Abuse Heaped On Air Lines

Air lines' personnel have sent out a cry for help and a request that more consideration be given their problems in this air-minded age. They have asked that the following item, which was in the November 1 issue of "American Aviation," be reprinted so the public may understand what they are up against.

"The lid seems to be off now, and everyone wants to travel by air. And, brother, the people who 'know somebody' in the airlines are really putting on the heat. We were in the executive office of an airline the other day, and even the top officials are being pestered by their 'friends' for space. When this happens several times every day it creates a serious problem and practically turns the executive office into a ticket office. One airline president, we understand, received something like eight calls at his home the other Sunday. In Washington particularly this business of 'putting on the heat' is a tough one. Many of the people trying to get space are Congressmen and governmental officials who are in a position to do the airlines favors from time to time. And they don't understand that an airline just doesn't kick off another passenger to make room for them—unless they want to get sued. The airline officials do all they can, of course, but if their 'friend' doesn't get space he probably thinks he's been sloughed off—and he remembers it the next time he's asked for something. A Congressman called an airline the other day and wanted space for the daughter of

20,000 Volunteers Continue Community War Chest Drive

Campaign Is Extended After Only 77.4 Per Cent of Quota Is Raised; Two More Million Needed

More than 20,000 volunteer Community War Chest workers are in the midst of an extended War Chest campaign seeking to raise the nearly two million dollars they were short of the $8,490,336 goal on Oct. 31. Workers have refused to accept defeat. The Budget Committee set the goal at eight and a half million because the estimated minimum needs came to that figure.

Actually, the estimated needs totaled a little over nine and a half millions. The committee, however, realized that it would be impossible to raise such a sum no matter how great the needs. So they checked and rechecked, figured and budgeted, and literally told agencies that they would have to get along on a thousand dollars less here and five hundred dollars less there. After cutting every budget as much as possible, the committee decided that $8,490,336 was the least they could raise if the agencies expected to operate efficiently. A total of $6,573,997 or 77.4 per cent of this goal was reported by Oct. 31, the date originally set for the conclusion of the drive. The campaign should have been over, but the needs of the agencies still total $8,490,336. The general solicitation to raise this amount is being continued until Nov. 16 and most of the workers expect to continue solicitation in their own areas until they have reached their quotas. Reports on campaign progress will be made Friday Nov. 9 and Nov. 16 at noon meeting to be held at the Hotel Statler. In the industrial section of the drive solicitation will continue in plants until Jan. 15.

There's nothing like climbing off your pedestal to put you back on top.

Tired Soldier Given Blessing

The City police called up the Park police station about 3:40 a. m. Saturday morning that they had observed a man slumped over the wheel of a parked car on Kercheval just west of Cadieux.

It was a Park case and on examination by the police they found a soldier boy, not drunk, but just resting. When awakened he said he had driven a long distance that day and had become so drowsy he was afraid he might fall asleep at the wheel and had pulled to one side of the street for a little needed sleep. O.K. May luck go with you, soldier.

Rotary Club Hears Appeal For Camp for Crippled Kids

F. J. Welcenbach, director of Camp Bentley, which the Michigan League for Crippled Children maintains on the shores of Lake Huron, a few miles north of Port Huron made a moving appeal to the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club at its meeting Monday in the Whittier.

Mr. Welcenbach did not appeal directly for funds, but said the camp was in need of several articles that would help for the entertainment and benefit of the little inmates. They need a few more better beds and some additional sand boxes for the smaller members of the camp. Any person interested in making contributions to the camp can learn more specifically of the articles they need by writing to the camp.

The camp membership ranges from 90 to 125. Last season it handled 382 little cripples, representing 5,365 hours of beneficial outdoor supervised recreation. Many of the guests are small children, but in the moving pictures he displayed were noted a number of youngsters in their teens up to 15 or 16 years of age. Those who can pay for the care of their little ones are charged $15 per week, but no applicants are refused. A fine donation for anyone interested in this work would be to provide for the care of dependent little ones for a week or more. The address of the camp is Jeddo Post Office.

Loans—Wages—Taxes

During the First World War we floated four national bond issues all of which were called Liberty Loans. In April, 1919, with the war over but a lot of cats and dogs to be laid, as it always the case at the end of any war, we floated another issue which was called the Victory Loan. The slogan for that loan was "Finish the Job." This was the moment when John McCrea's "Flanders Fields" leapt into immortality.

The spirit and purpose of the present loan is much the same. That old Victory loan went over big and so, doubtless, will this new one which we are told is also to finish the job.

There are factors existing in this present loan however which are different than obtained in the old one twenty six years ago. This one coincides with a moment when millions of persons are deeply concerned with the state of their personal money situation in the immediate future. The specter of unemployment on a great scale hangs over them. The competition of millions of men returning from the war faces labor as an unknown quantity. That threat is real, whatever laws for full employment or unemployment benefits, or any of the other schemes which are devised in our present managed economy, may aim to do about it. All of these merely mean lifting ourselves by our own bootstraps. No man or nation ever got very far in financial engineering by just taking money out of one pocket and placing it in another.

These things and many imponderables are going to affect the disposition of the wage earners on the subject of their participation in this issue.

The present feature in our business outlook which cuts most deeply into the bond selling prospect, is the ill-timed demand of labor for an immediate advance in the basic wage in certain great industries, supported by the government, and, most threatening of all to the immediate stability of our economic structure, the proposal that employers shall meet this advance without increasing the price of their commodities. This, on the part of the manufacturers, would again be little more than lifting themselves by their bootstraps. Many of them find they simply can't do it and retain a whole hide.

No concern, from the humblest individual to the most powerful corporation, can long face a red balance sheet. Even governments can't, although obviously that concrete fact has not yet broken through the cranium of millions even after twelve years of deficit spending. When it does, unless the Government meanwhile has strengthened its financial position vastly more than it has thus far done, we will be in the pit.

Such speculations are going to run strongly through the minds of the directors of our great industrial establishments and are certain to have a bearing on the extent of their participation in the current loan.

So too, will the same thought be with the millions of share holders in these private corporations whose incomes are derived from the profits they earn, i.e. the dividends they can pay.

It is unfortunate that these conflicting alternatives had to be raised at the moment this bond issue is on the way, but if a consideration of such simple truths could soften for the moment at least the insistence upon boosts for wages all around it would be a happy turn.

Of course the banks can always buy the bonds ad lib. with money made for the occasion, but that is the old bootstrap game with a vengeance and is one of the shortest and most certain cuts to inflation.

The only real wealth of the country, out of which bonds can be soundly purchased is production, and when that ceases because of strikes, or idleness for the wage earners, or failure to make profits for industry, the outlook is not wholesome.

The reduction of taxes on its face is a move in the right direction, but if it was possible to apply this entire savings in taxes to the buying of bonds, the bonds are to be sold now but the reduction in taxes comes next year. And the tax reduction amounts only to about half of the proposed bond issue. The reduction, moreover, was made to add to the buying power of the people to stimulate industry and to enable capital to enlarge its productive capacity, not even remotely to make easier the flotation of more and more bonds by the Government.

The Returning Fighters

Home from the Wars, a theme as old as human speech and song, we are seeing reenacted in new America at the moment on a scale unprecedented in all history. This giant among the nations, holding apart the world's two greatest oceans with strong arms, sent its young manhood by the millions across those oceans onto every continent and the islands of the seven seas to wage the greatest war of all recorded time, for the defense of freedom and the preservation of human dignity. In all the confusion and turmoil and bickering among nations and between social ideologies that spring up in the aftermath of the world upheaval, let no American permit his vision to be dimmed as to the real causes which sent our legions into the world's battlefields.

The human selfishness and pettiness of these days will never crowd from history's impartial pages the basic truth of our championship of these causes.

And now the time has come for us to show by deeds as well as words our gratitude to these returning heroes. Because most of these young men are noticeably reticent in discussing the issues which sent them into battle, let no one misjudge their understanding of them. It is the way of brave men who have performed great deeds to leave the discussion and the flag-waving to others. They minimize their own part in the struggle. It is peculiarly the American way.

These boys are coming home by the hundreds of thousands every month. Soon the tide will be counted by the millions. They are our boys in every sense; even more wholly ours than when they went away, but they have crowded the maturing processes of a lifetime into three or four hectic years. It is unreasonable to expect that young men who have walked with death and witnessed and participated in the horrors of the most savage warfare the world has ever known will be greatly moved by the trivia of Father and Uncle John. The change they will face at home is comparable, but in the reverse, to their first battle experiences.

Patience and common sense must be observed by their relatives and friends while they adjust themselves to their home orientation. This does not mean that they are to be covertly regarded as psychopathic cases. Rather the direct opposite attitude must be taken by the home folks. Naturalness in every approach of conversation and manner should be shown towards them.

When it comes to the practical job of enabling these young men to get work or to reestablish themselves in their former occupations, no conceivable barrier must be permitted to interpose. They are not the wards of the nation in the narrow sense, and the returning soldier or sailor is the last to wish to be placed in this category, but they are real national heroes who were our saviors when the world of freedom was threatened with destruction and all our civilization was tumbling on our heads. As such they are on our first preferred lists wherever favors are to be distributed.

Public opinion which is rarely organized and slow to act, but irresistible when aroused, would not permit that these men should be exploited by employers who might seek to coin their need for work into an unmoral profit. Least of all should any labor union mandate be permitted to stand between them and their chance to make an honest living at any useful, gainful occupation. The right to work as free men at such tasks as they find to do, and under agreements to which they have been a willing party, is one of the things these boys fought for. If either labor unions or grasping employers attempt to make the way hard for these homecomers, the soldiers themselves may be expected to organize to secure those rights which were their birthright under the law of their own land, but which political minded government in recent years has been loath to guarantee to the individual workman. If the treatment of the returning soldiers leads them to take action the great body of public sentiment in this country will approve and give powerful support.

The simple truth is that the people in this country have made no sacrifice at all during the war. Thousands of employers have enjoyed profits such as they never made before and millions of men, and women, have had employment at wages higher than they ever had before in their lives. They have paid taxes but in most cases had more of their pay left than they ever received in normal times. They loaned their surplus money to the Government and took its bonds in exchange. No one went without any real necessity. When weighed against the lot of the man who endured indescribable hardships in arctic cold and miasmatic torrid swamps, of whom a million suffered casualties and two hundred thousand died, with the thousands who are maimed for life or are limbless and sightless, the case of the safe stay-at-homes need excite no sympathy. That it will stir little among the men now coming home is certain.

