Yo ho ho!

My, my, my, but our Turkish sailor does get around. Do you all remember Semih Yilmaz, the Turkish sailor who dropped a message in a bottle in Lake St. Clair some time ago asking for a beautiful Canadian or American girl to write him? Is there anybody who possibly isn't familiar with this story?

Well, old Semih is apparently getting a lot of action. I wrote two weeks ago about Tracy Edwards, a Vermont college student who was writing Yilmaz, who's currently aboard a Liberian tanker plying the ports of Africa and the Middle East, and now I've received a letter from a Barrington Road resident who's also corresponding with Yilmaz.

She and S.Y. are apparently pen pals and so far she's received two Turkish pamphlets, five letters, one black and white photo, one color photo, three postcards and nine stamps.

Our local writer has also been bitten by the message-in-a-bottle bug and has dropped two bottles into the lake and four into Fox Creek. She's hoping someone finds her messages so she can begin corresponding with someone else as well.

I hope she's successful because it's starting to sound like a fun way to start a friendship.

Heck, I'm even thinking about dropping a few bottles into Grand River myself. Or would Grand Rapids be better?

Happy endings

Don't tell me this newspaper doesn't have a heart. Last week we received a classified ad in our lost and found column from a lady desperately seeking her lost cockatiel.

Her ad read: "If you see my bird, in any condition — gray cockatiel, yellow crest, red circles on cheeks. Flew away from Grosse Pointe Park home on Monday, May 20. Call anytime, please contact immediately."

We were at press and about to print the ad when another ad destined to run the same week caught the eye of News classified staffer Eve Marie Burcar. It ran: "Found May 20th, healthy, friendly, cockatiel in the neighborhood of Windmill Pointe and Tromley."

Eve Marie immediately made the call. After all, how many cockatiels can there be flying around the Pointe? Bird and owner were happily reunited.

Point of interest, the Grosse Pointe News didn't make a cent on the deal, and wouldn't have even if the ad had run. Lost and found ads in our paper involving pets are free.

Another point of interest — Eve Marie herself a big bird lover. You can recognize her desk at the News by the prominently displayed color photo of her pet blue and gold macaw, Sam.

Trees please

I love this guy one, so here goes. Ten thousand "attaboys" to state Sen. John Kelly who presented youngsters from the Girl Scout and Brownie troops of Richard School and St. Clare of Montefalco with 200 saplings of Red Pine.

Senator Kelly gave the youngsters the trees in a small ceremony last week to celebrate the continuance of Project Re-Tree, an effort to provide the Pointe with new trees to replace the hundreds lost to Dutch elm disease.

Troops receiving the trees included Girl Scout 843 and Brownie Troops 2226 and 612 of Richard School and Junior Troops 1393 and 1060 and Brownie Troops 868 and 1455 of St. Clare.

Sure hope I got it right this time.

Injury delays first female cadet's plebe year

By Nancy Parmenter

Like the proverbial good news-bad news jokes, Joey Ann Johnston was out, in, and out again of the West Point class of 1989, all in the space of a couple of weeks. She would have been the first female cadet from the Grosse Pointes.

Miss Johnston, a South High athlete, had to decline her appointment to the academy when she hurt her knee in a key soccer match against Utica three weeks ago. She tore two ligaments and a muscle, but is determined to overcome it, although she will probably have to wear a brace to play competitive sports.

"I heard it rip — it sounded like cardboard," she said resignedly.

Because freshman cadets have to undergo a rigorous boot camp for two months before the academic year starts, her injury disqualifies her physically.

She remains optimistic that she will be admitted next year, however. Letters from her congressman, George Crockett, and senator, Carl Levin, have assured her of their continuing moral support.

"I don't like to promise anything 100 percent, but if Congressman Crockett gets behind someone, he'll stay behind her," said congressional aide Tony Rothschild.

Rothschild said that each congressman has five nomination slots and may nominate two people for each slot. Because Crockett uses an open nomination procedure, Miss Johnston can still gain admission even though 10 new candidates will be named next year, according to Rothschild.

With a letter of recommendation from her congressman, Miss Johnston "won't even have to be the best. She could be the worst of the 10 and still get in," Rothschild said.

Miss Johnston said she has decided to spend the year before her next chance at admission studying at the University of Michigan. But her thoughts still focus on the academy.

"Some of my friends thought I was crazy," she said. "They'd ask me why I didn't go to a regular college and have some fun."

She thinks the academy will be fun. "All the cadets I've talked to say they love it," she said. "It'll be kind of fun, but I guess I can picture myself calling home crying, too, because everybody does it."

She worked hard for months to get into the academy. Besides the usual SATs and other academic tests required by most colleges, candidates for the academy must take a series of physical tests. Applicants who cannot complete the running, jumping and throwing requirements are automatically disqualified.

"The arm hang was the worst," she said. Female applicants must do an arm hang in the chin-up position in lieu of the chin-ups required of the men. "I worked out every day for months with my gym teacher, but it was the hardest thing for me. Otherwise, the physical exam isn't very hard for an athlete, because you're already in shape."

Miss Johnston thought she had crossed every hurdle the Army could put in her path when she took a treadmill test a month ago to prove to the admissions authorities that a childhood respiratory infection had been misdiagnosed as asthma. But only a week later, her admission once again on a sound footing, she hurt her knee.

"(Admissions officer Col. Jerry) Stonisch came to see her in the hospital with a West Point jacket, her certificate of admission, and a rose," said the young woman's father, Robert.

Stonisch, area liaison officer for the academy for the last six years, said Miss Johnston's appointment next year is "in the bag."

"The academy will send her the letter of assurance," Stonisch said. "Joey definitely 100 percent will get that letter."

Not all candidates in Miss Johnston's position would receive a letter of assurance, according to Stonisch, but "the academy likes her and they don't want to lose her."

"All" she has to do to start at the academy next July is maintain a B average at the University of Michigan ("I told her not to get any Cs," Stonisch said) and pass the Army physical again.

"She aced it before," he said. Spending a year at U of M does not mean she will enter the academy as a sophomore, however. She will be able to receive credit for her courses, but four academy years will still be required. "She'll still be a plebe," Stonisch said.

The academy searches for well-rounded students who show intelligence and leadership potential, which Stonisch says Miss Johnston has. "I believe that if she stays in the Army, she'll have a star," he said. "She'll be a general."

Miss Johnston has already started a modest therapy program, which will begin in earnest when her mid-thigh cast comes off near the end of June. She wants to be sure to be ready when her next academy opportunity arrives.

"I worked hard for it," she said. "This is just another setback. I'm not going to let it stop me."

South High senior Joey Ann Johnston ran into a streak of bad luck when a soccer injury forced her to give up her appointment to West Point. But she hopes for a rebound that will see her playing soccer and basketball competitively at the academy in the class of 1990.

Police chief named

The city council voted to confirm the appointment of Richard J. Caretti as police chief of Grosse Pointe Park Tuesday night by a 6-1 vote. Councilman Vernon Ausherman was the lone dissenter.

By Pat Paholsky

Park residents will be looking over their new police chief this week if the council confirmed City Manager John Crawford's appointment Tuesday night. Whatever action was taken came after the paper went to press and there will be a complete report in next week's issue.

Crawford, who appointed Richard J. Caretti, third precinct commander of the Detroit Police Department, said he anticipated the council would confirm his appointment. Caretti, who has 32 years experience in law enforcement, has a long list of credentials including a master of science degree in criminal justice from Michigan State University.

He is the preferred candidate of both the Technical Standards Committee and the citizens committee which reviewed the 127 applications that were received for the position, Crawford said. He added that both committees, one comprised of law enforcement officials and the other of citizens, performed an invaluable service to the community by lending their expertise and professionalism to a critical selection.

The technical committee narrowed the list of applicants to seven and the citizens committee then pared it down to four candidates. Crawford gave the names of the top four candidates May 11 and he then conducted his own interviews.

In a move to rouse the citizenry over the selection, fliers were distributed to households in the Park this past weekend. Called The Park Page and signed by Paul W. Smith, the flier urged residents to attend the meeting and demand citizen input in the choice. "Your life could depend on it," it said.

The flier said that Mayor Palmer Heenan favored Detroit Police Detective Dennis Dellacqua, and Councilman John Prost, who originally supported Dellacqua, was now in favor of Caretti, Crawford's choice.

Heenan and Smith were not available for comment. Prost, who said he had not seen the flier last

Study of street closings given to Park Planning Commission

By Pat Paholsky

The volatile issue of street closings in the Park will not be decided easily or quickly, residents who attended a May 21 Planning Commission meeting discovered.

Commissioners received the preliminary results of traffic and crime studies begun by the city last year after an ad hoc committee was appointed in September to study the problem. A rash of street-closing requests prompted the action.

The chairman of the Planning Commission, George Helm, said, "We felt that to try to cover all of the Mack Avenue (requested) closings at this time would be inappropriate."

The study divided the city into six sub-areas, including the 1000 blocks as well as the 1400 blocks for purposes of comparison.

The areas were designated as follows: bounded by Mack and Charlevoix, from Cadieux to Whittier — Area 1; from Whittier to Balfour — Area 2; from Balfour to Wayburn — Area 3; and areas bounded by St. Paul and Jefferson, from Wayburn to Balfour — Area 4; from Balfour to Whittier — Area 5; from Whittier to Cadieux — Area 6.

"The final resolution was that we would direct our attention to Area 3 and do not work on the other districts until that's settled," Helm said.

The committee recommended that any improvements to the streets along Mack be conducted on an area-by-area basis in order of Area 3, 1 and finally, 2. Improvements were defined as anything including street closures and one-way street changes to parking and traffic regulations.

The 24-hour traffic counts showed significant increases in vehicular traffic traveling from Cadieux to Wayburn. Area 1 averaged 1,108 vehicles in 24 hours, Area 2, 1,633, and Area 3 registered 1,847 vehicles traveling the streets.

The study concluded that Area 3 had more problems, including limited parking, due to business owners, patrons and residents competing for spaces. Since on-street parking is limited, many residents park in alleys that are frequently blocked by trucks loading and unloading. As a result, the study reported that residents are forced to drive around the block to get into the alleys.

The most traffic was recorded on Beaconsfield (2,443) and Lakepointe (2,219) with Somerset, a dead-end street, recording the least with 329 vehicles during a 24-hour period.

The report said that traffic volumes of 2,000 or more vehicles a day should be considered undesirable due to parking on the streets and the relatively large population exposed to the traffic.

Area 3 has 676 residents which includes 119 school-age children, living in 244 dwelling units. There are twice as many residents in Area 3 as there are in the other areas bordering Mack and it has nearly triple the dwelling units.

The report said that traffic volumes in Areas 3, higher due to greater number of people living there, would further increase when Nottingham is closed at Jefferson as part of a plan to build a medical complex on that corner.

Residents attending the meeting suggested widening Whittier, more traffic lights and a plan to divert traffic so that vehicles could not travel straight through from Mack to Jefferson.

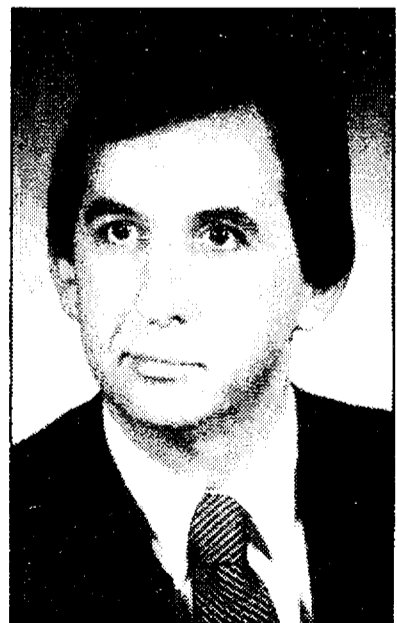

"I would say we are going awfully slow, but I think with a matter this important, we have to give it intensive study," Helm said. "We are not going to make a decision on this bang, bang, bang. We are not shooting ducks."

With the first step of the study completed, the second step is to obtain citizen input as well as the cooperation of local businesses and possible solutions. The third step will be implementing improvements, with significant changes, such as street closings, referred to the Planning Commission for its study and recommendations.

Helm added that he didn't think the city could legally close all of the streets from Wayburn to Cadieux. "The minute you close one street, that traffic's going elsewhere and the old adage is it depends on whose ox is being gored."

"It's a knotty problem," he conceded.

Board candidates talk about schools

Carl Anderson

Carl Anderson is a special needs teacher in St. Clair Shores. He has also held a variety of other teaching and administrative positions as well. A doctoral candidate at the University of Michigan, Anderson holds degrees from Wayne State and Northern Michigan universities and U of M.

Anderson and wife Judy have two sons who attend local schools. He has been an active volunteer in the system, serving on the Ferry and Parcels PTO, North Parents' Club, the Excess Space Study Committee and was a participant in the Governor's Education Summit Task Force. A millage election volunteer, Anderson is also recipient of the school system's Outstanding Volunteer Award.

Ernest Buechler

Dr. Ernest Buechler is the only incumbent seeking re-election in this year's school board race. A Woods resident and father of three, Buechler has spent the last 12 years as principal of Wayne Elementary School on Detroit's east side, a K-5 school with 740 children.

Unlike last year's election, this year's race for the two places on the board is relatively quiet. The reason for that is two-fold, Buechler says.

There aren't the major issues this year to enliven the race, he says. Also, a lot of coming together of a lot of groups has occurred during the past year, resulting in a tremendous quietness. The board now works in close harmony, he adds.

One very positive change this

Carol Marr

Carol Marr holds a bachelor of arts in English and speech and was middle school teacher for five years. She has also spent two years on the board of directors of Child Care Center and was a parent member of the Early Childhood Study Committee for the public schools.

A Sunday School coordinator for three years, Mrs. Marr is a member of the Michigan Association of Children with Learning Disabilities. She, husband William, and their two sons, aged 5 and 7, are residents of the Farms.

She has several reasons for running for the school board. With two children in the early grades in the system, she has a vested interest in the future of the schools, she says.

Cindy Pangborn

Cindy Pangborn is a lifelong Grosse Pointe resident. A graduate of Northwood Institute, Mrs. Pangborn has 17 years experience as a special education, music and Sunday School teacher. She is also a member of Kerby PTO, Health Education Council and Theatre Arts as well as St. Paul Lutheran Church.

The Pangborns' three children attend public school. Her husband, James, is vice president of Arrow-Weldit Sales and Engineering.

Mrs. Pangborn said one of the reasons she is running is because she feels she can be a positive influence on continuing the fine education system. There has been a great deal of turmoil in the past two years, and she can be a healing

School candidate Buechler

year is the choice of Dr. John Whritner as the district's new superintendent, Buechler says. Unlike others who have seemed to want to use the position as a stepping-stone to another district, Whritner appears to be a man willing to finish his career in Grosse Pointe, he adds.

"The feedback we have received about him has been very positive," Buechler says. "Dr. Whritner is a real decent man who will be an excellent leader. He is trying to listen to everyone to get the consensus of the community before he sets goals for the system."

That deliberate approach contrasts with Whritner's predecessor in the superintendent's office, Dr. Kenneth Brummel, Buechler says. Brummel, in his three years in the district, proposed a number of changes, the most hotly opposed of which was the reorganization of schools, originally calling for the closing of four buildings. The board eventually closed one school and moved the sixth-graders into the middle schools, he adds.

Moving the sixth-graders appears to be working out very well, Buechler says.

Buechler said he is excited by this year's budget and some of the improvements it includes. The addition of two science consultants, although costing $60,000, will help strengthen the elementary science program, he says, adding that the middle schools, with this year's purchase of equipment, will have an average of one computer for every 11 or 12 students.

Science and computer education are important curriculum areas, Buechler says. Computers will be used in everything in coming years, not only in traditional electronic careers, he adds.

The district also faces some serious building maintenance needs, he says. The district is eventually going to have to look for energy conservation methods in its buildings and some of the options are initially very expensive, although they return the purchase price over a number of years in savings on utilities, he adds.

Buechler said he has two areas of concern about curriculum. Math scores in the district, although among the best in the state, aren't as good as they could be. The district should reassess its math curriculum to make sure it is getting the most current material available into the hands of students.

The district's art curriculum should be strengthened for children in elementary and middle school, he adds. "If you can get students interested in elementary and middle school, that interest will carry through into the upper grades," Buechler said. The same holds true for computer education, he adds.

It's almost too early to tell if the institution of the seven-period day is positive or negative, Buechler says. One of the remarkable things in the first year it was offered was the number of math and science classes that students chose to add to their six-period days. The seventh period does offer students more educational opportunities, however, he adds.

There is a strong commitment in the district to special education, evidenced by the addition next year of two programs that will offer local children help in their community, instead of sending them to center programs in other areas, Buechler says.

"Dr. Whritner said that the district has to meet the needs of each and every student in the district. We have some very strong feelings about it... I think it's important we continue programs like developmental kindergartens," he adds.

About 800 students from the district receive some kind of help through the special education department, headed by Dr. Claire Hunt, who has been meeting with parents to find out what their concerns and needs are, he adds.

Two problems the district continues to face are declining enrollment and increasing shortage of teachers in special fields like math and science. While the continued drop in middle and high school populations are cause for concern, the district may probably escape the worst of the teacher shortage, Buechler says.

Quality districts like Grosse Pointe will always be able to attract qualified teachers because of their reputations for excellence and commitment to high standards, he adds.

The district should develop a five- and 10-year plan to deal with enrollment loss, Buechler says. The district needs to explore alternatives such as program sharing with other districts and may eventually have to consider further consolidations, he says, adding decisions on that won't be coming soon.

"It is as we predicted; the enrollment decline is moving up into the middle and high schools," Buechler says. "We have to start reassessing and analyzing the problem... and have to start looking at it and planning for it."

By developing criteria for consolidations, there won't be any surprises when they are met, Buechler says. The community will know what to expect and why it is happening.

The system needs to market itself better, Buechler says. Close to 25 percent of the school-age children in the district attend private schools and the district has to get its message out to those parents to try to attract some of them to send their children to public schools.

In the old Barnes district, a large percentage of the school-age children attended private schools, Buechler says. "If we could have attracted 30 to 40 percent of those children, we wouldn't have had to close the school," he adds.

The district offers programs at the upper levels that can't be matched by the non-public schools. Able students can choose a variety of challenging classes at public schools, he adds.

Although declining enrollment should mean declining costs, some of the items in the budget are rising faster this year than ever, Buechler says. Insurance premiums and utility costs have jumped in past years and driven up the costs of running the system.

People who have no children in the public school system will continue to support it because of the services the district offers to all age groups through continuing education and the use of that building, Buechler says. A quality public school system enhances a quality community it serves, he adds.

"I really enjoy working on the board," Buechler says, adding it's "not an easy job, but a rewarding one." He says he would like to return to the board to continue "to provide excellent school programs for our children."

Troop 96 honors 6 scouts who achieve highest rank

Six young men, all from Boy Scout Troop 96, distinguished themselves by earning scouting's top honors, the Eagle award. They were honored at ceremonies May 20 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Only 1 percent of all scouts achieve the rank of Eagle, and Scoutmaster Dave Steele said, "It is indeed unusual to have six scouts from one troop become Eagles in a single year."

They are Jamie Barlow, son of J. Lee and Evelyn Barlow of the Park; Lawrence Scoville, son of Laurence and Lynn Scoville of the City; Kirk Sanders, son of Leslie and Sylvia Sanders of the City;

Ronald Penszik, son of Gerald and Wendy Penszik of the Farms; Michael Coles, son of Dr. Thomas and Nancy Coles of the City; and Phil Antonson, son of the Rev. David and Judy Antonson, formerly of the Park.

