Names in the news

Congratulations to Kings Court resident Robert Emke, who, along with his partner Helene Olesak of St. Clair Shores, was a winner in their section and eighth overall in a one-day regional championship of the 1985 Summer North American Championships of the American Contract Bridge League.

The tourney was held earlier this month in Las Vegas and Robert and Helene went up against 688 players in their section.

Ten thousands attaboys to our winners!

Tall and terrific

Be forewarned, you're not allowed to read this next story unless you're a woman who's at least 5 feet 10 inches tall, or a man 6 foot 2 or more.

The Tip Toppers Club of Detroit will be crowning Miss Tall Detroit at their pageant Friday evening, Aug. 23. The public (the rest of us shorties) is invited and tickets are $8 at the door.

The Tip Toppers Club is a non-profit organization formed in 1940 and is open to all who meet the above height requirements. Their hot line is 278-TALL.

Perfect for parking

Okay gang, time to help me solve the mystery of the week. Down in the Village in front of The Mole Hole, there's a parking space near the intersection of Kercheval and St. Clair Avenue.

At one end of that space stenciled in the asphalt in tiny, yellow letters are the words "Reserved for J.K.S."

First, who's J.K.S.? Second, how can I get my own space?

Comes the revolution

I had a bit of a laugh from an unexpected source the other evening. I was driving the Ford freeway when I saw a spray-painted message along the road, compliments of one of the area's disco revolutionaries.

In red paint on an overpass was the message "Hiroshima — they did it once."

On the next overpass was the cryptic kicker, "Hiroshima — they'll do it again."

On the following overpass someone else with a sense of humor had painted "Naaaahhhh!"

Mack Avenue funnies

Seen, but not quite believed, on Mack Avenue this week. A brand new, sleek Chrysler Laser heading toward Cadieux Road, with its license plate on upside down.

Also, a big sedan with a male driver and what appeared to be a blonde lady next to him, with long, beautiful hair. I followed them down Mack, watching through his rear view window.

Every now and then the man would turn and say something, stroke her hair and finally leaned over and gave her a kiss. I pulled alongside at a light and looked over to see what this blonde beauty looked like.

"She" was an afghan, with all four feet firmly planted on the front seat.

She wasn't wearing a seat belt though.

Hearing tonight

The Michigan Department of Transportation will hold a public hearing tonight on proposed improvements to the Eight Mile Road bridge over I-94. The hearing will be held at the Eastland Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Representatives of the MDOT will be on hand to discuss and explain the project beginning at 7 p.m.

The public is welcome and encouraged to attend.

Has national reputation

Burn center seeks wider local recognition

By Nancy Parmenter

There's a well-kept secret just 20 minutes away from Grosse Pointe. Everybody knows about its older brother, nestled in a nearby ivy-covered university town. The newcomer stands boldly in a shirt-sleeves, sports-loving, beer-drinking university city better known for cars than for high technology.

It's the burn center at Detroit Receiving Hospital and its supporters say it's the best one in the United States outside of Seattle.

"Everybody just helicopters over us on the way to Ann Arbor," said burn center Director Dr. Martin C. Robson, ruefully. Robson, who is also president of the American Burn Association, speculates that the reason is Receiving's reputation as the city hospital, the venue for Detroit's crime victims and Medicaid recipients.

"That doesn't show the whole picture at all," he said. "What we have developed is centers for excellence. Receiving is already known for treatment of trauma cases and gunshot wounds. If somebody in Grosse Pointe were tommy-gunned, he'd want to come here. But people don't know about the burn center."

Like the proverbial prophet without honor in his own country, in spite of being unknown locally, Receiving has a national reputation, Robson said. "We've been able to get almost everyone we went after (for staff) because they realized that." Robson himself was lured to Detroit from the University of Chicago because he saw that the Medical Center "has the opportunity to become one of the best centers in the world."

Robson, through his affiliation with the American Burn Association, has been involved in the ABA's efforts to focus on the recovery of the burned person, rather than just the burn wound. Treatment at Receiving's burn center focuses on the whole person with a 36-member hospital team of doctors, social workers, psychiatrists, dieticians, administrators, therapists and nurses.

"We look at the patient from the moment of injury until he is turned back to society," Robson, a Grosse Pointe City resident, said. "It sounds logical, but it wasn't logical to the health care industry at first."

Medicine rarely focused on the recovery of the whole person in the past because so few seriously burned people survived. As recently as 1978, a patient with a burn over 40

Feeding time

Who says parenting is hard work? Not Lara Wise or Matt Kalkhoff, both 14, of Muir Road. Lara and Matt have taken over the care and feeding of five kittens abandoned by their mother a few weeks ago. So far they've only come up with three names for the five — Pooj, Motley and Carlisle. The nameless kittens don't care what they're called as long as they're called in time for dinner. Lara and Matt are feeding the youngsters a pet shop-provided replacement milk from tiny baby bottles. Although they're too young for adoption, the kittens will be looking for new homes in about a month. Call Matt at 885-1839 if you're up to the challenge.

Group W may pull out of area

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Grosse Pointe Cable may buy out its managing partner, Group W.

That's reportedly one of the options being considered by a study committee of the board of directors of Grosse Pointe Cable. It follows the recent request by Group W to the local company to consider the conditions it would allow Group W to sell off its 25 percent of the five-city system.

Group W, an affiliate of Westinghouse Broadcasting, announced three weeks ago it was exploring the possibility of selling its Michigan franchise, including two systems in Dearborn and Wayne. Group W is the managing partner of Grosse Pointe Cable, holding 25 percent of the company, while the War Memorial Association and the five cities involved — Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods, Farms, City and Park — own the rest.

As managing partner, the company provides management and equipment for the local company.

The company has a number of options to consider, cable company president John Rickel said. It can ask Group W to remain as managing partner, it can sell off the managing partner's part of the company — estimated to be worth between $1.2 and $3 million — or it can consider buying out the Group W portion itself to become wholly owned by the War Memorial Association and the five member cities.

It could also sell the whole package to another cable provider.

There are at least two provisions in the franchise agreement that bind Group W to its commitment until 1993, unless the company allows Group W to leave, Rickel said.

The first prohibits the sale, assignment or transfer of the system without the consent of the rest of the parties involved. The other has to do with the bond issues, he added.

Should Group W sell out, it would not affect the franchise agreement that was negotiated, Rickel said.

Group W, like other cable providers, is trying to cluster its systems to provide for better management, according to a company spokesman. Group W is very strong in New England, Texas and California, and its decision to leave Michigan is really geographic not economic.

Gerald DeGrazia, former general manager of Grosse Pointe Cable and now manager of the Group W Dearborn and Wayne systems, said a broker is handling the inquiries about the two systems, which Group W would like to sell as a package. Dearborn's system has about 17,400 subscribers, while Wayne has about 3,200, he added.

The company is only exploring its options of selling, DeGrazia said. "This isn't a fire sale by any means," he added. "If we don't get our price, we aren't selling."

Cable advisory board members said they expected more information to be available in a couple of weeks, when the board meets again Aug. 22. Rickel said the study committee should have completed its work within a month.

"It should be stressed that there will be no change in the immediate future and any change that is made will only be that which is in the best interest of the community," he added.

Group W is expected to sell its Dearborn and Wayne systems by the end of the year, officials said. That would leave Grosse Pointe Cable as the last Group W franchise between Chicago and New York.

Park guard revives victim

A St. Clair Shores man probably owes his life to the quick thinking of the gate guard at the Farms Pier Park.

Raymond Toutant, 72, was picnicking at the park Aug. 7 when a thunderstorm hit. Toutant and other picnickers ran to their cars for cover. Toutant apparently had a heart attack and collapsed at his car, according to reports.

"The first I knew of it was when a guy came to the gate and asked for a phone to call the ambulance," said gate guard Mark Schott, 23. Schott has worked at the park since May.

Schott is certified in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation. Downplaying his contribution to Toutant's recovery, Schott said, "I just ran over there (to the car) and went to work."

Toutant was unconscious when Schott arrived. "He was blue — he was dead," Schott said. He said he could find no vital signs. But he began the resuscitation procedure and after about a minute and a half, he said, Toutant "jumped and started breathing."

Police and ambulance arrived while Schott was working to revive the victim, who was then taken to St. John Hospital, where he remained in critical condition Monday.

Schott said he had talked with Toutant's family, who said he has improved and is now conscious after a three-day coma.

Farms police praised Schott's fast reaction. "The guy was blue when he got there," said the officer who responded to the call. "What he did was above and beyond the call."

"The guy did a hell of a job," agreed Chief Robert Ferber. "It's lucky he was there."

Farms gives nod to Hill project

By Nancy Parmenter

Within 30 days, the deserted Amoco service station on Kercheval near Muir will be torn down in the first phase of the long-awaited construction of an office-retail building and parking structure.

"I'll be on the phone about it in the morning," a jubilant Peter Bologna told the Farms council when it gave unanimous final approval to the project Monday night.

A month of frantic behind-the-scenes activity by developer Bologna, Standard Federal officials, his partners in the proposed office complex, Cottage Hospital, the intended builder of the parking structure, and Farms officials culminated in a tentative agreement just in the nick of time.

A year-old "tri-party agreement" was scheduled to expire Aug. 13. It was extended two months to give all the parties time to execute a final contract. Regulatory approval for Standard Federal to build a drive-in banking facility expires at the end of August, and bank Vice President Garry Carley said there is no reasonable expectation that it would be extended. The project has been on the drawing board since the late 1970s.

The approval by the Farms council allows construction of the office-retail complex to begin before Cottage receives permission to build the parking garage. It waives the strict interpretation of the parking ordinance because of the availability of the municipal lot. Its terms are intended to see that if Cottage fails to construct the garage, some other party will, thus guaranteeing sufficient parking at the site and satisfying city zoning requirements.

The jungle gym

... cast intricate shadows at the Neighborhood Club Sunday afternoon. Enjoying the beautiful day are Jessica Marr, 5, Danny Sava, 4, and Jennifer Marr, 8. They are the children of Steve and Peggy Marr of the Park and Carol and Danny Sava of the City.

"Where are the enforceable teeth in all this?" asked Mayor James Dingeman. "I'm afraid we'll end up with an agreement with no clout."

"(There is none) other than the integrity of the hospital and the integrity of the bank," said Councilwoman Nancy Waugaman. "It isn't dotted to the 'i' the way I would have liked it, but these are reputable people we're dealing with. I don't know how much more structured you can make it. Life is full of compromise."

"If they were to build and then say to their tenants, 'good luck on parking,' that wouldn't be viable, but the risk is in their corner to the extent they don't have a parking deck," said Councilman Bruce Rockwell.

The agreement is written without any actual penalties for failing to build a garage. It relies on market forces — the developer and the hospital need the parking.

"We'll have trouble leasing space if there's no garage," said Carley.

"We've given assurances — we've guaranteed that 270 spaces will be occupied in that garage," Bologna said. "Nobody would want to build a garage if only 50 spaces were filled."

The agreement stipulates that both Cottage and Kercheval Development Co. will guarantee to lease a certain amount of parking for their employees. Cottage has committed to 132 spaces, and the development group to 143.

The meeting was marked by apparent continuing uneasiness among the parties. Dingeman's questions made it clear that he feared a lack of support for the project on the part of the hospital. Even after the council had voted to approve the agreement, he cautioned the parties not to "play games" with the project.

There was some sparring over the use of the word "temporary" in the approval motion. Part of the agreement is that the city will allow parking credit for the nearby municipal lot during the time the garage is under construction. When Waugaman moved to allow "temporary" credit for municipal parking, Carley objected.

"I'm afraid that could be interpreted to mean that we can't occupy the building if Cottage fails to build the garage," he said. There was discussion of using the word "interim" and the city attorney was assigned to work out an appropriate wording.

The parking problem will be dealt with in part by Cottage's agreement to bus some of its employees from various satellite parking lots until the parking structure is completed. Cottage requires approval from the state to build the garage. The request was denied in June and the hospital is currently appealing the decision.

Under the agreement, if Cottage fails to start construction for any reason by July 1989, it must offer the property to the development company for the purpose of constructing a garage. If the developer does not act within 60 days, the property would be offered to a third-party private developer for the same purpose.

The projected $5 million building will have a drive-in bank, retail space on the first floor and offices above. The parking structure is to contain no fewer than 370 spaces, according to the agreement.

David D'Alessandro and Nicole Cogan prepare for the annual University Liggett School Junior Class Rummage Sale that is moved up this year from October to September. The sale will be held in the McCann River Rink on the school's Cook Road campus and will offer clothing, toys, furniture, books, china, linens, sports equipment and small appliances. All donations to the sale, scheduled for Sept. 27 and 28, are tax-deductible. For a pick-up, call Arlene Barlow at 882-7304, Bev Curtiss at 886-5499 or Carole Tibbits at 885-5413.

Women's Equality Day is Aug. 26

More than 75 women leaders representing women's organizations, human rights agencies, civil rights and grass roots coalitions will join with the City of Detroit Human Rights Department in the annual observance of Women's Equality Day, Monday, August 26.

The city-wide celebration is being held in commemoration of women obtaining the right to vote 65 years ago. The Women's Equality Day program will include a noon rally at Grand Circus Park followed by workshops, exhibits, and a luncheon at the downtown YWCA.

Among the featured exhibits will be an elaborate historical display, depicting significant events and women during the 19th and 20th centuries as well as artifacts and memorabilia of the Women's Suffrage Movement, from which the concept of Women's Equality Day was derived. The exhibit is being sponsored by Sylvia Williams, curator of Urban History at the Detroit Historical Museum who also coordinated the Black Women In Michigan exhibit currently on display at the Historical Museum.