It will be good tact for the home folks to say little of their part in the war and turn to in earnest to see to it that home-coming boys get considerably better than an even break.

The Hitler Score

While the report of the British Intelligence service on Hitler's last days and the method of his final end is the most plausible theory yet advanced, it is reasonably certain that in the absence of some later disclosures to the contrary, the mystery of his end will rank in the legendry of history with that of such pseudo immortals as the lost Dauphin of France, the Man in the Iron Mask and John Wilkes Booth who assassinated Abraham Lincoln. Quite possibly it will be this aura of mystery surrounding his disappearance which will be most likely to intrigue the future readers of history.

Whatever course the discussion of the Hitler vanishment may take however, it is a certainty that history will record him as one of the most despicable characters who ever crossed its pages. He not only planned great wars of aggression in which human life was to be as dust, but much farther than that, prepared the soul of an erstwhile great people to follow his leadership in his time and after to achieve and retain the enslavement of all of the peoples of the continent on which had bloomed the world's latest and finest civilization, and then to move on to the conquest of the world.

In this diabolical program he surrounded himself only with the qualities of brutality and treachery. He established his power in the beginning by a blood purge in which he murdered many of his personal followers. He enslaved his own people by abolishing all political freedom and by tolerating only a single party, the National Socialist, which did his instant bidding. He forthwith had himself declared dictator for life. He even named his successors in a certain designated order. He destroyed all labor unions and deprived the working people of his country of all rights of organization, the only channel through which they could plead their cause.

He derided all existing religions and tried to reestablish the paganism of ancient Germany. He inculcated racial and religious hatreds. At one moment he preached the superiority of the Nordic race and at the next attempted the extinction of one of the only two pure Nordic races in the world.

He preached and attempted the destruction of the Jewish race, not only in Germany, where it was never numerically strong, but in other countries that came under his power.

He executed treaties of peace and amity with other countries with the deliberate purpose of breaking them as soon as the favorable opportunity could be maneuvered.

He tried repeatedly not only to break the morale of other peoples for resistance but to accomplish their actual destruction through starvation by taking their food away from them.

Murder is the name of war was practiced against civilian populations and as the ordinary methods for the taking of human life become too slow and tedious he burned them to death in furnaces and killed them in gas chambers by the millions.

He, personally, and his group of favorites, conducted the most monumental graft in history by taking over for themselves many of the basic businesses of the country; he himself privately monopolized the publishing business of Germany.

He and his crowd of associated thieves plundered the art galleries of every country that came into their clutches.

The score against Hitler and his brigands will still be in process of footing generations hence.

First in the wounds he has left must stand the mortal hurt he inflicted on the German people. He has left them the legacy of being for the time the Ishmaelite among the Nations, both feared and hated by other peoples, and awaiting a long process of instruction and control until they find a new moral orientation which will permit their acceptance again into the circle of peoples and states which still follow the paths of decency and human dignity.

That such a time will come is certain unless the whole structure of modern civilization, which has been in the building since the Sermon on the Mount nineteen hundred years ago, is to go down in chaos.

With the case of Germany herself it seems inconceivable that a people who have borne so great a part in the cultural advancement of the world could have received, in the short reign of even such a monster of evil as Hitler, wounds which the patient and just ministrations of would-be friendly nations will not heal.

While Hitler's own place in history has already been determined by his own record it may appear in the long vista of time that lies ahead that the very wretchedness and misery he brought to the world, quickened the mass conscience to seek and achieve at an earlier period than would have otherwise been possible a true brotherhood for the race.

Grosse Exaggerations

A. PRYOR

"O world, I cannot hold thee close enough!

Thy winds, thy wide grey skies!

Thy mists that roll and rise!

Thy woods this autumn day, that ache and sag

And all but cry with color! That gaunt crag

To crush! To lift the lean of that black bluff!

World, World, I cannot get thee close enough!"

(Edna St. Vincent Millay)

Just heard one of the better Scotchman stories . . . about the Scot who came to this country for the first time . . . and as he was getting off the boat, noticed some men on the dock pulling up a deep sea diver, who'd been doing under-sea work. Said the Scotchman: "If I'd known about THAT, I'd have walked across!"

Seems as if the milliners of the world are going to continue to 'push' those silly 'basket' proportioned hats, in spite of the fact that most of the well-dressed women of the world ignore them. Haven't seen any of them on the smart women in Grosse Pointe . . . those who are hat-conscious, as usual wear the types that are most becoming to them. Our choice of the 'swanky hat' ladies includes: MRS. ALVAN MACAULEY JR., MRS. CHARLES A. DEAN, JR., MRS. JEWETT DWYER, MRS. J. STEWART HUDSON, MRS. GEORGE O. JOHNSTON, MRS. HAROLD R. BOYER and MRS. ERNEST KANZLER.

The 'Know Your America' radio program dealt this week with the quiz, "Who is known as the March King?" . . . which of course, was John Phillip Sousa. We were surprised that the m.c. didn't mention the fact that Sousa got his last name quite by accident. His name was John Phillipso. When he first became popular, he wore the usual band-leader's hat with his name on the outside hat band. It read, "John Phillipso USA." So many people mis-read it, that he was finally and unanimously called John Phillip Sousa.

For those who appreciate the fact that many Southerners are still fighting the Civil War . . . we repeat the following story a woman called to tell us. She attended an auction sale in these parts, and was fascinated by an elderly gentleman, obviously from the South, complete with planter's hat, flowing tie, walking stick and goatee . . . bidding in a Suthin drawl, on a large chair, behind which stood two negro boys ready to carry it to the buyer's car. The Southern gentleman GOT the bid and as the auctioneer announced that the chair was his, the old man rose to his Southern height and exclaimed, "Who said anything about a chair, sir? I was bidding on those two boys!"

We believe everything we hear. Someone told us about an archeologists' expedition, returning to the States and having to show what they were bringing in. Everything was in order, or so it seemed, until one of the inspectors asked, "Are you bringing in any alcohol?" The men allowed as how they believed there WAS some alcohol somewhere among their possessions . . . so they all went on a hunt through everything looking for it. Finally, one of the expeditioners called, "Here it is!" What he held up for the inspector to see, was a small bottle of alcohol in which was preserved the appendix of a missionary!

Nothing like the emancipation of womanhood, we alluz sez. A great day . . . the day that women got the right to vote. It's changed the entire country to an alarming degree. Just put something into the hands of a body of women and you're all set. This mental wandering on our part is brought about by an incident that occurred on Tuesday. We telephoned a dowager who lives in Grosse Pointe City, (where Ralph Netting was running for Mayor, unopposed) and she said, "You caught me just in time. I was just leaving to vote." We politely asked WHO she was voting for. Her answer, which came after a thoughtful pause, was, "Oh . . . I believe I'll vote for Jeffries!"

We had no sooner picked ourselves up off the floor after this bit of intelligence, when our phone rang . . . Someone calling to tell us he had just returned from the City of G. P. voting center, and thought we'd be amused to know that a young woman came in, looked the ballots over and said, "Where are the Jeffries ballots?"

Wanderer's Saga Eagerly Awaited

Little Rickey Kammer, aged 4, of 409 Washington road, was a far traveller one afternoon last week. His mother called up the City police station at 4:36 p.m. and reported that Rickey had been away from home for more than 2½ hours.

Mrs. Kammer was naturally greatly disturbed. The police sent out the alarm on the radio and started a diligent search.

Finally about 5:30 p.m. Rickey came home safe and sound, and without benefit of police or any other agency. Where he had been he couldn't tell, but the saga of his wanderings will doubtless crop out in his talk for weeks to come.

November 5-11 Is Pharmacy Week

By FRED M. KOPP, R.P.H.

Some weeks interest a few people, others a great many people. Pharmacy Week, however, is of interest to the whole nation, for each individual has a stake in health.

Probably no single contribution to the well being of the whole world is as great as that made in recent years by pharmaceutical science. Magical drugs have appeared, curative devices and methods have been developed. A number of killers of humanity have been wiped out altogether.

During Pharmacy Week make it your business to inform yourself of these tremendous forward strides. You will have a great new fund of information, one that will interest all who hear you speak on the subject.

This is the 74th of a series of editorial advertisements appearing in this paper each week. Copyright

Miss Kucher Is Bride Of Sgt. Waldo Parks

Ceremony Is Solemnized in Lochmoor Boulevard Home of Bride's Parents; Honeymoon in New York

In bridal robes of ivory satin, Margaret Kucher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew A. Kucher, of Lochmoor boulevard, became the bride of Sgt. Waldo I. Parks, Jr., USMC Saturday afternoon, Nov. 3, in the home of her parents.

The sergeant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo I. Parks, of Dayton, O., and has just returned from 34 months in the South Pacific.

Margaret's gown was characterized by a heart-shaped neckline, long pointed sleeves, long fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. Clusters of orange blossoms caught her finger-tip veil of illusion, and her flowers were gardenias and stephanotis.

Dorothy Gunklach came from Dayton to be her maid of honor, and Mrs. Joseph A. Gillis, Jr. and Irene Bosch were bridesmaids.

Their dresses of shell pink satin were fashioned with high, round necklines, cap sleeves and skirts of unpressed pleats. Tiny hats of net and flowers completed their costumes. The maid of honor carried white baby mums and the bridesmaids pink.

Best man for the sergeant was Donald Mercier. The Rev. William Nies officiated at the ceremony.

A reception in the Kucher home and a dinner in the Whittier followed the nuptial service. The young couple left for New York, and the bridegroom will report to Quantico, Va. Nov. 25.

For traveling the new Mr. Parks wore a red and blue tuxedo suit with a winter white hat and navy accessories.

Van Prusun, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Mercier, of Westport, Conn.; Kay D. of Dayton; Mrs. Robert Bradford, of Columbus, O.; and Mrs. W. H. Schmeiding, of Columbus.

Tuberculosis Society Drive Group Gathers

Mrs. Jesse G. Vincent Opens Home of Three Mile Drive For Committee and Volunteers

Mrs. Jesse G. Vincent opened her home on Three Mile drive Wednesday for a meeting of the personal solicitations committee of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of Wayne County. Mrs. Edwin F. Holtzman, chairman of the committee, presided at the meeting which was attended by about 80 volunteers who will solicit larger donations in connection with the thirty-ninth annual sale of Christmas Seals, Nov. 11-13.

