Citizens Association of Grosse Pointe Park
Paul I. Moreland, President

Citizens' Group Leader Thanks Voters in Park

To The Residents of Grosse Pointe Park:

Having realized the practical political difficulty that a proposal such as the City Incorporation Plan is bound to face, the Citizens' Association accepts without disappointment the decision of the voters. The proposition was presented because the officers and directors of the Citizens' Association believed it to be a constructive move and that the voters should have the opportunity of making their choice.

Although the proposal was decisively defeated its merits are still very apparent to all its sponsors. The Association keenly regrets the lack of interest on the part of many qualified voters as evidenced by the fact that only 2006 votes were cast compared with 4038 in 1938. It does, however, wish to thank those who did make a sincere study of the proposal and then registered their disapproval or approval by voting. This is the true American way. It is the people who vote and elect in local or national elections, who really govern America.

Respectfully,
Citizens Association of Grosse Pointe Park

Men Necessary to Industry Can Get Draft Deferment

(This Article No. 2 being written expressly for the News by the author, the following article will appear in the next issue of this publication.)

The obligation to public service is an inherent principle of our society. It is the duty of every citizen to contribute to the well-being of his country. The government, of course, has the right to determine how that privilege shall be exercised, and each man should be selected only after due consideration of his relative usefulness to the nation.

The Selective Service boards are, of course, concerned with the responsibility of the individual citizen. They are not to be confused with the military activities which are essential to the national defense program.

Treated individually

In making selections your local board should take into account the following factors:

1. The man's education and training.

2. The man's occupation and the nature of his work.

3. The man's family situation.

4. The man's health and physical condition.

5. The man's character and conduct.

6. The man's contribution to the community.

7. The man's potential for future service.

8. The man's ability to perform his duties.

9. The man's loyalty to the United States.

10. The man's ability to defend the United States.

PUPILS ARE TESTED FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Health Board Announces No Cases of Diphtheria in Grosse Pointe in Six Years

In cooperation with the Detroit Tuberculosis Sanitarium, the Township Health Department has been planning for the past year to have an X-ray examination of school children for possible tuberculosis. This machine was purchased and made ready for use in January and was brought in to the Grosse Pointe High School last week. The examinations started Monday and continued through the week to include the 11th and 12th in the High School and the 11th and 12th in the grade public of St. Paul School.

Health Commissioner Warren and all of those connected with the department and school system were present at the opening of the cooperation of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society through Doctors Bert Shurly and D. S. Brachman.

The first tuberculosis work in Grosse Pointe was started by the late Dr. J. P. B. in 1912 when a clinic held each month. During the last year, Dr. B. was active and Dr. J. P. B. was discovered. A few follow-up was made of those cases, some of which were hospitalized. In four years, the disease has been practically eliminated in Grosse Pointe. This fact demonstrates that it is not hopeless if discovered in its early stages.

There has been considerable discussion regarding what the Health Department is doing and what has been done. The following answers the question in regard to diphtheria case statistics:

1910	20 cases
1921	9 cases
1922	22 cases
1923	14 cases
1924	15 cases
1925	6 cases
1926	3 cases
1927	6 cases
1928	6 cases
1929	5 cases
1930	1 case
1931	7 cases
1932	9 cases
1933	3 cases
1934	2 cases
1935-41	0 cases

There is but one way to prevent diphtheria and that is by immunization. This is the first five years the immunization was done by the health commissioner Warren in the schools, and later a large percentage was done at the Township Health Department by Dr. J. P. B.

The school census in 1935 was about 1,000, as compared to about 7,500 at the present time. If the disease had increased in proportion to the school census we would have about 100 cases a year with the mortality rate of this disease about 12 per cent.

Stenby Skulker Shot Swirling Along Street

A wild, contemptible fellow (see label) was shot by a Daily Use (dictionary) was arrested in a field near Mack and Touraine at 8:32 a. m. Monday and was killed about 100 yards from both streets at shot gun.