Steele said each scout earned merit badges for his skills in woodcraft, physical fitness, emergency preparation and citizenship. To attain the rank of Eagle, each boy had to organize a community service project which involved an extensive commitment of his own time and at least 12 other people, Steele said.

He added that each is an outstanding leader.

Vandals take aim at gas lanterns

Woods police are on the lookout for vandals who have been busy destroying gas or electric lanterns on lawns in that city. Over the holiday weekend, police received reports of lanterns on S. Renaud, Elford, Oxford, Shoreham and Lakeshore Lane destroyed when they were pushed over by a vehicle.

A witness to the vandalism described the car as a light-colored vehicle, possibly a Pontiac, seen driving off a lawn with its lights off. Police believe the vehicle is equipped with front-wheel drive.

Party store robbed

Art's Party Store on Kercheval was broken into for the second time in one week. Park police responded to an alarm Saturday, May 25, at 4:48 a.m. and discovered that a rock had been thrown through the front window.

Two electronic cash registers and their contents were taken along with some bottles of alcohol. The registers contained about $500 in cash and assorted checks and money orders. Police are investigating.

O'Brien fire origin is still a mystery

By Tom Greenwood

Grosse Pointe Farms police are meeting with frustration in their attempts to develop solid leads in the May 8 arson deaths of city residents William and Mary Jane O'Brien, of Lakeshore Road.

"We're receiving lots and lots of phone calls from newspapers, TV and radio stations wanting information," said Farms Detective Sgt. George VanTiem, officer in charge of the case. "But we really don't have anything new to offer. We've received some phone-in tips on the fire but they've really been few and far between."

State police arson investigators were on the scene of the fire the day after it occurred and rapidly concluded that the three-alarm blaze was deliberately set. However, evidence obtained from the O'Brien family room and breakfast nook, where officials believe the fire began, did not reveal what type of flammable material was used.

"Arson specialists just weren't able to find anything," VanTiem said. "Everything was so completely consumed because the fire was so intense. Any vapors there were completely destroyed."

"I'm no expert in fire detection, but usually when some flammable substance is used in a situation like this, say gasoline, it's often absorbed into the wood, or gets into cracks and is detected later. However, if the fire is ignited almost immediately and the heat is intense enough, it doesn't have a chance of being detected. Perhaps that's what happened in this case."

Farms police have also sent physical evidence from the bodies to the State Police laboratory in Madison Heights for analysis.

"Basically we're looking at anything that might be under the fingernails," said VanTiem. "It's on the off-chance that Mr. or Mrs. O'Brien set the fire themselves — not that they're suspects. We just can't rule anything in or out at this point."

VanTiem said results of the tests were not yet back from the lab. Farms officials did receive information from the Wayne County Medical Examiners office which concluded that both O'Briens died of smoke inhalation and that they had both been drinking the night of the fire.

Mr. O'Brien's blood alcohol level was .11. Mrs. O'Brien's was .18. A level of .10 is considered legally drunk in Michigan.

According to the Farms detective bureau, the O'Briens' insurance company is having the home's burglar and fire alarm system, installed in August 1969, tested to see if it was in good working condition. Reports say the alarms were turned off the night of the fire. Farms police have no record of the alarm, which is dial activated, at their station the night of the blaze.

VanTiem said the home has been turned over to the bank and insurance company to determine if the home will be repaired or torn down.

"We could use the help of the public on this one," said VanTiem. "If anyone saw or heard anything we'd appreciate a call. The state also offers a reward of up to $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone involved in arson. The number to call is 1-517-322-0469."

Elizabeth Ferguson: Ready for a new life

By Nancy Parmenter
Sitting in her airy, book-filled office, peering intently into her own thoughts to find just the words to describe her new venture, smiling a lively smile at the pleasures to come, Elizabeth Ferguson does not fit the image of a retiring Latin teacher.

Bookish she may be, but a fusty bookworm she is not. This is a woman who knows that speaking Latin is fun, but it is only one kind of fun. On the verge of leaving University Liggett after 43 years as a teacher of Latin and French and 31 years as head of the foreign language department, Elizabeth Ferguson has charted a fresh course.

"I'm going to remake myself," she said.

She will miss some of her students and the bustle of school life. "I shall miss having said 'good morning' to 30 or 40 people by 9:30 in the morning."

But she will not miss the routine. "I'm very organized. I've always felt miserable when I don't know what I'm doing next. But I'm going to try not to have my time divided in 40-minute periods. I don't want to know what I'm doing next Wednesday at 9:25."

As a teacher, Miss Ferguson has always had to know what she would do next. She pursued her love of knowledge through a bachelor's degree in Latin and Greek at Wellesley and two masters' (Latin and English) at the University of Michigan.

Following Pope's admonition to "drink deep," she spent a series of summers studying Latin at the American Academy of Rome and the Villa Vergiliana, Greek at the American School in Athens, and French at Middlebury and the University of Dijon. And that's not counting the 12 summer sessions at U of M, studying archeology and whatever else caught her interest.

"To a large extent, my hobbies and my career have coincided," Miss Ferguson said. "But almost anything will fit with Latin."

ULS never stopped offering Latin, even at the nadir of its popularity a decade ago. There are four Latin teachers there now, and Latin is a required subject in the eighth grade, "on the theory that even a little Latin is good for you."

"Latin is a beautiful cornerstone of my knowledge," Miss Ferguson said. "I don't feel Latin is a foreign language — it is a second language in almost every country. It's also very good if you're doing mottoes or looking at old churches," she added slyly.

Of course, students don't always see Latin as a knowledge cornerstone. "The practical advantage students think of is that it's helpful for their SATs," Miss Ferguson said.

Latin is taught seriously as a language, but the students also "dabble" in mythology, Roman topography and history for fun. A letter written by a former Ferguson student recommending her teacher for one of the several awards she received this year noted that the student had discarded her Michelin guide to the Roman Forum in favor of the mental map she still carried from Latin class.

"Not only had the French done a careless job of explaining the layout, but I could still remember the map of the forum I had been obliged to draw . . . and I could still remember from photographs in the classroom that the temple of Castor and Pollux was the one with three columns remaining and Saturn the one with seven," she wrote.

One of the greatest advantages of the teaching profession is that it has given her the opportunity to learn by visiting. "If I were to list reasons for teaching, I would have four or five quite high-minded ones, but one would be the summer vacations," Miss Ferguson admitted with a smile.

Some of her favorite places are rural and quiet — Norfolk and Devon, Italian hill towns, the Greek isles. "I'm not very good in big cities," she said, "though I thought I would hate Venice, but when I was made to go there, I lost my heart to it."

An opportunity for additional travel is a pleasant thought, but not her top priority. "I want to take an art tour to Italy and a cooking course in France. I belong to the Jane Austen Society, which has little gatherings around the world. In 1986, it will be at one of the colleges at Oxford. Put those three things together and it would tempt me," she said.

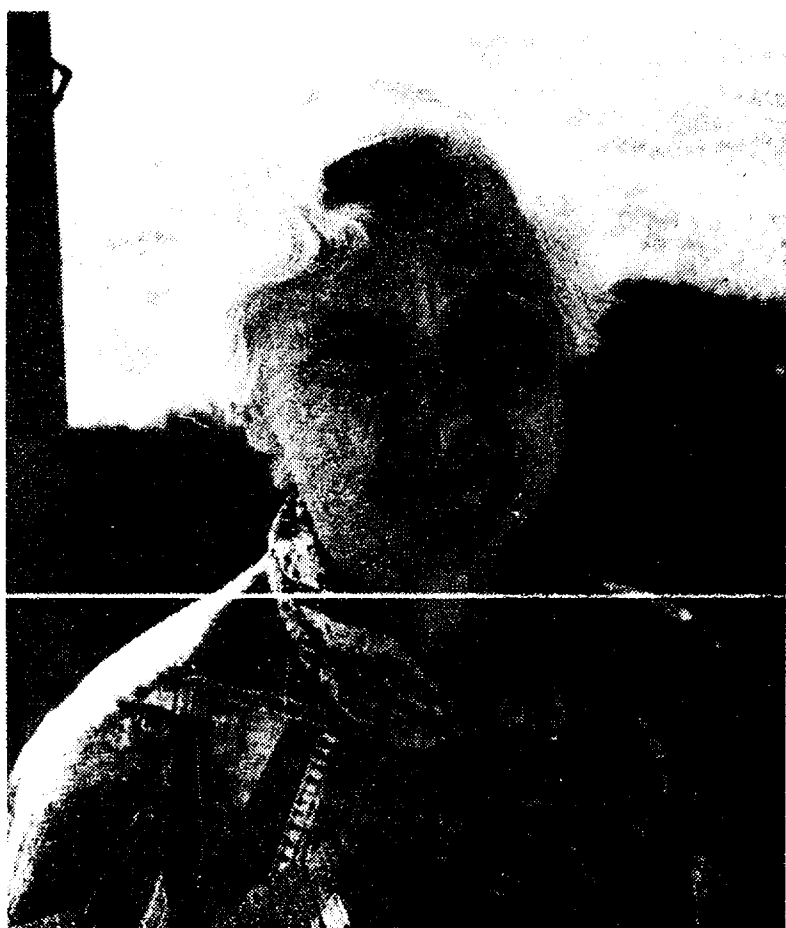

More important to her now than travel is an opportunity to enjoy life at a slower pace. "It isn't good to have your life as controlled by bells as mine has been," she said. "I want to give more time to the piano and less to the typewriter."

Gardening, noticing nature's seasons, and taking advantage of some of the offerings at the War Memorial she has always been too busy to attend. Lunching with friends. Her list is a catalogue of the pleasures one gives up for a career.

In some ways, once a teacher, always a teacher. Miss Ferguson said she would like to volunteer to teach English as a second language, "if anyone will have me. I've always enjoyed helping others learn."

Her conversation reveals some of the reasons she is a good teacher: "I'm not very aware of people's age. We just get interested in what we're talking about." "I like seeing my students around the community. It's nice if you live where you teach." "I've enjoyed being a part of a recognized institution that is central to the community." "It hasn't been boring. (ULS) goes in the direction the world is going, but always a little behind. That way we avoid pendulum swings."

She cast a lingering look around the warm, brick-walled office and out the window into the treetops. After three years of trying, the school has just got the heat adjusted properly, and now she must leave. "Of all the things I shall miss, I shall miss my office the most," she said.

Huetteman joins council

John Huetteman III took the oath of office Tuesday morning as the newest trustee of the Shores and promptly got down to business, taking on the village budget.

"I was very pleased with the outcome of the May 21 village election," Huetteman said. "The support I received was . . . really phenomenal. I'm really looking forward to a long term of service with the village."

Huetteman, Elizabeth Kuhlman and Daniel Beck were unopposed in Tuesday's election. Incumbent Robert Roney withdrew from the race the week before the election.

Official tally of ballots shows that 305 of the village's 2,327 registered voters cast ballots for the three trustees in the annual election. Huetteman received 291 votes, Mrs. Kuhlman 240 and Beck 231, according to village officials.

There were two write in votes cast; one for Joseph Post Jr. and one for Roney, village officials added.

Beck returns to elected office to begin his 15th year as a trustee while Mrs. Kuhlman will bring her four terms of experience back to the council table.

"As the new kid on the block, I have to learn the job," Huetteman, the father of the two, said. He spent part of Friday reviewing materials for the upcoming meeting with Village Superintendent Michael Kenyon.

Because of his service on the planning commission, Huetteman said he has a good grasp of the village's building and zoning codes.

The top vote-getter said he rang more than 1,000 door bells in his door-to-door campaign. He was bolstered by two political volunteers; his daughters Kate, 6, and Kelly 3.

"They were really trouper," Huetteman said. Kate painted a pair of signs, "Vote For My Dad" and attached one to her bicycle and one to Kelly's Hot Wheels. The two followed their father as he made his rounds.

"They stayed at the bottom of the sidewalk all the time when I went up to the house," Huetteman said, adding they helped take some of the sting out of the campaigning.

Teen center may close

By Mike Andrzejczyk

It seemed like a good idea, something kids had complained they didn't have in the area; a place they could hang out, meet each other and have fun.

But the Neighborhood Club's Teen Center has two Saturdays left to prove its worth or face cancellation this summer, according to the Neighborhood Club's director.

The idea for the center came from parents and student groups who were looking to offer some kind of weekend activities as an option to the more traditional Saturday revelry, according to Teen Center Director Michelle Roesch.

After a number of meetings between all involved, the Neighborhood Club donated its facilities for a six-week trial period to see if there was enough interest to keep the center operating, she added.

At its first Saturday night opening in April, the center had about 70 high school students stop in from 7 to 11:30 p.m., Ms. Roesch said. The center changed its hours from 8 to 11 p.m. for its next evening, started planning activities, sent out fliers to students at the high schools and looked forward to a successful operation.

The next week, about a dozen high schoolers showed up during the Saturday evening. On May 18, only two people showed up.

With two more weekends to go before school is over and the program is evaluated, the center is trying to draw students in to at least see what's offered.

"We wanted high school students to have some place else they could go and give them something they could do there on the weekends," Ms. Roesch said.

Just about two-thirds of the Neighborhood Club is open for use, according to club Director John Bruce. For $1, high schoolers can have the run of the new addition at the Neighborhood Club, including the fitness center, recreation rooms and meeting rooms for dancing, eating and music, he added.

The fitness center contains sets of free weights for students to use as well as some exercise cycles, Bruce said. There are also billiard and foosball tables, air hockey, music and Domino's Pizza, provided by the East Warren-Cadieux outlet managed by Dan Lapinski.

The center may also soon have access to a large-screen television with a cable hook-up as well, Ms. Roesch said. Although stereos now provide the music, there should be live entertainment for Saturday, June 1, she added.

The Neighborhood Club is donating the facilities as well as paying the college-age staff that supervises the evenings, Bruce said. Without some show of interest, the Neighborhood Club is not going to be able to continue paying out that kind of money, he added.

"In the long run, we'll need some financial support from the students and the parents if the teen center is to remain open and to continue to be offered," Bruce said.

The response has been disappointing so far, he said, adding that the program, barring a dramatic turn-around in this and next Saturday's attendance, will probably be dropped for the summer. The Neighborhood Club might consider opening it again in the fall, Bruce added.

The problem is getting it started. Ms. Roesch and Bruce agree. The center is meant to be a place where high-schoolers can stop in, have fun and leave as an option to hanging around local businesses and municipal parks that are less than happy to have them collect there.

"We want to figure out how to make the connection with the activities that the kids find satisfying," Bruce said. "We are willing to work for it, to make it work . . . but it's a real struggle to get started."

High school students from the four Grosse Pointe high schools are welcome at the center between 8 and 11 p.m. Saturday. If you are a member of a band interested in performing or know of someone interested in playing at the Teen Center or have a suggestion or comment, call Michelle Roesch at 885-4600.

Business group plans program

The Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue, Inc. revealed its long-range plans for the economic development of Mack at a dinner meeting Tuesday, May 14, at Za Paul's Cafe.

The program will mean more businesses, more jobs and a more secure community, according to the association. The projected cost of the entire economic development program is more than $4 million, the association said.

Dr. Robert Linthicum, chairman of the Economic Development Program of the association, said the first of the projects to be undertaken is a business district survey to create a data base on which to start a jobs project and training program for residents of the contiguous Grosse Pointe and Detroit communities.

There are also plans for facade renovations on Mack from Alter to Outer Drive, a crime prevention program, availability of low-interest loans for businesses and a self-help project to make professional help available to Mack businesses, the association says.

Linthicum says the association hopes to get $70,000 through grants by 1986 to begin the programs.

Dr. Edward Kane, president of the association, said studies show that blight has been traveling along the commercial corridor of Mack at a rate of three blocks a year and has reached the Alter to Somerset section. The association wants to halt the movement and turn it around, he added.

Also speaking at the meeting for neighboring business associations were Karen Warren of the Mack Avenue Renaissance Association, Sandy Gillespie, president of the Hill Association; Darryl Finken, president of the Grosse Pointe Park Association; and Danielle Harris, president of the Village Association.

The Grosse Pointe Business & Professional Association of Mack Avenue earlier this year introduced a health insurance plan available to all members and their families. They also sponsor annual sidewalk sales and mini-marts, and are now planning their Mack Avenue U.S.A. fireworks display on June 30 at Parcels.

Friday, said the charges were not true and that the printing and distribution of the fliers was a disservice to the community and the committees which studied the applications.

Bill Farrant, who has been the principal writer for The Park Page in the past, said he didn't have anything to do with the flier and he was not connected with it.

In another matter, the council was also scheduled to discuss the issue of public safety Tuesday. The matter was expected to draw a large audience. The results of the meeting will be reported next week.

SCIATICA

If you're a victim of sciatica you know what "leg pain" is all about. Sciatica is essentially an abnormal inflammation of the great sciatic nerve which supplies the tissues of the thigh and lower leg. This large nerve exits the spine between the vertebrae (bones) of the lower back and travels down the leg all the way to the foot. Sciatica can cause leg pain only or a combination of both leg and back pain.

Sciatica is almost always traced back to the lower back. This condition often arises after months or years of lower back problems. Due to spinal imbalance the sciatic nerve becomes inflamed, causing pain or discomfort in various areas of the leg.

Chiropactic care is directed towards balancing the spine and relieving pressure on the nerve. The therapeutic goal is to correct the underlying problem rather than cover up the pain with medication.

Brought to you as a community service by Dr. David Jantz. If you have any further questions call or write the clinic, Grosse Pointe Woods Chiropractic Clinic, 22217 Mack Ave., Grosse Pointe Woods, Michigan 48128. All insurances accepted.

Heather makes her directing debut

By Tom Greenwood

Perhaps a dozen kids from second grade to mid-teens are swirling about the stage, their yells and laughter bouncing off the auditorium's beamed ceiling.

The chaos comes abruptly to an end as Heather Cross, producer and director of the play, "Reflections in Time," begins to take charge. By clapping her hands and issuing firm-voiced instructions, form and direction are brought to the ensemble.

"Wow, sometimes I feel just like I'm a teacher," Heather said, taking a five-minute break. "Everyone seems to be going in a different direction at the same time. But I'm enjoying this."

Heather, 16, is a junior at South High School. She's directing her first play as a project to keep herself busy until she moves to New York City with her mother later this summer.

It's also a labor of love. "I saw 'Reflections in Time' when I was out in Aspen with my family," she said. "My brother Tony was participating in a music festival there and my younger sister Bridget was part of the cast. I just loved the play and really think the music's great. We made some inquiries and got copies of the script. I thought it would really be terrific to put it on here in Grosse Pointe. It's also sort of a goodbye present to my hometown."

Originally produced by Windstar, a peace group founded by singer John Denver, "Reflections in Time" concerns two American kids who enter a magic mirror and journey back through time to visit the world's most influential peacemakers when they were children.

"They include John F. Kennedy, Gandhi, Buckminster Fuller, Jesus and Ishi, an American Indian," Heather said. "It presents the meaning of peace from their points of view. Then the kids travel to Russia in 1985 and see that Russian children aren't any different than themselves. The play ends with a quote by Gandhi: Many times we fight each other only because we cannot see each other's worlds."

The entire Cross family is involved in the project. Tony helped out with the music, while Linda Cross, Heather's mother, helps supervise the children at rehearsal. "My father, Terry got all the playbills and scripts copied at work and my sister Bridget is again in the play," Heather said. "I'm finding this is a big job, although directing is a lot easier than producing. The business end of plays is a pain."