Tea was served following the business meeting with Mrs. John O'Brien and Mrs. Sam Keller, chairman of the women's committee for the seal sale, presiding at the table. Chrysanthemums from the Vincent garden made an attractive centerpiece.

Additional volunteers on the personal solicitations committee are Mrs. Albert T. Allan, Mrs. Perry Dekker, Mrs. H. B. Culbertson, Mrs. Mary Cook, Mrs. Harriet M. Cronenweth, Mrs. Vernon Johnson, Mrs. James M. Payne, Mrs. Sterling Rees, Mrs. Joseph P. Sullivan, Mrs. John Wilkie, Mrs. Harry Sufferin, Mrs. George Bell, Mrs. T. W. Milton, Mrs. A. The mail sale of double-barred cross seals will open Nov. 19 and continue until Christmas. Introduced in America in 1907, Christmas Seals have made possible a continuing year-round fight against tuberculosis. Great gains have been made in bringing the death rate from first to seventh place but the Wayne County rate of 50.2 per one hundred thousand is high as compared to the Michigan rate of 32.5 per one hundred thousand.

Familiar in every state of the union the red double-barred cross, an adaptation of the Lorraine Cross, stands as the insignia of America's pledge to control and eventually eradicate this disease.

ATHLETIC CLUB

Grosse Pointe lost not only a valuable athlete, but a grand gal as well when Lucy Smith left the Neighborhood Club and moved with her family to Chicago. Lou was never lacking in enthusiasm for any sport, and she played well in all of them. Her cheerful smile was always prominently displayed and her good nature and fine sportsmanship will keep her well remembered by the "gang" at the Club, and her many friends in the Pointe. We hope sometime in the not-too-distant future to have her back with us again, and extend to her our very best wishes for success in her new endeavors.

Pointe Council of Veterans' Affairs Filling Real Needs; 40 Returnees Given Advice

Work of Local Organization Expected to Increase Greatly; Many Seeking Help Are Physically Impaired

The Grosse Pointe Council of Veterans Affairs, established a short time ago by official approval and financial support of the Pointe municipalities, is getting under way.

Joseph R. O'Connor, the paid executive in charge of the work talked earnestly and informally to a NEWS man on the day by day progress and broadening of the service which the office extends to the men returning to civil life. Enquiries from physically impaired men seeking information as to the steps they should take to obtain pensions or early relief, account for more calls from service men to the office at the present time, than any other cause. The question of maintaining or lapsing their government insurance brings many to the office.

A continuance of their education under the provision of the GI Bill of Rights is prominently in the minds of many of these young ex-soldiers. There have thus far been almost no requests for advice in the adjustment of home problems from the Grosse Pointe returnees, although it is understood that such enquiries constitute a considerable percentage of all the requests coming into similar offices in other places.

About forty young men have thus far come into the office in the AWVS hut at Kercheval and Cadieux seeking advice. The tide of advice seekers is expected to swell with the increasing number of men being released from service. Most of these are from the Army as the ratio of discharges from there is much larger up to now than from the Navy.

The significant fact that with a single exception all of the visitors to the Veterans' Aid office have been bona fide residents of the Pointe, bears out the contention of Captain John O'Brien, Dr. Paul Essert and other prominent men of the community who fathered the Veterans' Council scheme in the beginning, that there would be a real local need for this form of service for our returning men.

The function of the office is to advise the ex-soldiers on any of their immediate problems and set them on their way in the right direction for getting what they need. The work will doubtless grow heavier rapidly. Just how long it will continue can only be surmised.

Eventually it will be discontinued as an emergency local post war servicemen's aid and the routine work will fall again to the National Veterans' Administration, which is a division of the Federal Government created by law and liberally supported by the government. This has been in operation ever since the close of the last war.

The office here is quartered in AWVS headquarters, but it is reported that before long an arrangement will be made whereby the Veterans Council will have the whole place.

Lives Threatened By Kids' Pranks

A resident on Bishop road called the Park police quarters Halloween night about 9:30 o'clock and reported that someone had stretched a steel cable across Grayton just north of where Grayton and Bishop come together.

On a quick examination by the Park police they found a cable of sufficient strength to practically decapitate a person running or a bicycle rider.

The cable had been strung from a tree on the west side of Grayton across to a brick wall in a lot on the opposite side of the street. An automobile could probably have broken it with nothing more serious than mangled headlights, but it was a device of real peril for others.

It was found that the wire came from a shanty belonging to the Park located on a vacant lot a little farther along on Grayton. The shanty is used for the storage of materials used by employees of the park in highway and tree trimming work. The place had been broken into.

Wall Keeps Rubbish Fire From Spreading

A big fire broke out in assorted rubbish that was waiting to be carted away in the rear of the Farms Market on Fisher road the night before Halloween.

Chief Chauvin says that a brick wall that backlogged the blaze prevented its dangerous extension before the fireman arrived. He says it was doubtless started by youngsters bent on Halloween work.

CAR RIFLED

Joseph H. Warner of 15404 Mack reported to the Park police Friday afternoon that the vent window of his car had been forced and the glove compartment rifled of several articles. His car had been parked in front of his place from 1:50 a. m. until 4:40 a. m. of the same day.

BRONZE STAR MEDAL
"For meritorious achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy in New Guinea and the Philippine Islands from 23 April 1944 to 14 March 1945, Private Newnham superbly carried out his duties as a scout on more than forty five reconnaissance patrol missions, returning with reliable information concerning the location of enemy gun positions, routes of supply, and bivouac areas, which enabled our forces to take effective action. Frequently his keen ability to analyze situations and to act promptly was responsible for saving the lives of members of his patrol. On one occasion, when our intelligence officers needed a prisoner to procure vital information, Private Newnham, at great personal risk, succeeded in capturing and bringing a Japanese prisoner. On every patrol he won the respect and admiration of his comrades by his exceptional courage and coolness under fire. His distinguished service reflects great credit on him and on the armed forces of the United States."

The decoration will be forwarded to the Commanding General, Sixth Service Command, Chicago, Illinois, who will select an officer to make the presentation. The officer selected will communicate with you concerning your wishes in the matter. My deepest sympathy is extended to you in your bereavement.

EDWARD F. WITSELL, Major General, Acting the Adjutant General.

Chimney Dweller Routed by Smoke

Mrs. Stuart P. Porter of 1141 Bishop road phoned the Park police one afternoon, recently that there was a squirrel in an upstairs room in her house, and asked if they would kindly come and remove him.

When Patrolmen Ingalsbe and Hoyer arrived they found the intruder safely ensconced in a chimney leading from an upstairs bedroom. Having left their equipment for removing squirrels from chimneys back at the police station they advised Mrs. Porter to have a gentle fire started in the fireplace. They thought the smoke would probably induce Mr. Squirrel to change his abode. It did.

Ink Swallowed By Baby Handled in Good Shape

A hurried call to the Farms police department on Monday morning imparted the information that Billy Campbell, age 18 months, of 302 Hillcrest, had just swallowed some ink.

Officers Crooks and Beaupre hustled around to the Campbell home. They reported when they returned to the station that everything was o.k.

TWO MUM SHOWS

More than a thousand chrysanthemum plants will be displayed in the spacious halls of the Detroit Institute of Arts in addition to the annual show at the Belle Isle Conservatory to enable more people to see the gorgeous specimens grown in the City's greenhouses, it was announced by the Detroit Department of Parks and Recreation. Both shows will be opened to the public on Saturday, November 10.

HOUSEHOLD HINT

Experts now advise against greasing a cookie sheet. Their contention is that cookies containing fat do not need a greased sheet; cookies without fat should not be put on a greased sheet. The cookie sheet, at the temperature used for baking cookies, causes the fat to burn, making the sheet unsightly and hard to wash. Comparative tests have shown no difference in the ease of removal from sheet or the eating quality of cookies baked on greased pans.

You can't expect warm gratitude from people if you always throw cold water on them.

Color of Paint Solves Mystery

Alvin Gardner of 1104 Wayburn parked his car about 9 o'clock Saturday night 150 feet south of Charlevoix on Wayburn. A while later when he returned he found its fenders on the left side badly crumpled up. He also found some signs of green paint on the ruins.

Two and two makes a perfect score and Mr. Gardner figured it had been done by a Lake Shore bus. The peculiar shade of the green led to this conclusion. He reported his diagnosis to the Park police, who called up the bus company office on a fishing expedition. It was a good guess all around. One of their bus drivers, Theodore Le Meux, of 22509 Kramer avenue, St. Clair Shores had just reported such an accident.

Le Meux told the police the next day that the bus had been crowded against the parked car by a car heading towards the bus, and he had been fortunate not to have been forced directly against the rear of the standing car.

He didn't know the number of the offending car and nothing could be done about it. The Park police left the settlement of the matter to Mr. Gardner and the bus company.

LOSES SIGHT

"KISS OF DEATH"

By LAWRENCE RANDALL
As Told to Mary Madison

SYNOPSIS OF THE STORY SO FAR

Coming home to Grosse Pointe, brilliant young publicist

LARRY RANDALL finds Grosse Pointe shocked by the sensational death of the girl he loves and idealizes.

MIRANDA AMES, fabulous beauty and heiress of the world's greatest motor fortune, Consolidated Motors, with her stepmother,

FAY AMES, a champagne blonde with a colorful past. LARRY RANDALL is assigned to suppress publicity on the murder by

CORNELIUS DUNN, public relations counsel for Consolidated Motors, directing the case from New York, and sending ace detective

GUY ZINGLER to aid Grosse Pointe police solve the crime, in charge of

LIEUTENANT CARROLL, homicide expert, who shows LARRY the exhibits found by MIRANDA'S body on the pier of The Grosse Pointe Golf Club. 1) match folder from The Plaza Hotel. 2) spilled face powder of unknown brand. 3) a wine menu with the autograph of the big name band leader Jock Pendleton and 4) a string of $50,000 pearls on MIRANDA'S body. LARRY vows to kill the killer. At the Lakeshore Drive estate of FAY AMES, LARRY finds her with

ROGER BROOKS, the aimless, aristocratic fiancé of MIRANDA,

DON MONACO, a hand-kissing clarinet player of noble ancestry. And MISS SNEED, the gaunt old family retainer who was MIRANDA'S former governess. The cadaverous MISS SNEED startles LARRY in the act of taking a sample of FAY AMES' face powder, as FAY enters and claims her powder case. A morbid atmosphere seems to haunt the magnificent menage of the Ames estate.