The Women's Equality Day program will include a keynote address by Detroit City Council President Erma Henderson, who will outline the activities of the historic United Nations conference on the Decade of Women in Nairobi, Kenya.

Admission to the program, rally and workshops is free. Luncheon information may be obtained by contacting Joann Watson at 961-9220 or Mary Joan Schmidt at 224-4950.

Enrollment for students new to North

Students who will enroll at North High School for the first time can do so Tuesday, Aug. 27, or Thursday, Aug. 29. This includes young people transferring from parochial or private schools or those who have recently moved into the school district.

A parent is requested to call of the office of Assistant Principal Thomas Teetaert at 343-2205 to schedule an appointment.

Those enrolling should bring to the conference a birth certificate and a copy of the previous school record, if one is available. If not, copies of report cards will be valuable in making the appropriate course selections.

A parent should accompany each student to the enrollment conference with the counselor.

GP middle school registration opens

New students planning to attend Grosse Pointe middle schools (Brownell, Parcels or Pierce) who have not registered, should notify the appropriate school.

Registration procedures will be completed during the week of Aug. 26-29 at each of the three middle schools.

Appointments are necessary. Call school personnel between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the following numbers:

- Brownell Middle School — 343-2115.
- Parcels Middle School — 343-2104.
- Pierce Middle School — 343-2094.

New South principal to assume post in October

By Mike Andrzejczyk
Expect to see a lot of Edward Shine in the halls of South High School after Oct. 1.

Shine, 42, currently principal of Roger Ludlowe High School in Fairfield, Conn., was named two weeks ago to the top spot at South to start the first day of October. Frances French, who was to have retired at the end of the last school year, will serve as acting principal until then.

Fairfield is very similar to Grosse Pointe, Shine said. Fairfield is a city of 54,000, roughly the size of the school district; the school system operates eight elementary schools, two middle schools and two high schools, while Grosse Pointe has nine elementary, three middle and two high schools; the total enrollment in both districts hovers now around 7,000, with a peak enrollment of 13,000; and Roger Ludlowe High will open its doors in September to about 1,300 students, while South expects 1,690 students on opening day.

"One of the things I found remarkable was the similarities between the school districts," Shine said. "There are tremendous similarities between the population of the two systems and the aspirations of the students."

The Fairfield Board of Education has also had to struggle with declining enrollment. That board decided in 1980 to close four elementary schools and has embarked on a consolidation plan for its two high schools, expected to occur within three years, Shine said.

What the board did was to consider the building of a hypothetical high school, Shine said. The process involved deciding what physical and educational needs have to be built into the new building, he added.

Next year, the Fairfield board will call on architects to conduct a study of the two buildings to determine which will best meet the needs of high school students in coming years, Shine said. When the board has completed the consolidation, it's expected the high school population will fit comfortably into a single building.

Ludlowe is the older of the system's two high schools, first opening its doors in 1918, Shine said. It has seen peak populations of 2,000 students in the past decade, he added. Andrew Warde, the system's other high school, opened in 1976.

Shine has been principal of Ludlowe High since 1978. He was also assistant principal at Warde from 1975 to 1978. He spent a year before that as a guidance coordinator at Ludlowe.

"Essentially, I see my role as an active participant in what happens at the school every day," Shine said of his principalship. "I can't be a successful high school administrator if I don't know who the students are and they don't know who I am."

Weekends, evenings and early morning before school opens is time dedicated to the planning and organizational work that is necessary to run a high school and plan for its future, he added.

A high school administrator's work day averages 12 to 15 hours, Shine noted, adding "I believe in total immersion," getting involved in the school system, community organizations, church groups and other activities.

He co-chaired the committee in Fairfield charged with developing educational specifications for the consolidated high school, served on the committee that studied the future use of high schools in Fairfield, served on a K-12 curriculum committee and a task force for a curriculum for the 1980s and 1990s, among others.

Shine has served as president, program chairman and on the board of directors of the Kiwanis Club of Fairfield, has coached Little League and has worked on a committee revising the city charter of Fairfield.

It is Shine's background and experience that has impressed board members, Vice President Vincent LoCicero said two days before the special meeting at which Shine was unanimously appointed to the South post. That experience includes administrator at high schools, but also guidance counselor and coordinator at vocational technical schools in Connecticut. Shine also spent four years as a social studies teacher at a vocational technical school.

That experience reinforced in him a belief that everyone has talents, either academic or vocational, Shine said. "There are people who have a talent for calculus or for foreign languages . . . and there are those who have the talent for repairing automobiles and working with their hands," Shine said. "Everyone has talents and needs to be a respected member of the school population and the community as well."

Vocational technical schools in Connecticut "essentially are there to ready (students) for the world of work, while giving them the tools they need to become learning adults," he added.

His background and experience gives him the tools to be a "potent problem-solver," Shine said. "There aren't many issues I haven't dealt with. Having had the scars of dealing with the difficulties and also the pleasures of successes, I feel confident I can deal with anything that comes up."

An administrator doesn't need a doctorate to work, Shine said. "My own view is a high school administrator doesn't need a Ph. D. I'm a day-to-day practicing high school administrator," Shine said. "It doesn't seem to me that in the long haul it will make a difference to me."

Although he's been in the doctoral program at the University of Connecticut since 1972, Shine has yet to complete his dissertation. He has had all his classwork and preparation out of the way since 1973 when he took a year off to become a full-time student, Shine said.

He added he doesn't feel he can cut off his family and work to the extent necessary to complete his studies and dissertation. Although unsure whether he'll continue toward his doctorate, he added he will have to look around to see what's available in the area.

Getting to know the school, the system and the community is one of the priorities he brings with him, Shine said. By talking with the community and finding out what is wanted, he can then begin looking to the future, he added.

Although his starting date is Oct. 1, Shine said that if he can get into Grosse Pointe earlier, he will. Besides things like finding a house and moving his family, there is the loyalty owed Fairfield in making sure Ludlowe gets off to a good year as well.

"I think that if you have a good opening of school, you are going to have a good school year," he added. "I feel I owe Fairfield the time and effort to make sure there's a good opening here."

Shine did meet Grosse Pointe Superintendent John Whritner in 1983 when Dr. Whritner served on the Ludlowe High School evaluation team from the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, the Eastern Seaboard's accrediting agency, much like the North Central Association that recently visited North and South. Whritner in 1983 was superintendent of East Lyme, Conn. schools.

Some of the material he's requested to help him learn about South was the recently completed North Central evaluation, Shine added.

Meet the champ

It's big, it's beautiful and it is, or was, the largest Norway maple in the country. At least, that's the conflicting story from the American Forestry Association, based in Washington, D.C. The Grosse Pointe News received a press release from a local volunteer representative of the organization, which keeps a national registry of champion trees and famous historical trees in the U.S., listing it as the largest tree of its kind with a 135-inch girth, 95+ foot spread and 102 feet in height. It's since been unofficially surpassed by two trees in Pennsylvania. According to the forestry association, Michigan is second or third in the nation with the largest number of big trees. And where is this beauty located? On the grounds of the Grosse Pointe Academy, near Lakeshore and Moran.

Special anniversary planned

Wayne State University alumni will return to the Fountain Ballroom of the Masonic Temple for a Golden Anniversary Dance Saturday, Sept. 21. It's the same place the first Wayne University Alumni Association dance was held in 1935.

A special weekend is planned to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Alumni Association, the reunion of the 1935-36 class, and the 25th anniversary of the opening of Alumni House at WSU.

The 1935-36 class will begin the three-day celebration with an early Friday evening reception in Alumni House.

Saturday events for the class of 1935-36 will include walking and movie tours of the campus and a reception and banquet with President David Adamany as featured speaker.

The weekend activities for the 1935-36 graduates will conclude on Sunday with a noon brunch at the Detroit Boat Club on Belle Isle.

Alumni House will hold an open reception Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m. There will also be exhibits and presentations in the Community Arts Auditorium and campus tours.

General chairperson for the 1935-36 class is Helen Massey Huber of Grosse Pointe. Other members of the planning committee are Dorothy Krenz Ellis, Albany, Ga., Bonnie Harris Givens, Lathrup Village, and Professor Frank Hartung, Royal Oak.

Louise Blanchard Phillips, Birmingham, Judge Benjamin Stanczyk, Detroit, and Israel and Anna Daich Wiener, Southfield are also members. The committee is still seeking additional volunteers.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Claudia Morcom is chairing the committee to develop the weekend reunion-open house program. Other members include Howard Hess, Franklin, Judge Ben Burdick, Bloomfield Township, and Dr. Alice Gullen Smith, Tampa, Fla., all of whom were student members of the first reunion dance 50 years ago.

In announcing the Alumni Celebration Weekend, Judge Morcom said, "We'll remember and salute our founding by bringing our alumni together. We want to showcase Alumni House and our campus and its activities. Great things have happened at Wayne State in the last 50 years and it is time to remember and celebrate those happenings."

For further information and/or reservations, call the Alumni Office at 577-2168.

Center director leaves to pursue writing career

By Mike Andrzejczyk
"One day, after I had moved to Grosse Pointe, I was thumbing through the Blue Book when I came across the name . . . and I was intrigued. So I went to see them."

That interest in 1976 led Katie Elsila to become a volunteer for the Grosse Pointe Inter-Faith Center for Racial Justice. Four years later, she became executive director of the organization, succeeding Edward Egnatios.

In June, Elsila stepped down from the directorship, turning over the duty to Vivian Buffington. In her nine years of association with the center, Elsila says she has seen the program and staff expand and relationships between the center and the community strengthen.

Some of those programs that have led to the stronger bond between center and community are the Third Thursday forums and the Martin Luther King Jr. essay contest sponsored yearly by the Inter-faith Center.

The Inter-Faith Centers for Racial Justice, Inc. were begun after riots ripped through urban areas in 1967 and 1968 as a way to combat racism, particularly in the suburbs. The centers are a metropolitan network of four suburban and one central office. They are interracial, inter-faith and non-partisan, sponsored by Catholic,

Katie Elsila

Protestant and Jewish denominations.

The Grosse Pointe center was founded in 1969 and has representatives from Grosse Pointe churches and individuals on its board of directors. The center provides a variety of services and activities for the Pointes, Harper Woods and the near east side.

That the center is still in operation shows that it has effected some change in attitudes, Elsila says. And while its accomplishments can't be qualitatively measured, the reactions and comments from residents nearby and those who deal with the center are favorable, she adds.

She wasn't really ready to leave the center because her work there wasn't something easily given up. But she left the post to follow her dream; to be a free-lance writer.

Noting that she will miss the center, Elsila adds, "I really feel the center was lucky to have hired Vivian Buffington as director. Working with Karen Johnson-Moore, I think she can make a contribution to the community."

"But being a writer had always been a dream of mine, and I decided that if I didn't do it, I would regret it later," she adds.

So she sent out her clips and resumes and an answer came from Heritage Magazine asking her to do an article on the reorganization of Grosse Pointe schools and its effects one year later.

She then spent eight weeks going through three newspapers to decide on the key players in the reorganization controversy, researching the events through minutes and recordings of board meetings and interviewing the principal players before turning in her piece, which appears in the edition released Friday.

"For the most part, I was gratified by the generosity of people who wanted to talk about the reorganization," Elsila says. Of the people she contacted to prepare the 10 to 12 long interviews for the article, only one person didn't want to talk about the matter, saying it was still too painful, she adds.

In general, Elsila says she found that emotions still run high over the matter, which saw the closing of Barnes School and the shifting of sixth-graders into the middle schools for the 1984-85 school year. "The general attitude was, 'Let's get on with the process of education,'" she adds.

Also interesting was that everyone had a reaction to the idea of a one-year-after story, Elsila says. It could have been a groan or a laugh, but there was almost always a response, she adds.

"People were very articulate," she says. "They had their reasons for the positions they took and they were very expressive of them."

The interviews and research were "easy to weave together because I was interested in the subject and had lived through it," Elsila says. That's not to say she didn't sweat over researching and writing the piece, she adds.

Elsila says she plans to continue her free-lance writing career and may combine her expertise with public relations. And, she adds, she plans to continue associating with the Inter-Faith Center.

"Not many people have the opportunity to combine their ideals and their work," she adds.

Goodwill to set up donation center

Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit will station an attended donation center at the War Memorial from Monday, Aug. 19 through Labor Day, Sept. 2. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Suggested donations are furniture, small appliances, clothing, shoes, books, knick-knacks and kitchenware. Due to space limitation, large items, such as bedsprings and mattresses and washing machines, are not acceptable. An attendant will be on hand to issue a tax receipt.

Goods collected will go to the Goodwill Thrift Store at 26510 Gratiot in Roseville.

Beginning again in September, Goodwill will station a trailer at the War Memorial each third Thursday of the month.

For further information on donations, call 777-4410.

Foster homes

Catholic Social Services of Wayne County needs foster parents to temporarily care for abused and/or neglected children.

There is a serious need of foster homes for children of all ages and ethnic heritages. The agency is especially in need of families who can take more than one child in order to maintain family relationships.

For more information, call 883-2100 and ask for a foster home licensing worker.

War Memorial to close for two weeks

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial will be closed for refurbishing from Saturday, Aug. 18 through Monday, Sept. 2. It will reopen on Tuesday, Sept. 3, at 9 a.m.

Persons who want to register for a fall event may send their check or money order, along with a note indicating the activity, to 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236. Mailed registrations will be processed as usual.

These philanthropists began at young age

By Nancy Parmenter

Some high school boys play football, some drive fast cars, some get into trouble, some study and some organize philanthropic societies. When they were high school seniors, that's what nine Grosse Pointe men did.

They named it the Temechulan Society "because it sounded exotic," explained Mark Simon, member, founder and press secretary extraordinaire. "We started out to have a party and ended up with this."