Otto Skunk was reported as being shot by the street of Grosse Pointe Farms on Monday night. Apparently "Skunk" was wanted, because Skunk was Walter Hoyt and Peter La Pointe, who were shot near him to the village limits.

Patrolman Hoyt and La Pointe were shot and taken to a hospital. Hoyt is recovering and La Pointe is recovering.

NEW HIGHWAY WOULD BE AID TO POINTERS

Cross-town Route Stressed As Important to National Defense Program

The proposed Detroit cross-town motorway holds particular interest for residents of the Pointe, for it would provide faster and easier transportation between here and points west and north.

Although defense transportation needs are chief factors in his request that the motorway be the first expressway for the city, G. Donald Kennedy, state highway commissioner, added today that the Harper-McGraw route is the ideal peacetime industrial traffic route.

"The Detroit Express, DSR and DPW heads picked the route in 1935 as best one for mass transportation," Kennedy said. "It would connect with State trunklines to carry cross-town traffic away from downtown centers."

Would Cut Congestion

Highway department surveys show it is relieving congestion in the heavily traveled downtown section. It would ease the burden on the north arm of Grand River Street and through the city center. It would also ease the burden on the north arm of Grand River Street and through the city center.

Lecturer Lauds Luce As Great Journalist

The most distinctive contribution of modern magazine journalism has been made by Henry H. Luce, said the Rev. Dr. H. H. Luce, in his lecture on "The Magazine as a Social Force" given at the University of Michigan on Monday evening in his lecture on "Makers of Magazines" on contemporary magazine journalism.

The lecturer traced the development of magazines in America from the first launched by Benjamin Franklin and a rival within three days of each other in January, 1741.

He also discussed the great magazine dynasty of today, mentioning specifically the Curtis Publishing Company, Hearst, Condé Nast, Scribner Publications, and the McCall Corporation. She cited the "Reader's Digest" as having the largest circulation of all time, 1,100,000.

Miss Horrel also mentioned a recent book, "The News and How to Understand It" in Spite of the Newspapers. In Spite of the Magazine, in Spite of the Radio, by Quincy Howe, former editor of "Living Age."

True or False

With the final passage of the Lend-Lease bill and its approval by the President, the Congress of the United States and the Chief Executive did a good day's work for American Democracy and for the cause of Freedom throughout the world. They have lighted a great beacon for men who once were free and hope to be again free.

The United States Senators did a good day's work when they voted down successive proposals for amendments to the bill which were aimed at making ineffective the declared purpose of the measure. The chief of the neutralizing proposals was that there should be a declaration prohibiting the employment of the armed forces of the nation any place outside of the Western Hemisphere.

The tergiversation of the American political mind is a thing fearful and wonderful to behold. A very short time ago, just prior to the outbreak of the war but after that event clearly loomed on the horizon of Europe, Congress, at the behest of the administration, passed an ironical act of neutrality intended as a complete assurance to isolationists and pacifists of the country of our unalterable determination to keep out of any foreign involvements. The instant effect of this measure was to kill at once the powerful voice which America might otherwise have raised in the councils of Europe towards justice and the prevention of war. By this act, among other effects, we forewore the freedom of the seas, a policy to which we had adhered since the foundation of the Republic, and for the maintenance of which we had already fought one war in our heroic age when we were weak and untried to the fearsomes and the pacifists of the country of our unalterable determination to keep out of any foreign involvements. The instant effect of this measure was to kill at once the powerful voice which America might otherwise have raised in the councils of Europe towards justice and the prevention of war. By this act, among other effects, we forewore the freedom of the seas, a policy to which we had adhered since the foundation of the Republic, and for the maintenance of which we had already fought one war in our heroic age when we were weak and untried to the fearsomes and the pacifists of the country of our unalterable determination to keep out of any foreign involvements.