"So? Then why have they got a police guard thrown around the entrance to the Grosse Pointe Golf Club, and why are you loitering around the police station on a sultry Sabbath?" He turned to Zing. "Your face looks familiar."

Zing beamed. "I'm the fellow you saw electrocuted at Sing Sing in nineteen thirty-eight. I come back and haunt reporters who covered my death. Remember now?"

"When the Ames' statement is ready, I'll give it to you, Flash," I said placatingly. "You know me."

"Unfortunately, yes," he sneered. "You're a public relations man now, Randall. The public never heard of you and your relations don't speak to you."

"Time has insulated me from your insults, Corbett. I'll still give you the statement when there's one to give."

It was dimly cool and quiet in the Esquire Room at the hotel when Zing and I sat down to dinner. Maybe I could relax now. Maybe I could turn off the racing motor in my mind. View this situation with detachment. That was what I needed. Detachment.

I was pointing out to Zing what an opportunist Dunn was to pick this time for an appendectomy, when I noticed he wasn't following me at all.

He was staring at a girl in the entrance. A very young girl with an innocent face and childish brown hair on which slanted a saucer-brimmed hat. She had one of those figures that makes an artist grab for his brushes, a beauty parade judge for his tape measure, and an ordinary guy grab for the girl herself. Naive as a daisy and fatal as an explosion.

The headwaiter led the way to a table opposite the narrow room from us. Zing's eyes were still following her and as she sat down and glanced around, he gave her a wide, indulgent smile.

"Who's the custom body job?" I inquired.

"Her name's Imogene Gardner, at least that's the name she had the last time I saw her," he replied.

"Don't tell me you startle girls into giving you phony names?"

"Not me," Zing demurred. "The police. You wouldn't guess to look at that little buttercup that she's by way of being a genteel crook, would you?"

"I don't believe it. It's only your gangreneed outlook. Why, that girl's mother put her on the train in charge of the conductor."

"Then God help the conductor!"

"You on the level about this crook angle?" I asked.

"Sure," insisted Zing. "She's just nobody's luck. I'd rather have my path crossed by thirteen black cats walking under a ladder on Friday than run into that girl when I'm working on an investigation."

"You sound as if you'd taken an overdose of her at one time," I observed.

"She's far more deadly than the brassy blonde man-eating type. You can get a grip on the obvious ones."

The waiter took our chilled bouillon cups, put down the grilled steaks and cleared a spot for the Sherry bottle.

I said, "I seem to recall having seen her before."

"On the back of every magazine a few years ago. Modeling is her legitimate job. I wonder what she's doing in Detroit."

"Why wonder?" I said. "You're working on the Ames' case."

"That's precisely why I wonder," said Zing, with that quizzical arch of his moustache.

"What does she do that's crooked, anyway?"

"Sweet, simple, girlish blackmail for one thing. She's a genius at defrauding the males."

"Hasn't anybody ever trimmed her?"

Zing said, "Oh, I suppose you could trim her, but it's something like trimming the nails on your right hand. It's too awkward a job for most men. Like to meet Imogene?"

"If you like, and I can see that you would like it."

He scribbled a few lines on a small sheet from his note book. Imogene taped over and sat down with us. She tossed Zing a smile that thawed his air-cooled poise and lifted her star sapphires eyes toward me. They were too stary. Never trust a dog or a girl unless she has sad eyes.

"This is Larry Randall," he lifted a hand as if he were auctioning me off to Imogene Gardner.

She said, "Zing's been telling you about me, hasn't he? You're wondering how the Raphaelite cherub got into the rogue's gallery."

"Not at all," I protested. "You're not nearly vapid looking enough to be the cherubic type. Besides, you have a concave stomach."

"The man has an X-ray eye. Tell me, Zing, how you happened to recognize me the instant I came in?"

He said, "Shall I be gallant and say it's because I never remember an ugly girl's face and never forget an attractive girl's legs, or shall I be truthful and say it's because the last time I saw you I loaned you a hundred dollar bill with which I saw you bribing a cab driver five minutes later?"

"That's right. I never returned it, did I?"

She opened a bag with jade bracelet handles and lifted a roll of bills carelessly as though they were swatches of yard goods samples.

"Don't embarrass me," Zing laid a deterring hand on her arm, "I put the other one on my expense account."

"I was so grateful to you at the time. Why, that nasty old woman in Boston was claiming I'd stolen her husband."

"Which you had," commented Zing.

"Nonsense. I'm not responsible for husbands left over thirty days."

"Speaking of husbands, how's Hal?" asked Zing.

"Didn't you know I'd divorced Hal?" with surprise. "Last April."

"No," replied Zing. "I presume it was one of those Mexican divorces, effective in some states only on alternate Mondays."

"It was amiable, if that's what you mean. Hal's a lovable heel. In fact, I weakened when he wasn't feeling well this summer and took him up to Saratoga for the rest and the spring water."

"Accumulate much? Betting on the spring water?" I asked.

"In a flat as a radio gag," she smiled wistfully. "You know how Dewey's clamped down the lid on gambling. Smart boy. Some day that boy's going to be president and grow up."

"Not until he learns to ride a roulette wheel," said Zing.

So, Imogene Gardner had been at Saratoga recently. One in thousands, of course, but my interest took an upward swerve.

"When did you leave Saratoga?" I asked her.

"Friday night. I had to come here to Detroit on a business matter."

"Did you happen to be at the Piping Rock Club any time while Jack Pendleton was playing there with his band?" I put casually to her.

"You mean," she said, rippling into a smile, "was I washing dishes at the Piping Rock Club? I wasn't that broke. I've always gathered that the Piping Rock is so elusive the members themselves can hardly get into it."

Zing said, "You could get by Imogene."

She sat there, sipping her coke and dabbling listlessly with the artichoke salad. Despite her blithe camaraderie, I thought she appeared abstracted. She was figuring something out.

She was something to figure out herself. In her little Paris pinafore, with her cheeks unrouged and her nails unglazed by that bloody red polish, she was almost too ladylike to be a lady.

Zing was watching her intently, "would it be impertinent of me to ask what your little business matter in Detroit might be, Imogene?"

"Not if it wouldn't be impertinent of me to ask you what your own is," she answered.

She gave him a long look. Those eyes of hers really were meant to be looked into. By a Senate investigation. He looked long and longingly, as he said.

"Then it wouldn't work to tell you I'd just ambled out to Detroit to have a look at the Ford factory?"

"Not unless the Ford factory has just been found missing," she replied amiably. "You needn't tell me. I'll take a long shot guess at the reason you're here. How's the Miranda Ames' murder coming along?"

My fork clattered on the plate. No paper had so far printed anything about the murder. The police weren't giving out any radio bulletins beyond the statement that she was dead.

"How did you know Miranda Ames was dead, Imogene, and what makes you think it was murder," he flashed at her.

"Come, come Zing, Don't get so worked up. Maybe it's due to my knowing the right people in the wrong places, or would it be were the wrong people in the right places?"

"It's a pretty intimidating thing for you to know."

"Then she was murdered? Is it going to be such an exclusive crime that you have to have a membership in the Grosse Pointe Golf Club to hear about it?"

"Before it gets into the papers, yes," I countered.

"Oh, the papers. You mean whatever you hand out for the public to read in the papers. The largest advertiser can't be wrong."

"I resent that," I said. "Haven't

New Weed Killer Found for Lawns

Both farmers and city property owners will be interested in the new weed killer, 2-4-D, which is now being placed on the market by several companies, believes B. H. Grigsby, research assistant in botany, at Michigan State college.

Mr. Grigsby has conducted extensive tests with this and other solutions for the selective killing of weeds in various crops. Here, in brief, are his reactions and recommendations:

"The chemical, 2-4-D, appears to have limited usefulness in crop production—probably confined to corn and small grain crops. But in pastures, lawns and other areas where grasses are wanted, it is the best material that has yet appeared."

"Dandelion, thistle, mustard, nettle, bindweed, plantain ragweed, poison ivy and many other broad-leaved plants can be killed with a single application without injury to the grass. Crop plants, except members of the grass family, appear to be equally sensitive to the chemical."

"One part of 2-4-D per 1,000 parts of water is usually sufficient to kill most weeds. The action is slow, with 10 days to 2 weeks required for killing; but it is thorough. All underground parts, as well as leaf and stem, are killed."

"This chemical makes it possible to eradicate dandelion, buckham and other weeds from lawns, and to remove Canada thistle and wild carrot from pastures and other large areas they now infest. Cost of present prices is about $5 an acre."

"A knapsack sprayer can be used to apply 2-4-D to small areas; but a power sprayer is desirable for larger areas. Nozzles that produce a flat fan spray, rather than the usual cone, are more satisfactory."

you heard about the freedom of the press? The men who framed the Constitution—"

"Framed is the word," she amended. "Now that I've told you why you're in town, Zing, I'll ease your curiosity by telling you why I'm here. My business matter fell through, anyway. I came here to start a breach of promise suit and I find that this quaint state passed a law a few years ago that a woman can't institute a breach of promise case in Michigan."

"Who did you have on the spot?" Zing asked bluntly.

"Your technique is slipping, Zing. You know better than to double-cross examine me."

He said, "I get it. You're out to sell me your information on Miranda Ames' death."

"Isn't there a law against that—in Michigan?"

"You might rise to bribery, if it was high enough. I'm not out to give it, that's all," Zing told her.

Imogene slipped her bag on her wrist and stood up from the table. She slung a catch of sables carelessly over one arm.

She said, "Of course, it's only September, but there's a long, hard winter coming. I saw an ad in the New York Times today for some chinchilla coats. Straight from the highest peaks of the Andes mountains at the lowest peak price of the season, $25,000. Nice paper, The Times. They print all the new furs that are fit to wear. Well, I'll be suing you."

Imogene Gardner clicked toward the entrance. I tilted my wrist watch. I wanted to stop at the police station before going home to call Cornelius Dunn.

"Was she telling the truth, do you suppose, Zing? About having some information pertaining to Miranda's death?"

He shrugged. "Maybe. The trouble is she's just sharp enough to know always part of the truth. You have to take everything she says with a grainload of salt. The part about her coming here to sue some poor duke for breach of promise was probably true, all right. There's a lot of important money on the hoof in this town."

"Plus a lot of gullible boys of all ages," I added.

Out in the lobby, Zing clamped on his derby with an air of sudden decision. He said, "I know a couple of sources where I can check on her story. I may as well jump it."

