yet new ones are allowed in all residential districts, from multi-family to estate.

"New ones would be allowed only as a special land use in any residential zoning district," Rothe told commissioners.

"It would be through the special land use process. There would be a public hearing and (alerting) neighbors (by mail). (Applicants) come before this body. Those would be the only ones allowed in residential zones going forward. The only short-term rentals (allowed) in a residential district in Grosse Pointe Park would be principal residence ones as a special land use."

There is no proposed cap or limit on the number of such businesses allowed to operate in the city.

"We would be eliminating a cap, because the only way it would ever grow would be on a case-by-case basis," Rothe said. "In our next meeting, we'll have our attorney here and (the ordinance) will be more flushed out."

Chairman Patrick Coletta, an attorney, asked Rothe to clarify the definition of an owner-occupied STR in the multiple housing districts.

"If you own a quad and live in one of the units in the quad, the other three are good, right?" Coletta asked. "That's what we mean as principal residence?"

"Yes," Rothe answered.

"It's not the tax definition of a principal residence?" asked Coletta.

No, Rothe said.

Commissioner and financial planner Michael Vethacke asked rhetorically whether an owner-occupied STR can maintain operations upon the property's sale to another party.

"The license doesn't transfer?" he asked.

Rothe said the license wouldn't transfer.

"I'm super reluctant to comment on hypothetical drafts until we see an actual draft," said Commissioner Kristin Taylor, an associate professor of political science at Wayne State University. "Before we look at a closer-to-final draft, we need some kind of estimate of how many (STRs) do we think are around here?"

"I think there is about 40ish — ish," said Commissioner Jimmy Saros, a Realtor.

Rothe thinks there are 30 to 40, pausing, then adding, "ish."

"That's total units, not total properties," Saros said. "Some of those are four units in one building. It's not an overwhelming amount of units."

City officials, not having regulated STRs until preparing to do so now, don't have a tally of the number operating.

"Do you have a sense of how many are investor-owned versus primary resident?" Taylor asked her colleagues.

"I don't," Saros said. "The only way we can figure it out is through this (ordinance). They (owners and operators) have to apply."

Rothe said he modeled the draft after an Ann Arbor ordinance.

"They did in 2021, except not a special land use," he said. "This (the Park version) is stricter."

Friendly competition with a twist

By Jody McVeigh

Editor

When Dan Paterek made his annual trek to Lansing this year, his usual load was quite a bit heavier, thanks to a few friends.

The Grosse Pointe Woods resident this spring donated 645.1 pounds—yes, pounds—of pull tabs to Ronald McDonald House. The nonprofit works with a local recycler to turn those tabs into money to fund its programming, which provides accommodations to families whose critically ill children are being treated at nearby hospitals.

"They can operate for a month on what they receive in scrap aluminum," Paterek said.

According to Ronald McDonald House, it takes 1 million pull tabs to equal 1,000 pounds. Recycling the tabs brings 56 cents per pound.

Paterek first started collecting pull tabs in 2012, when he served as president of the Detroit Parrothead Club, a community of Jimmy Buffett fans who enjoy music, charity and social events.

Jim Racz, president of the Blue Water Parrothead Club, left, and Dan Paterek, past president of the Detroit Parrothead Club, stand amidst boxes of collected pull tabs.

"We do charitable things and decided to start collecting pull tabs," he said. "Then we got together with the Port Huron club. The president there, Jim (Racz), lost his son, so the Ronald McDonald House is near and dear to him."

In the early days, Paterek and his Detroit club, Racz and his Blue Water club and Bobbi Woods and her Lansing club would collect around 40 pounds of tabs, which representatives from each club would take to Lansing to donate. They'd have lunch, drop off the tabs and call it a day.

"That's the kind of group we are," Racz said. "It's not about a pat on the back. It's about sharing what we do with everybody."

The stakes were raised when Paterek issued a challenge to the other clubs, to see who could raise the most.

"It turned into a competition between Parrothead clubs—Blue Water, Lansing and Detroit," he said.

The Detroit club

Though 645.1 pounds is the largest batch of tabs Paterek has donated, he had some help amassing the collection.

"A friend of a friend is big into NASCAR and she had NASCAR people from around the country saving their pull tabs,"

Dan Paterek's vehicle was loaded with hundreds of pounds of pull tabs before a recent trip to Lansing.

he said. "When they come to MIS (Michigan International Speedway), everybody brings tabs."

NASCAR fan Kimberly Barg and her husband, Craig, have been collecting tabs for Paterek the past four years, amassing nearly 150 pounds the first year and gaining momentum every year since. This year's NASCAR donation tallied more than 410 pounds, with help from social media.

"I belong to the Infield @ MIS Facebook page,"

Barg said. "I decided I was going to ask for help so I posted, 'I need tabs.' It took off from there."

Barg, who works at Schuchard Elementary School in the Utica Community Schools district, also calls on her students to donate. They drop pull tabs into a bucket labeled "Kids Helping Kids," which also is turned over to Paterek.

"You don't always have money to donate, but every little tab adds up," Barg said. "It's an amazing thing what it can do for kids. And it takes two seconds out of your time."

Barg also recruited fellow Infield @ MIS member Lisa Love. The Pennsylvania resident spread the word at Holiday Campground in Andover, Ohio, and has had the same success growing her collection the last three years.

"It started with friends around a campfire pulling tabs," Love said. "We have a Facebook page on the campground and my boyfriend, Shawn, is boisterous there. He puts reminders out there."

Shawn Undercuffler also built a mailbox for pull tabs near their campsite so anyone driving by can contribute.

"There are 3,500 campgrounds on 600 acres," Love said. "A lot don't even know me personally; they just know me as the Tab Lady."

Collections take place August to August at the campground. When Love visits MIS, she brings quite a haul.

"Our last race in August, we brought 383 pounds," she said. "Every year it gets better."

"... Even my dentist gives me a little bag every six months when I see him because he knows it's important to me. If I can help one child, one family, it fulfills me."

Fourth book details world traveler's collections

By Jody McVeigh

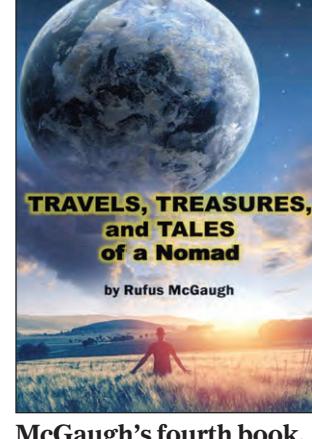

Editor

In his fourth and final book, "Travels, Treasures and Tales of a Nomad," City of Grosse Pointe resident Rufus McGaugh takes readers through the trinkets and tidbits he collected during his mission to visit every continent and country in the world.

It was a task he completed in 2017, and he has the baubles to prove it. His personal museum is nestled in his basement and every nicknack has a story—hence, his latest book.

"I still had more stories to tell," he said. "As long as I had stories, I just kept going. Now, I think I've said what I have to say about my travels, adventures and experiences."

His latest book, which is nearly double the size of his previous three, follows a similar structure. In it he shares his travel adventures in snippets and with a touch of humor. This one, however, is based on the souvenirs he collected over the years.

"I have a little museum in the basement with a lot of cool things in it," he said. "Some stuff you look at, like a coaster from Samoa, and say, 'Big deal.' ... But that coaster brought out a story, something funny."

McGaugh shares funny and not-so-funny reflections in his latest book while taking a look at "a few souvenirs, some historic items, some valuable, all quite interesting," he said. "I was on a budget; I traveled lightly. I was limited to what I could bring back. The coaster from Samoa makes me smile. It's something nice I can look back on."

Among his most notorious items is a collection of nearly 400 air-sickness bags from around the world. Among the most sentimental are trinkets he and his wife, Monica, brought back from Russia in 1996, when they adopted their son, Eric.

Photos dot the museum, including one McGaugh took of lions sleeping in trees in Tanzania, as well as photos of McGaugh during his adventures: at a Habitat for Humanity build with Jimmy and Roslyn Carter and during his highest climb—18,700 feet up the Himalayas.

He has an empty can of Billy Beer, which he drank with its namesake, Bill Carter. He has 14 passports, all but one of which has extra pages. He has a mask from Dominica, a pack of cigarettes featuring Josef Stalin, a lion tooth and claw from Africa and a host of other novelties.

Much of what he brought home he used in the classroom while teaching the political and social sciences in the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

"I have a hat collection, a hat from every country I taught," he said. "I didn't use a book when I taught. Instead, when I traveled, I would pick up the national hat."

Now retired 14 years, McGaugh is quick to point out contributions from former students, who liked to torment him by gifting him Richard Nixon paraphernalia.

"I never liked him,"

Rufus McGaugh sits among his collection while holding a photo of himself standing in Angola—one of the last countries he visited—and its Kalandula Falls.

McGaugh said of the former president. "A lot of political things (in the

Selfridge Military Air Museum receives $25,000 Ralph C. Wilson Jr. grant

On May 20, the Selfridge Military Air Museum was awarded a $25,000 Ralph C. Wilson Trustee Program Grant. The grant was presented to museum Executive Director Steven Mrozek by Jeffrey Littmann, a trustee for the Wilson Foundation. To date, it is by far the largest donation received by the museum.