In this case production includes taking charge of the sets, costumes, programs and musical arrangements. Heather's already in to her fourth pianist.

Working as a director is a big dream for Heather, who's more at home on the other side of the footlights. She's been a member of Grosse Pointe Children's Theater since she was five and has made a number of commercials.

She was also one of three original co-hosts on "Kids World," a children's program that aired on Detroit television for a number of years.

"I've sort of always been interested in direction," Heather said. "Whenever I'd attend a play, I'd always analyze the direction, second guessing the director as to what I'd have done in certain situations. I'd study the costuming, lighting and direction. I've always wanted to see if I could do it."

And it's not as though Heather doesn't have enough to keep her busy. An outstanding scholar at South, she recently won the Rensselaer Medal for outstanding achievement in mathematics and science. She's won debating honors, appearing recently as a defense attorney in a mock trial in which South lost first place by one point to University Liggett School, and she was a finalist in the Alliance Francaise concours, a competition in French.

"I'm going to miss Grosse Pointe," Heather said. "And I definitely know I'll miss Grosse Pointe Theatre, but I'm also looking forward to New York. It should be quite a challenge."

Heather will finish her high school education at the Friends Seminary and will also be studying acting at HB Studios. She hasn't decided on a college yet, but Columbia and Yale universities are currently her favorite choices.

"Reflections in Time" will be presented Saturday, June 1, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, June 2, at 2 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe Academy Auditorium. It will be shown Sunday, June 9, at 3:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Admission is $2.

Society brings Highland Games to Boblo

This photo was taken at the 1928 St. Andrew's Highland Games on Boblo. The games will return to the island this year after seven year's absence.

St. Andrew's Society of Detroit will hold its annual summer picnic and Highland Games on Boblo Island Saturday, June 8.

Activities for the day will include pipe bands, Highland dancers and Scottish food and games.

"The games will consist of ancient feats of strength," said Dick Campbell of the Farms, chairman of the games.

For those who feel mighty enough, there will be competitions in such games as the Stone Toss, the Farmer's Walk or the Caber Toss, in which men toss logs the size of telephone poles.

This will be the 136th annual event held by the society which was founded in 1849 and is dedicated to the preservation of the Scottish heritage.

"We are returning to Boblo Island after seven years," Campbell said, "and many people are excited about it." The society will also be admitting its first woman member this year, Florence M. Stahl of the Farms.

"Thousands of Michigan Scots remember with fondness the many great days at Boblo and we expect this year will be another of those marvelous experiences," said St. Andrew's President Alex Buchanan of the Farms.

Tickets for the events may be purchased from Scottish organizations, CTC outlets or St. Andrew's Society members for $13.95. The price includes boat fare from Detroit, admission to the day's activities and all rides, Campbell said. Persons coming to the island from Amherstburg, Ontario, may buy tickets for $8.95 American.

The boats will leave for the island at 9:30 and 10:30 Saturday morning. Tickets will not be available through the Boblo office, Campbell said.

Scots are invited to take part in the "Kirling of the Tartan" on Sunday, June 9, when they will march from St. Andrew's Hall at 431 E. Congress in Detroit to the Christ Episcopal Church at East Jefferson and the Chrysler Freeway before church services.

The school board race

What a difference a year makes in public attitudes about the annual Grosse Pointe school board election.

In 1984, the community was embroiled in a controversy over school closings and reorganization that led to an attempt to recall three members of the board and replace two others in the June election. At the same time, the community was concerned over the resignation of Superintendent Kenneth Brummel which was blamed in part on the reorganization controversy.

The attempted recall, the contests for the board and Brummel's resignation resulted in a spirited campaign with heavy citizen involvement, many letters to the editor, extensive campaign advertising and even door-to-door solicitation of public support. As we all know, the attempt to recall three board members was defeated and the board majority that favored Brummel's recommendation to close Barnes Elementary School and shift sixth graders into the middle schools was supported by a comfortable margin in a heavy turnout of voters.

So what is the situation in 1985, as we look ahead to the June 10 school board election?

So far, at least, this year's board campaign has been a fairly quiet one. The four candidates for the two positions to be filled are conducting campaigns but no major differences have emerged. Instead, all four appear to be supportive of the new superintendent, Dr. John Whritner, and the current board majority on most of their policies.

In interviews with the Grosse Pointe News, reported in greater detail in the news columns today, the four candidates did not appear to differ to any marked degree on the issue of school closing and reorganization that prompted much of last year's controversy. Perhaps promises by individual board members during last year's campaign that they favored a moratorium on closing schools for two more years helped heal the wounds. Perhaps the shifting of the enrollment decline into the middle schools has helped quiet the complaints of parents of elementary school children. And perhaps a little more friendly receptivity to citizen opinion by the board has helped to soften complaints.

At any rate, the community this year lacks the clear-cut division that marked last year's campaign and thus makes it even more difficult for voters and the Grosse Pointe News to choose among the four candidates. All four are experienced in school affairs. Two are currently employed in school systems outside of Grosse Pointe and the two others are former teachers. All four have children in the public schools in Grosse Pointe and all four have been active parents who have served on volunteer school committees. In short, once again Grosse Pointe has attracted four excellent candidates.

Yet the Grosse Pointe News believes it is important that Ernest Buechler, 50, be returned to the board because he is the only incumbent running after Catherine Brierly announced her retirement. Buechler is now completing his first four-year term after surviving the recall campaign last spring. He is principal of Wayne Elementary, a kindergarten through fifth grade school in the city of Detroit with an enrollment of 740. He has been a principal for 12 years and a teacher for seven before that. He also has taught for seven summer sessions at the University of Michigan at Dearborn.

So Buechler brings to the campaign his extensive experience as a professional educator and his four years of service on the board. His board experience is especially important with a new superintendent now in place. Buechler feels that the lack of major disagreements among the candidates reflects a "coming together" of groups in the community and a spirit of harmony under a new superintendent who appears to be giving the school system the leadership and stability the community wants.

In answering questions put to him by the News, Buechler showed greater familiarity with school problems than the other candidates, although that would be expected from an incumbent. He is strongly supportive of present policies, believes the community is getting what it pays for in the school system and is excited by the changes in prospect, such as adding two consultants to strengthen the elementary science program and buying more computers for the middle schools. He defends the seven-day period as giving students a wider range of choices, endorses Whritner's insistence the schools must meet the needs of all students and points to the strengthening of the special education department to serve more students in the Grosse Pointe system. The News thinks Buechler has made an excellent record on the board and ought to be reelected.

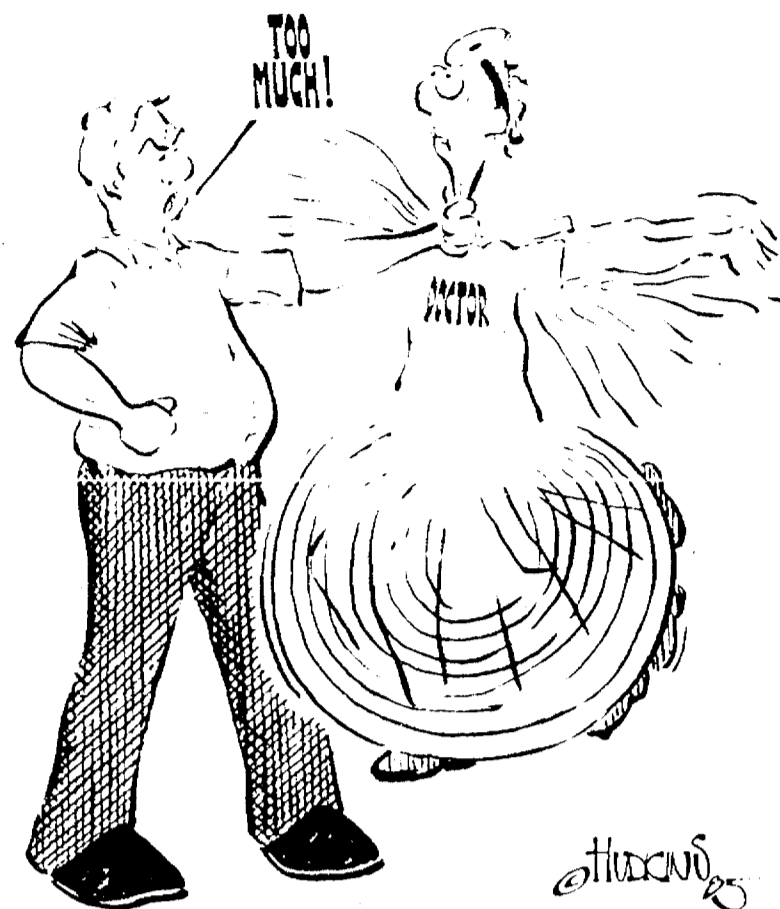

A second recommendation for the board is even more difficult for the News to make. All three of the other candidates are first-rate but the News endorses Carol B. Marr chiefly on three grounds: that she makes a good point in contending that parents of young elementary schools students are underrepresented on school boards nationally and in the Pointes; that she already has displayed a strong interest in the school system and has the time to invest further study in it, and that she did not play an active role in last year's controversies.

Mrs. Marr also gave answers to News questions that reflect her feeling that interested and concerned people can make a difference in the school system and on the board. She expressed some concern over the increases in taxes that have occurred despite declining enrollment. She favors fiscal responsibility but says better evaluation of existing programs could serve that aim. She thinks the system ought to do a better job of promoting the all-day kindergarten that is tuition-financed. She thinks the system might need to consider even more consolidations in the future but wants the board to establish criteria to deal with enrollment declines coming in the middle and high schools.

Mrs. Marr, 37, is a graduate of Central Michigan University and taught for five years in the middle schools in the Fraser system. So she brings her experience as a teacher as well as a parent of two young children to her candidacy for the board. Like Buechler, she thinks science and art programs need more attention in the elementary and middle schools. She believes the system has a commitment to evaluate children's capacities at an early age both to benefit each child and to make the schools more cost efficient, and she supports the special education department's efforts to meet the needs of impaired children within the system so far as possible.

Both Cindy Pangborn and Carl D. Anderson are excellent candidates and many voters will want to support them in the election. Their answers to the questions from the News appear elsewhere in today's issue and show the depth and breadth of their interest in education and in serving as the community's representatives on the board. But the News, like voters who will go to the polls, chose to endorse only two candidates and gave the nod to Buechler and Mrs. Marr.

Guidelines for parties with minors

To the Editor:

At the close of the school year there are always many parties, dances, and celebrations planned for teenagers and children. We want these activities to be safe and healthy as well as fun and happy experiences. We would like to offer the following guidelines for parents who are planning to host a party in their home or whose children have been invited to attend one of these events.

Suggested guidelines when youth is attending an activity.

- Know where your children are and let them know where you will be.
- Be aware of transportation arrangements. Assure them that they can phone you to be picked up whenever needed, no questions asked.
- Establish the time they are expected to return home and expect to be notified if there is a delay.
- Be awake or awakened when they come home at night.
- If in doubt, call the adult in charge of an activity to verify: occasion, location and duration, adult supervision, policy on alcohol. If the activity seems inappropriate, express your concern and encourage alternative activities.

Suggestions for hosting a teen party.

- Agree with your teens on ground rules — time span, number of guests, where in the house or yard the party will take place, no alcohol or other drugs, handling of possible problems.
- Keep parties small — 20-25 youngsters per adult couple chaperoning.
- Encourage "by invitation only" activities; determine how party-crashers will be handled.
- Agree that guests who leave may not return.
- Be visible and available, keeping a low profile.
- Provide adequate food and entertainment.
- Determine how to deal with guests possessing alcohol or other drugs or under the influence of either. Do not allow anyone under the influence to drive or to go home alone.
- Party liability for minors.
- Parents are legally responsible for their minor children and have civil liability for their actions.

• An adult householder is legally responsible for any accident or injury occurring to a minor who was served or allowed to consume alcohol in his home.

The cost of excellence

Many residents of the Pointes will wonder why it is that the school system is proposing another increase in spending and taxes next year despite the continuing decline in enrollment and the reduction in the teaching staff.

School officials no doubt will provide answers to that questions and to others at the public hearing on the budget scheduled for June 3. This newspaper recommends that interested citizens, whether they have questions or not, attend and take part in that hearing. Meanwhile, we will try to offer some answers to our own question.

As everyone knows, costs continue to go up for almost everything even though inflation has eased and a few prices have drifted downward. The same upward spiral in costs afflicts the school system, whether the items are teachers' salaries or books and supplies, even when the number of students and teachers declines. The system estimates a further 4 percent rise in inflation next year.

In addition an excellent school system cannot stand still but must continue to improve. And improvement often costs money. For example, next year the system plans to hire two consultants for $60,000 to emphasize science instruction in the elementary schools. It is also buying more computers for the elementary, middle and high schools and the staff at a cost of almost $200,000 in the fourth year of a five-year computer education development program. More traditional costs include new music textbooks for grades K-5 at a cost of $30,738; new textbooks in English, social studies, mathematics, health, foreign language and music for the middle schools at a cost of $39,014, and new textbooks for art, business ed, English, foreign language, health, home economics, industrial tech, math, science and social studies for the high schools at a cost of $85,266.

Special education programs will be expanded at a cost of more than $100,000 to enable more students to benefit from programs in the Grosse Pointe system. A major repair of the North High School roof is estimated to cost $225,000 and removing the unused fuel oil tanks at seven locations to eliminate possible environmental hazards will cost another $50,000.

Such items indicate why some increases in budget and taxes are required despite the decline in enrollment estimated at 172 students and the elimination of 16.6 positions from the teaching, custodial and clerical staffs. If the budget remains at the proposed level, it will take $1 million from the board's equity fund and a tax increase of about $900,000 or 1.8 percent to finance next year's programs and operations at a total cost of $35,910,785.

In our opinion, that is not placing too great an additional burden on the community when the excellence of the Grosse Pointe school system and the aspirations of this community for its young people are taken into consideration.

The new 'new federalism'

President Reagan's "new federalism" appears to be working, although not exactly in the way that his administration in Washington thought it would.

A survey by the New York Times reveals that as the federal government has cut back on domestic spending during the Reagan administration, the states have responded to appeals to fill the gap on a wide range of social issues, including education, civil rights and health care for poor people.

John Shannon, executive director of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, a bipartisan body that monitors federal-state relations, told the New York Times that the "fiscal squeeze in Washington is so apparent that state and local officials and interest groups no longer look to Washington to set the social welfare agenda." Instead, they look to the states.

For example, while the federal government has cut back spending for education, most states have increased expenditures for elementary and secondary schools and public colleges. Last year, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures, spending for schools rose by 10 percent or more in 23 states, and a number of states raised taxes in order to have more funds to spend for schools.

Why have the states become more responsive to these problems as the federal government pulls back from them?

For one reason, the states as a whole are better off financially than the federal government, which ran a $185 billion deficit last year. For another, supporters of various programs cut by the federal government have turned to the states to find funds to replace the reductions in federal aid, and have often been successful in getting them. In effect, local people have been more persuasive in selling such programs in state capitals than in Washington since the national administration began turning a deaf ear to requests to aid many social programs.

But something else has happened, too. State officials have joined with interested groups to oppose federal cutbacks in Social Security disability benefits, to answer the Reagan administration attacks against various types of affirmative action, and to seek more aggressive action by the federal government in regulating toxic waste sites, hazardous air pollutants and pesticides. And the combined efforts have been successful in Washington in many cases.

If the Reagan administration actually has succeeded in reducing the size of the federal government, except for the Defense Department, that does not mean services previously financed at federal expense are being curtailed. In many cases, the states now are picking up the tab and providing the services themselves. In fact, according to James L. Martin, legislative counsel to the National Governors Association, the governors have become the "protectors of the social safety net" at a time of federal retrenchment.

This shift of responsibility from Washington back to state capitals has one bad effect, however. For various reasons, state governments are not equally able to pay higher taxes to provide the state revenues required to replace federal programs. In many cases, that inability to raise sufficient state funds was the overriding reason the federal government was asked to assume responsibility for providing such programs in the first place. State financing tends to increase the disparity in the services provided.

President Reagan proposed his "new federalism" to limit government in general but it appears the states now are reacting by increasing their services to fill the vacuum left by Washington's pullout. Since state and local officials tend to be closer to the public than the Washington bureaucrats are, the results apparently show there is a greater demand for these services and a greater need for them than the President and his administration realized.

At any rate, the "new federalism" that is emerging finds that states, not Washington, standing tall in the saddle for service to the American people.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

As some 'seasoned' citizens grow older, more than their arteries seem to harden. Their view, perspectives and attitudes tend to become fixed. They seem to dislike change intensely. They insist that their belongings be left exactly where they put them. They adopt a daily routine and become disturbed if it is altered. They establish a pattern of work and leisure time activities and adhere to it doggedly. They tend to become disoriented and upset if something happens to change their modus operandi. If it does happen, they become lost and at loose ends until their little world shifts back into its familiar axis.

Those who would fault such a set pattern of life should remember that they have carved out a life of contentment rather than straining to keep up with the excitement and stimulus of the new and untried, a choice based on years of what has become important in life.

Over the years they have experienced growth and changes and what has been deemed progress and they have adapted. They have assimilated the new with the old and out of that merging have selected what makes life peaceful and satisfying. In a matter of saying, this is where they get off. Let others continue on in uncharted and turbulent waters. They have earned a rest.

They have seen cities grow to be unwieldy and hard to control. High speed cars, turbo trains, jet planes have replaced the leisurely, peaceful ride in a horse and buggy. They have seen neighborhoods uprooted to make room for high-rise buildings, freeways and urban renewal. Familiar faces have been replaced by what must be termed itineraries to those who were accustomed to live and die in the area of their birth. They have seen landmarks dismantled, corner grocery stores replaced by supermarkets and retail stores where clerks knew their customers' names, preferences and sizes forced out by department stores, which were in turn displaced by shopping malls.

They have seen family structures change as 'til death do us part' become 'til we grow apart.'

They have observed their children's children and they wonder at their precocious knowledge of the world and worry over the bewilderment that envelopes young minds not yet ready to know and discriminate between good and evil.

They are at once enthralled and bewildered by the complexities of what science has brought about; television worldwide systems of satellite communication computers that sometimes store more information on a person than they have on themselves; the atom and the awesome task of making it work for the good of mankind rather than as a means of destruction; nuclear energy and its twofold power to make life better or to destroy all living things.

All this has happened in one brief lifetime — more than has happened in 500 years of lifetimes.

Is it any wonder then that there comes a time when many older people fashion a little world of their own and draw it around themselves like a security blanket, when they decide that they have accepted as much as they can and settle back into a personal life of peaceful routine?

They refuse to vary it because they fear that one little break in their daily plan of life will once again make them vulnerable to a world that is forever chipping away at precepts and beliefs and modes of life that must be held sacred or there is danger of floundering in a sea of uncertainty that lacks direction.

We talk of those who wish to settle for what they have rather than drift with the winds of change as being stubborn, set in their ways. We exhort them to try new things, new ways, accept new philosophies. We try to convince them that a laid-back life is no life.

What we refuse to see is that a settled life is not a static life. It is an accepted and comfortable mode of living worked on over a lifetime until it so suits its creator that there is nothing that could enhance it. What goes on now in the world is bequeathed to those who are still struggling to find some cove where they can drift with the tide into a peaceful existence.

This need to come to terms with what is offered and what is acceptable in life is going to become more necessary as the world moves toward a new century.