Zing swung out of the lobby. I went over to one of the phone booths. I'd better call to see if Carroll was back yet. Through the glass of the phone booth I saw Imogene Gardner, pacing nonchalantly to and fro. I cancelled the call. She was looking as if she hadn't seen me, so I looked as if I wasn't seeing her. As I strolled by her she was talking to a bellhop she'd signalled. She was handing him that costly armful of sables.

I heard her say, "It's too warm to wear these furs. Take them up to Room 1300 for me, will you?"

Room 1300. That was Guy Zingler's room!

ODD FACT

Stagnant Follow the Leader

This picture taken at the Junior High School Halloween party in the Neighborhood Club last Wednesday night, catches much that is youth. The girls dance by themselves as the Stag Line stands by, each too timid to make the first move, each offering some advice. The females of the specie hang alluringly close, hoping some male will summon courage to make the cut-in and break the ice.

CHALKY WRIGHT and his 33 years of boxing experience proved too much for Leroy Willis and Chalky won a disputed decision in their ten round go at Olympia before 5,256 rabid fight fans.

Sat. Nov. 3
BEFORE 85,000 FANS the University of Michigan Wolverines handed Bernie Bierman's Minnesota eleven a 26 to 0 defeat, the worst licking any Bierman-coached Minnesota team has taken. The defeat knocks Minnesota out of the Big Ten race and puts Michigan in a favorable spot to cop the title.

OHIO STATE squeezed out a 16 to 14 victory over Northwestern on a difficult field goal from the 15 yard line with only a minute and a half to play in the only other Big Ten contest that meant anything to the standings.

ARMY HUMBLING VILLANOVA, 54-0, for its fifteenth straight victory and continued as the nation's outstanding eleven. While Navy played with its back to the wall most of the afternoon and was lucky to gain a 6-6 tie with Notre Dame. Notre Dame won on the one-foot line as the game ended.

Sun. Nov. 4
DETROIT LIONS weathered a snowstorm and a Boston rally to win their fifth victory of the season, 10 to 9. The game was played in a virtual swamp because of the heavy wet snow that fell before, during and after the game.

FATHER FLANNAGAN'S Boys Town team continued unbeaten when it nipped Catholic Central 14-12 before 35,727 shivering fans at Briggs Stadium.

DETROIT RED WINGS whipped an improved New York Ranger team 4 to 1 to take over third place in the standings all alone.

Mon. Nov. 5
CATHOLIC CENTRAL, although defeated by Father Flannigan's Boys Town team last Sunday will net approximately $40,000 from the proceeds paid by 42,000 persons. Chilly weather kept some of these patrons by the fireside but 35,727 braved the elements to swell the two year attendance, for this series, to a grand total of 79,266. Not a bad take for a high school.

MOVIES of the Notre Dame-Navy game last Saturday were shown at the weekly luncheon of the New York Football Writers Association today and proved the officials ruled right on the hotly disputed last minute of play. The film plainly showed that Colella did not step over the goal line after receiving Danciewicz's pass which would have broken a 6-0 tie.

Tues. Nov. 6
PONSETTO and ROBINSON, Michigan's two top notch quarterbacks, will be out of the game for the rest of the season. Ponsetto's torn knee ligaments have not responded to treatment as fast as first believed and he may have to undergo an operation. Robinson, recently discharged from the Army Air Corps, aggravated an old knee injury and was advised to call it quits for the rest of the season. This is a terrible blow to U. of M. as this leaves Howard Yerges as the only experienced quarterback on the squad with three tough games in Navy, Purdue and Ohio State coming on successive Saturdays.

BIG TEN TEAMS, staging one of the tightest conference races in history, will set a new all-time attendance record this season by drawing approximately 2,000,000 spectators. U. of M. has played to 335,000 persons and is a cinch to go over the half million mark.

PAUL SARRINGHAUS, ace halfback in 1941-42 for Ohio State, told coach Carroll Widdoes after the Northwestern games last Saturday that he was quitting the team. School News

VERNIER SCHOOL
On October 25 the fifth grade visited the Edison Museum in Dearborn as a part of its study of "Transportation". This week the fourth grade visited the museum to study the exhibits of "Colonial History" which has been a unit in Social Studies. Both groups got much to add to their appreciation and knowledge of their respective subjects. Now that transportation is available, other educational trips are planned by different groups in the school.

Ruth Ann Vernier is the new Service Captain and Gail Blum has been chosen Lieutenant. Next week the officers of the Boy's Safety Patrol will be elected.

In the October paper drive, the pupils brought an average of thirty, (30) pounds of paper for a total of 4,800 pounds.

Pupils are enjoying the clanging of the old school bell atop our building which we haven't used since the war began. We use it to call in the Service people.

While hunters search in vain for pheasants, we see them daily strutting around our building.

RICHARD SCHOOL
By JENNIE DOMBROWSKI
3B-3A

The 3B-3A group of Richard School became interested in the study of Pueblo Indians through the distribution and posting of pictures which very vividly described this new adventure. All were eager to continue the study and curiosity in seeking further knowledge regarding the whole field was intensified when the children brought Indian articles to the classroom.

How these people live, work, and play, and how they earn a living against great odds were the problems with which the third grade became acquainted. Such topics as shelter, food, trade, education, clothing, beliefs, arts and crafts of the Pueblo Indians were studied from beginning to end. The children engaged in many activities in correlation with the unit among which some were the making of a model Indian pueblo, drawing pictures, molding and painting pottery of clay, writing original stories, and preparing talks on various phases of Indian activities such as raising corn, rain dance and hunting rabbits.

Then, too, some of the less difficult sign of the Indian language was learned and of these sign designs were drawn. Discussions of the difference between Indian life, as compared with our way of living, resulted. Language, spelling, art, and other subjects all emanated from the study of the unit.

During the weeks of this project the children lived in an atmosphere of Indian life in the classroom. Each activity was infiltrated in the Indian atmosphere and at the end of the project the children developed a keener understanding of these people. They acquired a good conception of Indian life and learned to appreciate the Indian and the contribution that he has made to American life.

To gain first-hand experience and to understand the aesthetic aspects of living the children visited the Children's Museum in Detroit where an excellent display of Indian activity was in progress.

VERNIER SCHOOL
Witches, ghosts, goblins and various other frolicking characters could be seen at Vernier School last Wednesday afternoon. During the last recess period the children donned their costumes then they paraded around the school building and up Vernier road, stopping to see Mr. Martin Brines, their custodian who has been ill during the past several weeks. Later, the children returned to their classrooms where they feasted on pop-corn, apples, candy, cider and other Halloween goodies.

The fourth grade students at Vernier school entertained their parents. The children read stories, letters and original poems that they had written in connection with their Social Studies Unit on Colonial History. Other samples of their regular classroom work were displayed. The afternoon ended with a social period.

Christian Science Lecture by Florence Middaugh, C. S.

Under the Auspices of the Sixth Church of Christ, Scientist, at the Sixth Church Edifice, Kercheval and Manistique Avenues, Friday Evening, October 26, 1945

A Lecture on Christian Science
Entitled
Christian Science
The Science of Divine Mind
by Florence Middaugh, C. S. of Los Angeles, California

Member of the Board of Lecturers of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts.

The lecturer spoke substantially as follows:

Revelation
Throughout all ages signs of Christ have appeared. On Mount Sinai, when Moses thought was lifted above the drab wilderness of human experience, he saw something of the true nature of God, and he endeavored to awaken the wandering children of Israel to this revelation. It is recorded, "So Moses went down unto the people and spoke unto them; and he said, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.'"

Recognizing the power of God, Moses was able to bring forth water from a rock in a dry and thirsty land; at his word manna came down from the skies to feed the hungry multitude. Those who hearkened unto the voice of the Lord and gave ear to His commandments by keeping His statutes, were healed of disease; their identity to the law was blessed of God.

Centuries later Jesus of Nazareth declared: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; this is the first and greatest commandment of the Kingdom; the power of God through His mighty works; and those of His immediate followers, to whom the divine Spirit was revealed, were also able to heal the sick, restore the sinner, and raise the dead. In fact the final revelation of the Kingdom, which is divine, and the rule by which man utilizes this divine power, Christian Science teaches one God, one Christ, and man as God's reflection. It reveals God, divine Mind, and demonstrates man in proportion to the understanding and utilization of this revelation are the sick and sinning healed and awakened to Life eternal.

Those who have proved this can testify to its authenticity. Demonstration of the healing power of God is sufficient proof that He is here and now, as He always has been and always will be.

The Spirit of Truth
In the Bible we read of many remarkable healings. The faith and trust of many of the Bible characters in an omnipotent good was so unwavering that the thoughts and lives of those who believed were transformed and illumined. They had the spirit, but not the letter. Jesus understood more than anyone else that he did not come down to faith in and receptivity to the things of Spirit to be able fully to explain his teachings to the people. John records that Jesus said to his disciples: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth."

It was this "Spirit of truth" that was revealed to Mary Baker Eddy because she was prepared. Through many years of consecrated study of the Bible her thought was made ready. It was no coincidence that she received this revelation and was worthy to treasure it. She recognized the value of the discovery that came through her own remarkable healing, and it became her supreme desire to give this Science to humanity in a form they could understand. She knew it was the promised Comforter, that "Spirit of truth" would lead into all truth so she devoted her life to giving it to the world.

It is not easy to state spiritual truths, scientific facts, in a language which all can understand, but Mrs. Eddy accomplished this task. The truth of her revelation can be applied to the everyday needs of humanity. Christian Science is absolute, it is discernible, and clear to the thought ready to receive it.

We can be very grateful to Mrs. Eddy that her own physical healing did not constitute her ultimate goal. Her love for man was augmented by her love for God. She worked tirelessly, without faltering, in the face of terrific opposition and with little human aid, to give us this "Spirit of truth," refusing to be "turned aside or discouraged." The full expression of this revelation is found in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which she wrote.

God
Since demonstration in Christian Science rests upon a correct understanding of God, the first step is the recognition of God as All-in-all. In Isaiah we read, "I, even I, am the Lord; and beside me there is no saviour."
Christian Science gives us the ability to discern the spiritual import of the Bible, reveals the infinitude of God, and makes plain the way of redemption from sin, sickness, and death. Today many gratefully acknowledge that discord of every nature has been destroyed and eliminated from their thought and experience through the understanding which Christian Science has brought to them of Life, Truth, and Love, or God. In view of this fact, one naturally seeks to know something definite of the nature of God.

