Against Roosevelt's Plans

The Congress has passed the Connally anti-price bill over the President's veto and repudiated his price subsidy scheme in practically one and the same gesture.

Not only do these moves indicate a growing independence of Congress of the domination of the Executive, but always characterized by the approach of a national administration but, more to the point, it emphasizes the doubt of Congress of the efficacy of Mr. Roosevelt's plans to control the strike situation and the runaway price threat.

The Congress shows much greater courage in facing the strike menace than has the President. As long as he remains a potential candidate for a fourth term his lack of determination in facing these chronic work stoppages in vital war industries have been open to the charge that they are our leader in war were influenced by political considerations.

Two thirds of the members of Congress who, like the President, are accountable to the people at the polls, have had the courage to act.

The subsidy scheme to roll prices back, or even to hold them level against the threatened flood of inflation, did not impress the Congress. The idea of the public treasury being the goat in this price production, and the similarity to the other scheme of restoring buying power to the people via ridiculously small wages paid to WPA workers for economically unjustifiable jobs.

It was the old game of trying to lift oneself by one's bootstraps. It proved to lay an additional burden on an already overstrained public treasury for the benefit of favored groups, a proceeding already familiar and agreeable to the whole school of Roosevelt economics.

Mr. Roosevelt and his associates prate much about waging a global war on many fronts. When they evince enough courage to fight the internal economic war also on all fronts, meaning wages as well as prices, and see to it that every one does his full part in production, and that the black market menace assuring to all persons their just share of everything available at equal prices, they will begin to get somewhere in checking the impending danger and will command greater respect from the Congress and more confidence among the people.

More Luce Wisecracks

Clare Booth Luce, Republican Representative from Connecticut, who made the first page before her seat was warm in the new Congress with her stinging designation of the work of the blue print inquisitor as "Globe-trotting" wasn't so lucky in her last forty congressional phrase collections.

Clare aims high but when she said that President Roosevelt was once the world's "outstanding isolationist" but had now become a "renegade interventionist" she drew more cat-calls and rebel yells than cheers. In fact the AP report from Washington fails to mention any cheers. Her characterization of the President was so obviously unjust that her pert little fling was rather too strong for the statesmen stomachs of the U. S.

However much the thinking people of the country may disagree with Mr. Roosevelt's guidance of domestic affairs all those who have been capable of reading history in the making for the past six years and of recognizing the significance of the unfolding panorama agree that he has been a far-seeing leader in his appreciation of the trend of world movements.

Since he first sounded the alarm in his "quarantining" speech in Chicago in the fall of 1937, where he warned that detatchment was on the march and that the way of life of free men was threatened throughout the world, he has been earnestly striving to awaken the people of this country to a realization of the dangers that threaten them and to an understanding of the unworkable and unwarrantable nature of the situation.

It will take more than a few tekiing phrases intended for partisan ears to seriously shake the confidence the people of this country have in their president as their far-seeing leader in the world field in the great struggle to which they are committed.

The wisdom of his leadership in the direction of all our internal problems is another story in which the final chapter can not as yet be written.

And Mrs. Luce's opinions are not taken too seriously in Congress, where it will be recalled her pet scheme for the amendment of the income tax received not a single vote from either side of the House when the legislators got their first shot at it.

A Voice from the Coal Fields

When the President's declared purpose to ask Congress for authority to draft coal miners up to 65 years of age into the army and keep them working in the coal mines, either in or without uniform, it is interesting to the people in the Detroit area to learn what those back in the coal fields think of the miners' position in this whole hard fuel supply mess.

The Scranton Times, which is probably the most influential daily in the anthracite field, in commenting on the situation as it applies to the hard coal field, prefaces its editorial expression on the subject by advising the miners to back to work. It says: "Knowing how the anthracite mine workers think and feel" when they are disturbed by being pushed around. The Scranton Times, nevertheless believes they will serve their own interest best and help the country and the armed services most if they FOLLOW THE ADVICE OF THEIR LEADERS and RETURN TO WORK."

Then speaking from an intimate, closeup view of the picture, the paper says:

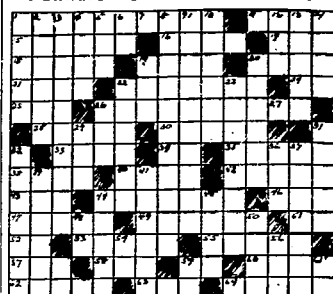

"Threatening mine workers of an age up to sixty five years with induction into the armed forces, for either work in the bowels of the earth or elsewhere as it applies to the anthracite region, demonstrates how sadly misinformed are the President's advisers. * * * Such action will not cure the sore. * * * Such action will not cure coal.