We are caught in a momentum of change, change that whirls and propels us forward at a speed that permits no time to harness and direct it.

Take family life for instance. Futurists predict that as our life span increases, it is not unlikely that one marriage will not last a lifetime. Serial marriage will become commonplace. Children will have more than one set of parents and many half- and step-brothers and -sisters.

A common pattern will be for children to see parents divorce and remarry. As adults they will leave home, marry, divorce, live alone and then remarry. Longevity will be the main reason for these progressive relationships. People will refuse to endure a destructive union in a marriage that is destined to last 50 or 60 years. If it were possible to project oneself into the future, the family as we know it now would be as archaic as the patriarchy of Old Testament times.

In the field of education, learning will be a lifelong pursuit. Schools will still teach the basic skills but the computer will enable people to learn wherever they are — at home, on the job, in the traditional classroom. In every setting the emphasis will be on individual instruction.

One interesting comment is that made by Christopher Dede at the University of Houston who notes that computers will be effective in teaching subjects such as math, but in areas such as creative writing where there are many right answers, machines will never teach as effectively as people.

To one caught in the time warp of today, that observation seems relevant to any subject. There is more to learning than knowledge. Most of us remember the teachers we had as well as what we learned. A computer flashing "Congratulations, That's correct!" will never take the place in our minds of a smile and the spoken words, "That's wonderful. You've improved so much."

In the field of medicine we are promised miracles. We are told that medical advances will enable Americans to live longer, healthier lives as scientists discover new treatments for disease and extend life's span of years. The best news is the promise that the basic cause of cancer, heart disease will be understood. Super drugs will be developed to control acute pain, senility, schizophrenia and depression. The gift of more years is not welcome unless it comes wrapped in the assurance that they will be good years, not just years spent in confusion and pain.

What science does achieve toward insuring a better and longer life could be negated by rising health costs. High technology medicine is expensive. Resources may have to be rationed. Tough decisions may have to be made as to who will receive lifesaving treatments, such as an artificial heart, will have to be dealt with in increasing numbers as the population of older citizens grows.

With all their promises of longer life, scientists must still leave the province of eternal life to religion. In other words while life will be longer, no one will become immortal.

In many ways the future looks brilliant and beguiling, but also not without its uncertainties and confusion.

If as predicted, life and vigor is extended and we make it well into the next century, that's time enough to think about it.

In the meantime we can rest in peace with the accomplishment and gains of our generation and leave this brave new future world to the brave new people who will inhabit it, deal with it and be changed by it.

I say

Nancy Parmenter

As luck would have it, there was time to sandwich a quick trip to the Pacific northwest in between this new job and the old one. Since traveling and family are two of my favorite things, it was a real pleasure. Even the weather cooperated, which is no small thing for Seattle.

The high point of the week was a reunion with an old friend from my college days. He forsook the comforts of Cambridge for the wilds of darkest Seattle 20 years ago and hadn't been heard of since. But I tracked him down. He lives in a town with the same name as his house at Harvard — now doesn't that tell you something?

My efforts were rewarded. Carried instantly back over 20 years, I gave the old cry of "you haven't changed a bit!" Somewhat more realistic, he pointed out that he had lost some hair and found some weight, but who was noticing? "He looks just the same!" I told my husband.

"He looks the same as when I met him," replied my husband obligingly, though he had just met him for the first time 10 minutes before.

Telling someone he hasn't changed isn't always a polite lie. Of course he had changed — it would have been a little weird if he were still a fresh-faced youth. But that wasn't what I meant.

Not changing means retaining the same old spark of affectionate recognition, the essence of what it was that made you friends in the first place. It means knowing you can pick up again where you left off, without letting time stand in your way.

We got going on all the things that have changed since then (seeing as we hadn't). How many world leaders are still in power? We couldn't get much beyond Prince Rainier. Home computers were hardly dreamed of. In fact (and this is shocking), commercial jet travel was new in the early '60s. Somebody said you're only as old as you feel, but you can bet that if you don't feel old, somebody will come along and remind you that you were born before the age of commercial jet travel.

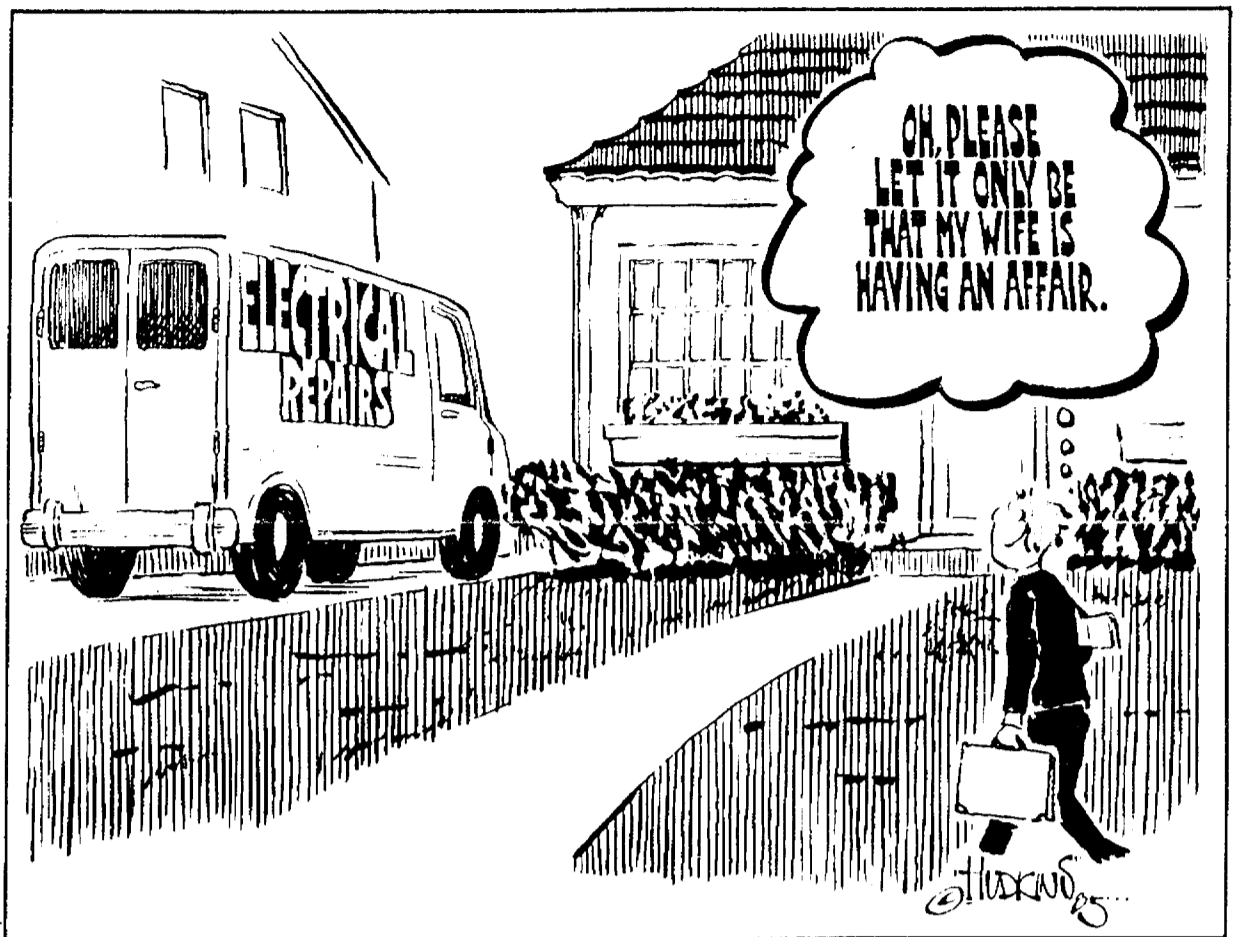

In the early '60s, there were no pantyhose, no married stewardesses, no pregnant teachers — no pregnant anything! There were only a quarter as many venereal diseases.

Yes, the reason it seems as if Ferdinand Marcos has been around forever is that he has. He came to power in 1965, so we can count him. If this question had been raised a couple of months ago, you could have responded with Enver Hoxka of Albania. I'll bet a lot of you were thinking of him.

One thing that hasn't changed is human nature. We're still motivated by the same greeds and vanities and the sap still rises in the spring, fueling adolescent pranks.

The kids at South are getting a big chuckle out of the cafeteria furniture escapade last week. About 30 seniors were actually involved, but they're all feeling rather clever.

As a former kid, I can see the humor in it. As is true of most practical jokes, however, it was a lot funnier to the perpetrators than to the receivers. I'd wager almost anything that the custodians weren't laughing their heads off as they toiled up and down the stairs with that heavy oak furniture. And working extra hours is no fun, even if you get overtime for it. (By the way, although 12 custodians were working, they weren't all on overtime, as I reported last week.)

The more things change . . .

Still, it wasn't a relatively innocent prank. The police have to take a dim view of any occasion involving breaking and entering, but it's probably not any worse than the kids' grandfathers' game of tipping over (occupied) outhouses — although on a grander scale.

It's certainly nothing like the rivalries of the teen gangs in Troy which vie to out-vandalize each other and rip up and down subdivision streets smashing windows.

In fact, kids aren't the only ones playing pranks and practical jokes.

A school administrator in Port Huron has just done the next thing to wrecking his career over a practical joke with racist overtones. The South High kids showed better judgment than that (though it wouldn't have hurt them to have carried the stuff back downstairs when the episode was over).

It's really kinda nice to think that some things — even silly ones — don't change. It provides a little continuity to comfort us conservatives.

By the way, after deep reflection, we arrived at the firm resolution that, much as we love them, Queen Elizabeth and Emperor Hirohito don't count. Sorry.

Defer is oldest elementary school in district

By Pat Paholsky

Two things hit the eye of a visitor to Defer Elementary School: the brightly painted walls — yellow, blue, orange, purple and green — and the art on the walls. Not the student art, which is proudly displayed as it is in schools everywhere, but the framed copies of artists like Remington, Cezanne, Kokoshka, Van Gogh and others.

They intermingle with construction paper cutouts, an enormous cloth wall hanging, winning essays and drawings. Art is art and whether it is by a master or a student, it all deserves to be shared with others.

Defer is the oldest elementary school operating in the district. Construction of the building began in 1924 and in February 1925, classes opened. When Defer celebrated its 50th birthday in 1975, a Detroit News article said the lot on which the school was built was either a strawberry patch or a rhubarb field.

The land was once part of the Meininger farm which ran from the lake to what is now Chandler Park Drive in Detroit.

The school was named after George Defer who was a member of the local board of education at the time. Defer, who also served as president of what was then the village of Grosse Pointe, was a state senator when he died in 1927.

The school, with 350 students, is the second largest in enrollment, after Monteith which has the largest student population. Principal Robert A. Shover said there are two classes at every grade level, with the first and second grades split at 2½ classes each. With an average of 30 students in the fourth and fifth grade classes, he said he hopes to add to the staff next year. Where the enrollment is heavy, the school board provided aides, he said.

Shover, who is in his first year at Defer, spent three years as principal at Trombly, and before that, had been at Pierce, where he started as a math teacher in 1957.

He said Defer has a diversified student population, with children attending from all ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds.

"One of the outstanding programs here is Chapter I which is a skills development program in math and reading," he said. "This year we probably work with 80 kids. Poupard and Defer are the only two schools that get Chapter I funds."

The school has an active PTO group, Shover said, with about 80 percent of the families participating. The group is currently setting up a science room that will adjoin the greenhouse. While science is taught as a regular subject in the various classrooms, the rooms will be used for hands-on experiments, he said.

"The PTO has really done a great job getting this fixed up," he said. As he talked, one of the PTO mothers was planting flowers along the front of the building.

Defer has a large playfield with three Little League diamonds. The entire staff, from teachers to maintenance, is about 40, Shover said.

Defer offers all of the services provided in the district, including a remedial reading program, a speech correction teacher, a teacher consultant who works with students who have learning disabilities, a social worker and a psychologist. The room that is used for the latchkey program has its own exit out of the building.

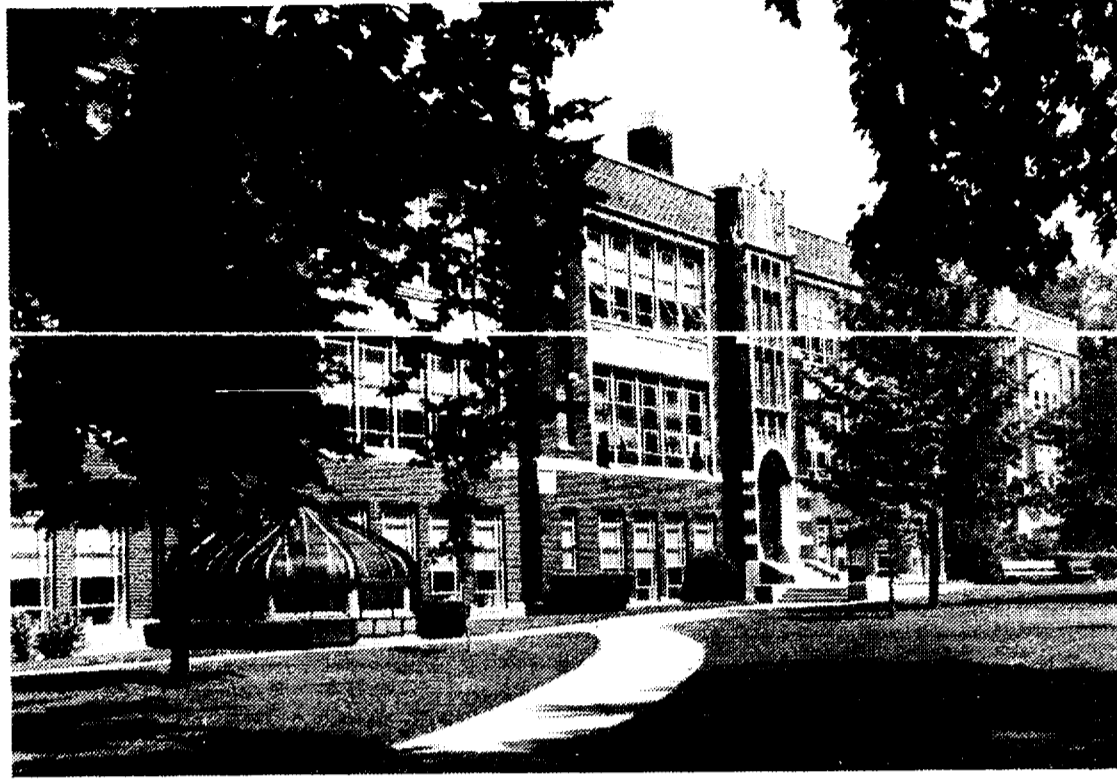

But it's the walls of a school that capture the pulse of the student population, displaying their creativity, their ingenuity, their scholarship.

One large section is devoted to the Mona Lisa, and students from the younger grades were assigned the task of drawing the famous lady and giving their reasons why she is smiling.

Because she can stay up late at night. Because she's going on the Love Boat. Because she got a Mustang Overdrive. Because she learned how to multiply. Because she won the lottery. Because her roses won first prize.

That, the bright walls, the large decorated classrooms all add to the outward warmth of Defer.

This is the tenth in a series on the school of Grosse Pointe.

Peace Corps seeks volunteers

Farm-raised Americans take for granted valuable agriculture and gardening skills which are desperately needed by impoverished nations, says a Peace Corps spokeswoman for Michigan.

"Hungry nations need more than food," said spokeswoman Alice Cooper. "They have asked for farm-experienced Americans to teach them how to manage soils, irrigate crops, improve livestock breeds and establish farmers' co-ops. People overseas seek the agriculture skills that will translate into long-term solutions to hunger."

Couples with recent agriculture and home economics experience are sought to work in Peace Corps programs overseas aimed at increasing the nutrition and income level of selected communities in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean and the Pacific island region.

Couples applying for the agricultural program may expect to go overseas as soon as this fall. A couple with skills in agriculture, general construction, health, home economics and early childhood development will be given special consideration, she said.

People selected for these programs should expect to "raise their own gardens, plant fruit trees, keep chickens and build rabbit hutches. They will teach by doing. By helping people grow, store and sell more food, as well as providing instruction in basic building construction and health education, Americans can help meet the most basic needs of people overseas."

Developing nations also face a shortage of mathematics and science teachers, foresters, fisheries specialists, and civil engineers.

At present, about 5,200 U.S. citizens serve in nearly 60 countries. They serve for two years and receive complete medical care, transportation, language training and a generous living allowance.

In addition, at the end of their service, all Peace Corps workers are paid a readjustment allowance of $175 for each month served, a total of more than $4,200.

The living allowance is not considered a wage, and thus, generally does not affect Social Security benefits of older Americans. There is no upper age limit in the Peace Corps. Individuals or couples with dependents can not be accepted. Applicants must be in good general health.

U.S. citizens with the appropriate skills can obtain more information by calling 226-7928, ext. 456, or by writing to the Peace Corps, 477 Michigan Ave., Room M-74, Detroit, Mich. 48226.

by Ellen C. Wallaert

MAYHEM is the crime of permanently disfiguring a victim or depriving him of the use of a body part.

"Inquiry is human; blind obedience brutal. Truth never loses by the one, but often suffers by the other."

—William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania

A swimming pool is considered an attractive nuisance. If no fence is installed around it, and a child is injured as a result, the owner could be liable.

A will can be revoked by drawing a line through the names of the witnesses. This is true even though the names can still be read through the line.

A child who is born after his father's death is entitled to all benefits and inheritances as if the father had been alive at the child's birth.

Six charter members of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church met recently to celebrate May "Babe" McTavish's 94th birthday and to discuss the Founders Day celebration to be held at the church this Sunday. Members are, seated on the couch, Ruby Roller and May McTavish; behind, from left, are Grace Bloomfield, Audrey Marr, Mary Watson and Mabel Meecham.

Church to celebrate Founder's Day

The Founder's Day celebration of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church was the main topic of conversation as six charter members met recently to help May "Babe" McTavish celebrate her 94th birthday.

On Sunday, June 2, at the 11 a.m. service, the original 123 charter members will be given special recognition. Their initiative and devotion to Christian life will be praised in a reception in their honor immediately following the service.

A committee has been busy locating and contacting charter members who have moved away from the area.

"We want them to know we appreciate the hard work and dedication they showed when they first gathered to discuss the need for a church in the mid-1930s," said Diane Heavner, director of Senior Adults' Ministry. "The village of Lochmoor, which later became Grosse Pointe Woods, was a community without a church and they felt their children were growing up without any Christian education."

With the help of seed money and staff support from the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, a Sunday School was opened in 1937 using the auditorium and classrooms of Mason School.

"Everyone had a cooperative spirit and carried out leadership duties with enthusiasm and sincerity," recalled Mary Watson.

"It was work but it was fun, too," said Audrey Marr. "I remember song services held in various homes, family picnics and putting on plays."

For many charter members, the June 2nd celebration will be a reunion. Cecil Patterson, a former resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, now living in Florida, will be in town to attend the event. At the beginning of Lochmoor Sunday School, as it was first called, Patterson was the first social chairman as well as chairman of the music committee.

Emily Ghesquiere and Mabel Meecham recalled the days they stayed home to prepare lunch for the door-to-door canvassers as residents were asked what denomination they would choose for the church that was soon to be formed.

As the results were tallied, they were placed on a large placard on the Ghesquiere mantle. Alois Ghesquiere was one of the first mayors of the community and Ghesquiere Park bears his name.