Building on STEAM-based programs, the Selfridge Military Air Museum is embarking on an effort to incorporate distant learning technology and bring educational programming to Macomb County schools.

"The field of aviation is well suited for the study of STEAM objectives," Mrozek said. "Our focus will be primarily on aeronautical engineering and aviation technology, introducing students to the science of flight. This grant is a positive step in demonstrating the necessity of STEAM programs such as this."

With 106 years in service as one of the nation's oldest continually operating military airfields, Selfridge is steeped in history that chronicles not only Michigan's legacy of flight, but also the nation's history. With hundreds of exhibits, interactive learning demonstrations and a collection of aircraft and historical displays, the Selfridge Military Air Museum is one of Macomb County's hidden gems.

Base access and museum admission are required to visit. Veterans receive a reduced-price admission; active service men and women are admitted free of charge. Visitors are advised to visit selfridgeairmuseum.org at least a week in advance for additional details, including requirements and assistance for base access.

me by my students. In my classroom, Nixon was always the fall guy. ... I got all these Nixon buttons, campaign posters from the kids."

The last country McGaugh visited to "seal the deal" was war-torn Libya in 2017.

"That was one of my travel nightmares," he said. "Most of my lifetime, Libya was closed to travel. I was done (visiting every country) in 2015, except for Libya."

Though he was able to visit — "on a small plane from Tunisia in the middle of the night" — he said he didn't get to see as much of the country as he'd hoped.

"That was one of the more dangerous trips," he said, adding he did get to see "the greatest Roman ruins in the world, Leptis Magna. I was able to do that in two and a half days."

There are a few items in McGaugh's museum he's considering donating to "real" museums, including a sign he snagged while in Atlanta that reads, "This is Maddox Country," in reference to outspoken Southern segregationist Lester Maddox. He's considering donating it to the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History.

To a military museum McGaugh is considering a much more personal contribution.

"The day I was wounded in Vietnam, our unit was sent on a rescue mission to save a five-man Marine recon mission," he said. "... I was shot three times on the chopper; the worst of it was in my leg and hip.

"I had a C ration can in my cargo pants," he continued. "... The round hit the rim — the strongest part of the can. (The surgeon) said, 'It might have saved you from losing your left leg.'

"When they were digging shrapnel out of me, it took five or six hours," he added. "They give you the shrapnel as a souvenir."

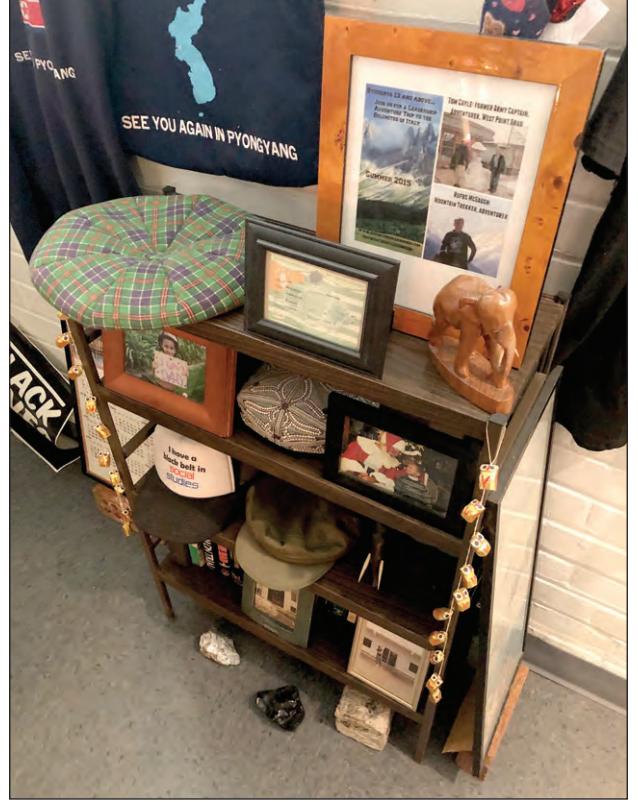

Among the shrapnel he received was a rivet from the Marine helicopter that had been pushed into his leg by a bullet.

Another item McGaugh considers of great value is one that literally was by his side the past half century: "My very own first-aid kit that goes on all trips with me since 1974," he said. "Actually it is no longer a real first-aid kit but a single Band-Aid from the kit that evolved from me attempting to pack lighter and lighter each year. Trust me, a single Band-Aid circa 1974 that has traveled to hundreds of countries in tropical weather over many years does not look too good. The writing on the cellophane wrapping disappeared long ago and I would imagine that would also be true for the adhesive on the single Band-Aid. Some very mean and cruel people who have seen this ancient artifact of an old withered Band-Aid ask, why even bother? But my answer is that you can never be too careful about your health, especially in emergencies, so the single Band-Aid tags along on every trip."

With his mission accomplished and his stories told, McGaugh has no plans to stop traveling, though he's likely to stay in the U.S.

"I've seen everything, though there are places I'd go back to," he said. "But I'd like to go out west mountaineering. ... I've seen all the great sights — canyons, redwoods, mountains — but you just never see it all."

A selection of collectibles from McGaugh's travels includes a chain of owls wrapped in gold foil — considered good luck in Burma — and a chunk of black obsidian from Armenia.

"Travels, Treasures and Tales of a Nomad" is available on amazon.com. Copies also are available at McGaugh's house.

ENGAGEMENT

Michael Gula and Ariana Conti

Gula—Conti

Gary and Cindy Gula of Grosse Pointe Shores announce the engagement of their son, Michael Gula, to Ariana Conti, the daughter of Vera Conti of Grosse Pointe Woods and Gary Conti.

Mr. Gula earned a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from Western Michigan University. He is a builder.

Miss Conti earned a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from the Stephen M. Ross School of Business at the University of Michigan. She is an account executive with UiPath.

An August 2024 wedding is planned.

Third annual Living Donor Awareness Night is Friday, June 28

The third annual Living Donor Awareness Night takes place at 7:05 p.m. Friday, June 28, during a baseball game at Jimmy John's Field in Utica.

Sponsored by Henry Ford Health and the Living Liver Foundation, the event will honor living donors, educate the public about living donation and inspire more donation. The game will be followed by fireworks. More than 30 living kidney donors and living liver donors will sit together behind home plate.

Several other special moments are planned:

- ◆ The national anthem will be sung by the niece of a living donor recipient.

- ◆ A living donor transplant recipient and his pre-transplant nurse/coordinator will throw out the first pitch.

- ◆ After the first inning, an altruistic living donor and recipient will meet for the first time on the field.

- ◆ Throughout the game, Henry Ford Health and the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan will staff information tables where the public can learn more about living donation.

Public service announcements on the scoreboard also will share advancements in living liver transplant and living kidney transplant.

- ◆ Between two innnings, living donors and recipients will be invited onto the field, the names of the living donors will be read and they will be honored as the game's hometown heroes.

- ◆ During the game, living donors will participate in a prize drawing. The grand prize is a cabana suite rental for a future game as well as a gift basket.

Approximately 104,000 Americans are on the transplant list awaiting an organ. Of those, most are waiting for a kidney or liver, but there aren't enough donations from deceased donors to meet the need. Living donation helps fill the gap.

In 2023, there were 2,637 living kidney donations and 658 living liver donations. Many people know of the option to donate a kidney, but many don't know a living donor can donate a portion of their liver. After donation, the donor's liver and recipient's new liver grow back to full size in about two months.

Tickets for the ball-game are available and range from $6 to $20. To purchase tickets, visit uspb.com/single-game-ticket-sales-in-detroit-mi or call the box office at (248) 759-5278.

LWV hosting candidate forum

The League of Women Voters, Grosse Pointe, partnering with the League of Women Voters, Detroit, will conduct a virtual candidate forum for the Michigan House of Representatives, 13th District on Tuesday, July 9. The forum will feature the following candidates: Republican Martell D. Bivings and Democrats Shakira Lynn Hawkins, Shri Thanedar and Mary Waters.

This forum is not open to the public. The session will be recorded and may be viewed on the League's YouTube channel on or after July 10.

The public is encouraged to submit questions for the candidates.

Due to time constraints, the League may prioritize or combine questions based on general interest and a goal of avoiding redundancy. The question submission form is available on the League's website at lwvgrossepoinete.org.

The deadline to submit questions is Monday, July 8th at noon.

Nonpartisan candidate forums are part of LWV history. Leagues around the country continue to hold debates and forums for local and state offices.

Additionally, voters can find information about any candidate on the League of Women Voters nonpartisan Voter Guide at Vote411.org as of June 27.

Group effort

Since issuing the challenge, the Detroit, Blue Water and Lansing Parrothead clubs all have been awarded million-tab certificates. Blue Water already has received a multimillion-tab certificate.

This year, Paterek would have received his first multimillion-tab certificate, but plans changed.

"I called Lansing and said, 'Let's surprise Dan,'" Racz said. "Let's donate to Skeeter, but we won't tell Dan until we get there."