"What is obvious in the attitude of government officials whose positions give them the power to impose their ideas, is that there is in the National capital a most serious and imminently pressing urgency for some one to SEE clearly, THINK clearly and be INFORMED clearly on the life and people of the coal mine towns and cities of the country.

"One of the things Washington is badly informed on, judging from the acts and speeches of its government officials, is that the coal is not viewed as the most desirable of jobs. "The anthracite mines, it may also not be known, do not attract young men; they are closer to thirty than twenty when they go into the mines.

"The average age of anthracite mine workers is perhaps forty five years. While there are men of sixty five in the mines and their sons, their craft skills are useful, the span of life at sixty five, after years in the mines, is about

"Talk about putting sixty-five-year-old men into uniforms, figuratively and keeping them up to now, military discipline betrays how utterly foolish is the counsel being given the President. The people like to believe this still is America the Free.

"The President's anger at what he terms the 'intolerable' action of the leaders of the United Mine Workers can be understood if the actions of the leaders of the mine workers are unreasonable. There is, however, not a single word of rebuke for the bituminous mine workers in the President's declaration although Harold L. Ickes has said of the SOFT COAL women that they possess from the beginning any compromise for a reasonable settlement.

"All this comes at a time when the ANTHRACITE operators and the United Mine Workers had the greatest hopes of reaching an agreement.

"Whatever fresh mistake has been made with the President's statement, the MINE WORKERS, by following the advice of their LEADERS to RETURN TO WORK will, it can be repeated, SERVE BEST THE COUNTRY, THE ARMED FORCES and THEMSELVES. Time and events will bring about a final settlement in which the equities of the mine workers and the country will be more intelligently served than up to now.

"What the Times' writer did not say, but which might with propriety have been mentioned in further clarification of the miners' side of this argument, is the fact that the coal miners, particularly the anthracite workers, have enjoyed no period of prosperity for the last twenty years, during which they might have had an opportunity to accumulate something against the always certain 'rainy day'.

"The coming of the age of the gasoline engine which contributed so mightily to the development of the Detroit region in a lovely, but leisurely old city of less than half a million population at the turn of the century to a great metropolitan area of more than 2 1/2 million at the present time, working in inverse ratio, marked the retrogression of the industrial life of the coal regions in the same last two decades.

Added to the demoralization of the carrying business of the country in both passenger and freight which followed the coming of the internal combustion engine and weighed so heavily on the coal industry, countless thousands of homes which had formerly used anthracite coal, converted the home heating plants from coal to fuel oil and in a comparatively short time cut the anthracite output, which always went largely into domestic uses, to less than half its former tonnage.

Every patriotic American will wish to do all he can to help "hold the line" against the threatened inflation deluge, but fairness dictates that an unjust burden in this fight should not be placed upon a group of workers who haven't had an even break in nearly a generation.

And criticism of the miners would come with especially bad grace from the great war industries of the Detroit area where workers have thought nothing of leaving their jobs for no better reason than that they didn't like the job or the other fellow belonged to or because a handful of negroes have been advanced to higher rating or where foremen have organized a nice little union of their own and have in spirit demanded their age-long recognized position as laissez faire between management and workers.

The mining of coal is unquestionably a necessary war industry, and a way must and doubtless will be found to have for no better reason than that they didn't like the job or the other fellow belonged to or because a handful of negroes have been advanced to higher rating or where foremen have organized a nice little union of their own and have in spirit demanded their age-long recognized position as laissez faire between management and workers.

Grosse Exaggerations

A. PRYOR

"Though the wildest disposition you inherit. And your character, with piety is packed All such qualities have very little merit. Unaccompanied by Talent." (Harry Graham).

A woman of our acquaintance was notified by Western Union that they were holding a telegram for her. When she telephoned to get the message, it turned out to be a three-word wire from a shop in N. Y. that sold clothes. "Do you always buy your clothes in N. Y.?" Our heroine answered her and this kept up for some ten minutes. They finally got into shoes, hats, figures, weights, cosmetics and last but not least the operator's "boy friend"—who, (so she told our friend), keeps telling her she's too fat!