The date, Sunday, May 14, 1939, will be remembered by those being honored. It was on that date the first congregational meeting was called to vote on the denomination and organization of a church. They voted almost unanimously for the Presbyterian denomination.

In October 1939, the name Lochmoor Protestant Church was officially changed to the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, and the ordination and installation of church officers occurred.

Dorothy Spilos, who remembers attending the early Sunday School at Mason School when she was a child, has dug into archives and files. She has put together extensive historical displays of early photographs, news clippings, and early memorabilia to decorate the walls of Rauth Hall.

"I'm proud of all we accomplished," Mabel Meecham said. "The Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church has through the years met a very definite need — religiously, culturally, and socially — and I am glad to sit back and say I was a part of it!"

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want,
 Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNALABS, 270 No. Canon Dr., Ste. 1255 (Dept. U-21) Beverly Hills, CA, 90210. (Enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: (1-800-367-2400) 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week. Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin.

Party store hit Variety Club to honor residents

City police reported smash-and-grab thieves robbed the Alger Party Store on Mack Avenue, between 2:30 and 3 a.m. Monday morning, May 28, making off with an undetermined amount of cash.

Reports say the thieves threw a cement block through a window to gain entrance. An attempt to smash through the front door was fruitless, since the glass was shatterproof, police said. The thieves made off with one cash register and damaged another during the break-in.

The theft was reported to police by the store's owner.

Two Grosse Pointers, Pete Waldmeir and Mort Crim, will be honored with Heart Awards for their involvement with children by the Variety Club of Detroit. The awards will be made at the fourth annual Celebrity Ball that will be held tomorrow, May 31, at the Michigan Inn in Southfield.

Former Windmill Pointe Drive resident Woodrow R. Praught will receive Variety's Pioneer of the Year Award.

Pete Waldmeir, who is a popular back-page columnist and former sports writer for the Detroit News, serves on the board of directors of the Old Newsboys Goodfellow Fund of Detroit and is actively engaged through his column in many activities of benefit to children.

Mort Crim, senior news anchor for WDIV-TV, is involved with the Big Brothers and has hosted the local Easter Seals Telethon for the past six years. He also gives many career guidance lectures to high school and college students and various youth groups.

Woody Praught, former president of United Detroit Theatres and owner of the W.R. Praught Advertising Agency (since re-organized as the Praught-Marontate Company) specializing in motion picture advertising, p.r. and promotion, was a member of three Variety Clubs — Tent 12 in Minneapolis, Tent 15 in Des Moines and Tent 5 in Detroit.

He served as Chief Barker in Des Moines and Detroit. Since retiring he makes his home in Marathon, Fla., but continues his membership in the Detroit organization and spends his summers in this area.

In addition to these three, WJR Sports Director Frank Beckmann, former Detroit Lions star Dexter Bussey and Ford Motor Company

Vice President Louis E. Lataif will receive Heart Awards. William Edwards of F&M Distributors will be named Humanitarian of the Year.

Radio's Dick Puritan will emcee the black tie event and international entertainer Henny Youngman will provide laughs with dance music supplied by Johnny Trudell.

Tickets to the Celebrity Ball are $125 per person with proceeds going to the Variety Club's Electronic Limb Research Center at the Detroit Institute for Children, which provides myo-electric hands for children born without hands or who lose one through accident.

In addition to the Variety Club's Electronic Limb Research Center at the Detroit Institute for Children, the 400 members of Variety Club make major contributions to Children's Hospital of Michigan and other children's charities throughout the State.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Celebrity Ball Chairman Richard M. Gale at 626-4629, or Executive Director Barbara Moresky at Variety Club headquarters, 259-7400.

Attention photographers

Members of the Grosse Pointe Real Estate Exchange will sponsor a photography contest for local students in honor of Private Property Week.

The purpose of the contest is to promote the quality of life in Grosse Pointe through the visual art of photography. The subject matter should be confined to scenes around the area.

First prize will be a $250 U.S. Savings Bond. Second and third prizes will be $150 and $50 bonds. All students attending Grosse Pointe schools are eligible.

The deadline is Friday, June 7, and entries are to be submitted to the Advertising and Public Relations Committee of the exchange at 881-8900 or 881-4200.

School board candidate Carol Marr . . .

An article in the April issue of Parent Magazine also had an effect. The article noted that parents of young children are under-represented on school boards throughout the nation and that parents of young children should consider running for school boards to remedy that, she adds.

There is also the family's commitment to the community — and the schools, Mrs. Marr says. The family business, Marr and Associates, has been in operation for 80 years, she adds.

A lack of interest and a lack of issues may be contributing to the quietness of this year's campaign, but Mrs. Marr says she wishes it weren't so.

"Last year was very difficult and people got tired, I think," she says. "I am troubled that such a small minority of people vote in school board elections."

People should become more active in the system, and understand they can make a difference through their actions, she adds.

Mrs. Marr says residents should take the time to learn about the candidates' positions and to vote. Events like the League of Women Voters forum Tuesday night help to get the candidates before the community, she adds.

She is concerned about the forecasted increase in school taxes and adds she has met with the system's director of business affairs in an attempt to understand what the spending increases are and why the extra taxes may be needed, Mrs. Marr says.

There are always ways to look for fiscal responsibility and the district needs to be a little better at evaluating its programs, she adds.

Some of the items the district can consider are the seven-period day, which Mrs. Marr says she remains undecided about, the administrative intern program at the middle schools and the marketing of the all-day kindergarten.

There are a couple capital improvements that could stand more scrutiny, she adds. The construction of a shed for paper storage at a cost of $50,000 needs to be looked at and the district has to begin considering energy efficiency programs, Mrs. Marr says.

The district also needs to address possible consolidation of schools. The way to do that is to follow the suggestion of Superintendent John Whritner and develop criteria for the closing or consolidation of programs, she says.

How immediate the need is to consolidate remains unclear, but it is an issue the board is going to have to address, Mrs. Marr says.

One important item in next year's budget is the strengthening of the elementary school science program through the hiring of science consultants, Mrs. Marr says, adding "there is a renewed interest that we have to strengthen our science programs."

The system needs to look at its offerings in the kindergarten to third grade programs to address some of the developmental differences of children in those grades, Mrs. Marr says. The district also has to look at some enrollment options for parents of young children entering the system with programs like early-fives classes and all-day kindergarten.

The district needs to develop a real commitment to looking at children in early grades to determine those who may be predisposed to learning disabilities. Such a program could be cost-efficient and keep the system from locking a child into a special curriculum, she adds.

The district also needs to better decide who has control over the sixth grade curriculum, Mrs. Marr says. The movement of the students into the middle school has left that area a little fuzzy. The system should look at the interest in computers and carefully evaluate how it is implementing its computer education curriculum.

Mrs. Marr says she can speak with first-hand knowledge of the activities of the district's special education department. Her 7-year-old is learning disabled, she adds.

Her family is indebted to the support systems to district has to offer, Mrs. Marr says. When her son finished kindergarten, the Marrs became active in the system and learned about what support systems were offered. Her husband serves on the parent council for special education, Mrs. Marr adds.

"We have a legal responsibility to educate the children, but we have a moral responsibility as well," she says.

As declining enrollments and teacher layoffs occur, the district should remain selective about its hiring practices, Mrs. Marr says.

The growing teacher shortage may actually lead to a better qualified work force as teachers will return to universities to get the extra training needed to get better positions, she adds.

The district needs to better promote itself and its programs, Mrs. Marr says. When enrollment was high, there wasn't the need to get the message across and public schools grew somewhat complacent in the promotion of programs. Declining populations "have awakened us and changed that attitude," she adds.

While each school offers some kind of promotion or open house to attract the community, the district needs to do more things. She points to this school year's early kindergarten readiness series offered throughout the district for parents of young children thinking of sending their children to school that year.

The district needs to reach out to young families and new families and communicate the idea that the school system is for all members of the community, Mrs. Marr says.

The system must also reach out to those without children in the community and make it clear to them what their stake is in the system to enlist their support in millage elections, one of which the district faces next year. It takes a positive community attitude to pass a millage, she adds.

At some point, the community is going to have to decide what it is willing to support through its millage. The system needs to open up or improve existing lines of communication to get its message across, she adds.

The district also has to look at where it is losing children to non-public schools and correct that situation, Mrs. Marr adds.

The district has to promote increased communication between schools and parents. Too often the only time a parent hears from a school is when their child is doing poorly or doing something wrong, Mrs. Marr says. Schools have to work on telling parents what's going on in classrooms, something that has been neglected, she adds.

"We really need to be fostering more positive communication between the school and parents," she adds. "The more interest the parent has in education, the better education that child will receive."

"As a parent of young children, I think it's important we have a balance on the board of education," Mrs. Marr continues. "People should take the time to become informed about the election and the candidates and decide who will best be able to offer that balance."

All-night party is June 13

"The Times of Our Lives" is the theme of a non-date, casual dress, all-night party sponsored by the South High School Mothers Club, scheduled for Thursday, June 13, at the War Memorial following graduation ceremonies.

High school students win art competitions

Elizabeth Patek from North and James Dinverno from South will have their works of art displayed in the U.S. Capitol for one year after winning art competitions in their congressional districts.

Miss Patek, whose work is titled "I Want My Ice Cream Cone," took first place in the district competition sponsored by 14th District U.S. Rep. Dennis Hertel. Dinverno took first place in the 13th District competition sponsored by U.S. Rep. George Crockett and his work titled "Day of Judgment."

Kathleen Judge from South won a fourth place prize for her mixed media entry titled "My Locker" in the 13th District competition.

Miss Patek's award was given Wednesday, May 22, according to art instructors at North. She chose acrylic on brown paper as her media for her depiction of a child crying.

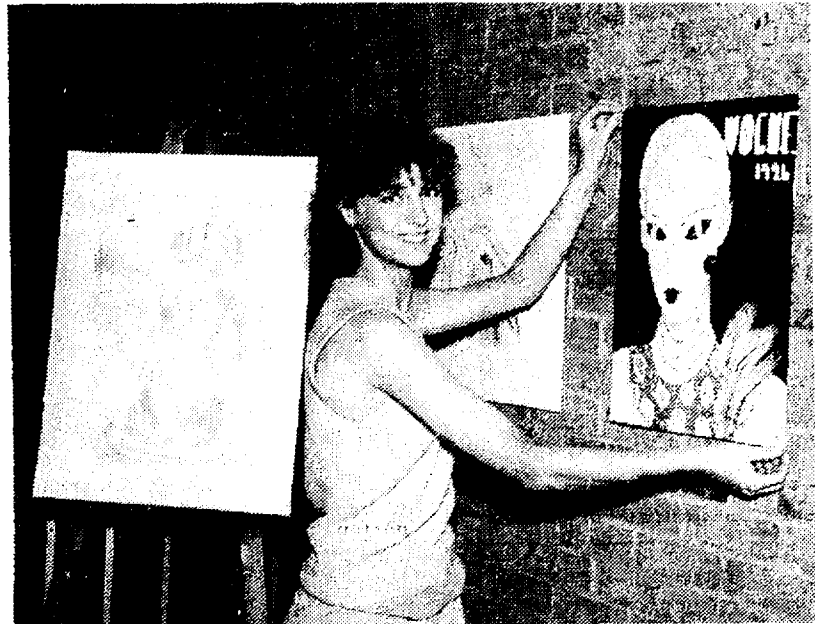

In her four years in the North art program, Miss Patek, 17, has won many awards for her art. She intends to pursue an art career at University of Michigan, her instructors said.

Dinverno's charcoal work depicted the destruction of the world and was said to be "suitably expressive of the nightmare we know war to be," according to one of the judges.

Dinverno has accumulated a number of honors in his four years at South, including last year's regional Hallmark Award, according to his instructors. Dinverno was nominated for the award again this year, the first student at South to be so honored, his teachers added.

Dinverno took second place in last year's congressional competition.

Members of Congress annually sponsor "Artistic Discovery" competitions in their districts to spark the creative energy and talent of young artists nationwide. After the year is over, both young people will have their works returned to them.

Elizabeth Patek, winner in the 14th District Congressional art competition, displays some of her work at the Festival of the Arts held May 14 and 15 at North High School.

School board candidate Cindy Pangborn . . .

force in that turmoil, she adds.
Mrs. Pangborn says she is also an active volunteer in the system and is familiar with the way it works. She also has an extensive background in business, accounting and finance.

Neither lack of issues nor lack of interest have contributed to this year's quiet election, Mrs. Pangborn says. The community has settled back into its normal pattern after the turbulence of last year, some of the fences have been mended and some of last year's issues are no longer issues, she says.

She is enthusiastic about this election, because of the number of speaking invitations she has received and the number of people she has talked to about this June's polling, Mrs. Pangborn says.

She adds she would have liked to see a breakdown of teachers in this year's budget hearing, and would also like to see the reinstatement of the remedial reading program for grades 1 and 2, which she says was discontinued this school year.

The district has a policy that students receive remedial reading help when they fall two years behind in development, putting off any aid until third grade. Mrs. Pangborn says. The district shouldn't wait that long to help children who are having trouble reading, because it is the basis for all future education as well as life, she adds.

The district needs to make sure the programs between schools are more equitable, she says, adding that the computer and science programs in various buildings are varied and need to be more uniform.

Another problem the district faces is revision of the state Department of Education's administrative rules for special education programs, which are working their way through the system now, Mrs. Pangborn says. The district has to keep on top of those changes to insure the children affected receive the education they deserve, she adds.

The system also needs to change its program for art and music, Mrs. Pangborn says.

"We would hate to see children who have an affinity for art and music not get the encouragement and help they need," she says.

The district also needs to analyze its seven-period day at the high schools to decide who is taking advantage and who has enrolled and dropped out, she adds.

Pros and cons of the extra period program appear to be evenly divided, and Mrs. Pangborn says she wants to withhold judgment until she sees the final analysis of the program.

There needs to be a more serious look at some of the programs being offered by the district's special education department, Mrs. Pangborn says. Members of the local chapter of Michigan Association of Children with Learning Disorders have had some complaints about the programs that should be looked at, she adds.

There is a very positive movement toward support for special education services in the area, Mrs. Pangborn says. She adds she wants to see what effect the administrative rules changes will have locally as well.

While teacher shortages may affect other districts, "Grosse Pointe has such a tremendous reputation for its education community that I don't think we'll have that problem," Mrs. Pangborn says. "I have heard nothing other than how happy the teachers are to be working with such kids and how much they appreciate the public support they receive."

Declining enrollment is a three-phased problem, Mrs. Pangborn said. The decline begins in the elementary schools but works its way into the secondary buildings. However, the district's kindergarten classes are growing again, so the system has to watch what the decline will do to the middle and high school while the growing elementary population gets ready for those schools, she says.

The district is being gouged by the non-public system and needs programs to better enlighten parents about offerings in public schools, Mrs. Pangborn says. The district is losing children at grades 6 and 7 to private middle schools and picks those kids up again at the high schools, she adds.

The board needs to find out why parents are opting out of public middle schools, Mrs. Pangborn says. Reasons she has heard include parents not liking the mix of ages at the middle schools, with sixth- through eighth-graders in the hall together, to a weaker skills program in the public schools.

The district has to improve its concept of middle school, Mrs. Pangborn says. "One of the first areas that has to be looked at is what the private schools are doing that we aren't."

"We don't advertise our programs very well," she adds, saying the district has to get its message out about its high achievements on SATs and its quality programs. It has to do that through promotions, such as open houses and other activities aimed at the whole community instead of just parents.

Another important matter facing the system is finances, Mrs. Pangborn says. The board needs to take a fresh look at what's in the budget and keep an open mind about some of its holdings, such as parking lots and the administrative offices on St. Clair.

The district needs a new study to determine if it receives an equitable return on the parking lots it leases to municipalities and is also going to have to decide whether it is going to renovate the administrative building for use as central offices or another purpose, or raze it, she adds.

She adds that although she has questions about line items in the budget, she wants to wait until the board's June 3 public hearing before discussing them. The budget is undergoing review and some of the things she targets may have already been removed before it comes to the board Monday night, she adds.

School board candidate Carl Anderson . . .

A lack of issues in this year's race appears to be the reason the election is going so quietly, Anderson says. For him, there are four basic concerns, he adds.

A continuing decline in student enrollment, fiscal responsibility and school financing, curriculum development and what he calls strengthening the educational partnership are Anderson's major concerns.

People are getting what they pay for with their education dollar, Anderson says. Students receive a fine education in a system that ranks among the best in the nation. Scores on SAT and ACT tests are well above both the state and national averages, he says, adding, "I think we provide an excellent educational opportunity for our students."

Not that the district couldn't do better as part of a national commitment to education, he adds. The United States continues to lag behind the other industrialized nations in most educational areas. A hefty agenda of education issues faces the nation if it wants to reverse its failure in the worldwide drive for better education, Anderson says.

Anderson says he has attempted to study next year's school budget and adds he believes it reflects what the community would like to see spent on education. A person really has to be a part of the process to truly know what's going on, he adds.

When the district looks at the problems of declining enrollments, it is going to have to look at consolidating class and course offerings and developing creative ways of scheduling, Anderson says. In his experience with declining enrollment, Anderson says one of the hardest problems is scheduling classes at the high school level.

As enrollment at the secondary level drops, the system will have to look at some of the elective areas as possible consolidation items, he says, adding he has no specific area in mind at present. The district should also look for some meaningful input from its teachers on the course consolidation question, he adds.

The district does have enough time to begin planning a program to deal with declining enrollments, Anderson says. One area that should be held on to are the High Ability and Advanced Placement curricula, he adds.

The district also needs a thorough study to establish criteria to address enrollment decline and any future school closings, Anderson says. Neighborhood schools are an attractive feature of the school system and the focus of the district's attention needs to be shifted to its secondary system, he adds. He says he doesn't advocate closing schools at this time.

Anderson said he has heard both positive and negative comments about the seven-period day. His son, who attends North High, opted to enroll in a seventh class and Anderson says the program appears to have worked out for him.

The district does need to take a step back and analyze the program, Anderson says. In general, he thinks the seven period day has a lot of merit, but still needs to be looked at and analyzed.

In special education, Dr. Claire Hunt has introduced a number of changes in the special education department that reflect some of the views of parents, Anderson says. A number of good changes have come to the system through her work, he adds.

As a special needs teacher, Anderson says he has worked with students who are classified as educable mentally impaired, emotionally impaired and learning disabled. These students have very legitimate needs that must be met by the school system, he adds.

Many colleges and universities aren't turning out the number of teachers they have in previous years and those who are trained in special areas turn to the private sector instead of the classroom, Anderson says. While districts across the nation will be hurt by the decline, Grosse Pointe will be able to minimize the impact by marketing itself, he adds.

By pointing to the system's place as a lighthouse district, the district will be able to continue to draw teachers to the community to live and work, Anderson says. There is no easy answer to the problem of the teacher shortage and it is a matter the district will have to deal with in coming years, he adds.

The district has to begin playing on its marketability factor to help reduce its loss of students to non-public institutions, Anderson says. There need to be "bold and imaginative initiatives by the district to sell the schools and spread the gospel of education in the Grosse Pointe," he adds.

One way the system can look for help to determine how best to sell its system to young families is to use a blue-ribbon committee of resident-professionals to help it develop a marketing strategy, Anderson says. The district might then be able to reverse its enrollment decline with the use of those marketing techniques, he adds.

To do that, it needs to improve its publications and pick the brains of well-qualified residents to help it find the techniques to get out the message that Grosse Pointe is the school system in the metropolitan Detroit area.