"This" is a charitable group that has raised money for groups as diverse as the Detroit Library, Amnesty International and Polish relief. "We aren't a typical Grosse Pointe charity — you can see that by the amounts we donate," said Simon.

The amounts are modest by foundation standards (Amnesty International got $350), but at Christmas, when the geographically dispersed group gets back to the Pointes for the holidays, they plan a "quantum leap" with a big fundraiser.

"The original thing was Mark's idea," said Christopher Scott, the only member currently living in the area. "We thought it was grand. It's evolved into a semi-yearly thing, whenever Mark's in town."

The society is formally organized and has tax-exempt status, but sometimes operates casually. "Once in a while we're democratic" in deciding which charity gets the donation, Scott said. "This time Mark picked it. I picked the library. I was shooting for the zoo this year. Maybe that's what we'll do at Christmas."

The basic idea was to interest

"advantaged young people" in philanthropy, Simon said. The society has proceeded with tiny steps, but now that the members have all graduated from college, they have hopes of expanding the scope of their endeavor and getting more people interested in it. Scott said they hope to raise $1,000 at the Christmas benefit.

The Temechulan executive board consists of Simon, Scott,

David Anderson, John Conway, Joseph Gillis, Robert Scherer III, Earl Black III, David Townsend and Richard Holub.

The Christmas party, which will feature donated entertainment in a donated hall and is open to all fledgling philanthropists, will take place on Dec. 23. Anyone interested in participating may write to Mark Simon, Secretary, 45406 Driftwood Dr., Palm Desert, Calif. 92260.

Early morning thief car-hops

A thief apparently made his way along Webber Place in the Shores early in the morning Aug. 6, helping himself to the contents of cars left outside overnight.

At one house, two locked Lincolns parked in the driveway were both entered. The thief took two radar detectors and a leather case of cassette tapes, for a total loss of about $900. There were no signs of forcible entry, according to Shores police reports. The residents noticed the theft at 8:30 a.m., when they looked out and saw the car door standing open.

Down the street, a neighbor also found her car door open. Nothing was missing and she was unsure whether the door had been locked. The car's kill switch had been activated.

A third resident reported that his car had been entered and his car phone bent.

Shores police speculate that the thief used a car-unlocking tool, as there were no signs of damage to any of the automobiles.

Woods gives nod to contract bids

At its regular meeting Aug. 5, the Woods council approved the purchase of city equipment and accepted several bids.

One was a $1,425 bid to reset stones on the front porch of city hall by Shores Masonry, Inc., of St. Clair Shores. The company will reset, install and replace a number of stones.

The council approved the bid of Duross Painting to repaint the interior and exterior of city offices as well as the public safety wing for $9,400.

For $12,300, Wolin Construction

Co. of Bloomfield Hills will renovate the training and briefing section of the public safety building.

Council members also accepted the bid of $202,132.60 by Vito Angelo Contracting Inc. to replace sewers on Sunningdale and Wedgewood.

Finally, the council granted permission to Director of Public Safety Jack Patterson to purchase an additional radar unit for the department for $1,400 from Kustom Electronics. Patterson said the unit was needed to maintain modern traffic enforcement methods.

Why the light turnout?

Only 16 percent of the registered voters turned out for last week's primary in Grosse Pointe Park. That record hardly upholds the Pointes' reputation as a community that takes its citizenship responsibilities seriously.

Yet the percentage of voters is just about the same as in the primary two years ago. It is also true that primary elections seldom draw heavy percentages of voters to the polls. And this year's primary vote did not seem to arouse strong feelings on controversial issues. In fact, there just didn't seem to be many controversial issues.

It can be argued, as columnist George Will once did, that a low turnout at the polls reflects satisfaction with the status quo rather than the apathy that some people read into the small proportion of registered voters who go to the polls in elections of all kinds. There may be something to that argument, too.

Yet the healthy functioning of democracy requires a turnout of voters that is representative of the community involved in the election. A light turnout also raises the possibility that a small and unrepresentative minority can win an election.

Fortunately, the Pointes and most other places do make better records in the general elections. And so we can expect larger turnouts in November not only in the Park but in the City, the Woods and the Farms which did not have primary elections.

The two council incumbents, Mark Valente III and Carroll F. Eyoia, ran ahead in the Park primary but the field of candidates was fairly well bunched, which could mean that three positions to be filled are still up for grabs. That kind of competition also promises a heavier turnout in November. And while the incumbent mayor, Palmer T. Heenan, led all candidates with 741 votes, his challenger, Councilman John C. Prost, was not exactly outdistanced with 585. That contest, too, could stimulate the November turnout.

Investing in the future

For parents of college-bound students, the bad news is that the average cost of a year at college in the United States will rise 7 percent in the 1985-86 school year, marking the fifth consecutive year that such costs will outpace the overall inflation rate.

For Michigan parents, the good news is that the state's four-year public colleges and universities have "frozen" their tuition rates for the coming year at the 1984-85 level. The actions were taken by the college and university boards coming year with an estimated total cost of $17,210. Massachusetts Institute of Technology is second with $17,030 and Barnard third at $16,842. They are followed by Princeton, at $16,790, Yale at $16,650, and Harvard at $16,500.

These costs include tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses and transportation. The colleges defend their increasing tuition in excess of inflation on the grounds that in the 1970s tuition hikes fell behind the high inflation rates which forced schools to after Gov. James Blanchard had threatened to veto the $970 million aid packages for the public institutions of higher learning unless they agreed to freeze in-state tuition.

Michigan State is an exception. It had earlier voted a 2.4 percent increase in tuition for state residents to help pay for a $38.5 million package of sports facilities. The governor, through a spokesman, said that he believed MSU had gone along with the freeze because it had set the earlier increase to finance a specific project.

Even though they have frozen tuition for the second straight year, Michigan's public colleges and universities still charge among the highest tuition fees in the country for public institutions.

Fortunately for parents and students alike, however, the Michigan tuition fees are well below those charged by the colleges and universities at the top of the list. Bennington College, a small, selective liberal arts college in Vermont, will be the nation's most expensive college this postpone building maintenance and repairs. The colleges are now making up for those deferred costs.

In Michigan, appropriations for higher education have been increased for the past two years after having been cut back during the recession. In order to remain competitive, Michigan has to continue to control tuition costs in order to avoid losing students to other public institutions of higher learning outside the state. But it also has to maintain its college facilities and faculty pay to avoid losing its better faculty members to institutions in other states.

Those are justifications both for freezing tuition rates and for increasing state appropriations. Michigan's young people are the state's most important asset, a fact that is recognized by parents, other taxpayers and students themselves when they make the heavy investment now required for higher education. It is, of course, an investment in the future.

Detroit's decline continues

A recent Census Bureau report shows Detroit with another loss of almost 50,000 residents in the two years ending July 1, 1984, and still retaining its place as the sixth largest city in the country. But two challengers from the rapidly growing Sun Belt, Dallas and San Diego, are gaining ground and one or both might even surpass Detroit by 1990.

Detroit's population now has fallen from its 1950 peak of 1,849,588 to 1,088,973, a decline of 760,615 or more than 41 percent in a 34 year period. Dallas, on the other hand, had a population of only 434,462 in 1950, and it rose to 904,076 in 1980 and to 974,234 in 1984. San Diego's population, which was 334,387 in 1950, and 875,538 in 1980, rose to 960,452 in 1984. If Detroit's population continues to fall at the present rate, it can be seen that either Dallas or San Diego or both might pass Detroit by 1990 if their growth rates remain at current levels.

Detroit isn't the only loser in the contest with Sun Belt cities. Among the top 25 cities in population, 10 of the 13 showing increases from 1982 to 1984 were in the Sun Belt and the other three were New York, Boston and Indianapolis. Among the 12 reporting decreases only two, Houston and New Orleans -- were from the Sun Belt. The losers included Chicago and Philadelphia, both larger than Detroit, but also Baltimore, Washington, Milwaukee, Columbus and Cleveland, as well as Denver and Seattle.

Rapid growth isn't always an asset, as many Sun Belt cities learned in recent years. But since the Census reports determine each city's share of federal funds and other benefits from federal and state programs, even the interim reports such as the one for 1984 are meaningful for local officials. From the standpoint of Detroit and other population losers, the declines are financially costly.

What these figures emphasize is that the population drain from the Midwest and the Northeast is still occurring as people seek haven in the Sun Belt. When the standard metropolitan statistical areas are compared, Detroit still rated as No. 5 in 1980 and that standing appears in no immediate danger of change in 1990 since its population of 4,353,413 was more than a million higher than the total for the sixth-ranking metropolitan area, San Francisco-Oakland. But the city of Detroit itself, appears likely to rate no higher than seventh or eighth in size by 1990 -- and it might even be ninth if Phoenix, now No. 9, has another population spurt.

Size often has little to do with the quality of life in a city. Yet a city declining in population is often a city with declining job opportunities which for many people means a decline in their quality of life. Unemployment tends to result in poorer housing, over a period of time, and to cause a higher incidence of crime which requires greater police and fire protection. Such developments emphasize the importance of reviving economic activity through increased cooperation of government, private enterprise and organized labor in Detroit and other Midwestern and Northern cities now losing population and jobs to the Sun Belt.

Five of the seven other cities in Michigan with a population of 100,000 or more shared in Detroit's decline from 1982 to 1984. They were Warren, 152,035; Flint, 149,007; Lansing, 127,972; Ann Arbor, 103,850; and Livonia 100,363. Grand Rapids, 183,000; and Sterling Heights, 109,440, showed slight gains. But the population decline in outstate cities offers further proof that the economic recession hurt all of Michigan, not just Detroit, and that measures to revive business and industrial activity need to be targeted on the entire state.

Demonstrators inspire opposing view

To the Editor:
A recent letter writer (Aug. 1 edition) made reference to a group, described by him as pro-Soviet, which displayed a sign proclaiming "Affirm Life, Stop the War Machine" outside the Woods Theater July 12. The sign was in obvious reference and opposition to the movie "Rambo" which was being shown at that time.

Your readers may, therefore, be interested to know that the following evening another demonstration, this one expressing a pro-American point of view, took place in front of that same theater.

This demonstration consisted of American flags and a banner which read "America Forever, Communism Never."

This group of youths represented themselves as members of Break-through, an organization, they said, which during the Vietnam War often demonstrated in public support of our fighting men and a policy of victory in that conflict.

Let it be said, in their behalf, that their stand has been since that time vindicated in light of the many terrible and disastrous consequences, including mass murder in Cambodia and the exodus of more than two million refugees more commonly known as boat people, which resulted from the communist triumph in that war.

Since demonstrations supportive of the communist propaganda line have become commonplace, it was refreshing, to say the least, to see this demonstration in defense of our country and its fighting men, and I was pleased to have happened upon it.

Judging from the response of patrons as they left the theater that evening, it was evident that a good number of them felt likewise.

Program deserves support

To the Editor:
Judge Patricia Schneider and Vernon Ausherman of the Park Park Council are to be commended on their efforts in behalf of the youth assistance program. Surely a society can be judged by the amount of time and money it is willing to spend on the well-being of its young people. The program deserves support.

To dog owners

To the Editor:
Residents of McKinley Avenue, between Vernor and Beaupre, have been getting a dose of dog droppings, and not believed to be from dogs of residents in the area; but in any event to dog owners:

Have you ever tracked dog droppings into your house, onto your walks, patio and into your yards which you had to clean up? It is a filthy and selfish insult to homeowners subjected to this kind of treatment, and if those dog owners do not know that there is a Farms ordinance against this type of activity, which if it keeps up, area homeowners will be forced to seek enforcement and assessment of fines.

Enjoy photos

To the Editor:
I have meant for some time to write and tell you how much I have enjoyed the photostories by Tom Greenwood and Elizabeth Carpenter. I especially loved the stories about the War Memorial's Farm Animals Day and the special education youngsters working so hard and so proudly at their tasks. These expert photographers truly give us the "soul" of the story. Please let's have many more of these.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

Among the other accomplishments of his administration, President Reagan will be remembered for his optimism. At a point when the nation was struggling with inflation, high taxes and little growth in industry, President Reagan made good the promises of his campaign to stimulate the economy, lower taxes and to rein in inflation, thus proving wrong the pernicious purveyors of gloom.

Sweeping away the clouds of doubt, Reagan went right on shining the light of optimism on every dark, dreary prediction that what he was suggesting was an impossible dream. Because of his determination and faith in the American people, the nightmare that enveloped the nation in doubt and indecision became the impossible dream come true.

This will to win is apparent in his personal life also. Witness his determination and absolute belief that he would not only survive an assassination attempt and the invasion of cancer, but would return to his duties as hale and hearty as before the mishaps.

The lesson that it is better to look at the light than cry in the dark is one that the people of this country have taken to heart and adopted as their own, particularly his attitude toward the physical setbacks in his career.

Those who have hesitated to seek for suspected cancer signs have been bolstered by the president's courage and encouraged by the news that because he opted for surgery early in the stages of his cancer, the results were good.

There has been some discussion that the media was too invasive in covering the president's operation. However, because the public was so sharply alerted to the good results that are possible if early help is sought when cancer is suspected, people, who might have not gone to a cancer clinic before, are seeking advice on suspected signs of cancer.

The aftermath of it all is peace of mind for those who have no reason to worry and early help for those who might have waited too long.

Having been alerted to the need to seek help at the first sign of early cancer, there is still another precaution that we are advised to follow; that is the adoption of cancer prevention life habits.