Margaret Fishback has written an amusing article for one of the magazines about the war being mounted a mad race to "get out of things" or make excuses that would never hold water at any other time. Women, for example can run around with subpar looking hair, no hairpins, no hair, and wear in their stockings (no stockings, you know), and merely shrug their shoulders in a hapless posture. If you get in a small store before the proprietor will show you a row, the walls of which are ribbed with fireproof wallpaper; the carpet stained to resemble a map and the matrone full of fat, you will have found real peace and quiet. —but the Concocture will also shrug his hips because "because of the war, you know."

Shertages certainly have their compensations. If you don't want to attend a party, there is always the lack of gas. If you don't feel like dressing formally, there is always the "cleaner" to blame for a lack of evening clothes. If you don't want to take on a committee job—there is always your "war work, you know." If you don't want to entertain anyone, there is the shortage of food and points to consider and of course, no help. In fact, you can do pretty much all you want to do, and blame it on the war. Who said "war is hell?" Nonsense!

Pryor is getting a complex: We are acquainted with a married couple from the West coast, who happen to be in town for a visit. Every time they see them they say "Gosh, you're getting fat for dinner. YOU know the ROANOSOG, don't you?" As it happens, we don't know any of the eight or ten people they mentioned and we're glad where we are going to have a little more to eat. If we somehow were not in the picture at all, we have no way to get a better acquaintance with anyone whose name is mentioned. So if you hear that Pryor claims an intimate friendship with you, you will know that our California friends have brought this unhappy situation to a boiling point.

Those last two words remind us nostalgically of Brooklyn. THERE is a place where "nobody knows nobody else." You can visit any city in the U. S. and meet 50 people from Brooklyn who don't know you. In Brooklyn all their lives have never heard of parts of Brooklyn you don't know. Finally, a little while ago, a man who had been in the Dodgers—and that's plenty company. You can tell an old Brooklynite by his accent and the best imitation of it in this city you're interested in gives you most of the Brooklyn program. "Archie" in Duffy's Tavern program isn't so bad either.

This one is supposed to be fresh out of Washington and like all our stories—is, of course, absolutely true. It was a woman who was in Washington, had the usual trouble getting reservations. She was just about to step a drawing room on the train when a General appeared—somewhere, the General said drawing room. She thought it over and decided she would not be above or below sharing the room with the General if he helped her. He wasn't bad looking either, she decided.

To make a long story longer, the G. said he'd be charmed to help her in distress. He went to the smoking compartment where the woman prepared for bed and settled herself on the lower berth. The General came back, climbed into the upper and settled down to sleep. The woman started chatting with him, and found that he was quite good company. She asked a million questions, which he answered in a friendly way. Finally, she said "I'm sure you've had this on such short acquaintance, but would you mind—would you mind—pretending, just for tonight, that you are my wife?" She said "I'll do that in a minute." She said "I'm sure you've had this on such short acquaintance, but would you mind—would you mind—pretending, just for tonight, that you are my wife?" She said "I'll do that in a minute." She said "I'm sure you've had this on such short acquaintance, but would you mind—would you mind—pretending, just for tonight, that you are my wife?" She said "I'll do that in a minute."

"That's grand of you," replied the General; "Now would you mind settling up and going to sleep?"

"That's funny," he finally ventured as the woman went attempting to follow his back, of complete absorption. "The look like the pair I sent the Detroit Club this morning to prepare for Mrs. ... the next party tonight."

On the verge of panic the actress looked for the counter and put in a call for the Detroit Club. "Had there been a mistake," she wanted to know. "There definitely had, she was informed.

They left the fish in the market and haven't the best idea as to what happened after that."

"The flowers are for yesterday and the monuments for tomorrow"

"I'd like to tell you what the Japs did to some friends of mine"

"Those American boys—who fought for you with their backs to the wall, waiting for help that never reached them—came from the land of plenty. But when their lives were at stake, all they had was . . . plenty of nothing!"

"They were outnumbered, outgunned, and out-supplied. They were so short of ammunition that anti-aircraft gunners often had to hold their fire until the enemy planes were on top of them. They were so short of bandages and gauze that we nurses had to wash out the old ones and use them again.

"But they were never short of courage. They never spoke of surrender. They just went on fighting, and hoping, and dying. And no sacrifice was ever too great.

"Let me give you an example. One terrible day on Bataan we had 285 patients on our operating tables in 8 hours—a new patient every two minutes of the day."

"A sailor was brought in with his abdomen blown to bits. He was a goner and I think he knew it. 'Doctor,' he asked, 'is there any hope at all?'"