While some individuals advocated reduction of costs, they don't say where they want to do it and at whose expense, Anderson notes.

Curriculum should be developed for students in today's high schools to help them meet the needs of the workplace of the 21st century, Anderson says. It has been projected that today's students will work in an average of 10 different occupations during their working lives in the next century, he adds, noting that five of those occupations do not yet exist.

To meet its students' needs, the system has to strive and improve its educational program to prepare its charges for the workplace of the future, he adds.

Anderson says he is a strong advocate of local control of schools. While greater reliance on state and federal funding could shift the financial burden of residents, it will also shift control away from local authority to the state, he adds.

"Our investment in our children, and their education, unlike other investments, is not something we own. It is a gift to them and to our society's future," Anderson says, adding he believes he will make a good trustee and plans on being active and able to ask the hard questions of the system.

NACEL Cultural Exchanges is a participant in the President's International Youth Exchange Initiative. It reflects the belief that exchanges of young people are perhaps the best long-range means to insure close relations and mutual understanding among future generations.

Memorial Day 1985

The beginning, as this day did, a celebration. Band loud, the flag high, a bright hot sun for young soldiers to march under and children parade. The ending, as this Monday morning did, a commemoration. The soft echo of taps, the flag at half-staff, a Normandy chill creeping off the water and over those who remembered . . . and were grateful.

Photos and poem by Elizabeth Carpenter

City budget increases 4.5%

The city of Grosse Pointe adopted a $3,167,930 budget May 20. The amount represents an increase of $136,940 or 4.5 percent more than last year.

The property tax rate, 17.42 mills, will remain the same, however the state equalized valuation increased 2.6 percent. The increase will amount to about $22.60 more to a property owner whose home is assessed at $50,000, City Manager Thomas Kressbach said.

Property taxes and state-shared revenues will make up for most of the increase in this year's budget, he said, with about $16,000 coming from fund equity.

Salaries and fringe benefits for all personnel, including public safety, account for 67.8 percent of the budget. The next largest outlay, for contractual services, has a 27.3 percent share of the pie. The category includes utilities, building and equipment maintenance, insurance, legal fees, seminars and other services.

Some of the individual expenses that have increased are postage at 10 percent, rock salt at 14.5 percent, energy at 15 percent and refuse disposal at 7 percent. The report noted that insurance costs "are showing a disturbing trend toward higher premiums."

The report also noted that since the city is currently engaged in compulsory arbitration proceedings for public safety, the final salaries are unknown and will affect the budget.

The new budget includes an additional $5,500 for patrol car replacement and $2,500 for future computer equipment replacement. Federal revenue sharing, which expires in September 1986, is expected to be $24,200 this year. The money will be used for street resurfacing, as it has in the past. The report noted that the street system is in good condition due to significant street resurfacing that has taken place in recent years.

The report also notes that there are 734 parking meters in the city, with the majority of them 14 or more years old. The administration recommends that a meter replacement program be started this year.

Society surveys pre-1940 buildings

The team of Maggle Mayer and Dick Platt appear to be enjoying the weather, which cooperated on both Saturdays of the survey.

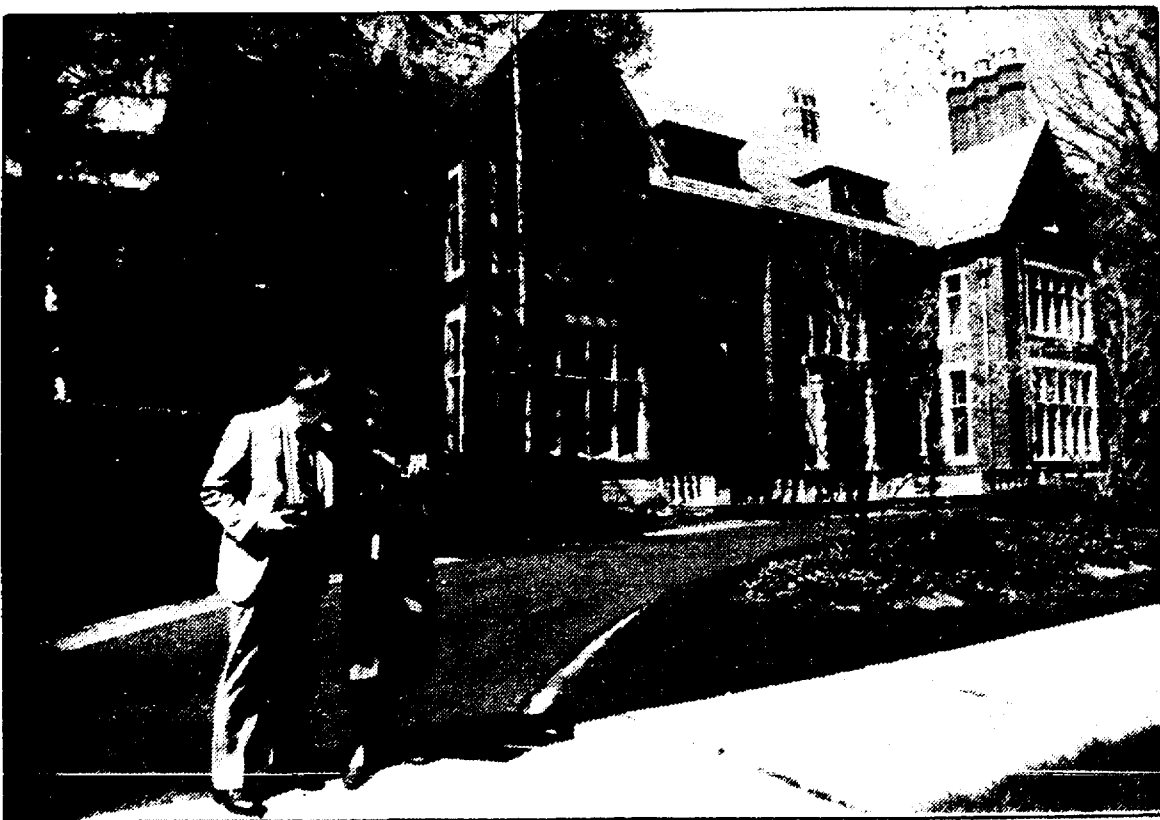

Audrey Platt, member of the board of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society who helped organize the survey, takes notes while Wilma Urban takes pictures.

Oblivious to the traffic, Jerry Hankus gets in the middle of the road for this one, while Lucy Hamilton stands on safer ground.

More than 1,500 structures were recorded and photographed by volunteers of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society recently. The survey, conducted in the City of Grosse Pointe, took two Saturdays to complete. The weather cooperated as 22 volunteers, working in teams of two, surveyed 80 blocks. In most cases, residents were happy to share any information they had regarding their homes. Some volunteers were given personal tours and shown original blueprints and abstracts. Giaconda McMillan and Audrey Platt organized the survey. Both women are members of the society's board. Phase II of the survey, organizing the data and researching the buildings, is under way. Persons interested in this aspect of the project are invited to call the historical society at 884-7010.

Julius Dudzinski and Jean Dodenhoff, the curator of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, compare notes.

Giaconda McMillan, a board member and organizer of the survey, and Lisa Gandelot, president of the society, enjoy a lull while Bob Hatch shoots a house.

From Another Pointe Of View

By Peggy O'Connor

We've made it past Memorial Day and the jumble of June weddings, graduations, and garden parties is not yet upon us. That odd "what do I do now?" feeling is typical of this week, which can be referred to as "May's Last Stand . . . or The Calm Before the Storm."

The War Memorial's Service League has found plenty to do, though. In fact, Corinne Dolega and Virginia Kasza, co-chairmen of the Service League's Studio Sale set for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. this Saturday, June 1, have banded together with their crew of volunteers to give a thorough cleaning to the War Memorial's attic.

To be sure, Corinne and Virginia and the rest of the Service League have stayed busy giving tours, caring for the Center's plants, hosting various events and laboring over tattered tapestries. But in addition to "business as usual," they've managed to get together an assortment which includes two pianos (one a baby grand), watercolors, oils, frames, draperies, furniture, business equipment, costumes, paperbacks, Oriental rugs, floor lamps, chairs and a floor polisher, for the Saturday sale.

Proceeds from the Studio Sale will go toward restoration of the War Memorial's library . . . still another focus for the busy, busy folks at the Service League.

Speaking of furniture . . .

While we're on the subject of finding something to do (we knew you just couldn't sit still this week) and on the subject of furniture . . . there's this weekend's exciting Christ Church Grosse Pointe Antique Show. There'll be furniture, porcelain, silver, and antique collectibles of all kinds at the show, this Saturday and Sunday, June 1 and 2, in the gymnasium at Grosse Pointe South High School.

Admission to the show, which runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and from noon until 6 p.m. on Sunday, is $3. Food and refreshments will be available. Co-chairmen Wendy Jennings and Susie McMillan are excited about the show, Grosse Pointe's first major antique show in four years. And when veteran antique collectors like Wendy and Susie get excited, prospective antique-buyers should get excited, too. A variety of antique dealers from Michigan, Illinois and Ohio will participate in the show, which is being held to benefit this summer's Christ Church Men and Boys Choir trip throughout England and France — with stops at Westminster Abbey, York and Canterbury Cathedral and Paris' Notre Dame Cathedral.

Further information on the Antique Show may be obtained by calling 885-4841.

How about a walk?

If the aforementioned events of the upcoming weekend don't satisfy your need for something to do, how about planning ahead for next weekend and taking a walk?

Musical evening kicks off 'Olympics'

By Irene Moran

The 1985 "Piano Olympics" — a contest of 1,300 talented pianists worldwide, sponsored by the Young Keyboard Artists Association (YKAA) — culminates on the University of Michigan's Ann Arbor campus during its Festival week, June 16 through 22.

This year, in order to accommodate its expanding needs, the Grand Rapids-based YKAA brings its fifth annual International Piano Competition to the Ann Arbor site.

For the occasion, Tim Hoy, general manager of Hammell Music, Inc., and his staff, hosted a reception welcoming Dale Nyboer, YKAA president and executive director, to the Detroit and Ann Arbor areas. The May 14 party was held in Hammell's Livonia establishment, which provided a unique "pianistic setting."

Nyboer indicated that the competition's success was due to the efforts of many devoted supporters. Those present included YKAA board members Lynne Bartholomew, first vice president and an associate professor of piano at the U. of M. School of Music; Mrs. Gordon J. Brinks of Grand Rapids, treasurer; Joanne Smith, coordinator of the competition's Junior Artists Division and a U. of M. piano faculty member; and Ellen Weckler, formerly of the U. of M. piano faculty. With the exception of Mrs. Brinks, all served as judges at the YKAA preliminary auditions.

Nyboer also called upon Lynne Bartholomew who told the partygoers of her judging experiences throughout Canada shared by colleagues Weckler and Smith. "The talent was incredibly outstanding," she said. "On one occasion a 12-year-old girl had a memory slip and despite some accompanied sobs during the rest of her performance she still proved to be most extraordinary."

The evening's "Musical Interlude" was presented by Steinway Artist Ruth Burczyk, of Grosse Pointe.

The 1985 "Piano Olympics," a contest of 1,300 talented pianists worldwide sponsored by the Young Keyboard Artists Association (YKAA), got an excellent start on May 14 when Tim Hoy (above, left) hosted a reception for YKAA president and executive director Dale Nyboer (right). Also present for the "Musical Interlude" that evening were Steinway Artist Ruth Burczyk, of Grosse Pointe, (at the piano) and Mrs. Patrick G. McKeever, also of Grosse Pointe.

THE YOUNG KEYBOARD Artists Association, a non-profit organization, was founded in 1980 by Nyboer to provide performance opportunities and piano study scholarships for talented young people. For the purpose of showcasing talented pianists, the YKAA presented its first annual International Piano Competition in 1981, which drew 85 contestants. Today, with an enrollment of 1,300 contestants vying for $55,000 in various prizes, it now stands as one of the largest and most prestigious piano competitions worldwide. This year's competition includes pianists from the U.S. and nine other countries: Canada, Poland, Belgium, France, Italy, South Africa, Japan, Mexico and the Netherlands.

The YKAA "Piano Olympics" attributes its phenomenal growth to its unique philosophy envisioned by Nyboer, an accomplished pianist and an adjudicator for many major piano competitions.

There are no age restrictions in the YKAA competition. Different age groups are represented in four divisions. The Junior Artists Division is divided into 10 levels corresponding to ages from 8 or younger to 18. An Intermediate Artists Division is for pianists 19 to 21; a Young Artists Division, 22 to 32; and an Artists Division 33 and over. Contestants may choose to compete in Levels or Divisions for ages older than their own, but not younger, and may enter in more than one division. This year's oldest contestant is 61.

There are four stages in the YKAA piano competition — and the elimination process becomes more refined at each stage.

THE 1985 COMPETITION began on Feb. 28 with 1,300 contestants judged at 41 preliminary audition centers throughout the United States and Canada. In March, the Detroit Community Music School became the first Detroit audition center. Entrants who were unable to perform live auditions (due to distance, etc.) were judged by a submitted tape, permissible only in the preliminaries. During this first stage, ending on April 6, 615 semi-finalists were promoted and invited to compete in Ann Arbor. To date, 525 have responded. From this group of semi-finalists, 150 will be judged as finalists. As the intensity and excitement grows, the final match in keyboard skills takes place, with the winners of 105 awards, totaling $55,000, being announced at the Banquet and Awards Ceremony.

DSO picks Stein for Exxon/Arts endowment

Stephen Stein has been selected to join the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's staff as the Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductor for the 1985-86 season, according to Symphony Music Director Gunther Herbig.

"We think we have found a person who is not only an excellent musician, but who is also very vivid, very open and outgoing and able to establish an immediate connection with the Orchestra," Herbig said. "We are convinced that he will be able to do the same with an audience and we believe that he has a rising career and a promising future."

Final auditions for the Exxon/Arts Endowment conducting position took place during two Detroit Symphony rehearsals on May 18, with eight contestants. The selection of Stein, a joint decision of the music director and musicians, was made in consultation with a panel of orchestra management and Affiliate Artists, Inc.

The Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductors Program, created and managed by Affiliate Artists, Inc., is a long-range effort to develop future music directors for American symphony orchestras. Launched in 1973, the nationwide program is sponsored by Exxon Corporation, the National Endowment for the Arts and participating orchestras. The selection of Stein marks the first time the Detroit Symphony has participated in the program.

Stein holds a Bachelor's degree from Northwestern University and a Master's from the University of Southern California. He has worked with orchestras and opera companies in Boston, San Diego, Frankfurt and Hamburg and as a guest conductor, has led the National Symphony Orchestra, the Richmond (Ind.) Symphony, the Philharmonic Orchestra of Brasov (Rumania) and the St. Louis Youth Orchestra. During the 1985-86 season, he has engagements scheduled with the Owensboro (Ky.) Symphony and the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Jerome Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Sullivan, of The Woods, is the recipient of the 1985 Linsenmeyer Award for Service for his support of the University of Detroit. He is a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers; Tau Beta Pi, the Engineering Honor Society; and the Electrical Engineering Honor Society, Eta Kappa Nu. Sullivan, who received a Bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from U-D in May, worked on co-op for IBM in Boca Raton, Fla., for four terms.

Museum has summer fun ideas for kids

Have you thought about what you are going to do with the children when they're out of school this summer?

The Friends of the Children's Museum has some ideas. The Museum is in Detroit's Cultural Center at 67 E. Kirby, and you'll recognize it by Silverbolt on the front lawn. You know Silverbolt - it's the statue of a horse built from chrome bumpers.

Granted, a child can only spend so much time climbing on or over Silverbolt, but what about the fascinating activities inside? There's star-gazing at the Planetarium, where the night sky is projected on an overhead dome, and where a guide is there to point out pictures in the sky each summer afternoon at 1 p.m.

At 2 p.m., youngsters are invited to be thoroughly absorbed with shells, rocks, minerals, stamp-collecting and all kinds of crafts to keep the restless ones busy and safe.

The Friends of the Children's Museum contribute time and talent to fascinate children. One Friend is a wood-worker, another an architect who, along with a professional painter, a crafts expert and a sculptress, worked to restore a valuable dollhouse. Another Friend donated his shell collection to tickle the children's fancies, and still another has displayed her international doll collection.

Children's Museum membership is $15 a year for a single person, $25 a year for the whole family. For more details, call Ruth Friesema at 494-1223.

Membership means you'll be part of the third oldest Children's Museum in the world. It was established in 1917 as part of the Detroit Public School System, and ever since, teachers have brought their classes in on field trips during the school year. During the summer, it is open for all youngsters in the afternoons and it is estimated that the Museum greets over 60,000 visitors a year.

To get an idea of what goes on, the Children's Museum will hold an Open House during the International Freedom Festival on Friday, June 28. You'll see children lined up to paint pictures, involved in crafts and enjoying exhibits and much more.

A toast - to penguins

The newly-renovated Detroit Zoo Pinguinarium will officially open its doors during a champagne reception from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. next Thursday, June 6. A ribbon-cutting is slated for 6 p.m. Lawrence Buhl, president of the Detroit Zoological Society, will assist with ceremonies that highlight the Society's $600,000 investment in the Pinguinarium.

Lizza-Jevons vows exchanged

Deborah Susan Jevons and Thomas Michael Lizza exchanged marriage vows Friday, October 5, in St. Paul's On-the-Lake. Father Thomas Finnigan and the Reverend Paul Keppler presided at the 6 o'clock ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Lochmoor Club.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Jevons, of River Road, wore a gown of white silk organza appliqued at the bodice, neckline and sleeves with Princess lace and embroidered with pearls and sequins. Her three-tiered veil fell from a headpiece of beaded lace.

The former Miss Jevons carried an arrangement of white gardenias, stephanotis, baby's-breath and white silk roses. She was attended by her sister, Kathleen Jevons O'Boyle, as honor matron, and by two other sisters, Cynthia Jevons and Kimberly Jevons, and by two sisters of the bridegroom, Laura Lizza Bommarito and Jeanne Lizza. They wore dresses of dusty rose taffeta styled with short, full sleeves and scoop necklines accented with appliqued lace. Each carried a bouquet of purple elegance, baby's-breath and ivy. The dress worn by flower girl Andrea O'Boyle, the bride's niece, matched those of the attendants; she carried a basket of flower petals.

John Lizza came from Denver, Colo., to serve as best man for his brother. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Lizza, of Lothrop Road. Ushers were another brother, Michael Lizza, and Jeffrey Tolari, Donald Trybus and Robert Veneri. The bridegroom's nephew, John Bommarito, was ring bearer.

Former Grosse Pointe Woods resident Janet Maylock flew in from California to perform a reading during the ceremony. The bride's brother-in-law, Michael O'Boyle, was soloist.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of mauve crepe trimmed at the wrists and neckline with embroidered eyelet. The bridegroom's mother's dress was French silk worn with a beige lace overlay. Each mother pinned a cymbidium orchid corsage to her gown.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Lizza

The newlyweds vacationed in St. Thomas, the Virgin Islands. They are at home on Vernier Road in the Woods.

Miss Engelbrecht wed in April

St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Woods was the setting Friday, April 26, for the wedding of Jane Ellen Engelbrecht and Robert Michael Bashara. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Engelbrecht, of St. Clair Shores. The bridegroom is the son of George Bashara, of Fontana Lane, and Nancy Bashara, of St. Clair Shores.

