THE MARCH OF THE MUSES IS ON! THE NINE GAY GIRLS—FROM TERSICHOE TO Trivia—are waiting into town for The Season. Before the trees have done a strip-lease, we shall all be knee-deep in culture and swooning with the Dreamy Damself of Art, Music and the Drama. For, scheduled for October are The Opera, The Symphony, The Ballet and the dear old Thither Gild.

So the time has come, Boys and girls, to take the deep sea marbles from the vaults, unlash the crinoids from storage and let the little pink and blue and green cheeks fly like confetti to make gay the stay of The Muses in our midst.

Some of the Carnegie Hallboys may have a way of prodding our inferiority complex and making us feel crude and middle-western, by implying that any culture that creeps west of the Hudson is just a weak voice crying in the wilderness—music to soothe the savage beast.

Ask any editor of a national magazine what he wants to print about Detroit and Grosse Pointe, and he's apt to come up with three standard choices—the housing (or coming) situation; a union strife story; or how to be a millionaire in 10 uneasy lessons. True, about a month ago, one magazine kept featuring Juvenile Delinquency on the cover. All that blurb evoked in us was a memory of the perennial bachelor who, when he was chided with the remark: "You don't want to contribute to Juvenile Delinquency, do you?" replied "Sure! How much?"

Granted that some of us who go cavorting with culture can't tell a phony from a symphony, the fact is that we both patronize all these musical and dramatic events in the grand manner. The answer is in the box office. "Was ever thus." If there were no patrons of The Muses, there would be no music nor drama nor art. Literature we exempt, because once a writer learns to write checks, he becomes spell-bound, just signing his own name.)

Princes, poets and peasants were united in their support of The Old Masters, when they were still Young Masters—with the Princes acting as royal sponsors of the finances. The poets came to get a good emotional glow. The peasants came for the show as well as the glow. And the show took place on both sides of the footlights. The jewels, the furs, the swish and swoosh of silks and satins were all part of the time honored performance.

And though a lot of social smutge has been stirred up in the noble melting pot since Birdie Vanderbilt used to put on her big act for the photographers in the lobby of The Met, the public still goes to see as well as hear. There is something universal in the urge to splurge. And poets, peasants and patrons of the arts are still one when the leader lifts his baton.

VERY GRIM FAIRY TALES

ONCE UPON A TIME THERE WAS—AND STILL IS—A PAIR of rich Twins named Jill and Till, born in a mansion that looked like a Jumbo Size Wedding cake. It had so many rooms that when they entertained they had to have Desk Clerks.

The Twin's family was old and ripe as Roquefort, but as time marched on, the green around the edges was moist and hot money. When they finally squeezed through Spence, they first heard that word—Ex-Spence. Shortly after, Dad had a formal invitation from the Bureau of Eternal Revenue to go down to Brass Tax.

Now, The Twins had always bought alike, but not thought alike. Till, who could pick a two-finger tune on a typewriter, hid herself to The Last National Bank and came up with a job as a Strictly Private Secretary to one of the Carnation Charlies. Being a Vice-President—though not in charge of Vice—he felt he was doing his Good Deed for The Century in hiring the Bankrupt Gentry.

she'd be living on the Corner of Dun and Bradstreet.

On the day of the wedding bells jerked Carnation Charlie out of the covers like an alarm clock, Jill had it out with Till. But Till was so used to the Social Security of her job, she wouldn't give it up for the Social Insecurity of her home.

There was only one way the Twins could both Win—split shares in Carnation Charlie. This they did. And it's a tossup who really holds the controlling interest in him.

Till has him from Nine to Five; Jill has him from Five to Nine. Charlie has graduated from wearing a Carnation to wearing a Camellia. And all he has to do is keep up a bowing-and-scraping acquaintance with the Town Car Customers.

He's spread a bit thin, but maybe the Twins did Win.

AFTER ALL, HALF A LOAFER IS BETTER THAN NONE.

Pointers who Summer in East Hampton . . . met Mrs. Kelly some Summers ago . . . and were charmed to learn that she was the wife of Thomas Kelly who years back had come to Detroit in his business career . . . and joined the stagline of the day . . .

NEW YORK DEB

June Kelly was a darling of New York society as a debutante . . . even then she was interested in singing . . .

Her parents . . . saw to it that she had the finest voice teachers New York could offer (her father is Harry Belas Hess, founder of the first great mail order house in the United States) . . .

Following her engagement announcement to Tom Kelly . . . and subsequent marriage . . . friends and family thought musical ambitions had slipped into the background . . .

On the contrary June Kelly never discontinued either lessons OR practicing . . . they just weren't subjects of general knowledge . . .

BLIZZARDY AUDITION

It seems that one day last Winter . . . she read in a New York paper Francesco Pelesi . . . artistic director and general manager of the Philadelphia La Scala Opera Company was auditioning singers for the 1947-48 season . . .

She set down and wrote a note . . . asking for an audition . . . signing her name "June Kelly" . . .

She received a reply . . . and an audition date . . . The date fell on a blizzardy day . . . June Kelly kept the date, music in hand . . .

She set in the chilled opera house at Philadelphia . . . awaiting her turn . . . and we are told by the Opera people . . . that when her soprano voice filled the auditorium . . . everyone forgot the cold . . . just listened, enchanted . . .