With the outbreak of war it was immediately recognized that the Neutrality act was a mistake, and to President Roosevelt's everlasting credit he was one of the first to awaken to this fact and take energetic steps to undo the damage. It took weeks of debate and harangue in Congress, however, before supplies were made legally available to Britain. That country, which was as crucially fighting the battle for free men as those who stood at Bunker Hill or New Orleans, is now privated to a buy materials for use in this country, but must still arrange for their own transport and safe conduct. Every change and amendment that has been advanced during the progress of the Lend-Lease bill in Congress has been aimed directly at making the measure as impotent as possible and to nullify its every major objective. The overwhelming majority of the people of this country favor aid to England. The time has come for us to employ common honesty and common sense in this matter. It is rank hypocrisy for us to make an offer of help which we know cannot be received.

The time has also come for this country to make certain decisions. We are going to help England in every practical way we are not, in effect, going to help her at all. We are going to take on the nation of a forthright, courageous people among the nations of the world, conscious of our rights and of our duties and of our power, or we are going to withdraw in sniveling fashion behind a wall of cowardly isolationism, leaving to a smaller and weaker nation to fight our own ultimate battle. The American people must put themselves together and look facts in the face. Britain without our help can hardly survive. If she falls, with her goes down a great world thing Commonwealth of Nations, our tongue, large part of our mind, and observing and pursuing in every essential detail our way of life. Inversely, America and Britain cannot be defeated. Let there be no misgivings on this score.

And for those of the isolationist school of statesmanship, whose sole view of the world horizon is limited to that which lies between the nation and Pacific and the Canadian and Rio Grande boundaries, let it be named that, at once with the fall of England, we are faced with the imminent probability of an early military struggle for survival as a great nation, or for a certain, with an economic struggle for survival not with the world at large, where there would be not even a semblance of a struggle, but for mere survival in the Western World where we have for more than a century declared a position of primacy.

These are some of the alternatives from which Americans will be compelled to make an early choice.

With all respect for those worthy men and women whose abhorrence of war is such that they are led to urge the waiving of every other national consideration, we must be realistic. We must face the facts of world politics, of world economics and the fact that the facts of human freedom and morality. If in the East Indies we faced a drink-drizzled Malay running amok with a blood-dripping creese and the bodies of innocent men and women in his wake we would not step to quote him the Ten Commandments or the Sermon on the Mount. Rather would we seize a club and pray heaven we could bring him before it was too late. This is scarcely an exaggeration of the situation in the world today.

Viewed calmly there is nothing particularly terrifying about the achievements of Germany in this war. With the blitzkrieg overrun of France, on which the explanatory returns are not yet in, she has gained only the occupation of small neighboring nations. Too weak or too timid to fight. She has not yet gained a victory which would prove her status as an invincible military power. Across twenty miles of water from her great guns and flying fields stands a land also small in extent but mighty in courage and spirit. After a year and a half of German's best effort, it still stands alone and by its own efforts. Well has the embattled Britain proved his claim:

"All our past proclaims our future
Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand
Bear us witness, Come the World
Against her, England yet will stand"

She must not stand alone too long.

Stewart Says—

In Doctoring Trade?
Trial of A. M. A.
May Settle Point

By CHARLES F. STEWART
Chief Press Columnist

DOCTORING A trade, a profession or a business? If it's a trade it appears that the American Medical Association, a group of its affiliates, five of its rank-and-file members, in an attempt to bring a trial in Washington in charges of having violated the trust law, can't be convicted.

According to the United States court, with a Stewart dissenting opinion on two points, violation against monopolizing practices in the trust law.

So, if a medicating and surgical craft is a trade, the accused doctors may well be free to go on, because the assumption is that the A. M. A. is a union rather than a professional or commercial organization.

If the docs are professionals or businessmen, not mere skilled laborers, and if it's proved that they regularly have tried to monopolize, then they are liable to be socked under the Sherman act.

John Henry Lewis, a special assistant attorney general, is pushing the prosecution for the federal justice department, but the department launched the case at the behest of the American Cancer Society Health association. It's a cooperative outfit created about three years ago by a coalition of federal employees, with a view to getting themselves doctored at their own expense without the trouble of doctoring. The group's members are regularly laid out on the job and the docs are paid out of it.