In Science and Health there is a chapter entitled "Revelation," which Mrs. Eddy has devoted to questions and answers. To the question, "What is God?" she answers, "God is incorporeal, divine, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love." These seven synonyms have become familiar to students of Christian Science and indicate the wholeness and completeness of Deity. Each one is equally important and significant, and let us consider the synonym of Mind, which has given reassurance and hope to thousands.

The fact that God is Mind is a sure basis for the understanding and practice of Christian Science, and it dispels the false beliefs which have identified the term "God" with material beliefs. The fact that God is Mind eliminates uncertainty, encourages a wider vision, and enables one to recognize God's omnipresence and to prove the redemptive power of His almightiness in everyday experience.

When we consider the commandment which Moses gave to the children of Israel, and which Mrs. Eddy says is the first command of Christian Science, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," the question arises, "What is this me?" Since God is Mind, we can interpret it to mean, "Thou shalt have no other Mind but God."
At a time when fear and limitation face men and nations on every side, the spiritual fact that there is only one Mind, and that Mind God, is a revelation that is able to destroy any foe that opposes it. Thought established on a divine basis recognizes the omnipresence and omnipotence of divine power and protection.

It is also a fact that the ideas which reveal God reflect the "incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind." By these ideas, or ideas Christian Science enriches all the avenues of human activity. Above all, it lessens fear and teaches men how to turn to God in the face of danger, and confidently expect only good. In Christian Science the textbook under the title "The Practice Illustrated" (p. 410), Mrs. Eddy declares that "Christian scientific practice begins with Christ's keynote of harmony, 'Be not afraid!'"

Fear is the first enemy to be destroyed. Christian Science reveals how fear vanishes in the presence of divine Mind, for there is nothing to fear in all-inclusive good. Any thought that does not come from divine Principle is without authority or power.
Mrs. Eddy writes in the textbook (p. 86), "Mortal mind is what it believes as certainly as it believes what it sees. It feels, hears, and sees its own thoughts." Here she exposes the fraudulent and deceptive nature of mortal mind, the counterfeit of divine Mind. Christian Science teaches that mortal mind objectifies itself in human belief.

The consciousness of divine Mind is the only true consciousness and only good. Consciousness writes in the textbook (p. 86), "Mortal mind is what it believes as certainly as it believes what it sees. It feels, hears, and sees its own thoughts." Here she exposes the fraudulent and deceptive nature of mortal mind, the counterfeit of divine Mind. Christian Science teaches that mortal mind objectifies itself in human belief.

Jesus and the Christ
Jesus patiently taught each one's individual relation to God. Christianity, as he presented it, applies to every individual. Through his healing work, Jesus showed those who were teachable how to find their unity with God. Likewise through Christian Science one discovers his spiritual selfhood as the manifestation of divine Mind.

Jesus explained the Christ and proved himself to be the Son of God. According to Christ Jesus' own statement, "Before Abraham was, I am," this Christ was far anterior to his day. He knew that the Christ is divine and incorporeal—the idea of Truth, the Principle of which is redemptive Christ, Truth, that we today are finding our true spiritual being as revealed in Christian Science.

When the coming of the Messiah was prophesied through the centuries most of the people looked for a king. So the Jews could not see the incorporeal Christ manifested by the human Jesus. The second coming of Christ was prophesied for this age, yet many are still looking for a human mediator between God and man. Christ, as we read in the Scriptures, is "the way, the truth, and the life." Christ reveals the fundamental oneness of God and spiritual man, in which is no "middle wall of partition," as St. Paul calls it, and no need for a mediator.

Christian Science Healing
Knowledge of the illness of God is a law of elimination to everything unlike good. Mrs. Eddy writes (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 24), "This knowledge is practical, for it wrought my immediate recovery from injury caused by an accident, and pronounced fatal by the physicians." Religion is Christlike only when it repeats the works, as well as the words, of the Way-shower, Christ Jesus, and this is what Christian Science is teaching us to do.
I think it would be helpful right here to read what Mrs. Eddy has written about health in "Ridiculous Mental Divine Science" (p. 11): "Health is the consciousness of the absence of pain and disease; or, rather, the absolute consciousness of harmony and of nothing else. In a moment you may awake from a night-dream; just so you can awake from the dream of sickness; but the demonstration of the Science of healing by no means rests on the strength of human muscles. Its demonstration is based on a true understanding of God and divine Science, which takes away every human belief, and through the illumination of spiritual understanding, the presence of all-power and ever-present love, which emanates health, harmony, and Life eternal."

Whether it appears as a sick body, a sick business, or a bad disposition, inharmonious is a belief in the absence of good. Destroy the false belief, Truth, and the effect disappears. The belief and its effect are one. Awaken a dreamer, and the dream vanishes, together with complications and distressing situations. In the medical world today it is frequently admitted that disease is primarily mental, that sick thoughts are expressed through the emanations of some other inharmonious condition. Christian Science teaches that all discord is mental, and the product of mortal mind, and can be healed only by divine Mind. Sick thoughts are the cause of disease, and disease they may be thought of as hatred, resentment, self-pity, discouragement, and the like. Mrs. Eddy reminds us in Science and Health (p. 400), "By lifting thought above error, or disease, and confiding persistently for truth, you destroy error."

There is always an inevitable conflict when good and evil elements seem to mingle. The discordant conditions of today are the result of believing in both good and evil, but the scientific fact, as brought out in the Scriptures, stands that "power beareth up to God." On this basis Christian Science declares that the power of omnipotent Truth is sufficient to eliminate every vestige of materiality and destruction. Genuine might is never material—it is always spiritual.

Church
Never in the history of mankind has the true sense of Church played such an important part as it does in the world's great need today. That Mrs. Eddy's discovery of Christian Science is the complete revelation of Truth, as the man who was divinely guided and protected, are evidenced by the wisdom she manifested in writing her textbook and establishing her church. The truth that she discovered is a revelation of power, available to all mankind. What is this truth? It is that God is the only power, and therefore, that sin, sickness, and death are wholly unreal. Recognizing the universality of good, Mrs. Eddy founded the Church of Christ, Scientist, to bless all mankind. Its Rules and By-Laws are designed to awaken not only faith in Christianity, but to establish in thought and practice a demonstrable understanding of Christ, Truth, in human experience.

Mrs. Eddy's discovery of Christian Science places upon Christians the responsibility for restoring the healing ministry inaugurated by Jesus that is the power of Christ, Truth, to heal sin, sickness, and death by spiritual means alone. In Science and Health we find the definition of "Church" as follows (p. 683): "The structure of Truth and Love; whatever rests upon and proceeds from divine Principle." Further, it reads, "The Church is that institution, which affords proof of its utility and is found elevating the race, rousing the dormant understanding from material beliefs to the apprehension of spiritual ideas and the demonstration of divine Science, thereby casting out devils, or error, and healing the sick."
Through the activities of the Church, Christian Science marches forward in the uprooting of paganism, prejudice, and every phase of superstition. This it accomplishes by the restoration of pure Christianity, as taught and practiced by Christ Jesus and the early Christians.

The spiritual concept of Church lifts thought to the comprehension of the real and only universe of spirit and the man of God's creating. The institution points to the utilization of spiritual understanding, whereby mankind is freed from the erroneous sense of life as mutable and destructible. The Church of Christ, Scientist, enforces and sustains all who support its teachings. It also draws those who may not be satisfied with the concept of God hitherto presented to them.

The real Church is not a material structure confined to a certain locality. It is wholly spiritual—the Church of which Christ Jesus said, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."
The Christian Science church stands for divine power-made practical in human experience under all conditions. It is founded upon the 497 of Science and Health, the tenets of the Tenets of the church, and a careful study of these Tenets reveals the spiritually mental nature of the institution whose mission is to heal and save mankind. The Mother Church and its branches maintain Sunday school where children up to twenty years of age are welcomed. At the Wednesday testimonial meetings time is reserved for the giving of healings accomplished through Christian Science.
Wherever the truth of Christian Science are demonstrated in spiritual healing, there we find Church divinely operating.

Heaven—Peace on Earth
If one believed that the testimony of the physical senses is reliable and conclusive, he would say that today we help not only ourselves, but nations, and turmoil beset men and nations. The present need is for faith, confidence, and trust. Jesus spoke to his disciples of troubled times to come, when there would be "upon the earth distress such as hath not been since the beginning of the world, until now, and such shall come." These things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads.

So now is the time to lift our own thought above sense testimony to spiritual reality. When we do this, we help not only ourselves, but others, to find a measure of peace even in the present turmoil. Discard limitation, and lack are not the truth about God's creation. Human beliefs are the direct antipode of spiritual facts. Since God is all-inclusive Love, all that exists is no room in which evil beliefs can operate, no opportunity for them to simulate or possibly to destroy eternal Life.

Sometimes we may be tempted to think we can do little to help humanity through this present-day Red Sea. As a mortal, one-day indeed feel limited and helpless. But man is not helpless; he is a child of God, reflecting the dominion of divine Mind. This spiritual fact explains the many so-called miraculous rescues due to divine guidance and protection.

The student of Christian Science who is learning to think and act from this basis of the one Mind begins to perceive everything real in terms of that which is spiritual and substantial.
The understanding of Christian Science helps one to take an impersonal view of world conditions as they appear. He learns the first step in clearing his thinking is to separate evil from persons and nations; evil thus impersonalized can be condemned. This scientific method of unmasking evil brings to light better conditions and relations everywhere. One may find himself, even though it be on the battlefield front.

This impersonalizing of evil is not always easy to do, but it is necessary in order to bring about better human conditions. Whether it be an angry argument between individuals or a war, war is due to humanity's belief in the opposite factors of good and evil, truth and error, right and wrong, constantly warring against each other. Mrs. Eddy writes in Science and Health (p. 143), "Mind is the grand creator, and there can be no power except that which is derived from Mind."
What, then, is the scientifically correct and comforting attitude in regard to the present world conflict? Is it one of dismay and despair? Obviously no. Must we submit to the apparently destructive power of evil? Should we allow our knowledge the indestructible nature of Life—God—and the immortality of man in His image and likeness? Comfort and courage are found in these words of St. John which are quoted in the Sunday service in Christian Science churches: "The love, now are we the sons of God."
World reformation and salvation can come only through the scientific power of right thinking. How often do we long to bring comfort to others in great need. In Christian Science one learns to speak a word in season to him that is weary.