"The doctor wished to reassure him and replied, 'We'll do everything we can!' The sailor tried to roll over. 'Doc,' he begged, 'get me off this table and save one of those other fellows who still has a fighting chance.'

"That was the kind of men we had at Bataan. And they would want you to remember not only what they did, but what they did without.

"They would want you to remember it, but not with flowers and memorials. The flowers are for yesterday and the monuments for tomorrow.

"Remember them now—this month and every month—by buying War Bonds!

"Buy guns and planes and shells and ships and tanks—for those other countrymen of yours who are fighting so far from home. See to it that never again, any place in the world, will American fighting men be caught short as they were on Bataan! That never again will American wounded perish for the help your dollars might have sent!

"Certainly taxes are higher. Certainly the cost of living has gone up. But the men on Bataan were never ten-percenters!"

"They gave everything they had. And now it's up to you to buy War Bonds not only if you can, but all you can! Please believe me, folks—that's the way the boys on Bataan would like to be remembered!"

Members of Red Cross Canteen Units Also Handle Odd Jobs Such as Sewing on Buttons and Taking in Washing

Grosse Pointe women, members of the Canteen of the Detroit chapter of the American Red Cross, are active in feeding the soldiers who have recently returned from the front. One of the eight of the fleet of Mobile was in charge of Mrs. J. S. Newcomb, and Mrs. Standant, acting alternates for Mrs. Weson Seyburn.

Work was accomplished with no false moves. The women were well repaid for their efforts by the appreciation shown in the attitude of both the enlisted men and their officers. One of the latter remarked that such a service was a wonderful and important morale booster.

There were a few interesting back stage scenes, when requests came for some buttons to be sewed on, some note paper and writing materials, and one woman took home a job of laundering for a soldier boy in need.

Unit captains who were on duty were Mrs. Roger Morris, Mrs. Hunter Williams, Mrs. Gilbert Whelan, Mrs. Mark Stevens, Mrs. Fred Bahr and Mrs. Mary Ann Devere. Mrs. Hazel Taylor, also of Grosse Pointe, is doing a valiant service as chairman of the Canteen Corps of the Detroit chapter with Mrs. Elroy Jones as vice-chairman.

There is still a war on and there is still a need for workers to help win the war. There are many kinds of work to be done—some of it fun, some of it not so much fun, but all of it necessary. We can't all do the glamorous job any more than our boys can. They are working for us, so no matter what we have our summer free we can all get together on the war effort.

Her Engagement Announced

Major and Mrs. Jack Drew of Lakepointe announce the engagement of their daughter CLARA LA RUE to Naval Air Cadet Thomas S. Van Inwagen, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Van Inwagen of Haverhill avenue.

Clara Louise is a graduate of Grosse Pointe High School and Thomas was graduated from Southeastern. The wedding will take place sometime in August in Christ Church Chapel. The exact date depends upon the time that Cadet Van Inwagen graduates from Naval Air Station in Pensacola.

Clara Louise has chosen her cousin, Patricia Ann Baker and Mary Maude Drew, to be her bridesmaids. Best man and ushers will be announced later.

PRYORITIES

We suppose it is one of the necessities of life, or maybe it's a hang-over from the days of Louis the Fourteenth, that all children from the time they are three until they are of marriageable age, must be brought into the harness process of christening by the mother, of christening to all sundries at the drop of a hat.

Personally, we are tired of the whole thing. We can't go anywhere these days, where there are children, that they don't get into some kind of a room to say "hello" and curtsy to everyone present. You might be listening to someone reciting the Catechism and doing a good job of it, but all conversation ceases while the Whites says his two-hundredth or so to a child and you feel that the whole thing is a little more than a little boring.

The worst of these horrid little episodes usually takes place at three cocktail parties. They not only come in to say "hello," but after they are baptized and christened, they have to go through the whole routine again to say "goodnight" if one person has been forgotten, the mother never fails to drag them out the new downstairs again because—"You forgot to say good-night to Uncle Pinball!"

We don't know who, but we are positive it irritates the children as well as it does the guests. Another disappointing factor to James, must be the alarming amount of antics and antics, has suddenly acquired at any 8:30 gathering. He never permitted to shake hands and merely say "goodnight"—that would be far too simple and un-impersonal. He has to say each one, "Goodnight Aunt Herbert—goodnight Uncle Blim—goodnight Uncle Tessie"—and so on down the line.