Skeeter, aka Elise Paterek, was Dan Paterek's wife who passed away from lung cancer in 2019.

"We decided to give all our tabs to Skeeter to get her name on the board," Racz said. "She was part of this, going to Ronald McDonald House in Lansing. We were already a million-tab club, so let's get her in the million-tab club."

The three clubs combined donated 1,328.9 pounds of pull tabs in Elise Paterek's name.

"She always supported the whole pull tabs thing," Paterek said. "She was part of the team. She was always active in Parrothead and pulling tabs, collecting. Her smile would light up the room."

The Blue Water club contributed 549.1 pounds of pull tabs this year; Racz gets help from Port Huron-area organizations like American Legion, 4H clubs, schools and others.

"A lot of people know me," he said. "It's not for me though; it's for the club."

"... We have no religious affiliation, no political affiliation with anyone," Racz added. "We say we're a party."

with a purpose. We do what we want to, not what we're asked to do. Ronald McDonald House is close to my heart."

Racz and his family lived at Ronald McDonald House nearly 11 years while his son was receiving treatments.

"My son had epileptic seizures and was wheelchair bound for his whole life," Racz said. "He lived only 11 years. They took care of us."

He began collecting pull tabs his first day there, after noticing a canister near a Coke machine.

"Now it's my passion," Racz said. "I do it in memory of my son, but I also do it for families at Ronald McDonald House. They do an awesome job. This little bit of money helps them out."

While the three clubs' collection raked in more than $750 for Ronald McDonald House, it's a slow process. A gallon bag holds 2.5 pounds;

Paterek uses his bathroom scale to weigh the tabs.

He also regularly receives pull tabs in the mail from as far as Toronto and Florida. He sometimes comes home to bags of pull tabs on his front porch. Not to men-

"It's fun; it's not about the money," Paterek said. "It's something fun and easy to do—to help kids, help families. It's about the camaraderie."

Added Racz, "It doesn't take much to do what we do. Whether it's a snack-size bag or a pound bag, every little bit makes a difference and helps out a great organization."

Remember to include some dressy attire for your romantic getaway

Our first days as a newly-minted official twosome deserve more than shorts and tees. Wherever you might be jetting off to, whether a tropical paradise or a historic European adventure, be sure to pack a few upscale togs for an elegant, romantic dinner or two — or anywhere that a little more formality is apropos.

Dressing up need not be stuffy. Looking your finest while enjoying a relaxed fit and comfortable fabrics gives you the best of both worlds. We've assembled some top-drawer ensembles and beautiful accessories that will fill the bill.

We didn't have to look far into Grosse Pointe to find the chic we were seeking! Capricious, Village Palm and Iris all had stunning finds for the ladies to dance the night away under the stars with their new hubbies. Grosse Pointe Woods' Rimanelli's Custom Tailor had just the right touch for the men to present themselves at their best for their new brides.

From clothing to stylish accessories, it's great inspiration for remembering to take along a few of the elegant outfits that will linger in your minds for many anniversaries to come.

Happy honeymooning!

Eastside Catholic Eucharistic Procession

More than 400 individuals of all ages gathered for a Eucharistic procession along the shores of Lake St. Clair on Sunday, June 2. The Eastside Catholic Eucharistic Procession brought together parishioners and students from across the community, marking an unforgettable day of faith and unity.

Participants from at least eight parishes — St. Clare of Montefalco, Grosse Pointe Memorial, St. Paul on the Lake, St. Joan of Arc, Our Lady Star of the Sea, St. Matthew, St. Ambrose and St. Lucy churches — joined the event. Additionally, students from De La Salle Collegiate and Regina high schools took part, further emphasizing the communal spirit of the day.

The procession began at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, with participants walking prayerfully and joyfully along the lakeside streets of Grosse Pointe. The event culminated at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church with a solemn benediction.

The church was filled to standing-room-only capacity, a testament to the devotion of those in attendance.

Following the benediction, Knights of Columbus councils sponsored a hospitality gathering, allowing participants to reflect on the significance of their faith and the unity it fosters.

The success of this event was made possible through the collaboration of local public safety officials, pastors, parish staff and numerous volunteers. Their efforts ensured a safe, well-organized and spiritually enriching experience for all involved.

The Eastside Catholic Eucharistic Procession was not only a celebration of faith, but also a reminder of the strength and unity within the community. Organizers said the sight of hundreds walking together in devotion along Lake St. Clair will be remembered as a blessing for all who participated and witnessed this profound display of faith.

Above, the procession proceeds along Lakeshore toward Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church. Below, participants join from at least eight parishes.

Summer carillon concerts at Memorial Church

Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, presents its annual Summer Carillon Recital Series on four Tuesday evenings in July. These recitals are played on the church's carillon, a set of 48 tower bells. Each concert begins at 6:30 p.m.

Concert-goers are invited to listen from anywhere on or near the church campus. Some listeners bring a picnic dinner to enjoy during the music. This year, ice cream treats will be available for purchase from a Captain Kool Ice Cream Truck before

Memorial invites children to 'Scuba VBS: Diving Into Friendship with God'

A summer kids' event called "Scuba VBS" will be hosted at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, from Aug. 19 to 23, for children in kindergarten through eighth grade.

Children will dive deep into an undersea adventure where they'll experience the ever-flowing, never-ending love of God.

For children entering kindergarten through fourth grade, VBS takes place 9 a.m. to noon, offering games, music, art and Bible study.

Middle school youth are invited for a full day of activities from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. They will serve as counselors in training in the morning, assisting adult volunteers in classrooms. After lunch, they will go off-site to enjoy activities like a TreeRunner ropes course and miniature golf.

Further details on pricing and registration are available online at gpmchurch.org/scuba-vbs or by calling the church offices at (313) 882-5330.

WE HAVE AN ARTS MINISTRY

Pointe native produces documentary about dance

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

In the trailer for "Shake These Bones," a documentary produced by Grosse Pointe native Amy Sewell, one of the subjects sums up the purpose of the film: "Someone asked, 'Is what we do essential?' Dance might not be essential to survival, or the arts in general, but they are essential in order for us to live."

The documentary follows Gibney Dance from March 2020, as it embarks on its first major expansion — doubling the size of its ensemble — through its navigation of the pandemic. The company's dancers not only are devoted to the arts, but also to giving back through social justice causes.

Sewell, who describes the film as "Fame" meets "Glee," was hesitant to get on board.

The documentary culminates with the company's performance at the Joyce Theater.

tary about contemporary dancers.

Sewell's "Mad Hot Ballroom," about the arts in public schools, earned many accolades following its 2005 premier.

"We were the little engine that could; a Cinderella story come true," she said.

Menzies also wanted the film to give back in some capacity.

As founder and executive director of The Ready Foundation, Menzies works with at-risk and under-served groups in tive and experimental films.

Following that connection, the project was launched.

"We had a meeting in December and by January, we had two-thirds of the funding," Sewell said. "Filming began in February 2020.

"There were 2,000 applicants from around the world," she continued.

"Six hundred of them were interviewed, 200 were invited to rehearsal and six people were picked to expand the company."

"Shake These Bones" examines the trials and triumphs of the dance company as they prepare for a world premiere program at the Joyce Theater. It includes snippets of dance, as well as a social justice angle as the company's dancers each contribute their talents and time to social causes.

said. "It has a great cast and crew — 12 dancers from all over the world. Reel Works came in with a junior workforce. (Cinematographer) Daniel Kharlak, (Associate Editor) Gerson Legend, (Associate Producer) Liam Mejia all came up from Reel Works.

"I agreed to work for free," she continued. "Any proceeds will be split between The Ready Foundation and Reel Works, which floats my boat knowing the money will be going to two great causes."

"We're getting such great press, attention, accolades, it's almost driving itself," she added. "I'm proud because the content speaks for itself. It's a great film that shows that dance is essential. It's like going to church: I would like everyone to see it and feel at peace. Whether it gets a deal to help contribute to two amazing nonprofits — Reel Works and The Ready Foundation — so be it. It's really just a beautiful film to feel at peace with while watching."

Sewell, who currently lives in New York but fondly recalls her formative years in Grosse Pointe, credits her Grosse Pointe Public School System education for her success.

"My roots always go back to the people that supported me and my dreams," she said. "I can't thank my teachers enough — Mr. Barr, Mr. Harchick, Mr. Ebert. I don't think I would have gone down this path to write and paint, which I combined to be a filmmaker. Growing up in Grosse Pointe, I can think of a million things about it, but it is home."

While "Shake These Bones" is Sewell's last documentary, she doesn't plan to stop putting her creativity to good use. Her attentions now are turned to releasing her next book, a thriller titled, "The Hole in the Rabbit," due out this summer.

"Shake These Bones" was filmed during the pandemic.

"Being a producer is physically challenging," she noted. "I tend to get too involved. But I have a boring, ugly day job — professional publishing work to pay the bills — so I find myself getting into these creative projects and getting energy."

What changed Sewell's mind was speaking with Executive Producer Bethany Menzies, who approached Sewell — an experienced documentarian — to ask how to make an impactful documen-

New York City's five boroughs. Her focus is advocating for the role of strong mentors and coaches in helping to build successful careers.