Father Robert Neily, pastor of St. Michael's, officiated at the 6 o'clock ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Gourmet House. The newlyweds took a Pacific cruise to Mexico and are now at home in St. Clair Shores.

The former Miss Engelbrecht wore her mother's wedding gown and asked her sister, Mrs. Janet Gottsleben, to be her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were another sister, Julie Engelbrecht, a sister of the bridegroom, Laura Bashara, and Mrs. Patti Egnatios and Mrs. Raeywen Beck. A cousin of the bridegroom, Cynthia Elfers, of London, Ont., was junior bridesmaid and another cousin, Andrea George, was flower girl.

George Bashara was best man at his son's wedding. Ushers included John Engelbrecht, a brother of the bride, Mark Brinker, a cousin of the bridegroom, Gregory Woodbury and Marshall Beck. Gregory Elfers, another cousin of the bridegroom from London, Ont., was ring bearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Bashara

Candlelight vows exchanged last summer

The First Congregational Church in Rockford, Mich., was the setting on Monday, Aug. 20, 1984, for the candlelight wedding ceremony of Susan Lynn Launs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Launs, of Buckingham Road, and Brian Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Graves, of Rockford.

The bride chose a gown of Chantilly lace and sheer English netting, accented by a high-necked bodice and long sleeves, for her wedding, at which her father gave a special blessing. A Juliet cap caught a fingertip veil, its scalloped edges trimmed with matching Chantilly lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk roses and stephanotis, with baby's-breath.

Wendy Kim Launs came from Chicago, Ill., to serve as maid of honor for her twin sister. She wore a cocktail length dress of soft ivory silk, accented in peach and featuring short, tulip-style sleeves and a rolled bow neckline. Bridesmaids included another sister, Tracy Ann, a sister of the bridegroom, Jennifer Graves, and Gerri Felows, of Mt. Pleasant and Sue Louwers, of Grosse Pointe. Each wore a cocktail length dress of periwinkle blue and carried a single white silk rose and baby's-breath accented with a touch of blue.

Mr. Graves asked Michael Jacobs, of Rockford, to act as best man. Ushers included two more brothers, Kent and Brent Graves, and Phillip Cheodle, and a brother of the bride, Brad Launs, of Orlando, Fla.

The bridegroom's nieces, Molly and Megan Graves, served as flower girls and carried straw baskets of white silk roses and baby's-breath. Ring bearers were cousins of the bride, Brian and Craig Launs.

The mother of the bride wore a cocktail length dress of ivory French silk and Quaker lace, trimmed down the front with small pearl buttons. The bridegroom's mother chose an ivory linen suit worn with a peach silk blouse. Each wore a corsage of peach silk, Sweetheart roses and baby's-breath.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Graves are at home in Birmingham, Ala., where the bride is a manager with Red Roof Inns. Among those on the steering committee for the wine auction are pointers Seth M. Lloyd IV, Willa (Mrs. Albert) Thiess and George H. Herbst.

The Detroit Wine Auction has been selected as the only charity auction in the country to receive the grand piano case from the Far Niente Winery in Napa Valley. This year's presentation case contains the first release of 1982 Far Niente Cabernet Sauvignon and consists of six bottles ranging in size from a half bottle to an imperial. Other rare wines for sale will include a jeroboam of 1978 Stag's Leap Cabernet Sauvignon and six magnums of a special selection of 1979 Louis N. Martini Cabernet Sauvignon.

The wonders of Venezuela's amazing 'Lost Worlds' are discovered by science

By Thomas Harney
Smithsonian News Service
"Why shouldn't somethin' new and wonderful lie in such a country?"
Professor George Challenger (explorer in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, The Lost World)

In southern Venezuela's Guayana Highlands, in the center of a vast, unbroken primeval rain forest as remote and inaccessible as any place in the world, are a series of great mesas with towering, impassable walls. These are the fabled Lost Worlds: the inspiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous science-fiction novel about an explorer who climbed to the top of a high South American mesa and found living dinosaurs and other "missing links" surviving from the Jurassic period, 150 million years or so ago.

Doyle's adventure tale, later made into a popular Hollywood movie, was just a fantasy. Yet the high Venezuelan mesas called tepuis (pronounced ta-poo-ees) are real. Only partially explored, they remain a scientific enigma.

Bizarre species of flora and fauna existing nowhere else in the world have evolved on the tepuis' high island in the sky plateaus and peaks. On one such tepui, Cerro de la Neblina, giant pitcher and other insectivorous plants abound, spectacular orchids grow on the ground instead of on trees, flightless grasshoppers and giant earthworms make an occasional appearance, tiny black frogs and lizards move through dense mats of vegetation and birds sing from the moss-covered branches of dwarf trees.

Scientists believe that some of the species on this tepui are descended from ancient lineages, dating back to Jurassic times.

The highest, largest, most isolated and least known of the tepuis is Cerro de la Neblina: The Mountain of the Mists. It is, in essence, a living laboratory where scientists from Venezuela, the United States and other nations are for the first time studying in detail the unique species that have evolved in isolation on a cool, temperate island surrounded by a hot, tropical forest sea.

In the United States, expeditions are supported by the Smithsonian Institution, the American Museum of Natural History and the National Science Foundation.

The first United States team to visit Neblina arrived in January 1984 for a three-month stay. It included biologists from the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History, the Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service, the New York and Missouri Botanical Gardens and the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Roy W. McDiarmid, an FWS zoologist and a veteran of other tepui expeditions, coordinated team logistics.

The scientists flew from Caracas to Puerto Ayacucho, the capital of Amazonas, where all roads into the interior end. The expedition's leader, Dr. Charles Brewer of Venezuela's Foundation for the Development of Physical, Mathematical and Natural Sciences, had arranged for aircraft to pick them up and carry them south to San Carlos, a small village on the northern reaches of the Rio Negro.

A six-hour boat ride brought the scientists from San Carlos to a pick-up point where they were met by helicopter.

Present-day Lost Worlds explorers Jerry Louton and Oliver Flint, from the Smithsonian, and Alfred Garner, from the FWS, baked in the equatorial sun, slapping at seething clouds of insects as they waited for the helicopter. "We prayed we wouldn't have to spend the night," entomologist Louton recalls.

The helicopter took them over a seemingly limitless expanse of forest, virtually devoid of human habitation. After 90 miles, the clouds cleared and Cerro de la Neblina emerged—a vast, gray, 250-square-mile mountainous formation rising to a 7,500-foot-high plateau. The tepui has several peaks. The tallest, at 10,000 feet, is the highest mountain in South America outside the Andes.

The plateau is slashed through its center by a huge canyon, giving the tepui a horseshoe shape. This canyon, thousands of feet deep and about 25 miles long, with many tributary ravines, rivals even the United States Grand Canyon for its rugged relief.

Neblina and the other tepuis are the eroded remains of a great sandstone tabletop formation that once covered millions of square miles of the Guayana Highlands. Geologically, the Highlands are part of the Guayana Shield, one of South America's oldest exposed landmasses and some of the continent's oldest continuously habitable land.

The tepuis vary in size and shape and in the diversity of their flora and fauna. Some have flat summits. Others are eroded. Neblina is partially forested and has a great variety of biological habitats, but some tepuis are little more than bare rock. Others have spectacular waterfalls. Angel Waterfall on Auyan tepui in southeastern Venezuela drops 3,212 feet. It is the highest waterfall in the world.

Most Europeans in the 19th and early 20th centuries had only the haziest notion that Cerro Neblina existed. It was only officially "discovered" and explored in 1953 by an expedition from the New York Botanical Garden led by Dr. Bassett Maguire and Dr. John Wurdack, now a Smithsonian Institution botanist.

"We saw Neblina from the Rio Pacimoni, at a distance of about 50 miles," Wurdack recalls, "but it took us a month, traveling in motor-powered dugout canoes, to get there. The rivers and streams meandered in so many directions that we were often lost, and we were also slowed by logs clogging the streams.

"When we finally reached the base of the tepui, our Indian guides climbed the mountain slopes and cut a path for us—but it still took 10 days or more before we could find a break in the mountain's steep escarpment and make our way onto the plateau. We stayed at the top for a month collecting plants. The guides brought food up to us. It rained almost all the time."

Today's tepui expeditions are somewhat less arduous, thanks to airplanes and helicopters. Scientists participating in the 1984-85 Neblina expeditions, for example, stay on the lower slopes of the mountain at a base camp consisting of two sleeping sheds and a laboratory/storage shed.

From this camp collecting forays can be made on the mountain slopes on trails cut by Indians and scientists, and by canoe along the small river and its tributaries that flow out of the canyon. Helicopters take the scientists up the canyon and to the flat-topped summit in minutes.

He believes that "more than 90 percent of the plant species of the Neblina summit occur nowhere else on Earth."

Detroit Artists Market Garden Sale is June 4

Even a rainy day can't stop the annual Garden Sale presented by the Detroit Artists Market. It's set for Tuesday, June 4, with a Wednesday, June 5 rain day. The Garden Sale has been an integral part of the Market's 50-year history and is a major fundraiser for the group. Those interested in attending should call the Artists Market for further information at 926-0337.

The Garden Sale — with its outdoor setting designed to act as a stimulus to the purchase and appreciation of art — includes juried selections of paintings, clay, fiber, glass, jewelry and sculpture produced by regional artists. Several artists whose work is being shown will be present for discussions during the Sale; they include Richard Jerzy, of Indian Village (painting); Michael Jackson, of Detroit (painting); Anita Flory, of Birmingham (papier-mache); Albert Young, Birmingham B.B.A.A. (glass);

Julia Gleich, of Ann Arbor (illustration and graphic design); and Carol Beach, of Southfield (paper).

Sue Bolt, who has been showing her ceramics at the Artists Market for 20 years, has donated one of her pieces to the Garden Sale to be used as door prize. Anyone making a purchase at the Sale may enter the drawing for the door prize.

The Detroit Artists Market is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to exhibit and sell the work of local artists. It was organized in 1932 by those concerned with the future of young artists who were graduating and had no place to exhibit their work. Originally set up to accept only the work of artists under 30, the Market now takes the work of any living artist who lives or formerly lived within a 60-mile radius of Detroit.

Mrs. Mildred Simpson, the Artists Market founder, believed in the creativity and productivity of the Detroit artists and in an appreciative community. Her feeling was that if they could be brought together — the artist, ceramist and sculptor with the buyer and collector — all would benefit and the community would be enriched.

The Artists Market is manned by volunteers and is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Sunday. The exhibitions change each month and are planned in advance by the Exhibition Committee. The showings include theme and idea shows, group shows, and one- and two-man shows.

Further information on the Garden Sale or on Detroit Artists Market activities may be obtained by calling 926-0337.

Grantland S. Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Rice, of Fordcroft Road, has achieved distinction and been named to the first semester Dean's List for the academic year 1984-85 at Colby College, Waterville, Me. A Grosse Pointe North High School graduate, Rice is a junior majoring in American Studies.

Anita Flory, of Birmingham is one of the artists whose work is currently on exhibit at the Detroit Artists Market. She will be at the Garden Sale, showing her papier-mache animals.

Sister Lucretia is living her dream

The year was 1935. Big band music was the rage and Fred and Ginger were gracing the silver screen. In Michigan, an eight-bed convalescent home was being planned for a Grosse Pointe location by the Sisters of Bon Secours. At that same time, in the small town of Branchdale, Penn., a 17-year-old girl left home to enter the convent in Baltimore, Md. She also had dreams of becoming a nurse.

Today, Sister Lucretia Gottschall, C.B.S., is living her dream and celebrating her 50th anniversary as a Sister of Bon Secours. She not only cared for patients at the Sisters' original eight-bed convalescent home, which began in 1938 in Grosse Pointe, but helped it to develop into Bon Secours Hospital in 1945. As a nurse and a friend, she has touched the lives of countless people associated with Bon Secours Hospital.

Although high technology and the latest medical knowledge are used daily at Bon Secours, Sister Lucretia has consistently delivered the personalized care and compassion that is the core of Bon Secours Hospital's mission and philosophy.

"Fifty years, it doesn't even feel like 50 months. Time has gone so fast," she exclaims.

The Sisters of Bon Secours first came to Detroit to nurse the sick in their homes in 1909. Upon personal request from Detroit Bishop John Foley and Mother Juliana, the superior of the Baltimore, Md., community, five sisters were assigned to Detroit. These sisters brought from France the Bon Secours philosophy of "good help" to the Detroit-area. That philosophy is practiced today by Sister Lucretia, who makes daily rounds to nearly every hospital patient. Her concern is for the patients' spiritual and physical well-being. She relays any requests patients may have to the pastoral care chaplains.

Sister Lucretia makes a point of telephoning all of the patients she visits about a month after their discharge to see how they are doing.

"I call patients when they go home to talk with them. If they need help, I direct them to a dietitian or a social worker. It depends on the situation," she says.

According to Sister Lucretia, she has held every position at Bon Secours Hospital "from soup to nuts." Her commitment to caring for others comes naturally. It is her way of life. As she explains, "I took a vow of poverty. When you take a vow you follow it. I help others because the Lord has been good to me and I owe Him plenty."

According to Ralph Kliber, chairman of the Bon Secours Hospital Board of Directors, Sister Lucretia's deeds characterize abstract terms like kindness and understanding.

"Sister Lucretia is proof positive that patients at Bon Secours Hospital equate her with kindness and understanding. When the name of the hospital enters a conversation, the same question is asked: 'How is Sister Lucretia?'" Kliber says.

Retirement isn't in Sister Lucretia's immediate future. "I plan to work until I cannot work," she says. "When it's time to retire, then I'll get a rocker, take it gracefully and just relax," she smiles.

It's 1985. A lot has changed in 50 years. Big band music has faded into rock videos and Fred and Ginger have long since retired. Sister Lucretia, however, is still going strong.

Sister Lucretia Gottschall's familiar smile.

Elegant Eating

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol — and penny-wise — collection of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth, featuring this week, more FOODS WITH VITAMIN POWER.

Peppers and tomatoes are low in calories and pack a nutritional wallop. Peppers contain more vitamin C than oranges and as they age, they acquire a good supply of vitamin A — beta carotene. Tomatoes are an excellent source of C, A, potassium, magnesium and calcium. A medium-sized tomato contains as much vitamin C as half a grapefruit and has only 35 calories.

SKILLET PEPPER AND TOMATOES

1/2 Tbsp. margarine
1 1/2 cups sliced sweet onions
2 green peppers
3 medium tomatoes
1/4 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. oregano or Italian seasoning

Cut the green peppers into thin slices. Peel the tomatoes and cut into 8 wedges each.

Melt the margarine in a non-stick skillet over low heat. Add the onions and saute until tender. Add the green pepper, tomatoes and seasonings. Cover the skillet and simmer the contents for about 10 minutes, or just until tomatoes are crisp-tender. Makes 6 servings.

Calories about 43 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

STUFFED BELL PEPPERS

2 large bell peppers
1 1/2 cups basic fresh tomato sauce
2 cups steamed brown rice
3 1/2 oz. low calorie cheese, grated
2 Tbsp. chopped parsley
1/2 tsp. Italian seasoning

Cut bell peppers in half lengthwise; remove seeds and membranes. Steam pepper halves until cooked crisp-tender. Set aside.

Combine 1/2 cup basic fresh tomato sauce with steamed brown rice, half the grated cheese, 1 Tbsp. chopped parsley and Italian seasoning. Heat over moderate heat, stirring gently, until well blended and cheese is melted. (Add a little water, if necessary, to prevent sticking.)

Spoon remaining tomato sauce into bottom of baking dish. Place pepper halves on the sauce, then fill with rice mixture. Top with remaining cheese. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven until hot and cheese is melted. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve. Makes 4 servings.

Calories about 240 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

FRESH CORN-STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

6 medium sweet peppers
3 cups fresh corn, cut off the cob

1 cup diced fresh tomato
1 Tbsp. chopped fresh onion
3 Tbsp. flour
1/8 tsp. salt
1 tsp. chili powder
1/4 tsp. ground black pepper
2 Tbsp. unsalted margarine, melted

Slice tops from peppers; carefully remove seeds and membranes. Parboil peppers in boiling salted water for 5 minutes in covered saucepan. Remove. Drain thoroughly. Combine remaining ingredients and spoon into drained green peppers. Place in baking pan and bake in preheated 375 degree oven for 35 minutes or until done. Makes 6 servings.

ITALIAN GREEN PEPPERS II

4 green peppers
2 Tbsp. margarine, divided
1 bouillon cube,
1/4 cup water, boiling
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
2 tsp. sugar
1/4 tsp. black pepper
1/2 tsp. crushed basil

Cut off stems from peppers and remove seeds. Cut peppers into 1-inch cubes; saute in 1 Tbsp. margarine 10 minutes. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water and add to peppers, cover and simmer 20 minutes. Drain and set aside.

Saute garlic and onion in 1 Tbsp. margarine. Add tomatoes, sugar, pepper, and basil; simmer 30 minutes. Place peppers in a shallow serving dish and spoon sauce on top. Makes 6 servings.

Calories per serving about 75. Cholesterol 0.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Just thinking . . .

The guy who thought up the schedule for state high school tournament competition in Michigan must have more personalities than "Sybil." Or at least he thinks we newspaper slobs do.

What better way to insure terrific coverage of state district and final competition than to schedule most of them on the SAME DAY! This Saturday, we've got the state Class A track finals in Flint, the Class C-D tennis finals in Kalamazoo and the Class A tennis finals who knows where. Closer to home, they've got North and South playing in a district baseball final at North . . . at approximately the same time North's girls are in a softball final.

Gee, and I failed to add the warp drive option to the package when I bought my car.

Five favorite sights of the nearly-completed spring sports season: 1.) The grins on the faces of North's girls' soccer team after they'd won the league title. 2.) Rob Wood's fist-in-the-air home run trot after his three-run shot in South's pre-district baseball win. 3.) Boys' lacrosse at University Liggett School. 4.) The refreshment stand at the girls' regional final (in 85 degrees) at Troy Athens High School. 5.) The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club dock upon my return from the first leg of the Keelboat Regatta earlier this month.

If Star of the Sea volleyball coaches Margaret Spindler and Val Johnson are looking ahead, I think I've got a great prospect for the 1991 volleyball season. She's Sarah Garza, 7, a second grader at Guardian Angels School. In the space of one afternoon, she learned to serve a volleyball like a, well, like a future Tuna. And she should develop well under the tutelage of her aunt, who shall remain nameless.

Need any All-Star ballots? Stop by at 99 Kercheval Avenue, which has become, courtesy of the Detroit Tigers, a sort of Election Headquarters-East for the 1985 All-Star game. In the note which came with the ballots, the Tigers asked that we give "special consideration" to the six Tigers on the ballot.

They are Alan Trammell, Lou Whitaker, Darryl Evans, Lance Parrish, Kirk Gibson and Chet Lemon. Don't ask me which one I'd vote for because I'm not sure. I want to find out which one is the best pool player first. Because the Minneapolis Metrodome, site of this year's All-Star Game, is the biggest bumper pool table in the world and I don't want our guys going out there and looking dumb.

Sharp-eyed readers will notice that your's truly has been doubling as Feature-Society Editor of the News' Second Section for the last couple of weeks. It's been loads of fun describing wedding gowns and writing club notices, but I'll be glad to get back to just plain old sportswriting. And it won't be a moment too soon, either. Last week, I found myself taking notes at a baseball game and jotting down that the opposition was "nattily attired in red and white doubleknit."

Does South pitcher Rick Leonard remind anybody else but me of Lou Wassel, the tall, rangy, hard-throwing pitcher currently the center of the storyline in the comic strip "Gill Thorp"? Except that Leonard throws a lot harder and isn't as wild as Wassel.