The real work of every one of us is to hold steadfastly to the fact that "man is not material; he is spiritual" (Science and Health, p. 468).
Christian Scientists are doing what they can to help establish "on earth peace, good will toward men." The extent and scope of the various relief activities of the Christian Science organization are sufficient proof that its members are mindful of the needs of their fellow men. In other words, that they are humanitarians.
The love that is healing in its touch is not love only for our own country, and hatred for another—love of our own people, and resentment towards the people of other nations. The love that is healing is found in the Love that is God, Love which knows nothing of racial hostility or material conflicts. Pure Christianity teaches that heaven is not a place, but a divine state of consciousness where harmony and peace reign eternally.

Prayer
The medicine Jesus used to heal the sick was divine Mind. In speaking of raising Lazarus from the dead, Mrs. Eddy writes (Science and Health, p. 78), "Had Jesus believed that Lazarus had lived or died in his body, the Master would have stood on the same plane of belief as those who buried the body, and he could not have resurrected it."
On this occasion Jesus gave thanks for the all-power and presence of divine Life before the human evidence had changed. His prayer was not a petition that an edict of divine Mind be revoked or a spiritual law set aside. The raising of Lazarus was both a declaration and demonstration of eternal Life, for had he not given this promise, "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive"? Are we not safe in assuming that Jesus declared this well knowing that man can receive only that which God can give, and all that He gave is spiritual, and is good?

Prayers in Christian Science follow the pattern of the Master. They are pleas of praise, not mere supplications, for since God is Mind, infinite good, perfection already is, always has been, and ever will be. Nothing can be added to perfection or taken from it. Christianity teaches us to pray in such a way as to bless all humanity. Jesus never disregarded either the small or the vital rules of unselfish love. Take, for instance, the rule he gave us which we call the Golden Rule. It is that we do unto others as we would have them do unto us. To follow this rule is a living, practical prayer that never fails to bring an answer and a blessing.

In writing to an association of Christian Science students, Mrs. Eddy once said (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 139), "If you fail, or fail to fulfill this Golden Rule, though you should build to the heavens, you would build on sand." This rule bases Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, and covers every human activity. It is that we do unto others as we would have them do unto us. To follow this rule is a living, practical prayer that never fails to bring an answer and a blessing.

Do we sometimes look for the return of our love—watch to see if we are getting our just rewards? Since Love is impartial and universal, then our love, as a child of God, must pattern the divine, and seek to include all mankind in selfless affection, thus realizing our own good in that of others. We are never asked to be unlovely, but to separate evil from both ourselves and others, and love only that which is divinely true.

It is Love, reflected in impartial and universal tenderness, that heals, and feel the absence of love and feel the burden of the world. Then we can look up and out to God and learn that the remedy for all discord is the reflection of the Love that is God. Mind and Love are synonymous, therefore Love is the independence of solitude. It is the understanding of man's oneness with God which enables one to maintain a quietness of thought in the midst of the crowd of human events or in silent aloneness.
A little boy in the Christian Science Sunday School who was told he would be afraid if he were alone in the middle of the desert. He replied promptly, "No." To the further question as to why he wouldn't be afraid, he replied, "Because God would be with me. But how do you know God would be there?" The teacher persisted, and with equal assurance he answered, "Because I would be there."
A friend of mine, an officer in the army forces, proved this a short time ago. He was in the desert, ten thousand feet up in the air. This officer was a passenger on a military mission. The plane started out with a favorable weather report of only a slight mist. Some distance out, however, while flying over a mountainous range, he was overtaken by what is called a monsoon head, comparable to a hundred-mile gale coming together from opposite directions. It reached higher into the air than this type of plane had ever climbed. Immediately the plane was buffeted by two thousand feet down. There was no light, no more power to resist or control than a feather in a cyclone. They couldn't see how it could withstand this onslaught. The wings flapped ominously. Almost everyone aboard was sure the plane would disintegrate at any moment. I say almost everyone. There was one Christian Scientist among the twenty passengers. When the impending tragedy seemed imminent he felt the calm, confident assurance of God's loving care and protection; present at that moment right where they were. The words of one of our Leader's poems came to him (Poems, p. 4):

"Thou Love that guards the nestling's faltering flight!
Keep Thou my child on upward winging thought.
"Love is our refuge; only with mine eye
Can I behold the snare, the pit, the fall:
His habitation high is here, and high
His arm encircles me, and mine, and all."
He held to the comfort of these promises and with quietness was able to help the other passengers, some of whom had been through harrowing experiences in war, they said, but nothing to compare with this. In about twenty minutes the plane suddenly came out into the clear tranquil atmosphere. Instead of being over mountains, they were flying over the ocean and continued on their journey in safety. Had they been forced to land in the country over which they had just passed, they would have been interred there "for the duration." Only the Christian Scientist expected they would come out of this experience safely. To the others it was indeed a miracle they could not explain. It is heartening to note that the protection which this student of Christian Science claimed. His divine heritage included those upon whom "Thou thought, rested, 'His arm' encircles me, and mine, and all!"

Love, the Liberator
He who reads and studies the Christian Science textbook early discovers that the great purpose of Christian Science is to show the "superiority of spiritual power over material resistance" (Science and Health, p. 134). Christian Science saves men and nations from the devastating beliefs of materiality by revealing this spiritual power. This Science also teaches us to form right models of thought and keep them ever before us. It reveals to us that the kingdom of God "is within reach of man's consciousness here, and the spiritual idea reveals it" (Ibid., p. 576). To Jesus came the revelation that this kingdom of God "is within you." Christian Science teaches a practical and provable method of spiritualizing thought. Only as thought is purified can it bring into daily experience the blessing that most men long to possess.

In her Message to The Mother Church for 1901 (p. 2) our Leader has written, "The highest spiritual Christianity in individual lives is indispensable to the acquiring of greater power in the perfected Science of healing all manner of diseases." These words substantiate the statement in the Bible, "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life." This way is not arduous and joyless, for in it we walk with God. Salvation in Christian Science is individual. There is no duality in God's kingdom. One may ask how he may begin to walk that path and be sure he is on the right one. All through the Scriptures God has taught us we should live to Him alone; and as Christian Science enlarges our concept of God's love, we begin to assimilate more of the quality of the divine nature.

What are some of these qualities that the world needs so sorely today? Let us consider four in particular—love, joy, grace, and kindness. Someone may say, "Why these are the gentler types of God's nature, why not mention power, influence, and such?" Because it takes strength to manifest these qualities is the divine Love. One quality of God is no less important than another. Infinity is one continuous whole, and this infinity is indivisible.
Do we sometimes look for the return of our love—watch to see if we are getting our just rewards? Since Love is impartial and universal, then our love, as a child of God, must pattern the divine, and seek to include all mankind in selfless affection, thus realizing our own good in that of others. We are never asked to be unlovely, but to separate evil from both ourselves and others, and love only that which is divinely true.

It is Love, reflected in impartial and universal tenderness, that heals, and feel the absence of love and feel the burden of the world. Then we can look up and out to God and learn that the remedy for all discord is the reflection of the Love that is God. Mind and Love are synonymous, therefore Love is the independence of solitude. It is the understanding of man's oneness with God which enables one to maintain a quietness of thought in the midst of the crowd of human events or in silent aloneness.
A little boy in the Christian Science Sunday School who was told he would be afraid if he were alone in the middle of the desert. He replied promptly, "No." To the further question as to why he wouldn't be afraid, he replied, "Because God would be with me. But how do you know God would be there?" The teacher persisted, and with equal assurance he answered, "Because I would be there."
A friend of mine, an officer in the army forces, proved this a short time ago. He was in the desert, ten thousand feet up in the air. This officer was a passenger on a military mission. The plane started out with a favorable weather report of only a slight mist. Some distance out, however, while flying over a mountainous range, he was overtaken by what is called a monsoon head, comparable to a hundred-mile gale coming together from opposite directions. It reached higher into the air than this type of plane had ever climbed. Immediately the plane was buffeted by two thousand feet down. There was no light, no more power to resist or control than a feather in a cyclone. They couldn't see how it could withstand this onslaught. The wings flapped ominously. Almost everyone aboard was sure the plane would disintegrate at any moment. I say almost everyone. There was one Christian Scientist among the twenty passengers. When the impending tragedy seemed imminent he felt the calm, confident assurance of God's loving care and protection; present at that moment right where they were. The words of one of our Leader's poems came to him (Poems, p. 4):

"Thou Love that guards the nestling's faltering flight!
Keep Thou my child on upward winging thought.
"Love is our refuge; only with mine eye
Can I behold the snare, the pit, the fall:
His habitation high is here, and high
His arm encircles me, and mine, and all."
He held to the comfort of these promises and with quietness was able to help the other passengers, some of whom had been through harrowing experiences in war, they said, but nothing to compare with this. In about twenty minutes the plane suddenly came out into the clear tranquil atmosphere. Instead of being over mountains, they were flying over the ocean and continued on their journey in safety. Had they been forced to land in the country over which they had just passed, they would have been interred there "for the duration." Only the Christian Scientist expected they would come out of this experience safely. To the others it was indeed a miracle they could not explain. It is heartening to note that the protection which this student of Christian Science claimed. His divine heritage included those upon whom "Thou thought, rested, 'His arm' encircles me, and mine, and all!"

Fraser Hunt Will Lecture At Pierce School Tuesday

Fraser Hunt will be the speaker on Tuesday, November 13 at the John D. Pierce auditorium, Kercheval near Balfour, at 8:30 p. m. Mr. Hunt's topic will be "What's Ahead for America?"
For over 30 years, during which he has reported two world wars, Fraser Hunt has traveled on many seas and in many lands recording the world shaking events of history. He has been a Chicago news paper reporter, Mexican sugar planter, war correspondent, cattle rancher, author, lecturer and radio commentator.

His articles are published in the foremost newspapers and magazines of the world. He is the author of many books, the most recent being "MacArthur and the War Against Japan." The material for this book was gathered during his last trip to the Pacific area, where he lived with General MacArthur, whom he knows from the first world war.

Artists' Group To Meet Friday

The Grosse Pointe Artists' Association will have its first general meeting of the year on Friday evening, November 9, in the home of Mrs. Robert Hartwick on Touraine road. Don Brackett will be the guest critic.
Plans are being made for a mid-season exhibition, details of which will be announced later.