Sewell saw a connection between The Ready Foundation and Reel Works, a nonprofit which with she's been affiliated the past 20 years. Reel Works helps underserved children by offering after-school programs that pair teens with professional filmmaker/mentors to create documentaries, narra-

"It's athletic," Sewell said. "There's sweat and grit that goes into building a dance company. And they're social justice warriors. The dancers are beautiful. It's nice to see them on the big screen and listen to their stories."

"Shake These Bones" had its premier at the 2024 Big Apple Film Festival in New York and was selected to appear at the 2024 Seattle Film Festival.

"I would love it to be a theatrical release," Sewell

Florence Miller Award

Isabella Boedecker of Grosse Pointe North High School and Urania Meyers-Magkanaris of Grosse Pointe South High School have shown outstanding leadership, as well as community service and academic excellence, making them this year's recipients of the Florence Miller Award, given by Chapter AO, Grosse Pointe of the international Philanthropic Education Organization, or P.E.O.

The local award given to high school juniors at the school year's completion also helps contribute to fees for college applications the rising seniors will be working on this summer and fall.

The award is named for the late Grosse Pointe educator Miller, who was an active leader in Chapter AO, as well as an active community member, teacher and assistant principal at Grosse Pointe North.

Johanna M. Gilbert Scholarship

Mikinzi Allen, a 2024 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, was awarded the Johanna M. Gilbert Scholarship for Outstanding Achievement in the Art from Chapter AO of the Philanthropic Educational Organization in Grosse Pointe.

The harpist, who will attend Oberlin College in Ohio, was recognized not only for her musical talent, but also her involvement in many activities and outstanding academic success.

The award honors the late Johanna Gilbert, who was a dedicated member of P.E.O. Chapter AO, which supports educational goals and achievements of women. Gilbert, a talented performer and community volunteer, left a legacy scholarship administered by her daughter, Melanie, through Chapter AO to support Grosse Pointe South High School seniors as they further their musical and academic careers.

Vivian Rizer receives Star Scholarship

Women helping women achieve their educational goals is a mission of Chapter AO of the international P.E.O. Sisterhood. The chapter recently announced this year's local senior nominee won a competitive national scholarship.

Vivian Rizer, a graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School, is the P.E.O. recipient of a $2,500 Star Scholarship, given in recognition of leadership, academics, extracurricular activities as well as community service. Rizer will attend Calvin College in Grand Rapids and also swim for the Calvin College team.

Celebrating Nicholas

Many friends, family and Grosse Pointe Academy faculty members turned up to celebrate the 25th birthday of Nicholas Bojarczyk on his actual birthday Saturday, June 8.

As part of the celebration, a ginkgo tree and bench were commemorated on the front lawn of The Grosse Pointe Academy.

Bojarczyk, a Farms resident and Academy alumnus, was killed by a drunken driver June 24, 2022, when he was 23 years old.

"This school meant the world to him," mother Jennifer Bojarczyk said. "This community meant the world to him."

"Nicholas was my north, my south, my east, my west, my Sunday best. He was that to everybody and he will remain that to everybody.

"We take solace in knowing that he is with God. I thank God every morning that I had 23 beautiful years with him."

A Grosse Pointe Academy scholarship in Nicholas' name is forthcoming.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Susie Rohde, LMSW

It all belongs

Mental health data over the last decade shows that record numbers of kids report persistent feelings of sadness, anxiety and hopelessness and that mental health issues have been further exacerbated since the pandemic. There are many contributing factors, among them our culture's focus on performance and the excessive use of social media. Paradoxically, another stressor can be parents' focus on their children's happiness. Though well-intentioned, this may be counterproductive to children's well-being in the long term.

As parents, we understandably want our kids to be happy. Optimism and positivity are traits that contribute to satisfaction and competency across all life areas. Focusing too exclusively on happiness, however, can actually undermine our children's ability to identify and manage the complicated or painful emotions they inevitably experience.

It is difficult as parents to watch our children struggle, but there are risks in trying to move them to a positive place too quickly, rather than observing or validating where they are. Children can mistakenly internalize the idea that they are supposed to feel happy or satisfied all the time. They learn to mask or deny undesirable or negative feelings, or to seek unhealthy coping habits to numb their discomfort.

They need room to attend to the negative landscape, learn how to tolerate the difficult emotions and trust themselves to regulate them or reset in a constructive way.

There are costs to neglecting our negative emotions. There are also gifts in observing them:

◆ When we identify feelings like anger or grief, we have more control over how they take shape. Being aware of what's driving us is the difference between being intentional or reactive.

◆ Negative emotions can help us problem solve. For example, anxiety can motivate us, anger can prompt us to have boundaries or set limits, and envy may help us clarify what we want for ourselves.

◆ Our capacity for empathy, compassion, intimacy and resolving differences is enhanced through our ability to identify and express our needs and emotions.

Helping our children foster happiness and positivity is important. But realistically, it all belongs. Our wide emotional range — with all the good and bad that comes with it — is invaluable in navigating life's difficulties, developing our competencies, recovering from disappointment, and pursuing what is meaningful to us.

Our resilience comes from our challenges.

POINTING YOU IN
DIRECTION WITH REAL-LIFE ADVICE!

How can I break the chains of my work phone?

Dear Gabby: I can't get off my phone for work, always getting texts and having to read documents, etc.

My children see this and I'm sure they just assume it's fine to be chained to your phone all day. How can I stop this madness?

—Phone-cuffed in the Farms

Dear Phone-cuffed, Try choosing a block of time during the day (after school might work best) where you are decidedly NOT on your phone.

You could also suggest to coworkers (and bosses) that they call you if there is anything pressing — no texts or emails. There will be no reason for you to check your phone, as it will ring if you are needed. That way, you can put in some serious QT with the kids, minus the technology.

After you have given your children the time and attention you feel is appropriate, excuse yourself to your office or bedroom to catch up on anything you may have missed.

Confess my feelings or stay silent about my work crush?

DEAR ANNIE: I have been employed at this local government agency for years and have had the pleasure of working closely with "Catie" for the past four years.

While we are not in the same department, we have collaborated on numerous projects and have developed a close friendship.

Over the course of our friendship, I have come to care deeply for Catie. I have hinted at my feelings on occasion, and she has been receptive to them. However, I have never taken any physical advances, as we are both happily married.

Recently, I have been feeling dishonest with her by not directly discussing my feelings for her. I believe that it is important to be open and honest with her about what I have been going through, and I would like to make a confession to her in order to clear my mind and conscience.

I hope that you can provide me with some guidance on how to approach this situation in a respectful manner. — Mutual Caring Friends.

DEAR MUTUAL CARING FRIENDS: Interesting that you care so much about honesty with Catie, yet you deny your wife that same courtesy. If you really want to clear your conscience, drop the work crush and start focusing on your "happy marriage."

DEAR ANNIE: I'm in quite the pickle and need your guidance. My husband, "Peter," and I have been married for eight years, and while our relationship has always been strong, I've recently found myself in an unexpected situation.

About six months ago, my old college friend, "Scott," moved back to town. We were close back then, and catching up with him has been wonderful. The problem is, sparks have flown between us in a way I didn't expect.

Scott is charming, funny, and reminds me of a time when life felt simpler and more exciting. We've started meeting up for coffee and the occasional lunch, but it's clear there's a deeper connection forming. I haven't crossed any physical boundaries, but emotionally, I feel torn. I love Peter deeply and don't want to hurt him, but the feelings I have for Scott are confusing and strong.

Peter hasn't noticed anything, but I feel guilty and anxious all the time. I don't want to end my marriage, but I also can't seem to let go of these feelings for Scott. Is it possible to have feelings for two people at once?

How do I navigate this without causing a disaster? I don't want to lose my friend, but I also don't want to betray my husband.

Please help me figure out what to do before this situation spirals out of control. — Conflicted in Colorado

DEAR CONFLICTED: Emotional affairs can be just as damaging as physical ones, and your guilt is a clear sign. You're playing with fire every minute you continue flirting and rekindling a connection with Scott.

Remember, infatuation can be temporary. The commitment you made to your husband is not.

We Tried It!

If you've been reading this column for some time now, you know how much I love my Kindle. I got it as a gift almost exactly a year ago and I'm on my 16th book so far in 2024. I absolutely love the convenience of the Kindle, the ability to download books in an instant and how easy it is to travel with.

I usually read every night before bed. Once I'm in my bed, all cozied up under 17 blankets, the last thing I want to do is reach out from underneath the covers to tap the screen and turn the page. I know, first-world problems.

It's been a minor inconvenience for some time now, but I didn't really mind it all that much. But when my friend called and told me she ordered an electronic page-turner for her Kindle on Amazon, you bet I had it ordered before our phone call ended.

After using the page turner for more than two months now, I am a big fan of this product. It allows for hands-free reading, which is especially beneficial if you're eating, cooking or doing any task that requires your hands. You can easily turn the pages without needing to touch the device at all.

With a simple click of a button on the small remote, the page is turned.

While I typically use it when I am laying down and simply too lazy to lift my arm to turn the page, I can see this being useful in many different types of situations.