In his book, "Can You Prevent Cancer" (Mosby Press), Ernest H. Rosenbaum, M.D., associate chief of medicine, Mount Zion Hospital and Medical Center, chief of Oncology, French Hospital and Medical Center, San Francisco, and author of 10 other books on cancer, presents the thesis that cancer prevention is a series of several positive actions.

He contends that if every person adopted a prudent lifestyle, we would begin reducing the toll of cancer tomorrow, if not today. These include primary prevention of abstinence from tobacco and adherence to proper diet.

Older readers will be encouraged by the assertion that cancer is not an inevitable part of aging.

The book summarizes the latest information on the various factors known or believed to cause cancer beginning with a discussion of what cancer is, how it develops and its probable causes. The succeeding chapters are on cancer-related components and explain the risk factors and make specific recommendations for prevention.

The sources of information are the latest findings on cancer reported in medical journals and at medical conferences.

The risk of lung cancer by those who smoke cigarettes is generally known. What may not be so well-publicized is that the risk increases with the number of cigarettes smoked per day. Sometimes smokers will rationalize that there is a genetic factor involved. It is true that those with little genetic susceptibility can withstand more environmental cancer-causing agents than someone with a greater genetic susceptibility. But the risk can be lessened by following a lifestyle recommended for cancer prevention. In other words, one who takes the view that "Cancer runs in the family and no matter what I do, it's not going to help" is wrong. It is a defeatist attitude.

For many years, readers have been alerted to the connection between the foods we eat and the development of cancer. A chapter "Nutrition and Cancer Prevention" is an exhaustive survey of how certain foods can help to prevent specific forms of cancer.

For instance, it was found that consumption of dark green, leafy vegetables rich in beta-carotene is lowest in those people who subsequently developed cancer of the lung.

The chapter is quite detailed. It not only goes into depth on how and why certain foods seem to act as preventives against particular types of cancer, but also provides guidelines for maximum dietary protection. Numerous charts are included together with the role of vitamins in the diet and warnings on additives.

In this survey of what and how much of what we put into our bodies determines our chances of getting cancer, the consumption of alcohol is considered.

The good news is that two drinks a day is not harmful and if you avoid drinking and smoking at the same time and follow good nutrition guidelines, you should be able to lift your glass to "I chaim" (to life) and still be around a long time to enjoy it.

Cigarettes are not dealt with so kindly. Dr. Rosenbaum asserts that whenever you light up a cigarette, you are inviting cancer into your life. The Department of Health and Human Services concurs. "Cigarette smoking is the major single cause of death from cancer in the United States. It is the most deadly form of drug dependence."

A controversial subject is second-hand smoke, the smoke unavoidably inhaled by non-smokers when they are in a room with those who do. The word is that there is no valid evidence that healthy adult non-smokers are harmed by others' smoke.

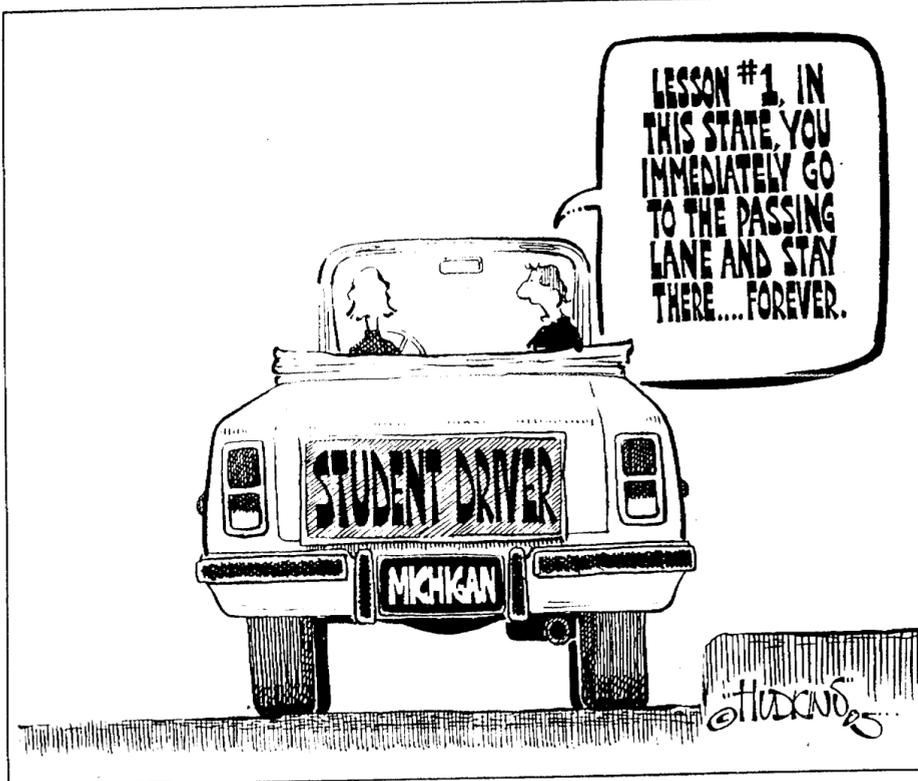

We have control over our diets and our smoking and drinking habits, but what about the risks in our environment?

In the workers' ongoing battle against assault by cancer-invaders of the workplace, they face an enemy in one or more of five different guises — dust, fibers, metals, chemicals and radiation. They may work alone or in concert, often enhancing each others' evil potential.

Dr. Rosenbaum points out that this is a problem of total concern for individuals, unions, business and industry, scientific and academic communities and for governments.

Another subject of concern on what causes cancer is the part stress plays.

This author believes that despite the notion that stress causes cancer, or there is a cancer-prone personality pattern, the evidence is overwhelming that it is the choice we make and the abusive things we do to our bodies that are really the behavioral causes of cancer.

I say

Ramboed out

By Pat Paholsky

The strain was too much and I cracked. I went to see "Rambo, First Blood, Part II." I guess that means there was a Part I, but I'm not sure. There certainly wasn't anywhere near the publicity this second movie has been getting.

Whatever, I felt it was my duty as an observer of events to experience this phenomenon firsthand and not rely on the ruminations of others to make up my mind. Sound good? Actually, what really happened is my husband wanted to see it. And since he always goes to the movies I want to see, I figured fair is fair.

Going in, I had all kinds of preconceived notions about this movie. How could anyone not be influenced by the hype? It's been the subject of a 20/20 program, there have been countless magazine and newspaper articles and the editorial cartoonists have been having themselves a grand time with all kinds of Rambo take-offs.

The Vietnam vets don't like it. Psychologists don't like it. One announcer said that the movie, written by Stallone, was his way of as-sauging his guilt for sitting out the war in Switzerland, a 4 F.

There have been sign-carrying protesters for and against the movie in this area, according to letters we've received. My brother-in-law, who fought in Vietnam, said the movie depressed him.

Well, imagine my surprise when I found myself enjoying it. Understand that this is not my kind of movie — I prefer musicals, a good drama or a hot love story and I'm violently opposed to violence.

And "Rambo, First Blood, Part II" is one long stretch of violence punctuated by periodic breathing spells. In fact, watching the movie is to unconsciously engage in isometrics — every muscle tensed, relaxed, tensed, relax.

A willing suspension of belief is not just talk here either. It's a must, I mean, the man single-handedly fights an army — nay, two armies — and wins. Over and over. And I, Pat the Chicken-hearted, scarcely flinched, because I knew he was going to make it every time. How? Because they're talking about a Rambo Part III.

It was pure escapism. And those glistening pectorals ain't bad to look at either. I found it impossible to take the movie seriously — it was such a fantasy and that has its own value.

I remember spending a month in an English lit class on the music of the Beatles. We examined, dissected and extrapolated all sorts of meanings from their lyrics. The professor held them up as modern-day prophets who possessed this unique insight on the meaning of life. I was really good in that class. I extracted wonderful messages from their songs.

And years later, I listened to an interview with one of the Beatles, who said they weren't into deep meanings when they were writing lyrics. They were only trying to forecast the next trend in music and do it first. So much for that.

I figured whatever lurks in the hearts of men and women should stay there. I have enough to worry about.

Taking child safety seats on airlines

By Elizabeth Hanford Dole
Secretary of Transportation

Because the safety of our children has long been one of my highest priorities, I have urged parents to use child auto safety seats when youngsters are in the car. Now I am happy to report that it is much easier to use the same safety seats aboard aircraft as well, making safe family travel more convenient than ever before.

In February, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) announced that approximately six million child safety seats previously approved for use only the automobiles were acceptable for use in aircraft, including air carriers and general aviation. This decision tripled the number of safety seats that may be used aboard aircraft.

Any seat produced after Jan. 1, 1981, is acceptable for use in flight as well as on the highways if it bears the label, "This child restraint system conforms to all applicable federal motor vehicle safety standards." Seats produced after Feb. 26, 1985, must carry the additional label, "This restraint is certified for use in motor vehicles and aircraft." (Unlabeled seats and seats manufactured before Jan. 1, 1981, are not acceptable for use during take-off and landing. Moreover, vest and harness-type child restraints manufactured before Feb. 26, 1985, are not approved for use in aircraft.)

The FAA's action does more than merely improve child safety in the air; it also encourages families to use child safety seats during all phases of a journey. Parents can use the seats on the way to the airport, during the flight itself, and on the drive to the final destination, with the child remaining in the seat the entire time.

I can't emphasize enough how important it is to encourage the use of these safety seats. More than 600 small children die in auto crashes each year and many of these fatalities could be prevented if parents used safety seats. I believe parents will be more likely to use these seats on the ground now that the devices can be used more easily in the air.

Parents should be aware, however, that although at least 16 major airlines already permit the use of these safety seats, they are not required to do so. Until recently, some airlines would not allow parents to use any seats, largely because Federal regulations were so cumbersome that air personnel could not be sure which seats were accepted for air use and which were not. But now it will be easier for the airlines to identify child seats approved by the FAA. With this simplified policy we are encouraging more air carriers to permit passengers to use acceptable child safety seats. In the meantime, parents planning to use a child safety seat should check with the airline before making travel arrangements.

Stalking the elusive, mighty mastodon

By Tom Greenwood

When students write the traditional "What I did on my summer vacation" story at Defer School this September, fourth-grade teacher Jeannie Johnson might be able to pen the best story in her class.

Johnson, who grew up on Detroit's east side, spent the summer digging for the skeletal remains of a mastodon that died 12,000 years ago in northern Oakland County.

"The skeleton was discovered in Brandon Township, near Pine Knob, in November 1977," said Johnson. "A farmer was digging a pond on his property and two 13-year-old boys playing in the excavation discovered the skull of the mastodon. The Cranbrook Institute of Science, Oakland Community College and Wayne State University all became interested in the dig. I'm currently attending Wayne for my master's degree in science and heard about it. I volunteered right away."

Any romantic notions Johnson harbored about becoming another Indiana Jones soon vanished once on the job. Most days began early and often lasted well into the evening. There were no amenities since the dig was located in the middle of a field.

"I often spent hours in pond water filled with leeches, or spent the day carrying mud-filled buckets up a hill to the sifter," Johnson said. "But I found the work exhilarating. I had the honor of finding the first bone of the summer. It was a piece of the mastodon's rib and it was perhaps four inches in circumference and six inches long. It looked just like a piece of old, rotting wood."

This is the third year of the excavation, but the first year for Johnson. There may not be a dig next year since the professor in charge may be out of the country.

An additional bonus to the excavation has been the discovery of projectile points at the location.

"Projectile points are crude tools used by Indians to cut, chop and skin animals," Johnson said. "They're not necessarily arrow- or spearheads. Because of this discovery, the site has been recognized as a protected site by the Michigan Archaeological Society. The tools were found at a higher level, meaning they're younger than the animal bones."

"The site began as a paleontological dig concerned with biological life other than human. Now, it's also an archaeological site as well. We discovered the mandible of an ancient moose. It's quite exciting because this moose is different from the moose we know today. It was either a different species of animal or one that is extinct. It too was on a higher level, and is perhaps 8,000 years old. Both the mastodon and moose bones were carbon-dated for age."

Other duties performed by the Defer teacher included digging and sifting. "Digging may give people the wrong idea," Johnson said, with a smile. "All the work is done very slowly, deliberately and carefully with small trowels. We work in small, roped-off sections. It's important to keep the sides and floor of the excavation level. Everything is looked at and inspected."

"Large areas of dirt, where we really don't think much will be found, is still slowly sifted for anything important. Every level is analyzed."

And by level, Johnson isn't referring to feet of dirt. As little as four inches of earth can cover thousands of years of geological history. And what was Michigan like 12,000 years ago?

"Well, much of it was like what the Upper Peninsula is today," Johnson said. "We found thousands of jack pine cones, which only survive in colder climates. Although Michigan was on the tail end of a glacial period, we don't think they were brought down by the ice. It appears Michigan was much colder this far south. The cones can still be found up north, but not here now. It's too warm."

"There were lots of trees and bushy vegetation. There was also a river running through the area of the excavation, although it's gone now. We don't know how this mastodon died. But we do know it was a young animal, perhaps the equivalent of a teen-ager. We're not sure if we'll ever find all of the bones, since it lies at the bottom of a hill and the rest may have been washed away by water, or perhaps carried away by other animals."

That might have been a pretty formidable task since the animal stood about 12 feet tall at the shoulders. Jeannie Johnson has no regrets about spending her summer digging in the dirt. In fact, she'd volunteer to do it again. "I'd like to work on a dig in Europe or Africa," she said. "It's absolutely fascinating. Civilization is so much older there. It would be fantastic to find evidence of another culture of long ago. But right now I'll stick with my mastodon."

Belle Isle aquarium is 81 years old

Belle Isle's Summer Fun Festival continues with the celebration of the Island Aquarium's 81st anniversary, Saturday, Aug. 17.