Hey, you don't like my comparisons to comic strip characters? Take it to "Judge Parker."

Least favorite sights so far this spring sports season: 1.) Amelia Dugan's last game for North's soccer team. 2.) The early playoff exits by South in soccer and softball. 3.) Wednesday afternoon rains which washed out at least two of my planned sitting-in-the-sun-at-a-baseball-game routines. 4.) Joey Johnston's leg in a cast for the North-South soccer game. 5.) Rusty Kuntz's trip down to Nashville.

Is Troy Michigan's youth soccer mecca? You tell me. On a recent sunny Saturday afternoon in Troy, I passed three empty baseball fields but every soccer field I drove by was busy. It's a weird feeling after cruising around Grosse Pointe, where every field is in use just about all Saturday long.

Loved Rick Waugaman's imitation of Dave "Kong" Kingman in last Friday's South High baseball win over Finney, 11-1. Waugaman hit a home run over left center and I think the ball is still rolling down Fisher Road.

By the way, Waugaman and South face No. 2-ranked Bishop Gallagher at 10 a.m. this Saturday at North. The Norsemen (5-0 winners over Lake Shore last week) play Roseville at 12:30 p.m. The winners play for the district title at 3 p.m.

What I want to know is who's going to get BG's ace pitcher Dave Peralta, North or South.

I've got to go now and figure out how to be in two places at one time this Saturday. (Is there a Dr. Jekyll in the house?)

Troy Athens' depth too much for North

By Peggy O'Connor

If the North-Troy Athens regional soccer final last Saturday had been 11 against 11, the outcome might have been different than the 2-1 final in the Red Hawks' favor. Instead, No. 2 Athens' deep bench provided plenty of fresh troops against North in the 85 degree heat and North's bid for a regional championship was denied.

That second goal never should have happened. It was a matter of fatigue . . . — North soccer coach Guido Reggelbrugge

Troy Athens scored early when Shelly Habol got past the North defense on the right side and the Hawks led, 1-0, at 13:25 of the first half. North's offense came to life a little after that, especially on a close play from Sue Regalado to Shannon Armstrong. Armstrong's kick was just wide.

The teams traded close plays for the rest of the half as Sue Bond was outstanding goal for the Lady Norsemen. Wendy Claggett also made an outstanding defensive play to save a goal.

North tied the game on a great play by Amelia Dugan. She headed the ball into the net after taking set-ups from Cindy Bowman and Armstrong. And right after that, Wendy Blashill and Bond combined to stop a Troy Athens rush.

North was particularly bothered by the weather conditions, hot and sunny with little wind and no clouds. Troy Athens, the No. 2-ranked team in the state going into the game, was able to substitute frequently and combat the heat.

"That was the problem, they kept throwing new kids in and we couldn't. That was the major difference in the game, we just didn't have the depth," coach Guido Reggelbrugge said.

A Troy Athens goal with 7:39 left in the game decided the regional title. North put pressure on, but after nearly an entire game of trying to hold off a potent Athens offense, couldn't generate enough offense to get the tying goal.

"If it had been 11 on 11 instead of 23 on 11, we'd have won. That second goal shouldn't have happened. It was strictly a matter of fatigue on the part of our kids," Reggelbrugge added.

"But that's the way it goes. The kids gave it all they had and that's all I can ever ask of them."

Even the North players were aware of the difference in depth between the two squads, Reggelbrugge said. Bridget Briery played the entire game with a sore throat and swollen glands, but like several other North players, refused to retire to the bench.

"I had told the kids before the game that our goals before the season started were to win the league — which we did — and get to the regional finals. I told them, now we are here, now we just go for the gravy.

"We didn't get it, but I couldn't have been more proud of our effort."

Reggelbrugge said he knew North would have a tough game against the Red Hawks, who scored four goals in 15 minutes against Troy.

North finished with a 16-2 record, losing only to top-rated Livonia Bentley, 3-2, and to Troy Athens.

To get to the regional final, North beat Warren Woods Tower, 5-1; shut out Chippewa Valley, 2-0, and topped Sterling Heights Stevenson, 5-3.

Buy a hat for charity

The World Champion Detroit Tigers join the Ronald McDonald House team again this year for the third annual Tiger Hat sale.

Over 850,000 Tiger hats will go on sale tomorrow, Friday, May 31, at participating McDonald's restaurants throughout Michigan. The statewide fundraising campaign will benefit Michigan's two Ronald McDonald Houses, temporary homes-away-from-home for families of hospitalized children.

This year's hat sale will feature the Tigers' "away team" cap; the familiar blue hat with Old English-styled orange initial "D". Hats will be offered for $2.49 plus tax in a three-week campaign or while supplies last.

For each hat sold 50 cents will be donated to help open the state's newest Ronald McDonald House this fall in Ann Arbor and to help maintain the existing Detroit House. The 18,000 square-foot Ann Arbor home will temporarily house families of seriously ill children, who are being treated at the University of Michigan Mott Children's Hospital.

Some blame the headache for a sometime disinclination to engage in that thing called physical romance. But in fact, physical romance is often to blame for the headache. So say the medical researchers.

Babe Ruth Park bats booming

The Dodgers bounced back with two victories last week in the Park Babe Ruth major league. Victims were the Farms-Yankees, 6-5, and the Woods-Cardinals, 16-4.

Ferit Nazarko, who came on in the third, gained the decision in the Yankees' contest, although he needed help from Doug Lucas who hurled the last two innings to register the save. Lucas also tripled and singled to drive in three runs. Nazarko also tripled and Dave Salkowski doubled for the winners.

In the Cardinals' game, Salkowski gained the win in relief, yielding only one hit in three innings of relief. He also aided his own cause with three hits, scored four runs, and drove in another. Lucas notched four hits, including a home run and two doubles, and registered five RBI. Nazarko and Matt Turner collected two hits apiece, Turner's blows accounting for two RBI.

The Braves nipped the Woods-Expos, 5-4, on James Cimini's four-hitter. Cimini fanned eight. Marty Saad tripled and singled to drive in two runs for the winners. Marcus Wysocki added a double and two RBI.

The Braves bowed to the Farms-Tigers, 6-2. Saad again tripled and singled for the Braves; Joe Tedesco adding two hits in a losing cause.

Work pays off for South rowers

Months of getting up in time to practice from 5:30 to 7 a.m. in the chilly waters of the Detroit River payed off on May 19 when the dedicated group of Detroit Boat Club rowers from South High surprised older and more seasoned rowers in the Toledo International Regatta.

The Junior 4, comprised of Paul Gryzenia, Jeff Barry, Andy Kosak and Don DelPlace, and coxswain Mickey DelPlace, placed third in the 2000 meter event, beating out two Northwestern University teams, the University of Toledo and Ecorse. It was an upset victory over veteran teams with rowers in their 30s.

The Novice 8, which includes Kosak, Barry, Scott Adragna, Bill Gryzenia, Jeff LeFebvre, Bob Brisley, Kirk Phillips, Taras Gracey and coxswain Steve Strup, placed third and just missed second place by two seconds.

The Detroit Boat Club won the overall meet with many other first and second place finishes in the Senior Singles and in the Senior 8. Milton Osgood did an excellent job at coxing both the Senior 4 and 8; Jeff Pfandner placed fifth in the singles against senior scullers.

The coaches of the Detroit Boat Club team are junior coach Chuck Kreiger and senior coach Dick Bell.

North teams geared for playoffs

By Bill Hoover
North High
North's JV varsity track teams completed league competition on May 21, at L'Anse Creuse where they competed in the Bi-County League meet. North's boys' finished second, with 148 points, behind Clintondale, with 169 points.

Performing well for the Norsemen were Phil Shefferly, who finished first in the pole vault (10 feet, 6 inches), and the consistent Brian Bergeron, who finished first in the discus (146 feet, 8 inches).

Also turning in a fine performance was the 3200 meter relay team which finished first with a time of 8:32.

The Lady Norsemen surprised no one by finishing first, with 194 points, and earning a Bi-County title for a second straight year. North, which won three of the four relays, swept both the 330 meter hurdles and the two-mile run.

League champs include Jill Dornbrock, 220 meter and 400 meter runs; Barb Loeher, one-mile run; and Sue Roland, high jump. North's last track competition will be Saturday, June 1, in the state finals in Flint. Starting time is 10 a.m.

JV nine through

North's JV softball team ended its season May 21 with a doubleheader split against Lake Shore. The Norsemen were triumphant in the first game, 7-4, but lost the nightcap, 4-2.

Rob Marshall, who "pitched his best game of the year," according to Coach Dick Grammatico, led the JV to its last victory of the season. Marshall, who struck out 10 while walking only two, helped his own cause by knocking in two runs.

Others contributing offensively were Dave Kopitzke, who went 2-for-3 with an RBI; Jack Williams, who hit a solo home run; and Joe Craparotta, who was 1-for-3 with two RBI.

The JV Norsemen, lacking consistency most of the year, displayed this weakness as they dropped the second game to Lake Shore.

Ninth grader Russell Rice pitched a great game, allowing only four hits and one earned run, but he was denied the win because of seven costly errors. Eddie Wood was the bright spot for North, going 3-for-4 with one RBI. Rice had the other RBI.

Kickers win

North's varsity girls' soccer team continued its excellent play and defeated Sterling Heights Stevenson on May 21, 5-3. The Lady Norsemen, with only one loss of the season, were led in the Stevenson game by Cindy Bowman, who scored three goals; Shannon Armstrong and Alexa Parmentier each scored a goal.

Improved mark

North's JV softball team improved its Bi-County record to 6-4 with an impressive 6-4 win over Lake Shore.

Offensively, the Lady Norsemen were led by Kerrie Trefzer, Lisa VanHollebeke and Kelly Pappas who each had two hits. Denise Kowalke recorded her seventh victory of the season, giving up only one earned run in seven innings.

Softball streak

North's varsity girls' softball team won three of their four games last week, including a no-hit, 5-0, win over Detroit Osborn.

The Lady Norsemen opened the week by splitting a doubleheader with South High on May 18.

In the first game, North scored first but was unable to hold on losing to South, 4-1. Julie Cook had two hits for North in the losing cause.

In the nightcap, North bounced back and mercied South, 13-2, in a win that raised the Lady Norsemen's record to 13-5. Celeste Sartor and Missy Preston each had three hits while Linda Rayos, Amy Domienik and Lori Houtkier had two hits apiece.

Against the Lake Shore Shorians on May 23, the Lady Norsemen won 14-2. North scored eight runs in the fourth inning and went on to win its 10th straight Bi-County game in a row. They remained tied for first place.

Paula Harms, who was the winning pitcher, struck out eight batters and collected two hits. Cook's three-run home run and three-run double led all the hitters. Ellen Gouin had three hits and Leslie Talos added two hits.

The final game of the week was North's 5-0 win over Detroit Osborn.

The Lady Norsemen scored two unearned runs in the fifth inning and went on to win their 14th game of the season behind the no-hit pitching of Harms. It was her third of the 1985 season.

Offensively, Linda Rayos had two hits while Celeste Sartor scored twice.

North won the pre-district after Finney pulled out of the tournament and the Lady Norsemen will go straight to the finals on June 1.

Track trio in last meet

By Peggy O'Connor

With the spring sports season nearly at an end, it's usually the time of year for coaches to look back on what their teams have done and maybe steal a look at what's in store for next year. For South High girls' track coach Steve Zaranek, this year, the process is a bittersweet one.

That's because Zaranek will watch three of his prize pupils — Kerry Bruce, Barb Giroux and Renuka Uthappa — graduate in June. The three have been synonymous with South track for the last four years. And they've been a lot more than that.

Giroux has been a cross country state finalist for three years and a state finalist in track for two. She has a 3.9 GPA and has earned all-league honors in cross country for three years. Giroux holds the school record in the 300 hurdles and this year, was second the EML in cross country, sixth in the state regional and in the top 40 in the state finals. In track, she was second in the EML in the 3200, third in the 1600 and state finalist in the 3200 relay.

Bruce has seven varsity letters, is South's top sprinter for the past two years, and has been a state cross country finalist for two years. She also is on the All-Academic team with a 3.7 GPA.

The third co-captain, Uthappa, has four varsity letters, was a state cross country finalist for two years and a track state finalist this year in two events, the 800 and 3200 relay. She was South's top runner and in addition to her All-EML honors, is on the All-Academic team with a GPA of over 4.0.

"They've really been the focal point of our team for the past four years. They've provided outstanding leadership. They're always there when you need them and more than willing to help out. That's what's impressed me about them," Zaranek says.

"But they are more than just outstanding athletes... they're great people, too."

Bruce, Giroux and Uthappa are typical high school sports stars — they giggle a lot and blush a little when a stranger alludes to their superior talent. But they all agreed on one thing: the secret to South's success in the Eastern Michigan League and in the regionals in the last four years.

"It's Coach Zaranek. He's been here six years and started the cross country program and built up the track program. As a coach, he expects a lot from us and at the same time, makes us learn to realize our expectations of ourselves," Bruce says.

"What I'll always remember about my track experiences is our friendship with Coach," Uthappa says. She's only been on the track team since 11th grade, but knows the key to South's success just as well as Bruce and Giroux. "He's extraordinary in that he's managed to be our friend and our coach at the same time. That's special."

And will they miss him? "Heck, yes," Giroux says. "He put up with our papering his house every year before cross country regionals. He'll miss us, too," she chuckles.

All three are National Honor

Society students who earned several other awards for their academic and extracurricular activities at South. Giroux is headed for Michigan State where she hopes to study business. Bruce is on her way to Kalamazoo College for English and secondary elementary education studies and Uthappa will study medicine at the University of Michigan.

They say they'll continue running on their own... a habit that'll be hard to break after four years on the cross country and track teams for Bruce and Giroux and two four Uthappa.

"I love running. Some people think I'm weird but it makes me feel better, gives me a chance to do a lot of thinking. I'll keep it up," Giroux says. Bruce says that she'll give Kalamazoo's volleyball team — another sport she excelled in at South — a try and perhaps run on a club track team.

All three also say they've gotten a lot more out of running track at South than they've put in, despite their numerous records and achievements.

"In cross country, it's just one big family because there were only 14 of us. And this team, the track team, is just one big group, not just individuals. It was a good group, too," Bruce says.

Giroux, Uthappa and Bruce will go to the state finals for South on June 1. It'll be their last meet as Blue Devils.

"I don't like to think about that," Uthappa says. "The whole thing — running track and cross country — changed my life. I really opened up as a person when I started running."

"Sure, I'll miss it."

All three miss they'll be back some time next year to watch the 1986 cross country and track teams take the field for South. And Zaranek will admit: it'll be nice to see a familiar face... or three.

South qualifies for state track

The boys' and girls' Class A track regionals were held at South High May 18 and while the host teams didn't place first in the region, South will send several competitors to the girls' state final at Flint Northwestern on Saturday, June 1 and the boys' final on June 2.

The South girls' team finished third in the region behind Detroit Osborn and Fraser in the 17-team field. South completely dominated the distance races, placing a Blue Devil runner in every event. South's record-setting 3200 meter relay team of Kelly Riehl, Ellen Mayer, Barb Giroux and Renuka Uthappa was the class of the field, winning by a 10-second margin over second place Kettering.

Giroux and Mayer teamed up with Nancy Solterisch to place in the 1600 relay. Solterisch and Giroux later came back to place in the 3200 run. Both runs by Solterisch qualified her for the state finals; the 3200 meter relay team will also go to the state finals. Renuka Uthappa also qualified for states in the 800 run; Riehl and Micha Song placed in that event in the regionals.

Also placing well for South were Katie Ament in the discus, Mimi Spencer in the high jump, Reba Uthappa in the 400, and 800 relay team of Julie Boyt, Reba Uthappa, Erin Kershaw and Kerry Bruce, and the 1600 relay team of Riehl, Wendy Berger, Uthappa and Uthappa.

South's boys' squad qualified 10 for the state finals. The 3200 meter relay team of Jun Yoshitani, Todd Hawthorne, Kevin English and Chris Astfalk held off other teams in registering their fastest time of the year, 8:12.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the day for South was its 400 meter relay team which raced to a second place finish. Mark Gail, Benji Dolan, Tim Estes and Brian Stratton ran their year's personal best time of 45:48. South's best runner of the day was Astfalk, who ran a tough anchor on the 3200 meter relay, but just missed winning the 1600 meter run. His 4:28 time was one second shy of his personal best this season.

Other qualifiers to the state meet are Brian Kerman, who broke South's discus record enroute to a second place finish (142 feet, 11 inches); Jon Roberts also ran a determined 3200 meter race for a third place finish. He suffered from a stomach muscle problem in the last 800 meters of that race, but held on for the final qualifying place.

Craig Winger, 12, (left) and Michael Bucciero, 12, represented All Pointes Swim Club at the U.S. Boys' State Championship swimming meet at Schoolcraft College recently. Winger swam in the 100 IM and also finished third in the 100 backstroke and seventh in the 50 back. Bucciero swam in the 50 fly and 200 freestyle and also finished 13th in the 50 free, 11th in the 100 IM, sixth in the 100 breaststroke and fifth in the 50 breast.

ULS spring sports season ends

The University Liggett School girls' varsity lacrosse team closed out its season last week with an 8-5-3 record.

ULS played its last game against the Academy of the Sacred Heart, tying 11-11 on May 21. The Lady Knights were behind in goals throughout the game until the last five minutes. Goals were scored by Amy Ottaway, Andra Hirt, Angela Navarro, Shelby Meade and Nancy Georgi.

On May 23, at the Annual Girls' Athletic Banquet, Coach Melinda Reuther announced that Tessa Raymo and Amy Ottaway were selected to the Mid-West All-Star Team. Raymo and Andra Hirt were also chosen by Coach Reuther as Most Valuable Players for the season. (By Amy Ottaway).

TV jets loose

The ULS JV tennis team lost to Ann Arbor Pioneer, 5-3, and Detroit Country Day School, 7-1. The losses dropped the team's season record to 5-9.

"While I'm disappointed in our final record, there's no way that I'm disappointed with these kids. They competed hard all year long and never, ever gave up," said Coach Chuck Wright.

Winners for ULS against Pioneer included Robert Niccolini at No. 1 singles; Jeff Buhl — Bill Reuther at No. 2 doubles; and Peter Sripinyo — Ryan Strowger at No. 4 doubles.

Against DCDS, the sole winners were Gordie Maitland and Ted Evans at No. 1 doubles. Maitland and Evans had lost to the same DCDS team 6-3, 6-1 earlier in the year. This time around they won, 7-6, 6-1.

Reuther and Buhl lost a tough three-set match, as did Sripinyo and Mike Africa.

Personal bests

The ULS girls' varsity track team wrapped up its regular season with a tri-meet win on May 14. ULS's final record was 15-1.

Senior co-captain Judy Go was high scorer with 12 points, winning the 400 meters and the 300 meter hurdles and placing third in the high jump. Freshman Miriam Mueller picked up eight points by placing second in the 400 meters, second in the 300 meter hurdles and running anchor leg on the winning 1600 meter relay team and on the second place 800 meter relay team. Other members of the 1600 meter relay team were Sophia Park, Catrin Winter and Charu Nautiyal.

First place winners for coaches Cathy Schmidt, Sue Frederick and Josh Schmidt were Lydia Alexander (100 meter hurdles), Nora Staebler (discus), Samantha Desmet (high jump) and Rebecca Boone (shot put).