For example, my grandma loves to read but has terrible arthritis. This device is super simple for her to use and allows her to enjoy her Kindle without having to swipe the screen or easily in her hand and is very user-friendly.

This device also allows readers to multitask while reading. The page turner would come in handy if you are trying to read while walking on the treadmill or any task where it is uncomfortable to raise up your arm every few seconds to turn the page.

The page turner is compact and portable. It enhances the overall reading experience greatly because readers can enjoy uninterrupted reading sessions without the hassle of manually turning pages.

While I tried it out of sheer laziness and convenience, I've found that it is a great accessory for avid readers and I am giving this product 5 out of 5 alligators.

We LOVE testing out new things! Tell us about your favorite item or something you want us to try for you! Drop us a line at media@grossepoincenews.com.

From baguettes to quiche at Hillside Hearth

From baguettes to BLTs, muffins to macarons, cookies to quiche, scones to soups and rolls to rye. Where am I?

Hillside Hearth, where sweet and savory surpass all expectations.

In 2018, when the space at 19497 Mack became available, including the massive oven used by the previous owners of Breadsmith, Kevin Rentenbach saw a possibility and his bread-baking heart told him to further inquire.

With 15 years as a chef and kitchen experience under his belt, he told himself, "Without risk, there is no reward." Fully knowing this space needed a facelift and some major renovations, Rentenbach signed the lease papers in December 2019, and Hillside Hearth was born.

Growing up, Rentenbach's grandfather owned a tool and die shop in Roseville called Hillside. He also enjoyed baking bread as a hobby out of his home and often fed the neighborhood.

"Baking with him as a child was maybe where the bread bug bit me," Rentenbach said.

Paying homage to those memories, Hillside Hearth officially opened in June 2020, smack in the middle of the pandemic.

Opening a specialty bakery is no easy task to begin with, but opening a retail-to-go type of food establishment during this specific period turned out better than expected.

Successfully providing safe and easy curbside pickup and online ordering gave Rentenbach a different advantage to welcoming the community to his new adventure.

Growing up in Grosse Pointe was an added bonus in bringing familiar faces to the new storefront, once word got out that the "open" sign was on again. You could smell the fresh bread all the way down the block. And this wasn't your typical bread.

"The plan was to bake sourdough bread and focus on traditional baking techniques — flour, salt, water," Rentenbach said.

He quickly took that up a notch with multiple styles of fresh bread baked daily. Aside from sourdough, you can choose from the perfect

Chicken kabobs with chardonnay-herb marinade and Alabama white sauce

By Olivia Monette
Guest writer

During the summer, my family spends a lot of time in Lexington. At our cottage, there isn't much to do except spend time outdoors, play board games with one another and eat.

My grandma is the absolute best at finding delicious recipes and cooking them to perfection. She always has made incredible meals my entire life and her recipes seem to get even better during the summer.

Last weekend, we had a crowd of family and friends stay at the cottage and this recipe from Southern Living magazine was the perfect dinner meal that satisfied everyone. It's easy to make in large batches, insanely delicious and a fun way to get everyone outside grilling together.

The marinade is out of this world and the Alabama white sauce elevates the entire meal. Give this one a try while the summer sun is still shining!

Chardonnay-Herb Marinade:

(makes 1½ cups of marinade)

½ cup Chardonnay

¼ cup olive oil

1 shallot minced

2 garlic cloves, finely grated

3 tbsp chopped fresh parsley

2 tbsp chopped fresh basil

1 tbsp chopped fresh thyme

1 tbsp dijon mustard

2 tsp sugar

1 tsp kosher salt

½ tsp black pepper

Chop all herbs and mince shallot.

Combine all ingredients in a bowl and whisk together.

Chicken Kabobs:

3 pounds skinless, boneless chicken thighs

8 to 10 wooden skewers

2 tbsp vegetable oil

Salt and pepper to taste

Trim excess fat from thighs. Cut each thigh lengthwise into 1 ½-inch strips.

Reserve and chill a quarter cup of desired marinade. Place chicken and remaining marinade in a large zip-top freezer bag. Seal and turn bag to coat.

Chill the chicken in the marinade for three to eight hours. Turn occasionally.

Preheat grill to 350 to 400 degrees. Remove chicken from marinade. Pat chicken dry with paper towels and thread three chicken strips in a loose accordion-like style onto each skewer.

Brush with vegetable oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Alabama White Sauce:

(makes about 2/3 cup)

1/3 cup mayonnaise

3 tbsp chopped fresh chives

1 tbsp horseradish

4 tsp apple cider vinegar

2 tsp creole mustard

1 tsp black pepper

¼ tsp sugar

1 finely grated garlic clove

Combine all ingredients and enjoy as a dip for the chicken kabobs.

Home cellar part 3: storage

Starting a wine cellar isn't complicated, but once you decide to stash 20 or 30 bottles of wine, a key decision is where it should go.

The worst location is where it is 70 F or more. Wine is fragile and, like beer, must be kept cool to retain freshness and perhaps even improve in the bottle. Cooler is better.

My first wine cellar was underneath my house. Terra cotta drainage tiles were embedded in the earth, each holding a bottle. The system maintained cool temperatures. Four decades later, some bottles remain in good shape.

Subsequent investments in storage proved worthwhile, a fact well known by wine-collecting friends. But you need not spend much or anything to do it right — until the space is no longer large enough!

Most homes and apartments have small spaces that can be cleared out where bottles can be protected from light and kept cool, such as an under-stair cubby, beneath a bed or in a closet with a solid door.

If there's no room for a rack, just clear a flat spot on the floor and stack bottles atop one another. As long as cork-sealed bottles are on their sides, they'll be fine.

There are two exceptions. Sparkling and screwcapped wines are best stored standing up. The reasons are complicated, but that's the way I've done it for years; it works great.

As wine collections grow, the next decision is what to do next. To determine whether to expand the space, assess how long it was before you began to stashing wine. If it was more than a year, you're likely in no rush to buy an expensive refrigerated unit. If the space you're using is large and cool enough, all you need is a few more racks. But if it was only a few weeks and the space is already bulging, you may need to find a larger location.

Decades ago, a friend used an old "closet" that once housed his water heater. He added insulation and a small air conditioner, which became a cellar housing 200 bottles. When it began filling up, he began drinking wines he knew might not be perfect for additional aging.

Determining how much space to allocate for wine depends on how diligent you are in terms of consuming them. I suggest drinking roses, whites and lighter reds before heavier reds.

One exception is fine chardonnays that are young. Some may improve with a year or two in the bottle. I prefer reds with less than 14 percent alcohol. Wines with 15 percent alcohol or more are usually questionable in terms of aging.

The best temperature at which to serve almost all wines is around 60 F to 68 F. I often decant wines for 15 to 30 minutes before consuming; aeration usually helps young wines, including those sealed with a screwcap.

As for wine cabinets, many are made to protect fragile older wines from deterioration. But for wines that should be consumed sooner, these units are too expensive because they do not improve most of those wines.

In fact, such units may actually retard young wines that need to develop some of their aromatics. Keeping such bottles cold actually can harm the development of fine red wines. Enjoy them while they're still fruity.

Wine of the Week:
2022 Bonny Doon Le Cigare Blanc, Central Coast ($18) — Vermentino is a white Italian grape with remarkable characteristics if it's harvested early and allowed to retain its tropical fruit-like elements. In this wine, 60 percent is from that grape and 40 percent is grenache blanc. The primary aroma is fresh pears from the former grape and a delicate spice from the latter. The wine is dry but still succulent! It's occasionally discounted to about $15.

fresh croissants, they disappear fast. No waste happens here. Hillside also has partnered with downtown hot spots like Marrow, Ash Bar and Barda, as well as with Ferlito's just down the street.

Rentenbach knew there was more to offer than just loaves of bread. His specialty deli-style sandwiches are a hidden gem. Always aiming for fresh, locally sourced produce and affordable ingredients, these sandwiches — made with the freshest of bread, flour straight from Vermont and fancy European butter — are out of this world. Big enough to share, the Dinty Moore, roasted chicken club, Parisian ham & cheese and BLT are regular menu options.

To find seasonal weekly specials, like a hot Italian beef sandwich or a stacked-high French Dip, check out Hillside's social media pages.

Breakfast sandwiches are served all day as well.

Avocado Toast.

The avocado toast is one of the most popular items, with pickled cabbage and an over-easy egg. I assure you, it's like eating a piece of art. For the summer they've added chicken salad to the mix, as well as an excellent chickpea salad. Both are great grab-and-go options.

In the winter months, I highly recommend the soups. Hillside's white bean, turkey sausage and kale soup is something I look forward to every week. And the tomato bisque is one of the best on Mack. A cup of soup with a delicious ham and cheese scone makes for an excellent lunch.

And gazpacho has made its return for the summer — topped with crumbled feta, too. The chicken pot pie in the cooler months sells out before noon, so you definitely don't want to miss out on those when they're available.

Rentenbach does a great job keeping a constant rotation of eclectic and flavorful gourmet quiche options. He has a knack for knowing which seasonal cheeses and vegetables flow. One slice is a meal in itself.