A. M. A. versus G. H. A. Professor Lewis's story is that the G. H. A. is a union of patients, competing, being fought by the G. H. A. before it ever succeeded in getting its feet on the ground. Lewis, the latter, latterly perfected itself and opened a clinic in the city where it was formed. Lewis committed himself to the care of a non-G. H. A. hospital in the city. H. A. doctor to attend him there.

Thereupon, says Professor Lewis, H. A. docs began warning their kind of hospitals not to allow Lewis to do their business. Furthermore it's charged that when a G. H. A. doc occasionally comes to a doctor for a check-up, the A. M. A. specialist, the A. M. A. practitioner forbids the patient from seeing the doctor.

The A. M. A. version is that its docs are in the same line as the G. H. A.'s because the group's bunch are punk as doctors. It maintains that the G. H. A. involves the socialization of medicine and surgery, and a decision by the G. H. A. to accept it. It isn't solely a Washington affair. The A. M. A. accepts the notion and the G. H. A. is spreading all over the country.

Medical physicians (yes, it's a criminal trial, for conspiracy) includes General Manager Cliff Wendell, who is in charge of the American Medical Association, Editor Morris Fishbein of its official journal, and a lot of Congressmen and Washingtonians.

Long Trial Foreseen The trial's due to take weeks in the District of Columbia court, after that the case will be appealed, of course. It's a long trial, with the prosecution's success, it will have to prove that the accused docs really are conspiring, if they did, the defense's contention is that they don't.

They did (if convicted) the A. M. A. business setup is like the Standard Oil company or some such corporation. Perhaps they did it as a monopoly. In violation of anti-restraint-of-trade legislation. Well, the supreme court held that, while such legislation is in the federal statute book all right, it isn't applicable to trade unions. Now, do doctors classify with carpenters?

The question remains to be adjudicated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor: I have been reading the Grosse Pointe News and wish to extend to you my most sincere congratulations on the way you have done so well in a very one piece work.

Our Ho-Hum Dep't: All the Oscars for the best film acting went to players who impersonated characters from best selling novels and hit plays. Meaning that they had some life before they were screened. But those statues they lack out the authors who merely wrote the prize-winning roles.

Of All Things: Cussing has been outlawed among the soldiers at Fort Devens, Mass. "Watch your language," the men were told. "You're in the Army, not 'What Price Glory?'"

Form of Criticism: At the play premiere the other intermission time one of the critics' wives was telling Richard Watts, who hated it, that she and her husband were having fun. "What'da doin'?" intoned Watts, "holding hands?"

Dear Fryor: So here we are again. As always, the weather is the shift in weather weren't enough to break the strongest of men. You have to provide the first sign of an ambitious win of 450 words that could have been boiled down to . . . "No Column." I'm waiting for the guy to say something in the real story. Did you get caught under a falling orange or decapitated by a baracuda? The chomped things seem to happen to people who insist on going south. Just the other day a friend of mine in Nassau had 19 years of his life when he was stripped over a bunker on the golf course and fell smack on top of the Duke.

The local picture isn't pretty. After a string of days that had the buds budding, the croc croaking and everyone whistling Martin Delcina's "Spring Song," we finally caught the backlash of the blinger that hit the east wing the weekend of Tuesday. It was nasty, looks usually associated with March. It started last night after 10 o'clock. The wind had been blowing from the east of the analyses in the cold cellar. While it was blowing a Klogman, it was moving like a Klogman. I had a friend who was himself munched up the middle of the street. Something must have happened. All that I could do was to go to bed. I went to bed to forget it all and this morning there was really such a thing. Just a few inches over the shoe top. From top to bottom it was all there. That's what I mean. From top to bottom it was all there. I'm sorry south all winter.

The demon reporter just came in with one you might enjoy. It was a "Papa Cannon Ball" to have it B-1. . . Well, the police had worked out of several stages to a fast ball ended up in a slow ball. The police had worked out of several stages to a fast ball ended up in a slow ball. The police had worked out of several stages to a fast ball ended up in a slow ball. Mark Meets Kitty's Friends

It looks like a fate, and it's pretty close to that when Kitty Foyle's girl-friends present themselves in frightening make-up to the new boy-friend of their roommate. Taken from the film which gave Ginger the academy award, coming to the Cindarella Friday.