Built for $1,600, the aquarium opened Aug. 18, 1904, and is the oldest fresh water aquarium in the nation. The aquarium is the last building from the original Belle Isle Zoo, which was torn down during and after World War II.

On July 2, 1955, the aquarium was reopened to the public following a period of renovation.

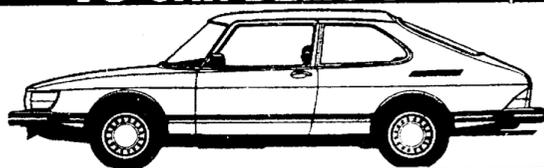

There are 600 exhibits in the aquarium, which has a total capacity of 32,000 gallons of water. The oldest aquarium residents, dating back to 1955, are Spotted and Short Nose Gars (large predatory fish). Also included are more than 5,000 live fish from fresh and salt water and exotic fish, such as piranha.

Aquarium hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, including holidays. Admission is free.

For more information, call 267-7159.

Gotta dance!

The auditorium of Parcells Middle School was the place to be last week as 32 talented performers auditioned for the nationally syndicated television program, Star Search, hosted by Ed McMahon. Originally 150 persons from the Detroit area auditioned for the program, but hard work by Claudia McMahon, Ed's daughter, and members of the Angela Kennedy Dance Studio whittled down the crowd. The only Grosse Pointer reported among the final 32 was Kathy DeRonne. Among those strutting their stuff were the dance team of Kim and Alan Gold and Wendy Hillard, who represented the U.S. in rhythmic gymnastics at the 1984 Olympics.

Begin planning now for child's future college education

Parents who are interested in making long-term plans to fund a child's education will have to make some careful choices in the next five months, before any tax measures are passed.

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, tax rules on trusts and gifts for children are likely to be changed if a tax reform bill is adopted by Congress this fall. The president's tax plan may force many families to rethink their long-term strategy for funding a child's education.

Right now, nobody knows if Congress will be able to pass a tax reform bill, much less exactly what a final version of the tax bill might say. That's still being decided in Congress. For contingency planning, however, it's important to know about the current rules on gifts and trusts and how they would be changed under the president's proposal.

Trusts and gifts have become a helpful answer to pay for soaring college costs. They can aid a middle-class family whose income is too high for federal financial aid, but strained by rising costs of college.

With a gift, a parent in a high tax bracket could give money or investment assets to a child who is in a much lower tax bracket. The income generated by the gift is taxed at the lower rate of the child.

With a trust, the same income shifting occurs. But with certain kinds of trusts, parents can build a fund over a period of years while basically retaining control of the money during the life of the trust. Most importantly, assets contributed to the trust can return to the parent after a set period of time. But a gift is a gift.

Here's how income shifting typically helps a family under the current rules: The Smiths are in the 50 percent tax bracket in 1985, when they give their son a $20,000 certificate of deposit that annually yields 10 percent in investment income. The Smiths would have paid $1,000 in federal income tax on $2,000 of investment income, but their child, who is in the 15 percent tax bracket, says just $300 in tax on the $2,000. By managing their money right, the Smiths get a $700 tax bracket, pays just $300 in tax on come shifting, the Smith family over the years will pay less in tax on the investment income generated by their $20,000 gift.

Under current rules, certain trusts provide the same tax savings as a gift. The big difference between these trusts and a gift is that the amount originally set aside in the trust can be returned to the parents after a set period of time. Trusts that permit this are Clifford Trusts and Spousal Remainder Trusts.

According to tax experts, however, the proposed trust rules will effectively eliminate these trusts. That's because the rules proposed by the president say that all trusts will have to span the parents' lifetime in order to shift income from a parent to a child.

If you believe the rules proposed by the president will be adopted, you may want to consider establishing a Clifford or Spousal Remainder Trust before the end of this year. Income shifting trusts set up before then will be allowed to survive their term under proposed rules.

If you plan to set up an income shifting trust before 1986 or if you are thinking about giving your child a gift to start a college fund, there are some other changes proposed that you should know about. The next tax brackets proposed by the tax reform package put every taxpayer in the 15 percent, 25 percent or 35 percent tax bracket.

A parent currently in the top bracket of 50 percent would lose 15 percent of the tax saving benefit of shifting income through a trust or gift under proposed rules. That's because the new top tax bracket would be 35 percent. The Smiths, who had saved $700 by income shifting before 1986, would save $400 under the new bracket structure. In other words, income shifting would still be viable, but not as attractive, CPAs say.

The proposed rules will also affect a child under the age of 14 who receives more than $2,000 a year in investment income through parents' gifts or trusts. Those children will have any amounts above the $2,000 level taxed at the parents' higher tax rate. Once the child is 14 years-old, the $2,000 passive income cap is eliminated.

St. John offers audiology service

St. John Hospital announces the availability of complete hearing testing and counseling services offered to both inpatients and outpatients who feel they have an ear or hearing problem.

An audiologist will monitor and assess such problems as hearing loss caused by ear infections, aging, exposure to certain drugs, or dizziness. The audiologist also gives advice to patients with impaired hearing, about useful rehabilitative procedures.

Children will be tested and recommendations may be advised for school placement and/or special education services if they are needed.

Counseling on hearing aids, the use of ear protection for patients employed in noisy environments, and recommendations for communication equipment other than hearing aids will be provided to patients.

The hearing test procedures are available for everyone from infants through senior citizens. Appointments last approximately 15 minutes and can be made by calling 343-3165 Monday through Friday. No physician's referral is needed.

Many insurance programs cover these services, including Medicare.

The entire cast — 250 of them — gather on stage to rehearse a rousing number as their director, choreographer and a technician watch.

This camp is really entertaining

By Pat Paholsky
Imagine 250 young people on a stage, singing and dancing like here's no tomorrow. Imagine the energy unleashed on the audience for two hours. That's what happened Friday shop leaders included Richard Pekala, conductor of the Windy City Singers and assistant conductor of the Chicago Symphony Chorus; Andrew Haines, Ohio State University Scarlet and Gray choreographer; and Joan Walton, University split into two groups of 125, they joined together for five opening and closing numbers. In one they learned sign language for "Where is Love" from "Oliver."

Preston said it added a lot of personal feelings to the song. Brooke Hohmeyer agreed: "We weren't singing very well until the signing came in."

"We are giving them an emotion, something physical," Bowen said. "It's rather elementary, but it helps paint the emotion for the student. Choreography is a breakthrough in learning music sensitively."

When a singer gets the whole body involved rather than just the mouth, Hohmeyer said "any music comes off better. It's more of a total environment. There's more emotion, more commitment."

Of the number of students in the workshop, Bowen said, "Nobody can believe there are 250 people here. They are so well-disciplined."

The workshop takes a lot of planning and scheduling, Bowen said. "You have to see Thursday in your mind. You have to know exactly what is going to happen each day."

Hohmeyer said it took two weeks of 10-hour days to tape everyone's part and then it took 22 hours to duplicate the tapes. Each student received a tape which he or she used to practice at home every night.

All of the planning and the hard work was worth it, however, as the 6th Northern Region Show Choir played before a packed house and exulted in the prolonged applause that followed each number. Never mind that the audience consisted of parents, relatives and friends. Those kids were good.

night at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. The performers, mostly high school and college students, spent six days of intensive practice preparing for the concert. And when they took to the stage, they fairly exploded with enthusiasm. It was contagious.

It was Macomb Community College's 6th Annual Show Choir Workshop. One of the workshop leaders, Woods resident James Hohmeyer, described it as "a week of really intensive training equal to most a year of training in a good school program."

Hohmeyer, conductor of the ocheater Symphony and vocal and music director at University Heights School, said, "It's a wonderful opportunity for kids. Part of the benefit of the camp is the kids will take some of the experience and pass it along (to their school) and improve the vocal music program."

His 13-year-old daughter, Brooke, who was participating in the workshop for the second year in a row, said, "They push you hard and in the end, it really pays off. I didn't think I was good at all (before the workshops), but then I was appraised at how good I sounded."

Ellen Bowen, producer and director of the annual workshop, said confidence is a natural outgrowth of the camp because the students are surrounded by professionals. "They are teaching what stage discipline is, what it's like to be a professional, what's appropriate with make-up."

Besides Hohmeyer, other work-of Cincinnati Singers choreographer.

Bowen, who is professor of choral music at MCC, said the camp's philosophy of music comes closest to what the Fred Waring workshops taught. "It's a singing group that uses choreography to enhance it and lots of facial expression and drama."

The purpose of the camp, known as the Northern Region Show Choir, is "to teach the business of entertainment through the use of good choral tone and what it's like to put on an entire show," Bowen said. "This is more the reality of the business. We give them a little taste of what it's like to do summer stock or dinner theater."

The camp is not for the faint-hearted, agreed Greg Preston, who graduated recently from North High, and Scarlett Lacey, a 13-year-old ULS student. "I wasn't sure what to expect, but it has been a lot of work," Preston said, adding that he would probably participate next year. The 18-year-old said he was planning to major in music and was hoping for a career in the musical theater.

Lacey, who is from England, said, "I have never been to a camp like this before. They work you hard and you're very tired. The thing that amazes me is having a concert in one week."

And it is amazing to consider that each participant learns about a dozen songs with carefully choreographed routines in a period of six days. Although the company was

GP Cinema League

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League has planned its program for the first half of the 1985-86 season.

The opening program, Monday, Sept. 16, will be "Let's Cruise South America," presented by Pierre and Elfrida Palmentier.

The other programs are:
Oct. 7 — Lea Ellsworth presents 35-millimeter slides on Portugal.

Oct. 21 — Esther Peters will show her 35-millimeter slides on Alaska.

Nov. 4 — Danny Paul will show two 16-millimeter movies on Amsterdam and Southern California.

Nov. 18 — Joe Messana will show his 35-millimeter slides, "Europe Through Artists' Eyes"

Dec. 2 — Steve Spilos concludes the first half of the season with a 35-millimeter presentation of the Holy Lands.

There is no meeting December 16.

The public is always welcome to attend the regular meetings of the League, which are held in the Fries Auditorium at 8 p.m. There is a charge of $1 for non-members.

Historic cannons

More than 30 cannons will roar over the riverfront parade ground at Historic Fort Wayne Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 17 and 18 during the 2nd Annual Mid-West Artillery Show.

Authentically uniformed gun crews from all parts of the United States and Canada will demonstrate historic artillery drill of the 18th through the 20th centuries. In addition to cannon firing, outdoor exhibits and colorful uniforms, visitors can watch authentic civil war horse artillery drill.

Historic Fort Wayne is located on W. Jefferson at the foot of Livernois, two blocks south of I-75.

For additional information, call 297-9360 or 9364.

Stratford trip

Book-O-Philes is sponsoring a trip to Stratford to see the matinee performance of "The Government Inspector" by Nikolai Gogol on Saturday, Sept. 21.

The group will leave from the St. Paul parking lot 8:30 a.m. and return about 10:30 p.m. The cost, $39, includes the trip by Greyhound bus, the ticket to the Festival Theatre and a beef buffet dinner at the Victorian Inn. A deposit of $10 is required by Aug. 30 to ensure one of the 40 places.

Send the deposit with name, address and phone of each participant to Sister Arlene Hepp, SSND, 170 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236 by Aug. 30. A confirmation will be sent upon receipt of the deposit.

To prepare for the play, Dr. Sara Leopold will review it Thursday, Sept. 19, 7:30 in the Adult Education Room in St. Paul School.

THE CHIROPRACTIC DIFFERENCE
David Jantz, D.C.

The chiropractic approach is to establish and maintain optimal physiological activity by correcting abnormal structural relationships. Chiropractic is a structural approach — whereas Medicine uses a chemical approach . . . drugs.

Today's Doctor of Chiropractic must attend six to eight years of college which includes a two-year internship program. Although comparable to a medical education, a chiropractic education is distinctively different in that chiropractic approaches health from a wholistic natural health care perspective.

A chiropractic doctor emphasizes proper joint motion and function of all joints of the body. He is concerned with optimal nutrition, injury-free exercise, stress management, and the prevention of disease.

Gathering spot

The cove in front of the Crescent Sail Yacht Club in the Farms is a popular place for swimmers, wind surfers, powerboats and sailboats. This was the scene last Sunday afternoon.

Burn center seeks local recognition

percent of his body had only a 50-percent chance of surviving, Robson said. Now a burn victim has a 50-percent chance of surviving with burns over 70 percent of the body.

Receiving's team approach brings basic science and research together with clinical care to benefit the patient. "Burn treatment is a rapidly evolving field. Research discoveries can be quickly applied to the patient here," Robson said. "It's an exciting thing that has allowed us to attract a good international faculty."

Every year, two to three million people in the United States will be burned, according to Robson. About 120,000 of them will be burned seriously enough to require hospitalization, and 12,000 of them will die.

"The question now is the quality of life of the survivors," Robson said. In the past, burn victims were not expected to survive at all.

"Burn centers used to be smelly and infected and nurses didn't want to work in them. But now our burn center is one of the favored places to work because we are looking at making the patient the same person he was before."

Patients at Receiving's burn center undergo psychological and vocational rehabilitation after they are physically cured of their burn. Machines analyze the movements needed to accomplish the tasks of everyday living to find out what the patients cannot do and then teach them to do it. Sometimes reconstructive surgery is needed, but often practice brings improvement, Robson said.

"We're looking at the fact that these people are going to live and we have to ask ourselves 'what did we save?'" Robson said. "We can save people, but if they can't live a complete life, they just move from one group of providers to another."

Burn patients are frequently depressed because they focus on their inability to accomplish formerly familiar tasks. "We try to make their obvious deformities less so. There's no need for scars the way we used to see them. People aren't hideously scarred any more."