Another item in a constant flavor rotation is the very popular macarons. These colorful sweets make for a great treat or boxed up as a gift. Muffins and giant cookies, made fresh daily, welcome customers upon entry and make for a hard decision.

Macarons.

Saturday mornings are dangerous with extra special breakfast items, like stuffed brioche buns, buttery stuffed croissants and massive cinnamon rolls. There's not one thing I've ever tried that I didn't say, "Wow, that's good."

This summer you can also grab Hillside Hearth weekly goodies at the Farmers Market every Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park.

This place is a specialty bakery for a reason. You never know what kind of goodness you will find. Fun Fact: $5 mystery grab bags of sweets can often be found on the counter tops! Talk about the most bang for your buck!

Follow the delicious updates and daily specials on Instagram: @hillsidehearth and Facebook: Hillside Hearth.

Store hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday to Saturday.

"I never thought I would live a life where I wake up at 2:30 a.m., drive 30 minutes from Ferndale to Grosse Pointe Woods and bake as much stuff as humanly possible five days a week," Rentenbach said. "It's exhausting, but extremely rewarding work."

Stay tuned. Stay hungry.

FISHING CONTEST

Let's
FINISH
SPLASH

Fishing Classic wraps with big tales and smiles

By Donna Zetterlund
Special Writer

We are in the waning hours of the 2024 Grosse Pointe News Fishing Classic, which ends today, Thursday, June 27.

As the last lines are thrown in the water, we can't help but reflect on the enthusiastic turnout, the gorgeous sun-drenched Grosse Pointe days and the spectacular bass, pike, muskie and walleye that were reeled in by the skillful hands of old pros and beginners alike.

Tonight the contest ends and final tallies will be tabulated to appear in the July 18 edition of the Grosse Pointe News. This week's cash prizes were awarded for each eligible fish category, plus two overall largest fish prizes going to one angler in the 12 and under divisions and one to the 13 and up divisions, by both boat and on shore. Weekly raffle prizes will also be awarded from a random drawing.

Leading in the winner's circle is Adam Morath, of Grosse Pointe Park. He caught the overall largest fish this week with his 24" pike. He also placed No.1 in the pike category in Division B.

Five-year-old Parker Hurd took the youth prize for largest overall fish, an 18" walleye. He also won for the walleye category in Division A. Walleye and muskie made themselves scarce this year in the competition, so his was a rare win.

The boaters showed up big this week with Tom Kolojeski leading the pack with a 17.5" smallmouth bass, taking top position in that category for Division D.

This shot of Ben Jacob's 15" smallmouth bass, above, captures the essence of the Fishing Classic experience by boat. Jacob caught the fish on Lake St. Clair's Kerby Cove. Beautiful!

9 Holes of Fishing - Part 2

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Skip Moody's 20" pike was caught at City Park. for Division B.

The 20" pike, above, caught by Ben Jacobs, of Grosse Pointe Farms for Division B, came from the waters of Pier Park.

Joseph Miller got the whopping 18.5" smallmouth bass, above, at Windmill Pointe Park. Miller, of Grosse Pointe Park is competing in Division B.

By Brian Owen
Guest Writer

Last week I shared the concept of a 9-hole fishing course as a way to gamify fishing, along with the first three holes of the fictional Grosse Pointe Municipal fishing course.

One of the keys to fishing smallmouth on Lake St. Clair is to be willing to move from spot to spot in search of fish. Some spots may hold fish at different times during the day so luck and timing are factors.

One thing I've observed using this concept is that I am more willing to leave a spot if I'm not getting any bites or if the fish are small. I'm less likely to wait around for the action to come to me, especially if I have a list of proven spots.

Two of the holes for this week are manmade. One a shipwreck and the other the remains of days gone by. What they have in common is they are excellent landmarks for smallmouth fishermen who rely on structure to attract fish.

Here are holes 4-6:

Hole No. 4 — Delphine
42.38287° N, 82.89896° W

In the early 1920s, Horace Dodge took possession of the SS Delphine, a 258' yacht he had commissioned. Dodge kept the Delphine docked at his estate in Grosse Pointe Farms where today you can still find the remains of the pier along with the channel that was made for its safe passage. The channel is deeper and surrounded by weed beds. The abandoned wood and stone pilings of the former pier hold fish throughout the summer.

Tip: The Delphine Channel runs southeast from the coordinates above to the shipping channel. The deeper channel should hold fish during the hotter summer months.

Hole No. 5 — Shipwreck
42.36862° N, 82.91480° W

Your landmark here is the culvert next to Patterson Park. At these exact coordinates, you will discover what appears to be the remains of a shipwreck which is also surrounded by a smattering of boulders. Smallmouth can often be caught directly off the shipwreck itself and the surrounding areas.

Tip: Try burning a lipless crankbait over the underwater ruins of the Delphine's pier or the shipwreck in the early morning. Smallmouth could be foraging nearby!

Hole No. 6 — Trombley Garden
42.36662° N, 82.91934° W

At this location is a giant weed bed extending from shore to about 1/2 mile out from the foot of Trombley. There are also massive boulders before the weed bed coming from the south. Smallmouth can be found in the weeds or the surrounding areas almost any time of the fishing season.

Tip: On a bright day, cast a spinner bait above the weeds and retrieve it fast enough that it doesn't get caught in them. You can often watch the fish emerge from the shade of the vegetation to ambush your lure! On an overcast day or earlier in the morning, try a topwater bait here.

Joseph O' Laughlin was the bass winner for Division B, with an 19" smallmouth caught at Pier Park. O' Laughlin resides in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Three-year-old Mackenzie Hurd won the bass category for her 7" smallmouth caught at Lake Front Park in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The raffle winners walked away with great prizes this week including a $100 gift card from Fishbones for Chris Ramales of Grosse Pointe Woods. Dinner at Fishbones is always a delectable treat this winner will be sure to enjoy.

Joseph Miller, of Grosse Pointe Park, was the lucky draw for the gift card from Lakeside Fishing to select some new gear or tackle.

Joseph O' Laughlin, of Grosse Pointe Farms, won the gift card from Fairway Packing's The Steak Shop. He'll get to enjoy some delicious prime meats this summer. The Wally's frozen custard gift card went to William Buhalis, age 13. Malcom Richards, age 13, won a gift card from the Chocolate Bar Cafe.

The two winners who each get to pick a prize from the Logitech electronic prize box are Ben Jacob and Skip Moody. Both are from Grosse Pointe Farms.

There is one more day to qualify for the raffle prizes — and all you have to do is enter a fish of any size!

Congratulations to all of our winners this week as well as all contestants. Everyone is a winner who gets outside for some fishing fun. Those who braved the heat and humidity this week and fished anyway deserve an extra round of applause.

Sponsors Charles Schwab Grosse Pointe, Lakeside Fishing, Fishbones, Fairway Packing Co.'s The Steak Shop, Whistle Stop Hobby & Toy, Wally's Frozen Custard, Chocolate Bar Cafe and the Grosse Pointe News are so happy that the community has rallied to get in on this good-natured competition and a chance to hone their fishing skills.

Be sure to get in on this last day of the Classic — get out to the piers and parks — or jump on the boat and reel in a contender of your own.

Big finish, fishers!

Adorable WINNING KIDS!

This precious duo, from the Hurd family of Grosse Pointe Woods, took top prizes this week in their division. Congratulations to these littles with the HUGE fishing skills!

Parker Hurd, 5, won both the biggest fish in his age division and tops in category with this 18" walleye, above.

Mackenzie Hurd, 3 took the category with a pretty 7" smallmouth bass, above, caught at Lake Front Park in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"Wonder"
2017 - Rated - PG
1 hr 53 min

It's a wonder I wasn't aware of this remarkable film when it was released in 2017. You'd think with a lineup of stars like Julia Roberts, Owen Wilson and Jacob Tremblay (the gifted young actor who made his debut in "Room"), it would have gotten more buzz. It was brought to my attention when it popped up as a rec on Netflix, and I must say, I can't recommend this family drama highly enough.

"Wonder" is based on the best-selling novel of the same name by R. J. Palacio and adapted for the screen by Steve Conrad, Jack Thorne, and the writer/director Stephan Chbosky ("The Perks of Being a Wallflower"). They've created a beautiful film that is guaranteed to tug at your heartstrings.

knowing his facial features won't scare or startle strangers. The day finally comes when his parents feel he's ready to attend school in person and they enroll him in an elite Brooklyn prep school. The whole family walks him to school on his first day, and at the school gates, he reluctantly takes off his helmet and leaves it with his dad.

rated by the principal characters. Not only did this give the viewer a different and more diverse perspective, it gave the film some added depth. It would have been less interesting if the story was told only through Auggie's eyes.

The story also follows the exploits of Auggie's sister Via. She's extremely supportive of her brother although she does harbor a bit of resentment because the whole family is part of "Team Auggie." When she returns to school, she tries to hook up with her childhood friend Miranda (Danielle Rose Russell). She spent the summer at camp and is now sporting some striking pink patches of hair.

She won't return Via's texts or calls and it appears she's now too cool to hang out with her. Fortunately, Via is lured into participating in the school's drama program by Justin (Nadji Jeter). Before long, the two strike up a romantic relationship. And getting involved in the school play helps her come out of her own shell and find herself.