Ginger Rogers Stars In Kitty Foyle Film

Absorbing Romance and Gripping Drama Featured in Picturization of Christopher Morley's Famous Novel

One of the most discussed current novels as brought to the screen with brilliant realism and honesty with Ginger Rogers in the title-role of "Kitty Foyle" Christopher Morley's remarkable "natural history of a woman," a compelling study of a spirited, working girl and her colorful career, starting tomorrow at the Cindarella theatre.

Cover a period of eleven years, the story opens with Kitty as a Philadelphia school-girl in her teens, eager and fascinated by the stings of the academic "Masters" of the city, despite her father's stiff warnings. She gets a job in a small office working for one of the city's elite, young Wyn Stratford VI, and promptly falls in love with him, only to be disappointed.

She runs off to New York and another job. But Wyn follows her and after a hectic winter, they are married and return to Philadelphia, where Kitty soon sees the futility of marriage so far out her class. She leaves him and returns to her job with a romantic company in New York, and to her friendship with Marjorie, a young doctor. Shortly after Kitty has had her marriage annulled she finds she is going to have a baby.

About to tell Wyn all about it, she discovers he is planning to marry a Philadelphia society girl, and through this she keeps her secret. The baby is born and she and Kitty plunge into the work with new intensity and become very successful. Meanwhile Marjorie has steadily urged Kitty to marry him, and she is on the point of doing so when Wyn comes to tell her he's going to South America—will Kitty come with him?

Still susceptible to Wyn's charm, Kitty hesitates. It is the most important decision of her life. And her answer forms the dramatic conclusion of the film, which promises one of the season's most provocative and noteworthy offerings.

To carry out the intimate first-person style of Morley's book, the picture version of the film story-telling is done in a brand-new manner with the highlights of Kitty's adventurous existence passing in review before her eyes as well as those of the audience. Scores of familiar Philadelphia and New York settings have been faithfully reproduced to add realism to an unusually human and natural picture.

As Kitty, Miss Rogers is aided to give her very finest performance of her career, with Dennis Morgan in the part of Wyn and promising newcomer, James Craig, as Mark, Edwards, Charles, Ernest Conant and Gladys Cooper are also featured.

Parkside Has New Delicacy

Popular East Side Center Leads Again With Frog Legs in the Basket

Parkside leads again—Frog Legs in the Basket. In announcing the latest innovation, the Parkside Cocktail Lounge brings to Detroit for the first time Frog Legs in the Basket. This delicacy, served in other sections of the United States, can be taken home if reservations are made by calling 2741 29 minutes before they are to be picked up.

While this dish was designed as a Lenten delicacy, and is served in the same manner as Chicken in the Basket, with tartar sauce, the string potatoes, biscuits and honey, it will be carried after the Holly season as a regular item on the Parkside menu.

The frog legs used are top quality and are expertly prepared. This new idea has been brought to Detroit by Harry Stewart of the Parkside.

When those noisy pursuit planes come over our barnyard, they're not just a nuisance, they leave their nests, and take to the air in defense of their eggs and poult.

RED CROSS TO SUPPLY ATHLETIC EQUIPMENT

To meet an emergency caused by the lack of sufficient funds, immediately available, the American Red Cross has agreed to supply the Army and Navy with urgently needed athletic and recreational equipment for their camps. It was announced today by A. J. Berres, Jr., manager of the Detroit Chapter.

The Red Cross, Berres said, will buy sporting supplies to the value of $1,000,000 for immediate use by soldiers and sailors. The government can obtain an additional appropriation to carry out its recreational program in the camps.

The emergency character of the need for recreational equipment in its camps was called to the attention of the Red Cross last week by General George C. Marshall, Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis immediately authorized the Red Cross to meet the situation in view of the fact that the Red Cross has responsibility with the Army and Navy for the health and morale of the armed forces.