Psychiatrists on the team work to prevent the isolation of the burn patients. Because of their extreme pain, family members often find it difficult to visit them, Robson said. "They're hard to visit. The gowns and masks are obstacles. It's hard to see a loved one in pain." But the psychiatrist tries to integrate the family into the treatment by educating them to continue visiting and offering their emotional support.

The burn center has 18 beds at Detroit Receiving and 12 more pediatric beds at Childrens Hospital.

Four juveniles charged in shoplifting

Four juveniles, aged 13 to 16, were charged with receiving and concealing in connection with an alleged shoplifting incident at Sports on the Hill last week. A fifth went home another way and was not detained or charged.

The five, two brothers, a cousin, and two friends, left their homes in Detroit on bicycles and rode to the Hill, where they entered the sports shop and started trying on Adidas warm-up suits, according to Farms police reports. One of them later admitted taking suits off the rack one at a time, carrying them out the shop door and hiding them in bushes belonging to the house behind the store. He said he had done the same thing for two days in a row and that some of the suits found in the bushes by police could have been there from the previous days.

The boys left the store wearing the warm-up jackets and walking their bikes, as one bike had a flat tire and two boys had been riding double. Alerted by the store owner, the police followed them. Two boys were seen jumping a back fence on McKinley and were picked up by City police. One was caught by Park police. Farms police interrogated the three, as well as the brother of one of them, the report stated.

The boys will be charged through the juvenile justice system, police said. They were released to their parents.

Aerobics for kids

The Bon Secours Hospital Health and Fitness Center in St. Clair Shores will offer an "Aerobics for Kids" fitness class starting Sept. 21.

The 10-week class includes games and activities to improve fitness and non-competitive aerobic, muscular and flexibility exercises.

Classes will meet Saturday mornings through Nov. 23. Children in kindergarten through third grade will meet from 9 to 10 a.m., and older children in grades four through seven, from 10 to 11 a.m.

U of D law alumni to honor '35 class

The University of Detroit School of Law will host its traditional Alumni Reception in conjunction with the State Bar of Michigan's 1985 Annual Meeting in Detroit. The reception will be Wednesday, Sept. 11, at the Law School Atrium from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

U of D alumni are invited to help honor 50-year alumni from the Class of 1935. An open bar and hors d'oeuvres will be available.

Call Assistant Dean Mary M. Barden at 961-5444 for more information.

Music school registration

The Detroit Community Music School, Detroit's 59-year-old school for the performing arts, announces registration dates for the new school year which begins Sept. 5.

From Monday, Aug. 19 to Thursday, Aug. 22, and from Monday, Aug. 26 to Thursday, Aug. 29, the registration office will be open from noon until 5:30 p.m. for registration for students interested in studying any instrument, voice or dance. The school also offers preschool programs, ensembles, the Detroit Children's Choir and music theory.

For information, call 831-2870. The school serves students from 3 to 83 at its Center School at 200 E. Kirby and at its two branches in Grosse Pointe and the Cranbrook area. Registration may be completed by phone or in person.

Nursery school opens registration

St. Paul Lutheran Nursery School on Lothrop at Chalfonte is accepting applications for its 3-year-old class for the 1985-86 school year. Classes are held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The staff of the cooperative nursery school consists of three teachers with degrees and training in early childhood education.

For more information, call Jeanne Miedema at 881-9790.

Farms office retires after 35 years

By Tom Greenwood

Thirty-five years of police professionalism and of keeping the peace comes to an end next month when Farms Sgt. Joseph Miller calls it quits and retires.

"I've enjoyed the work and had some interesting experiences, but it's also time to enjoy myself as a retiree," Miller said.

Trained as a mechanical engineer, he joined the department when he couldn't find work in his chosen field. "I thought I'd only stay here a couple years, then I'd find something in engineering," Miller said. "Lo and behold, here I still am 35 years later. I've done practically everything on the force during that time except lieutenant and chief. And I must admit I've enjoyed every minute of it."

"Practically everything" includes traffic safety officer, bicycle safety officer, seven years in the detective bureau and attendance at various schools, including bomb and arson investigation, drug enforcement, photography, and crime scene investigation. Miller also attended the FBI's national academy.

"I've also taught crime scene investigating seminars in Texas and Alabama," Miller said. "If you don't educate yourself, then you're in trouble. Especially police of-icers. When I first came on the force, all you needed was a high school education and to be part diplomat, psychiatrist and attorney. Now officers are better trained and better educated. That's good for us and the public."

During his 35 years, Miller has also seen an improvement in police equipment and communications. "We've always driven the best cars in the Farms," he said. "Our weapons equipment is top-notch, too. Officers now all have prep units so we're always in touch with our station. The LEIN machine (Law Enforcement Information Network) can almost instantly provide us with nationwide information on practically anybody. It lets us know who the bad guys are."

Like most cops, Miller has his collection of bad guy, good guy and funny experiences. "In 35 years, I've only had to fire my weapon once," he said. "In 1952 we got a call on a cat burglar over on Beupre. It was a guy named Ernie. My car and another squad car were approaching the intersection of Beupre and Touraine. We each slammed on our brakes and slid into the intersection and wouldn't you know it, we formed a perfect road block — just like in the movies."

"We saw this car coming with its lights out. It ran the roadblock and we fired as it went by. The car went about 100 feet and stopped. One of our shots had glanced off Ernie's skull. He got 15 years, but was out a little while later. He broke his neck and died in Birmingham burglarizing a house. Jumped off a balcony and hit his head on a wooden beam in the dark. Poor old Ernie."

On another occasion, Miller saw a line of 17 cars snaking down Kercheval towards Moross Road. "They were all high school seniors who were going to graduate the next day," Miller said. "They were swerving from one side of the street to the other. I stopped the caravan and gave them all tickets for careless driving. I'll never forget that."

Sgt. Miller has also covered his share of fires, accidents, assaults, family disputes and two homicides. "One of the worst accidents I can recall happened in front of St. Paul's on Lakeshore," he said. "There was a storm and water was breaking way over the road. It formed a mist that hardened into glare ice. We had nine cars and one bus slide into each other in one spot in front of the church. What a mess."

Just because he's retiring doesn't mean Miller won't be working. He intends to start his own company, video taping valuables in the home and at work. "It's called Certified Investors," Miller said. "It protects homeowners and businesses in case of theft or fire. It'll provide a record to insurance companies. Of course, I'll also do some relaxing too."

Will he miss the job? "Of course I will," he said. "I'll miss the excitement, the investigations and the friends I've made on the force. I'll also miss the people of the Farms. This is a fine city. The people are friendly, courteous and easy to get along with. Do you know, they sometimes even hesitate to call us because they're sometimes afraid they'll disturb us?"

"There's been so many time citizens have called, met us at the door and then said 'Gee, I really don't mean to disturb you.' Can you beat that?"

Sept. 16 will be the last day on the job for Joseph Miller.

"It'll be 35 years to the day I began," he said. "I started on a Monday and I'll be ending on a Monday. I think that's a very satisfying way to end my police career."

Board members of the Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation include: from the left, Mrs. Charles Endicott, trustee; Thomas Candler, trustee; Kurt Tech, president; and Mrs. Donald Mandich, trustee. The group plans its first annual Cocktail Reception at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House on Aug. 25.

Project to beautify Lakeshore

Foundation plans first reception

The Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation will hold its first annual Cocktail Reception on Sunday, Aug. 25, at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House, from 4 to 8 p.m., according to the organization's chairman, Kurt O. Tech.

Funds raised at the $50 per person event will go toward the foundation's first major project, the beautification and improvement of Lakeshore Road in Grosse Pointe Shores.

The reception is not limited to residents of the Shores; people from all five Grosse Pointes are expected to be on hand for the festivities. For tickets or information, the public is invited to stop by the foundation's headquarters, 795 Lakeshore Rd., or to phone 881-6565.

"It is most fitting that our first major event be held at the beautiful Ford house, since Eleanor Ford strongly supported worthwhile charitable and civic causes," said Tech, who is president of the foundation. "It was precisely in the Eleanor Ford spirit of giving to the community that the foundation was formed."

Tech encourages all Shores residents to support the foundation.

"The success of the foundation depends upon the participation of village residents in its fundraising efforts. Those of us who have contributed our time and money to establish the foundation are proud to be living in one of the world's best residential communities," he said. "We would like to see Grosse Pointe Shores a better, more attractive community when we must leave it, than it was when we arrived. I am convinced that the majority of our residents share these convictions and possess the means to improve our community. If 'Personal Participation for Community Enhancement' doesn't work in Grosse Pointe Shores, it won't work anywhere."

Approximately 400 people are expected to be on hand for the colorful event, which will feature hors d'oeuvres and good music.

The foundation, incorporated last spring to help supplement municipal services through the tax-deductible donations of members and residents, will promote resident participation to decide projects in the future.

The group voted in January to make beautification of Lakeshore Road its first project. The project is to be completed in phases, starting with the stretch north of Vernier. The first phase should be completed within two years, according to Tech. The project was designed by landscape architect John Grissim and will cost no more than $15,000.

The plan calls for entrance signs at the north and south ends of the village on Lakeshore.

The Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation Board of Trustees consists of Lynn F. Alandt, George N. Bashara, Peter Bogas, Thomas Candler, Peter Cracchiolo, Dr. Harold E. Cross, William Dahling, Edward Deeb, Mrs. Charles Endicott, William Clay Ford, Jr., Mervin Gaskin and William Genematas.

Local men return victorious from International Music Festival

Three Grosse Pointe men were members of the triumphant, 40-voice Wayne State University Men's Glee Club which took first place at the International Music Festival (Eisteddfod) held in Llangollen, North Wales, July 13.

Dr. David Cragg and Robert A. Brooks, both of Grosse Pointe Park, and Patrick Haddad of Grosse Pointe Woods, arrived home, tired, but excited about the success of their four-week tour of Norway, England and Wales.

The WSU group finished ahead of the Nelson Arion Male Voice Union of England and the University of Michigan English Singers to place first in the contest. The U of M group were three-time winners of the contest.

Cragg is a resident physician at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak.

"When Dr. Harry Lansford, director of the Glee Club, asked me last fall if my schedule would allow me to go with the group as a medical advisor, I wasn't sure if I wanted to go as a spectator, after singing with them in 1981 then they last won first place," Cragg said. "Luckily, I was able to attend enough rehearsals between January and June to learn the music."

Both Brooks and Cragg agreed they were more nervous this time at the Eisteddfod, but thought the "pot was sweeter" with the competition being tougher than in 1981.

The Glee Club raised most of the approximately $65,000 cost of the tour by performing benefit concerts in the Detroit area. For the first place performance, the club

New deadlines, policies for submissions

We have some new guidelines for material to the Second Section of the Grosse Pointe News. The new policies are designed to get the most news about Grosse Pointe residents into the paper on the most timely basis.

We have a new deadline for all submissions to the Second Section. Everything that is to be printed in the following week's paper must be in the Grosse Pointe News office by 3 p.m. on Friday. This deadline will be strictly enforced to ensure that all copy can be processed accurately and completely before it is printed. The earlier in the week your item arrives, the better the chance it will be in the next week's paper.

Pictures will be accepted to run with wedding announcements, engagement announcements, anniversary announcements and Pride of the Pointes items. One important rule will be applied to all photographs — at least one of the people in the picture must be a current Grosse Pointe resident. In engagement announcements, a picture of the man, the woman, or both, will be accepted — but at least one of the pictured individuals must be a resident. The same rule applies to weddings.

Pictures may be color or black and white, but must be of good, clear quality. Snapshots and Polaroid photos do not reproduce well enough for the newspaper and will not be accepted.

The size of the photograph is not important. Any photo from wallet sized to 8 x 10 will serve for weddings, anniversaries and engagements. However, for Pride of the Pointes, the pictures will be printed very small and a wallet-

If you wonder if your photo will be good enough — a good rule of thumb is that a professionally-taken portrait will always be acceptable. Otherwise, ask yourself if the picture is 1) sharp and clear; 2) if there is a large difference between the darkest parts of the picture and the lightest parts of the picture. If the photograph meets both of these tests, it will probably be acceptable.

We sincerely hope that these changes will help make this paper more responsive to your needs and easier to read. If you have any questions about the above guidelines, or if you have any suggestions for features you would like to see in the Grosse Pointe News Second Section, please feel free to call me, Elsa Frohman, at 882-0294.

Lean on vitamin B-6 for good health, eating

Vitamin B-6 has been identified as one of the most important nutrients in the protein metabolism process. Rich sources of B-6 include brewers yeast, wheat germ, beef liver, chicken liver, walnuts, chicken, mackerel, brown rice, white beans and tuna. Vitamin B-6 is water soluble and a large amount is lost in boiled foods. Wheat germ makes a delightful topping for salads and casseroles.

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol and pennywise kitchens of Thrya Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth follows. Recipes high in vitamin B-6 are featured this week.

Sesame-Oat Crackers

Peanut butter on these health-type crackers and a glass of skim milk — what a delectable way to indulge in extra protein.

- 3 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
- 1 cup flour
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 3/4 cup honey
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 3/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1 cup water
- 1 egg white, slightly beaten
- Sesame seeds

In a large mixing bowl, combine oats, flours, wheat germ, honey and salt. Pour oil and water into the center and stir until the mixture forms a ball and leaves the sides of the bowl. Divide the dough into four parts.

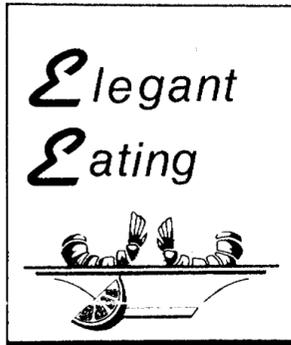

Roll out each ball of dough on a floured surface to make a large rectangle, about 1/8-inch thick. Roll dough loosely around rolling pin and place on lightly greased baking sheet. Cut into squares. Brush with egg white. Sprinkle with sesame seeds.

Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown. Makes 8 to 9 dozen. About four calories per cracker. Cholesterol 0.

Chinese Chicken and Walnuts

- 1 pound chicken breasts
- 1/4 cup soy sauce

- 2 Tbsp. cornstarch
  - 5 Tbsp. safflower oil
  - 1/2 cup broken walnut meats
  - 2 or 3 slices of fresh ginger, diced
  - 3 Tbsp. dry sherry
  - 1 tsp. sugar
- Skin and debone chicken breasts and slice into chunks. Mix the chicken with one tablespoon soy sauce and one tablespoon cornstarch. Heat oil in wok; lightly brown walnuts and remove from wok. Stir fry ginger in the oil for 1 to 2 minutes; remove from wok. Add chicken to the oil, stirring constantly until the chicken changes color. Add sherry, sugar and remainder of the soy sauce and the cornstarch which has been dissolved in 1 tablespoon of water.

Cook until thickened. Stir in the walnuts very quickly. Makes six servings.

Calories about 252 per serving. Cholesterol about 600 mgs.

Saucy Chicken Livers

- 1 pound fresh or frozen chicken livers
- 3 Tbsp. unsalted margarine
- 1 small onion, minced
- 1 can (16 oz.) stewed tomatoes
- 3 Tbsp. Marsala wine
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1/2 tsp. basil
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 2 Tbsp. skim milk
- 1 Tbsp. flour

In 10 inch skillet over medium heat, melt margarine, cook chicken livers and onion until livers are lightly browned and onion is tender. Add tomatoes with their liquid, wine, sugar, basil and pepper, stirring to break up tomatoes; heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover; simmer 10 minutes. In small bowl, mix milk and flour. Gradually stir into mixture in skillet. Cook over medium heat, stirring, until thickened. Makes four servings.

Serve over hot fluffy rice garnished with sprigs of watercress and half cherry tomatoes.

Tuna Rice Skillet

- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/4 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 2 Tbsp. margarine
- 1 (4 oz.) can mushrooms - stems and pieces
- Water
- 1 cup long grain rice
- 1 (12-1/2 oz.) can chunk style tuna, drained
- 1/8 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper

1 chicken bouillon cube
1 (8 oz.) can peas, drained
In a skillet cook onion, celery and green pepper in margarine until soft. Drain mushrooms, reserving liquid. Add water to mushroom liquid to make two cups, pour into skillet. Stir in mushrooms, rice, tuna, salt and pepper and bouillon cubes — mix well. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer over low heat 20 minutes or until rice is tender, stirring once or twice. Stir in peas. Serves five.

Calories per serving about 335. Cholesterol about 38 mgs.

Baked Beans for the Gang

Luscious beans straight from the pot with nary a milligram of cholesterol... and so tasty.

- 1 cup dry red beans
- 1 cup great northern beans
- 6 cups water
- 5 cups cooked brown rice
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup catsup
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup barbecue sauce
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 Tbsp. prepared mustard
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. allspice
- 1/4 tsp. cinnamon
- Freshly ground black pepper

Soak beans overnight in six cups water. Simmer beans in soaking water until tender, about 1-1/2 hours. Drain.

Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Turn into two-quart casserole. Bake, covered, 1-1/2 hours in 325° oven. Stir before serving. Makes eight to 10 servings. For 18 to 20 servings, double recipe and use a four-quart casserole.

Calories about 335 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Hirschfield gets scholarship

De La Salle Collegiate graduate John J. Hirschfield has been awarded a four-year, half-tuition Presidential Scholarship to the University of Detroit. Students so honored had to graduate with a grade point average of 3.0 or higher and score at least 25 on the ACT or 1,100 on the SAT college entrance exams.

Foreign language classes to start in September

Learn beginning French, Spanish or Japanese, or intermediate Spanish at the International Institute foreign language classes beginning Sept. 9 at the institute in Detroit's Cultural Center.

Japanese and intermediate Spanish will meet Mondays and Wednesdays. French and beginning Spanish will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-8 p.m. at the institute, located at 111 East Kirby at John R.

The 10 week non-academic classes will emphasize conversation and basic grammar. Class size will be limited to insure that a small group learning environment will prevail. Tuition is $150 and does not include books.

Pre-registration by Aug. 23 is necessary. Send your check or money order, made payable to the International Institute, to Foreign Language Classes, 111 East Kirby, Detroit, Mich. 48202. Call the institute at 871-8600 during business hours for additional information. The International Institute is a Torch Drive-supported agency that provides social services to new immigrants and foreign-speaking people as well as cultural and educational programs about the different cultures in Detroit.

Kathleen Judge: Passing 'Go' in her pursuit of a creative career in art

By Elsa Frohman

Kathleen Judge didn't collect $200, but she has "passed Go" in her career as an artist. The Grosse Pointe South High School senior's design will form the logo for the Grosse Pointeopoly game to be marketed by the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment this fall.

Kathleen's art was selected from among drawings submitted by art students at both North and South high schools.

"Hers was just perfect," said Pointeopoly project co-chairman Peggy Davis. "We wanted something representative so you would know it was Grosse Pointe when you picked up the game."

Kathleen's design for the center of the board shows a sailboat race with scattered snapshots of Grosse Pointe landmarks. She also produced artwork for the back of the game board.

The game committee was so pleased with Kathleen's work that it has adopted the board-center artwork as its logo for the entire project.

Kathleen said she has been drawing and painting for most of her life. Her bedroom doubles as an art studio, where she experiments with new media.

Kathleen said she heard of the competition to design the Pointeopoly board through the advisor of the Artists and Authors Club, Mrs. Eva Cook. The high school organization brings together artists and creative writers to appreciate one-another's work.

"She really pushed me," Kathleen said. "I did some sketches and took them around to Mrs. Davis. I did a couple revisions for her."

The pen and ink media which Kathleen used for the Pointeopoly drawings is not one she uses frequently. More of Kathleen's work is done in colored pencil, pastels and acrylic paint. She chose pen and ink for the drawing because of her experience with reproduction while working on "The Tower," the South high school newspaper, in the ninth grade.

Kathleen said that painting has been a recent addition to her artistic repertoire.

"I'm just getting into it," she said. "I hated it when I started and I didn't know how to do it. Now I'm realizing that you have to do everything."

As a freshman at South, Kathleen started out in the Introduction to Art course, but was quickly transferred, along with about six other freshmen, into the advanced class.

"It was a challenge to go up with the seniors," she said. "It's like racing with someone faster — you run faster."

In addition to her high school art classes taught by Robert Rathbun, Kathleen has taken classes at the Center for Creative Studies, on a scholarship provided by the Art Club.

"It was good to have a different teacher," she said. "It was hard and there was homework, but I enjoyed it."

Kathleen hasn't decided on a school to continue her education after she graduates next spring. She is considering a group of five schools, including Cooper's Union and Pratt in New York, and one in Atlanta, Ga. She is currently putting a portfolio together.

Though she leans toward art, Kathleen said she hasn't made up her mind about exactly what career path she will follow.

"People say you can't make a living in art," she said. "But art is being creative with anything you do. When I graduate, I'm going to want to go all over and try out different jobs."

Kathleen said she once considered owning a restaurant as a career goal, but isn't sure about it. She wants to try out different jobs in different fields to learn more about what it takes to run a successful business.

"It doesn't matter if it's as a dishwasher or a cook. I want to get experience and take classes — even if they're hard. It's better if they're hard."

Kathleen said her parents, Jeanne and Frank Judge, have been very supportive of her creative ambitions.

At school, Kathleen is a member of the Artists and Authors Club and will be a member of the Tower staff this fall. She is active in St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church.

Davis praised Kathleen's work with the Grosse Pointeopoly committee.

"She's a nice, nice person," Davis said. "She is so conscientious."

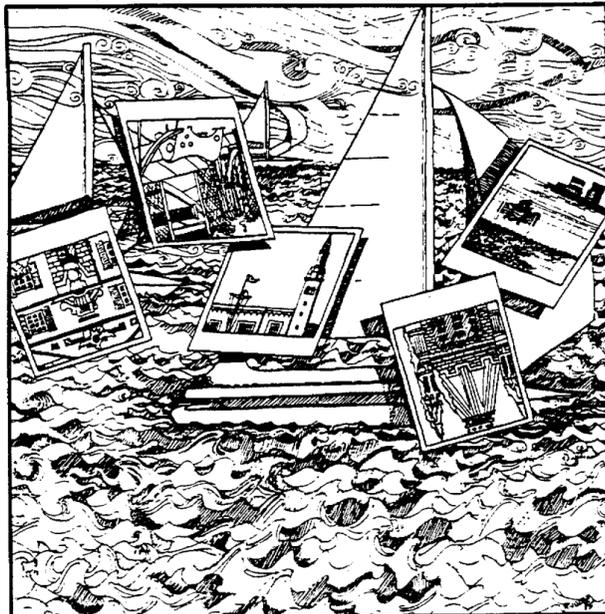

On Wednesday, Sept. 5, Kathleen and others who worked on the project will welcome the business people who sponsored squares on the board to a reception to introduce the game. The event will be held at Jacobson's which is marketing Grosse Pointeopoly.

Kathleen, who signed her work and named one of the boats in the boat race after herself, will be autographing games at the reception.

The cost of producing the game was underwritten by merchants who purchased squares on the board. The foundation ordered an initial run of 1,500 games and hopes to order more when these are sold out.

The foundation sponsors special academic programs in the Grosse Pointe schools. For the first 14 years of his history, the group has had the income from an endowment as its only funding.

"We're trying to increase our endowment," Davis said. "We've never held a fundraiser before."

Kathleen's artwork for the Pointeopoly game board features a sailboat race and snapshots of Grosse Pointe landmarks.

"An Evening with Anna Maria Alberghetti" will be the first program of the Grosse Pointe 1985-86 Celebrity Series, sponsored by the Bon Secours Assistance League to benefit Bon Secours Hospital, Grosse Pointe.

Alberghetti, singer, actress and Tony Award winner for the Broadway production, "Carnival," will speak on Oct. 10, at Parcels Auditorium, Grosse Pointe Woods. The program will include singing and dialogue with Alberghetti, who made her American concert debut at Carnegie Hall at the age of 13.

Other guest speakers in the Celebrity Series are: Camelia Sadat, who will speak on Nov. 14, about "What it Means to be a Woman in Moslem Society."

Nora Ephron, critic and author of the best seller "Heartburn" will speak on Jan. 9, 1986. She is also the co-screen writer and Academy Award nominee for the film "Silkwood."

Peter Howard, composer, music director, concert pianist, known for his work in "Mame," "My Fair Lady," and "The Sound of Music," will speak on March 13, 1986.

Tickets for the 1985-86 Grosse Pointe Celebrity Series may be purchased by mail. Tickets are $30 for the entire series. Send a check or money order to: Edna Moeller, 801 Lakeland, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48230.

Checks should be made payable to the Bon Secours Assistance League. Tickets will be mailed in September.

DAR plans luncheon

A meeting and luncheon for the members of the General Josiah Harmar Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be hosted by Mrs. Robert Bell of Sterling Heights, on Saturday, Aug. 17, at noon. Mrs. Daniel Leipprandt will be a co-hostess.

Mrs. Walter Fysh of Redford will speak at the meeting on, "Our Country: Its Duty to the Michigan Indians."

Michigan's new state regent, Mrs. John F. Weaver, Sr., of Monroe, will be greeting the chapters at the State Conference on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26 through 28, at the Marriott Inn in Grand Rapids.

The members will also be reminded that Constitution Week, beginning Sept. 17, will be observed throughout our land, in memory of the drafting of the Constitution of the United States by the delegates of the 13 Colonial States.

AWC potluck set

The Association for Women in Computing, the Detroit Metropolitan Chapter will hold its annual Potluck Picnic for the 1985-86 program year on Aug. 22, at 6 p.m. This is the first meeting of the new program year. It will be an opportunity to learn more about the organization and the coming year's programs. The cost of the picnic is $2. The Association welcomes members, guests, and interested parties to the picnic. For more information and reservations call (313) 885-7432.

Off-Beats to perform for Widows' meeting

The "Off-Beats," a musical group under the direction of Danny Peters, will provide the music for a

Septemberfest Dinner sponsored by the Widows' Organization on Wednesday, Sept. 18 in the new Mike Kelly's Restaurant on Hubbard Dr., one block east of the Southfield Freeway.

Cocktails will be served at a cash bar starting at 6:30 p.m., dinner promptly at 7 p.m. The price is $12, sales tax and tip included, and tickets can be obtained by mailing a check to the organization's office at 7129 Johnathon, Detroit, 48126.

Members and friends, male and female, are invited to attend this festive occasion. Door prizes will be awarded and surprise speakers will conclude the evening.

For Project HOPE

The Project HOPE League has planned an evening of elegance at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 110 Lakeshore, for Saturday, Sept. 14.

There will be house tours from 7 p.m., hors d'oeuvres buffet in the dining room, open bar in the library, continuous variety entertainment in the art deco room, loggia and drawing room and music for dancing by the Stylers in the gallery from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The tax-deductible donation is $30 and reservations are required. Call 649-4775.

The proceeds will benefit the medical teaching programs of Project HOPE.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

With Peggy on vacation and baseball players back from their strike, we thought it would be nice to repeat one of Peggy's columns from other happy seasons. This column first appeared in the April 14, 1983 edition.