While several subplots do occur, the film is ultimately about Auggie. We see the encouragement he gets from a couple of devoted teachers Mr. Browne (Daveed Diggs) and Ms. Petosa (Ali Liebert). He comes to terms with the bullies at school and he befriends a smart young girl Summer (Millie Davis) as well as his old pal Jack. And he comes to the realization of what an exceptional person he is and what a loving family he's part of. To quote Via, "You can't blend in when you were born to stand out."

Currently streaming on Netflix and Tribeca Shortlist, and available to rent on Prime Video.

My rating system:

★ A real stinker. A movie that is so bad, you're embarrassed to admit you've seen it, but you have to rate it nonetheless.

★★ So-so. Not a total waste of time, but you would have been better off reading a good book.

★★★ Pretty good. In fact, if there weren't any other movies in your queue, you might watch it again.

★★★★ One you'd recommend to friends.

★★★★★ So good you'd actually go out and buy it!

Isabel (Roberts) put her pursuit of a master's degree on hold to devote herself to raising her son. He also has the full support of his loving and fun dad Nate (Wilson), and his attentive sister Via (Izabela Vidovic).

School principal Mr. Tushman played by Mandy Patinkin.

He's greeted by the kindly school principal Mr. Tushman (Mandy Patinkin), who jokes about his funny sounding name and makes him welcome. He's given a tour by some of his classmates and there his new life begins. Auggie strikes up a friendship with Jack (Noah Jupe) and the two seem to be buds. We witness the usual and expected amount of ostracism and derision from the kids.

This actually surprised me a bit because I'd have thought the school would have prepared the students for the arrival of an unusual boy like Auggie. I guess it wouldn't have made as interesting a story if everything went smoothly.

A device the director Chbosky used quite effectively was dividing the film into several chapters that were nar-

Moon Alert: There are no restrictions to shopping or important decisions today. The Moon is in Pisces.

Happy Birthday for Thursday, June 27, 2024:

You're watchful, diligent, energetic and strong-willed. You have strong moral convictions, and you know how to defend yourself. This year will bring change and increased personal freedom. Let go of whatever might impede your progress and growth. Be ready to act fast on new opportunities. Travel is likely.

ARIES
(March 21-April 19)

This is an excellent day for behind-the-scenes research. You will also have success quietly networking with others, perhaps online. Very possibly, your research will help a family member, a family situation or a family business, or it might have something to do with home repairs. Tonight: Restless.

TAURUS
(April 20-May 20)

This is an excellent day to get advice from others, especially people who are older or more experienced. Very likely, a discussion with someone will illuminate matters for you to the extent that you might change your immediate goals. Expect practical information. Tonight: Friends.

GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)

Look sharp and be on your best behavior today, because a conversation with a boss or someone in authority might indirectly boost your income or have a favorable repercussion on your wealth and assets. This could be an introduction, a piece of advice or maybe a job offer. Tonight: Independence.

CANCER
(June 21-July 22)

If you study anything today, you will likely learn something practical and useful. This could be information related to higher education, travel or something related to the government and the legality of doing something. Listen to anyone who has something to offer. Tonight: Changes.

LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)

Your interactions with others will benefit you in practical or financial ways today. Perhaps someone has advice about how to deal with debt or taxes. A discussion could relate to an inheritance or a beneficial government program.

Listen to what others have to say. Who knows? Tonight: Check your finances.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

This is a great day for a heart-to-heart discussion with a friend or a member of a group. Basically, your ability to work with others is excellent today, which means you can brainstorm ideas and share approaches about how to do things. Accept help wherever you find it. Tonight: Surprises.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

This is a good day to talk to bosses, parents and people in authority to find lasting solutions to problems. Or perhaps you want to map out some goals or a strategy for the future.

Others will listen to you, and you will be happy to listen to others. This will be a mutually beneficial conversation. Tonight: Check on your pets.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

It will be easy to study and learn today. You might even choose to learn legal approaches to something or explore the intricacy of rules and regulations regarding travel. Get involved in discussions about healing, the law and medicine. Tonight: Plans change.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

This is a good day to learn information about insurance issues, especially that apply to your home. You also might want to get more information about shared property, inheritances, taxes and debt. Stay on top of this practical info; it could be helpful. Tonight: Domestic surprise.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

You want to have a meaningful discussion with someone today -- something real, not superficial. You want the luxury of saying what you think and feel to someone who will really listen to you. Ideally, this person is a partner or close friend. Tonight: Caution.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

This is a productive day at work for any task that you choose. Very likely, whatever you do will boost your earnings or favor you. You might get advice about how to repair or take care of something. This advice also might relate to your health. Keep your ears open. Tonight: Check your belongings.

PISCES
(Feb. 19-March 20)

A conversation with someone might lead to creative results today. This interaction could relate to the arts, the entertainment world or the hospitality industry. You have ideas to share! Tonight: Impulsive!

Dble

Opening lead — king of spades.

There are no magic rules to guide one to the best opening lead, and occasionally the wrong choice will produce a disastrous result.

Consider this deal where South wound up in six clubs doubled. Perhaps East should have opened three spades, which might have shut the opponents out of bidding. Instead, he started with one spade, allowing North-South to find their club fit.

West's spade lead was a dubious choice, as he should have realized that North's four-spade cuebid indicated a void in the suit and that a spade lead would therefore accomplish nothing. Whether West should have led a diamond or a heart is debatable — but his actual lead proved fatal.

Declarer ruffed the spade in dummy and led the queen of clubs, on which East followed low. South made a good guess by going up with the ace and leading five rounds of hearts, discarding all three of his diamonds in the process.

West ruffed the fifth heart, but by then the setting trick — East's ace of diamonds — had already flown the coop. As a result, declarer made the slam and scored 1,660 points instead of going down one, which would have been his lot had West led a diamond originally.