Another social menace is the "thank you" act for the young Jos. de Grimme ART SALON

Park Meeting

green for the three quarters of the current year, running from July 1 to April 1, '44, and which had been granted only after long and patient consideration by the Village Commissioners.

For all Mr. Johnson's earnestness the Commissioners listened to the structures with some equanimity.

Everybody Happy

In fact an atmosphere of choice good humor and cordiality pervaded the whole discourse. To this Mr. Johnson himself made no small contribution when he acknowledged, in reply to Commissioner Parshall's query, why when he was present at the June 14 meeting himself, he did not lift his voice in defense of the clubhouse project, said that he had discovered a client of his in the crowd at that meeting among the protestants against the clubhouse "from whom I had just received a $1,000 insurance premium that day and I did not intend to stick my neck out."

The Commissioners' agreement with this project was announced to the public by Commissioner Parshall and President Goddard made a most complete answer to those who varied complaints when they stated that their first duty was to do the things which the citizens wanted done.

Absence and Silence

There was no question about the sentiment of the citizens who attended the public hearing. Those who favored the clubhouse were so numerous as to be conspicuous by their absence and silence.

Moreover the opponents of the clubhouse were the noisy protesters who would be personally affected, and their protests were heralded in advance by petitions of protest as long as the moral law.

In addition to all this the Village has in store a zoning law which places this particular site within Zone "A," which is residential streets for small family dwelling houses, and the duty of the Commissioners was to keep in mind the welfare of the residents at whose best the location had been reserved.

Stamp Collectors' Club To Meet in Park Home

Adams Case

Pointe as on it depended the maintenance of its whole zoning structure. Had the ordinance been overturned it would have opened the entire Pointe area to exploitation by real estate speculators whose only motive would have been the securing of the largest possible return on Pointe real estate investments and would have nullified completely the rezoning of the Pointe area. Every other Pointe community was equally involved in the matter.

The opportunity of course still remains with the municipality to amend or renege as it chooses on zoning regulations and districts, but that is its right and so far as the Circuit Court is concerned it still remains with the City.

The right of the community to maintain its distinctive zoning districts as now fixed against the "creeping" law loving quarters for war workers will of course not be finally answered until the State Supreme Court passes on the question, if an appeal is made, as indicated by the defense.

It will probably be several days before Mrs. Adams is sentenced. Attorney Medley of the City stated, as it will first have to go before the Probation Office, remains in limbo.

Judge Moynihan's charge to the jury was strictly in the vein of an impartial jurist who deals only in law and not in sentiment. His spirit was wholly for the maintenance of the law as is.

He told the jury frankly that under the law it would have to find the defendant guilty. "From the facts in the case," he said, "I will have to apply the law and find the ordinance reasonable. There are ways and means of modifying ordinances."

"It is true," he said, "that war has created unusual conditions and that there is some small claim that changes should be made."

"However, one of the things for which our boys are fighting overseas is to maintain the laws under which we live in this democracy. Even a soldier returning home on furlough conforms to the law."

Youths Grilled On False Alarms

The false alarm nuisance which took on epidemic proportions in the Park last week kept on blowing this week.

On Monday night three came in in rapid succession at 11:15 p. m. from Kensington and St. Paul, at 12:12 a. m. from Balfour and Charlevoix, and at 12:31 from Bishop and Maumee.

Then the police got busy and at 12:50 a. m. Patrolmen Conlan and Keiston gathered in two youngsters giving their names and addresses as Elmer Peck, 18 809 Laice Shore, and Arthur Weisenberg, 16 1655 Balfour, in a parked car with its lights turned off as if in hiding at Lakeshore and Kovic.

Detective Sergeant Butts took over the case and grilled the boys thoroughly for a time, and although they could not give any very satisfactory explanation of their presence in the parked car at the time, he was unable to muster sufficient evidence against them to warrant holding them. The police of the Park are quite well satisfied the cause of the more and the chain alarms than they are willing to acknowledge.

The police are interested in finding out whether the warning to the youngsters will coincide with a cessation of the false alarm nuisance.

New Acts Added At Club Royale

Two new acts are added to the all star show at the Club Royale this week. They are the Two Chords and Marilyn Marsh.

The Two Chords are just what the name implies—they manipulate their extraordinary vocal chords to imitate any kind of musical instrument and then imitate such notables as Kay Kyser, Tex Ritter, and the vocal soloist, Tommy Dursey and the famous group of stage and radio. They are two clever young men and when they get in front of the mike everything ceases to exist. Their performance commands the attention of all and get much appreciation in return.