Park Pension

had previously had ample opportunity to discuss the measure and all of them expressed their approval of the plan.
In his general resume of the Park plan Mr. Gabriel brought out several informative facts.
The combined average age of the policemen and firemen is 44 years, and they have been in service on an average of 13 years and seven months.
The average of the general employees, i.e. clerks, office employees, and highway, water and collection services, is 47 years and they have been in service an average of 10.84 years.
The total allocation to the fund will be equivalent to 9.23 per cent of the current payroll of $24,000, of which 4.65 per cent will be for prior service and 4.58 per cent will represent the actuarial estimate of payments for membership service, i.e. the service rendered following the adoption of the plan.

Because the average age of Park employees is so high, due to the postponement of the adoption of a plan for many years, the relative payments for prior service are high. This is to do justice to the many men in middle life who have given years of service to the municipality without the benefit of a pension plan in force.
The same reason has boosted the cost to the village treasury. It was first estimated that this cost would run to about $21,000 per year. More conservative estimates have raised this cost to approximately $25,000 yearly.
The resolution adopted Monday night provides that the next date for its going into effect is to be the first day of the month following three full months after the plan comes into existence by reason of its adoption by at least ten municipalities.

This, of course leaves an indeterminate date for its inauguration here, but it is the confident belief of the Commissioners and Mr. Gabriel that this approval will be forthcoming at an early date. It is thought that within a couple of years it will be in force in practically every municipality in the state.
Under this plan the firemen and policemen will get about $100 per month pension, or to be exact $1197 per year. These are average figures but in almost no case will a pension fall beneath this total.
The other employees, because of their wider variation in rates of pay, will have a somewhat greater divergence from these average figures but in every instance the employe will be assured of receiving a substantial pension.

Our problem is not to get back to normal, but to go on to change—not to find a better way to do old things but a new way to do everything.

HOW DOES CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEAL?

The disappearance of organic and functional disease, as well as of trouble in other forms, is continually recorded among those who have turned to Christian Science for help.
The method of such overcoming of difficulty is prayer—a spiritually scientific manner of thinking based on the teaching of Christ Jesus.

Veteranews

from the Office of Veterans' Affairs Lansing

During the past few weeks the Office of Veterans' Affairs has received many inquiries questioning the availability of artificial limbs.

In order to provide veterans who have suffered an amputation of any limb, particularly World War II veterans, the Veterans Administration has established 12 amputation centers throughout the United States.

At these centers all problem cases, involving surgery and fitting of artificial limbs will be cared for. Normally the army and navy hospitals furnish artificial limbs, which give the wearer a chance to become accustomed to their use, but back in civil life, the veteran usually becomes more active, due to social and economic factors.

An amputation stump goes through a period of shrinkage and toughening up. During this period, the artificial limb furnished, will prove less satisfactory, and the wearer feels that centers have been instructed to furnish a new limb upon request as soon after discharge as the veteran desires it.

PERSONALS!
(Small town reporter covers big town scene.)

Michael Arlen, the writer, forgot his appointment with the dentist. Sent him a dozen roses as an apology. The dentist sent back box. Mike says it has him worried.

H. V. Kaltenborn went over to Monte Proser's gay saloon, the Copacabana, the other night and Joe E. Lewis, the funny fellow, sang the "H. V. Kaltenborn Blues" for him. Hans applauded like mad and was very pleased with the song. He said it was the first time he had heard it. Westbrook Pegler was in the night after—and Joe was very embarrassed. Sez he's getting busy on a Pegler song now.

Frank Fay, the thespian, ought to be glad he did not pick Mary Chase's other play, "The Next Half Hour" for his steady job. Not half as much fun as "Harvey." Ye Reporter found it very gloomy and talky indeed but maybe he shouldn't complain—he got in on passes.

Greg "Pappy" Boyington, the hero flying man who has been visiting our town, says he never knew New Yorkers could be so friendly-like. "Pappy" says he thinks he would like to settle down in Manhattan. Welcome, say we.

Yes Ed has received a letter from Reporter Lucius Beebe, the dandy who is in Durango, Colo. Loosh writes that Editor Lee Wood's pal, Lloyd Jones, is now editor, publisher and composer of "The Silvertown Standard and Examiner" which he runs off weekly on the 60-year-old press which once printed "The Solid Muldoon," the famous San Juan country paper of frontier days.

John Edgar Hoover and Clyde Tolson, the big detectives, have been visiting our fair city again and friends are asking how long will they remain bachelors with so many nice, eligible girls around.

Somerset Maugham, the writer, has become one of the First Nighter set—doesn't look a day over 50 either. But haven't seen Freddie Lonsdale around lately.

Sherm Billingsley, the saloonman is handling out lipsticks left and right to the pretty girls who visit his place. Sherm says he likes lipstick on women's lips. Says when he was a boy the women in his Oklahoma town hardly ever had rouge on their lips.

Recital Planned By Roland Hayes

Roland Hayes, the well-known Negro tenor, will appear in recital at the Masonic Auditorium on Sunday evening, November 11.

He has recently given concerts to capacity audiences at Symphony Hall in Boston, and Carnegie Hall in New York, and has been widely acclaimed by music critics in those cities. Of the New York concert, Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times says—

"The pleasure that was to be had in Mr. Hayes's recital—and it was a rare pleasure—was that of hearing songs for the most part of exceptional quality and interest, sung with such artistry, such sympathy and insight, such communicative power, that the very soul of the music was laid bare to the listeners."

It is interesting to note that boy killed by a bull at the rodeo were held the other night at Madison Square Garden following the regular performance, when all the spectators had left. They say one photographer had his camera smashed when he tried to shoot a picture from the balcony. Roy Rogers and his Cowboy Trio sang a farewell dirge as the caisson removed the casket from the center of the arena.

Bob Christenberg of the Astor is back in uniform. Just flew to the same sector of Europe where he lost his hand as a Marine in the last war—this time as hotel adviser to General Eisenhower and Mark Clark.

Jack Kriender, the Baron, has been bedded with a sore leg but is hoping to get out in time for the little party Toots Shor is arranging in his honor at the Stock Club. No speeches—except a little tribute by John Perona.

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mr. Hayes, always an altruist, is donating half the proceeds of his Detroit recital for carrying out a cultural program among the young people of Detroit.

Pointe and Fordson Play Scoreless Tie

Blue Devils Stave off Defeat at Hands of Tractors for First Time in 17-Year-Old Series

By FRED RUNNELLS
Football at Grosse Pointe High is strictly on the up-beat. Last Saturday afternoon the Grosse Pointe Blue Devils failed to capitalize on two touchdown passes which were in the arms of the receivers only to be dropped. If these two passes had been completed Grosse Pointe would have scored its first football victory over Fordson in seventeen years.

Back in 1928 the Fordson-Grosse Pointe series was inaugurated and each year it was the same old story, "Fordson Wins."

After the game the Fordson coach remarked that his team was lucky to escape with a scoreless tie. He had nothing but praise for the Blue Devil stalwarts for the way they battled throughout the game. He was impressed with the coolness displayed by quarterback Ed Isbey as he looked for a receiver like passing. The way tackle Earl Brabb continued to knifed through and spilled the ball carriers before they could get started and the way little Denny Thomas, Grosse Pointe's candidate for all-state selection, backed up the line on defense with all the poise of a seasoned veteran.

Most of the game was played between the 30 yard lines but on occasions both teams threatened with Fordson coming the closest to scoring. Dick Finch, Grosse Pointe end, dropped a perfect pass from Isbey, on the Fordson 12. Fordson took over on downs on its own 37 and a quick kick put the Blue Devils in a hole on their own 20. A short punt by Beer carried to the Grosse Pointe 45. A completed pass put the ball on the Grosse Pointe 13 as time was running short in the second period. At this point a lucky pass was completed when the ball was deflected off of the intended receiver's finger tips and bounced into a Fordson lineman's hands who fell on the 3 yard line. Before Fordson could put the ball in play the time keeper blew his whistle ending the first half and saved a very possible score against Grosse Pointe.

After Fordson had kicked off to Grosse Pointe to start the second half the Tractors got possession of the ball after an exchange of punts on the Blue Devil 38. Two line plays gained nothing but a third down pass placed the ball on the Blue Devils 30. It was here that Denny Thomas rose to the occasion and batted down a touchdown pass on fourth down to give the Devils the ball on their own 30.

The Blue Devils really got mad and started a drive from the 30 with Isbey, Beer, Garman and Champagne toting the ball all the way to the Fordson 35 where the attack bogged down and Beer punted out of bounds on the Fordson 22.

Fine Quick Kick
Fordson got off a beautiful quick kick which was downed on the Blue Devils 9 yard line. Again the Blue Devils started a drive which netted the Pointers two first downs and the ball was on the Devils' 45. A quick exchange of fumbles and Grosse Pointe had the ball on their own 36. Beer crashed through for 7 yards and Harry Garman bucked the center of the line for a first down on the Fordson 49. An end run by Isbey gained nothing but as he was being tackled he attempted to lateral to Beer but it was intercepted on the Grosse Pointe 43. Fordson was determined to score and completed a pass on the Blue Devils 29, but Beer tackled the receiver so hard that he fumbled and Earl Brabb recovered on the spot.

It was the Blue Devils who were determined this time and Garman put another first down in the bag on his own 40. Louie Champagne, not to be outdone, made it first and ten when he crashed through to the midfield stripe. Beer kept the drive going by knifing through tackle to the Fordson 31 for another first down. The Blue Devil stand began yelling "we wanta touchdown" but their cries were in vain as Fordson stiffened and four plays netted one yard for the Pointers.

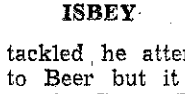

Fordson punted to the Blue Devils' 18, where Isbey brought it back to the 21. Two rushes and a penalty give Grosse Pointe another first down but the Blue Devils just couldn't make another drive. Beer put Fordson in a hole in the closing minutes of the game when he punted a fifty yard kick to the Fordson 20. Earl Brabb, on the first play, ripped through the Tractors' line and nailed the ball carrier on the 12 yard line.

Ed Isbey came up with the game-saving tackle on the next play when he nailed the ball carrier from behind on the Fordson 33 yard line as he was getting into the clear. If Isbey hadn't gotten him there it is doubtful if the game would have ended a scoreless tie.

Grosse Pointe at this time is in third place in the Border City League standings and it is possible it may end the season standings in a tie for second place, the highest a Grosse Pointe team has ever finished. If Wyandotte beats Fordson next Saturday this will be possible.

The Blue Devils hit the road next Saturday when they meet Port Huron, at Port Huron. This team shellacked the Devils last year.