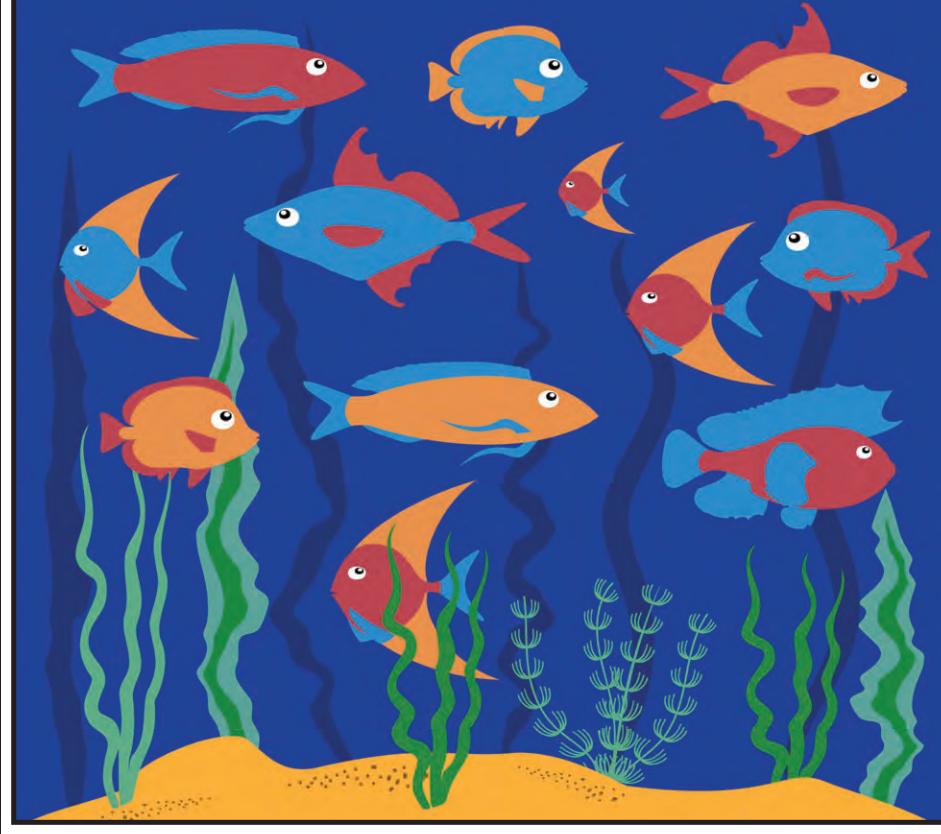

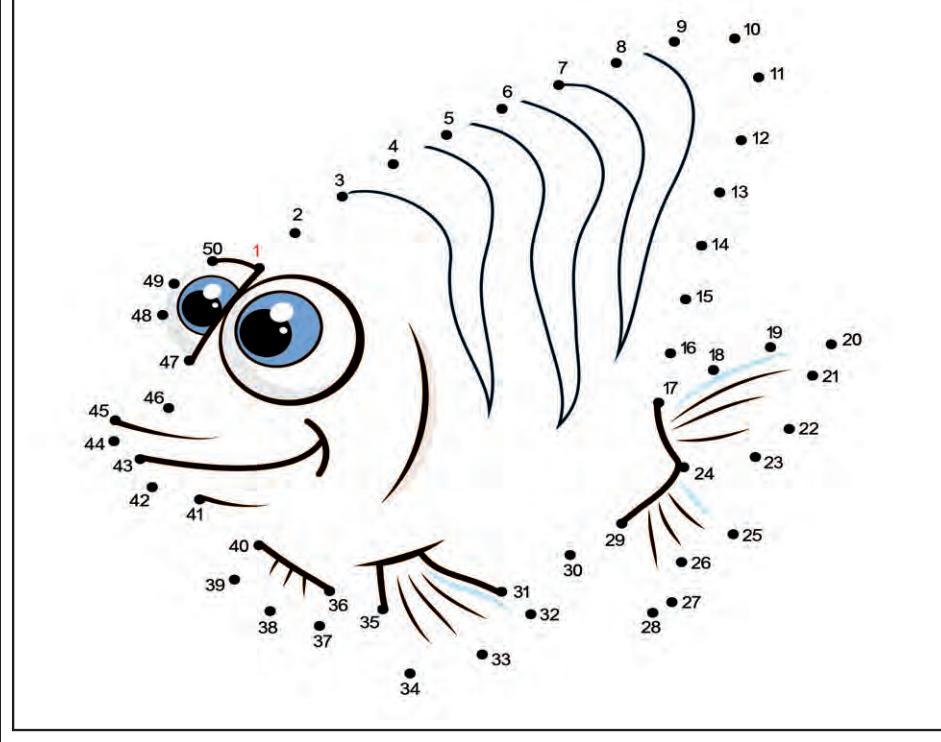

Had it occurred to West that a spade lead was wrong, he might of course have misguessed and led a heart, in which case declarer would still have made the contract. But then again, West might have led a diamond and beaten the slam.

The bottom line is that since a spade lead did not figure to gain anything for his side, West should have dismissed it as a possibility and considered an alternative.

Stuff You'll Need:

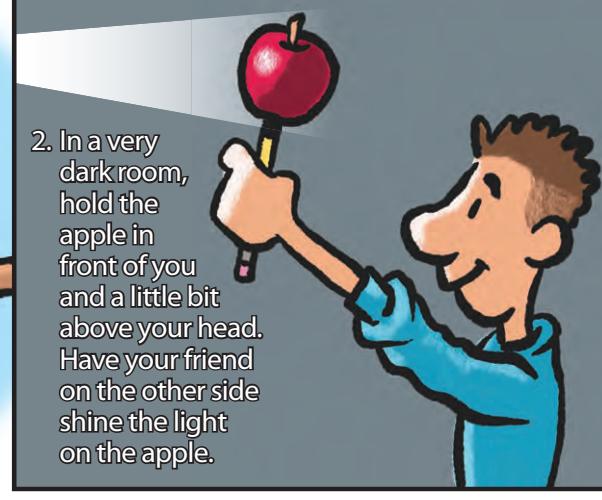

3. When you see only the dark side of the apple, this is like a new moon. When the sun is directly behind the moon and blocks the sunlight, that phase is called the new moon.

4. Stay in the same spot and turn your body slowly. Soon you will see a small part of the apple (moon) lit up. This is called a crescent moon.

5. Keep turning and you'll see more and more of the apple (moon) light up. At one point, one whole side of the apple will be in the light. This is the full moon phase.

6. Keep turning and you will see less and less of the apple (moon) lit up. When you can no longer see any of the apple (moon) lit up, you will have seen all the phases of the apple—er, moon!

1. Stick the apple on the pencil.
The apple is the moon, and your head is Earth. The flashlight is the sun.

Spring athletes end school year with All-State honors

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

Summer is here and another exciting school year of high school sports action has concluded. High school sports champions for the spring were crowned in recent weeks and several spring athletes were recognized for their achievements with All-State honors in their respective sports.

Twenty-five athletes from Grosse Pointe South, Grosse Pointe North and University Liggett School found themselves on All-State lists across eight different sports this spring to commemorate their strong performances.

The sport where the most athletes from the Pointes received recognition this spring was girls soccer. Nine soccer players from the three schools were honored by the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association on their All-State lists to end the season.

South had six players make the list in Division 1. Junior Savannah Spangler earned second-team All-State honors. Lilia

Two baseball players were recognized by the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association for their play on the diamond this spring. After helping lead North to an appearance in the Division 1 state semifinals, senior Brennan Hill was named first-team All-State as a pitcher. Also in North's Laila Aslam was named All-State in singles for Division 2. Olivia Kowal from South was a Division 2 singles honorable mention. South's pair of Maeve Hix and Katelyn Strong received an All-State nod in Division 2 doubles, while Mimi Mager and Grace Vollmer, also from South, made the Division 2 doubles honorable mention list.

Two athletes from University Liggett were the only Pointes athletes to be recognized in their respective sports. Steve McMahon was a Division 3 honorable mention in boys golf and Olivia Marcero received an honorable mention in Division 2 girls South's Addie Waller received an All-State honorable mention in Division 1 for softball.

Moussiaux, Morgan Lainey, Lilia Brundage, Brooke Hepner and Ava Pappas all earned honorable mentions.

Amelia Streberger from North made the first team All-State list in Division 2. Liggett had two players receive honors in Division 4, with Sofie Ancona being named first-team All-State and Kerith Short making third-team All-State. South catcher Andrew Dilodovico made second-team All-State.

South senior Addie Waller was the only softball player to make the Michigan High School Softball Coaches Association All-State list, being named an honorable mention in Division 1.

In girls tennis, six athletes were recognized by the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association.

After being named Miss Hockey at the end of the winter season, University Liggett senior Sofie Ancona ended the spring season by earning first team All-State honors in Division 4 on the soccer pitch.

North senior pitcher Brennan Hill was named first team All-State in Division 1 after helping to lead the Norsemen to an appearance in the state semifinals.

When it comes to boys lacrosse, four Blue Devils made the end-of-season list from the Michigan High School Lacrosse Coaches Association. Goalie Lucas Valice and defensive midfielder Jackson Rybicki received third-team

All-State honors in Division 2. Jack Smith and Ryan Peabody were Division 2 honorable mentions.

Based on their performances at the boys track and field state finals earlier this month, three athletes finished high enough on the podium to be named All-State. Clinton Allen from North received the accolade after winning the Division 1 state championship in discus. In

Blue Devils' DiVita commits to volleyball powerhouse Nebraska

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

With the college sports recruiting cycle for the class of 2026 now open, one athlete from the Pointes already has made a major commitment. Grosse Pointe South High School rising junior Gabby DiVita announced her commitment Sunday, June 16, to join the women's volleyball team at the University of Nebraska.

"It's really surreal," DiVita said about receiving a scholarship offer from Nebraska. "I'm super excited and it's such a great opportunity. I honestly couldn't believe it."

DiVita currently is ranked as the No. 9 overall player in the country for the class of 2026 by PrepVolleyball.com. In her sophomore season with the Blue Devils, the outside hitter finished with 522 kills and was named second team All-State.

When she finally gets to Nebraska in a couple of years, DiVita will officially join her older sister in the ranks of the family's Division I athletes. Her sister, Jada DiVita, is a rising junior on the volleyball team at Lipscomb University in Tennessee.

With her older sister already having gone through the Division I recruiting process and her mother, Janeil DiVita, as her varsity coach at South, DiVita is grateful for her family's help in deciding to join Nebraska.

"They've been such a great support system," she said. "My sister helped me a lot on June 15, keeping me grounded and giving me advice and everything. I can't thank them enough for everything they've done and for being super supportive."

The Cornhuskers are widely considered to be a "blue blood" program when it comes to college volleyball. Nebraska has won five national championships, most recently in 2017, and reached the national title match in 2023. The program also holds the NCAA record for most all-time wins.

She still has two years of high school volleyball left at South and DiVita is looking forward to improving her skill set while helping the Blue Devils to wins before joining one of college volleyball's premiere programs.

"I think I can improve in every single aspect," DiVita said, "just getting stronger in the offseasons and making sure I'm as prepared as I can be going into Nebraska and try and contribute."

Grosse Pointe South rising junior Gabby DiVita proudly wears the logo of her future school as she recently announced her commitment to play Division I college volleyball at the University of Nebraska.

Athlete of the Year contest voting continues

By GP News Staff

News Athlete of the for who they think one male and one female athlete every 24 hours until voting concludes at 11:59 p.m. Saturday, July 6. Voting can be done online; the virtual ballot may be found on grossepoincenews.com or through social media channels. A copy of the paper ballot can be found to the left and submitted to the Grosse Pointe News office, 16980 Kercheval in The Village.

The Athlete of the Year contest is a chance for these athletes to once again be recognized for their incredible achievements and the memories they have made throughout their high school sports careers. The contest is meant as a reminder of how important athletics is to a community like Grosse Pointe and how these athletes will continue to have an impact on their respective schools and programs for years to come.

Of the 38 outstanding athletes who make up this year's finalists, four will receive honors as Athletes of the Year. One male and one female athlete will be named the winners of the Readers' Choice vote. Additionally, one male and one female athlete will be named Athlete of the Year winners by the Grosse Pointe News staff.

All four winners will each receive a $500 scholarship to their respective college or university courtesy of