Mr. La Paloski signed June Kelly to a three year contract . . .

PARTIES TO FETE OPERA STAR

Mrs. C. Henry Buhl . . . who at the moment is in the East . . . depositing her young charmers in their respective schools . . . June Kelly is planning an opera supper to fete her friend . . . June Kelly and members of the opera company during the Philadelphia La Scala season . . .

Already set . . . is the tea for which Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm MacDonald have issued invitations this coming Sunday . . . at their home in Mirabeau place . . .

(Incidentally one of the guests at the tea will be the MacDonalds' guest, Mrs. A. Morgan Maree, Jr. of Los Angeles, the former Elizabeth Cady of Detroit) . . .

Guests include: Mr. and Mrs. Harley J. Earl . . . Mr. and Mrs. Allen Macaulay Jr. . . . Dr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Hudson . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Boyer . . .

Rays on Honeymoon In Colorado Springs

Patricia Duane Speaks Her Vows at St. Ambrose, Fr. Francis Van Antwerp Officiates

Honeymooning in Colorado Springs after their marriage Friday at St. Ambrose Church are Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Ray. The former Patricia Duane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Duane of Buckingham road and Mr. Ray's parents are the William A. Rays of Westchester road.

Fr. Francis Van Antwerp read the service in the morning before an altar arranged with white tapers, white chrysanthemums and baby mums.

Antique rose point lace, worn by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Edward M. Murphy, and by her mother, Mrs. Edmund Duane, trimmed Patricia's wedding gown of ivory satin. A low rounded neckline accented the fitted bodice of the dress and the long tapered sleeves ended in points over the bride's hands. The classic simplicity of the gown was echoed in the plain full skirt sweeping into a circular train.

Rose point lace formed the mantilla-style veil which extended just below Patricia's waist. She carried a spray arrangement of ivory camellias and baby white carnations.

The bride's sister, Millicent Duane, was her only attendant. She wore a gown of imported French illusion and Chantilly lace in a vibrant orange shade. Her headress was also a lace mantilla and she carried Birds of Paradise flowers. Arthur G. Kirchner, Jr., attended Ray as best man. John Verbiest, Harry MacDonald, Jr., John Van Loom, Jr., William Brown, Howard T. Keating, Jr., and Raymond Farr seated the guests.

Arrangements of white gladioli and fugi chrysanthemums decked the living room of the Duane home for the reception. Mrs. Duane received her guests in a floor-length dinner suit of gray with which she wore a matching hat. A fuchsia gown was chosen by the bridegroom's mother and her ostrich plume hat shaded from fuchsia to rose.

When the couple left on their wedding trip, the new Mrs. Ray was wearing a black suit with leopard hat and bag. She carried a beige coat. On their return, the Rays will be at home on Fairhome road.

Rep. Harold F. Youngblood, Michigan 14th District, established an outstanding attendance record, 84 percent perfect, during the first session of the 80th Congress, a recent survey of the official Congressional Record revealed.

Even an unusually high average of 87 percent attendance for the House as a whole, did not dim the lustre of Youngblood's record. Out of the possible 77 roll call on legislative matters, the average Congressman cast his vote 67 times. Youngblood voted 72 times.

The Michigan 14th District's vote was faithfully utilized during the session.

Caution Urged To Avert Burns

"Michigan people should use National Fire Prevention Week to save their own lives and their children's lives from fires, burns, explosions and asphyxiation in their own homes," Dr. J. Altland, acting commissioner of the Michigan Department of Health said today. Fire Prevention Week began Sunday and ends Saturday.

"Too many people gasp in horror at hotel and public building fires and forget that in Michigan six times as many people die from fires, burns and explosions occurring in their homes, he said. "Thousands of others in their own homes suffer painful fire injuries which may require hospitalization or result in serious disfigurement or handicap for life." Beautiful fall bonfires take serious toll of the lives of small children who fall into them, and others, whose clothes catch fire will carry ugly scars throughout their life, Dr. Altland pointed out.

Michigan has 605 children whose crippling conditions were caused by burns, according to Dr. Carleton Dean, medical director, Michigan Crippled Children's Commission. More than 65 per cent of children crippled from burns are under six years of age, the commission's records show. Burns take their greatest toll among the very young and the very old, those least able to help themselves, but no age is free of home fire fatalities, health department records show.

City Patrolmen Find Stripped Stolen Auto

While cruising at 6 a. m. Monday, Oct. 6, Patrolmen Reame and Keeler of the City saw a car parked in front of the Hanstein school, north of Mack, which they thought answered the description of a car reported by the Detroit police as stolen at 12:33 that morning. It was minus front wheels and tires. The thief had done a quick and thorough stripping job. It was towed in and the Detroit Auto Squad notified.

time to see his coach pulling away from the curb. An alarm was immediately broadcast and the coach was picked up, some time later, at Bates and Jefferson by the Detroit police but minus the much-wanted driver. He apparently had taken a somewhat circuitous route downtown as he had sideswiped cars at Kercheval and Ashland and at Lakewood and Jefferson. The coach company is anxious to contact the gentleman and Detroit and Grosse Pointe police are on the hunt. The odds are against them as the Juggernaut driver left not even a wee finger print.