With all due apologies to Irving Berlin, Abner Doubleday or Slim Whitman ... or whoever it was who wrote this song:

Take Me Out to the Ballgame

Don't get me wrong. Going to the ballgame is one of life's simplest and nicest pleasures. To paraphrase the immortal words of New York Yankee fan Lee Iacocca, if you can find a better pastime, do it.

There is nothing (well, almost nothing) like settling down at Tiger Stadium with a hot dog and some liquid refreshments and watching a well-played baseball game. And if by some coincidence the hometown heroes should happen to win, nothing could be nicer (well, practically nothing).

However...

Take Me Out to the Crowd...

TAKING a crowd to the ballgame is not unlike calling the queen of England "Liz" or investing in Iranian oil certificates ... it just isn't done. Unless the kind of game you like is one you watch through a hole in a fence, taking a crowd to a professional baseball game might just run into a double-figured venture.

So, most of the time, you'll have to keep it to an intimate two or three at the old ballgame. Once you get to the park, you'll be joined by the other 25,000 or so fans who like an "intimate" evening at the game. And they're all here to have fun, just like you.

If they happen to have a little more fun than you, don't worry about it. Two or three washings should take care of that orange pop dumped on your jacket by overzealous Cleveland Indian fans. And if you keep your eyes on the game and remember not to look up at people who like to spit from the second deck, you won't have to worry about that, either.

And good news from the bleachers (formerly known as Detroit Zoo-East): just when you thought it would never be safe to go in the bleachers again, it is! Remember a few years back, when nobody knew just what game those bleacherites were watching? Well, they've cleaned it up out there (beefing up on security and beefing down on beer). So, with the possible exception of a two-night doubleheader against the Yankees on a hot, muggy Friday night, it is possible to enjoy a game up there.

Buy Me Some Peanuts and Crackerjacks...

Have you seen the price of peanuts lately? And crackerjacks are out of question. You and your "intimate" crowd are more likely to hear the strains of "buy me some programs, a hot dog, three beers, an ice cream and a baseball jacket ... and put it on my Master Charge."

I Don't Care If I Never Get Back...

Of course, if you do find that your household budget can stand the strain of a few ballpark potables, buy, by all means, buy.

Be prepared, though, to wait a bit at crowded concession stands. If one is patient, one can escape the wait with a great tasting meal, well worth the hours spent in line with those who have obviously had their two-beer allotment — 16 beers ago. So what if the Tigers have changed pitchers — two or three times — before you get back. So what if George Steinbrenner has changed managers — two or three times — before you get back. So what if the kindergarten you left sitting next to you is now a Rhodes Scholar.

Root, Root, Root for the Home Team...

Rooting for the home team has taken on a whole new meaning in the last few years. "Here we go Tigers, here we go," is passe. "Charge!" just doesn't make it here. The famous "Na na na na, hey, hey, goodbye" heard in other cities just isn't appropriate for our sophisticated fans, who prefer the simple, direct, pithy, two-word approach. And those two words aren't "Howdy, neighbor," if you get my drift.

If they don't win it's a shame...

It is a shame when the hometown boys don't win. Fortunately, our hometown boys win more than they lose (ask Sparky), so we don't have to worry about shame.

But on the few occasions when they do lose, that memorable trip to the ballpark isn't a total waste. Bottle and can collectors can look forward to the great variety of specimens removed from the pockets, purses and ponchos of incoming fans. Criminal justice students usually have one or two fine subjects to study at the ballgame. And anthropologists should have a field day. Word has it Margaret Mead spent a lot of time in ball parks studying primitive cultures.

Crescent Sail hosts Snipe nationals

They came from across the country last week, converging on Crescent Sail Yacht Club for the U.S. National Snipe Championships that will conclude with final races tomorrow beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Close to 225 people and 100 Snipes were expected to compete in the seven days of races to determine junior and senior champions for the two-person boats. Residents running in the championships include Fred Rozelle, Henry Filter, Wade Edwards, John Walton, Jr., Colton Wetherston and Leigh Savage, who is regatta chairman.

The Snipe is one of the largest sailing classes in existence, Savage said. The boats are just under 16 feet long, with a regulation 128 square feet of sail and a two-person crew.

The center board hull design has remained relatively unchanged over the 50 years of the class, with changes in materials accounting for the single greatest change in design: reduction in weight from 425 to 381 pounds.

The Snipe is a very traditional form of two-person sailing, Savage said. The crew weight is very flexible so it's easier to keep in the class and, while the boat isn't a screamer, it does offer everything a competent sailor could want in terms of boat handling and speed, he added.

The U.S. National Championships are a yearly event that come to the Midwest every five years, according to Savage. This is the first time in more than 20 years that Crescent Sail Yacht Club has hosted the regatta.

The Snipes have attracted a large number of sailors over the years, and of those racing this week, some may see themselves in the tryouts for the U.S. Olympic team for the 1988 games, Savage said. Others racing over the week will take part in collegiate programs as well, he added.

The expertise of the field makes this Snipe national championship one of the toughest one-design racing fleets anywhere, Savage added. Yet, of the six local boats taking part in the races, four will probably make it into the finals, he added.

The boats will be split into two fleets of 33 boats and 44 boats that will sail separately during the week until the finals on Friday, Savage said. The Olympic triangle courses have been laid out east of the shipping channel in American and Canadian waters. The six-legged course will be laid to cover each of the points of racing, and each leg will measure one to 1 1/2 miles, he added.

Club members will man six to 12 power boats to keep an eye on the proceedings, Savage said. The Snipes sail out to the course to countdown starts over the fixed starting lines, he added.

Weather-wise, the boats are able to run in winds five to 25 knots, but aren't supposed to race in sustained winds above that mark, Savage said. Saturday's weather was hopefully the worst of the regatta, but the junior national races ended before the thunderstorms moved in.

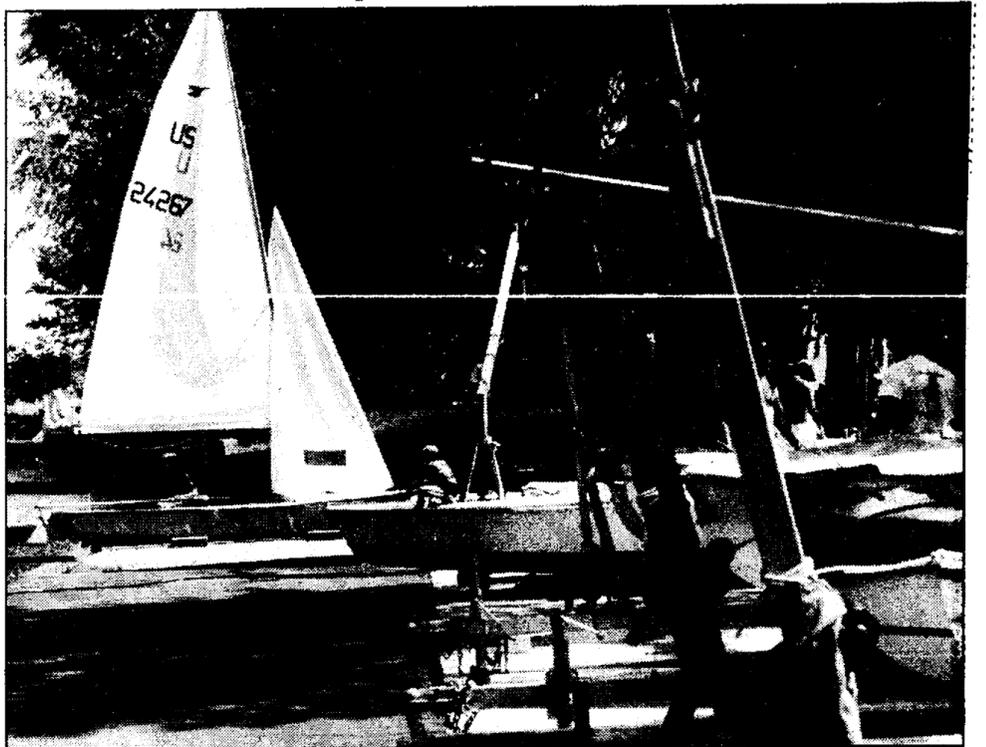

Offering aid and comfort to all the boats, sailors and families has meant a lot of hard work by club members to prepare for the regatta, Savage said. The club's committee has been working on the details of the event since last September.

Some of those details include findings lodging for all the sailors and families who came in for the race, Savage said. While some have been lodged in hotels around the area, the club gained permission of the school system to use South High School's parking lot for any overflow of campers and motor homes that couldn't be lodged in club members' driveways, he added.

Teams began bringing to their boats Friday for registration, weighing and sail measurement. While the juniors competed over the weekend, teams of sailors aged 19 and over met for the measurement and weigh-in for the U.S. National Championships.

Monday and Tuesday saw back-to-back races in the Crosby series. Wednesday and today have been reserved for the Wells and Heinzerling series' four races.

The Snipe class design was first introduced by Rudder editor Bill Crosby in March, 1931, when he attended a meeting in Sarasota, Fla. of the Florida West Coast Racing Association. In answer to a request for the creation of a class of racing sailboats that could be trailer to regattas, Crosby promised to give the new class a send-off by designing and publishing the plans for the new boats in his magazine.

This scene was repeated many times at Crescent Sail Yacht Club last week. A Snipe is launched, one of dozens that took part on the national regatta going on last and this week at the yacht club.

Race results

The U.S. Junior Nationals were held Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's three races ended before the heavy weather, but 10- to 15-knot winds made for fast sailing. Sunday's air was lighter — about eight knots — for the two races that day.

The results are:
First, Scott Lindley and crew Paul Noring; second, Russell Fox, crew Kevin Goyan; third, Robbie Frechette, crew Nickie Wilgrout; fourth, T. Davis, crew Derrick Fermon; fifth, Mike Lenkeit, crew B. Bristol; sixth, Jeff Irvine, crew Bill Barrett; seventh, Jane Faust, crew Quint Schwinker; eighth, Andy Moeller, crew Paul Andreporc; ninth, Scoot Rowland, crew Bill Crossley; 10th, C. Coberly, crew Paul Berner; 11th, Eric Deeds, crew Lincoln Taylor; and 12th, Chuck Connors and DeWitt Patton.

Moeller and Andreporc and Deed and Taylor sailed for Crescent Sail.

The races began at 11 a.m. Saturday, with three scheduled back-to-back. Sunday saw two back-to-back Snipe races starting at 10:30 a.m.

Awards were presented at a banquet at Bayview Yacht Club Sunday evening.

Correction

In the Aug. 8 edition, the address for those wanting to contact John Hackett was reported incorrectly. Those who want to write John should send their letters care of Erie Cardinals, P.O. Box 1182, Erie, PA 16512. The News regrets the error.

The popularity of the Snipe class is attributed to its simplicity and easy handling.

USYRU Junior Semifinals held at CSYC

Seven Great Lakes region junior sailors, three from the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, won places in the lineup for national competitions Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 5 and 6, on Lake St. Clair in the Area E Junior Semifinals of the United States Yacht Racing Union sponsored by Crescent Sail Yacht Club.

This was the last step to select representatives of yachting associations in this region to compete in the National Junior Regatta of USYRU at Annapolis, Md. tomorrow, Aug. 16, and the Windsurfer Nationals in San Diego.

The regatta included races for four different classes of boats. In the Sears Trophy Race for three-man crews on Flying Scots, winners were Jeff Irvine, Bill Barrett and Steve Rittmeyer from Cowan Lake Yacht Club of the Ohio Interclub Yachting Association.

Two-man crews sailing Flying Juniors competed for the Bemis Trophy, with first in the class going to Justin Palm and Kathy Murray, representing Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and the Detroit River Yachting Association.

In the Smythe Trophy single-handed race, first place went to Jeff Clark of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

The Massachusetts Bay Trophy for Windsurfers went to Dan O'Haver of Huron Portage Yacht Club in the Michigan Inland Yachting Association.

Competitors included champions from seven area associations covering New York, Ohio, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana.

While the champions were busy sailing, Crescent Sail senior and junior members were busy making it all happen. While Laser and sail board competitors brought their own craft, CSYC members prepared a fleet of Flying Scots in which all boats were equally matched.

The members also provided home hospitality for visiting competitors and dinners for all entrants during the two days of the regatta.

Managers of the program were CSYC Vice Commodore Maynard Rupp and Past Commodore Herb

Mainwaring who served as regatta chairman and race chairman, with the support of other members, their wives and junior members who worked on boats and made the visitors feel welcome.

Hospital sponsors road race

Bon Secours Hospital's Health and Fitness Center in St. Clair Shores is sponsoring the second annual "Run the Shores '85", a 5K and 10K road race Saturday, Sept. 14. This is the only running event in St. Clair Shores this year. The 5K run begins at 9:30 a.m. and the 10K at 9:45 a.m. Both courses start and finish at the Health and Fitness Center, 22300 Bon Brae, at Jefferson between 10 and 11 Mile Roads. Runners are routed up Jefferson and loop back through the residential areas north of the Center.

The cost is $8 for entries post-marked no later than Sept. 7, and $10 after Sept. 7. Late registrations will be accepted between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. at the Bon Secours Hospital Health and Fitness Center on race day. Multi-colored, long-sleeved t-shirts will be given to the first 300 entries. Following the race, trophies will be awarded to overall first place male and female runners in both races.

Medals for the first three places in each division will also be awarded. All participants will be eligible to win prizes raffled by race number. Fruits, bagels, cider and other free refreshments will also be available after the race for runners.

For registration information call 779-1041.

"Run the Shores '85" is also sponsored by Mourad, Elrod, McLeod, and Hochstein, Inc., Place Quality Laundry and Dry Cleaners, The Total Runner, and Village Cyclery.

Take a run in St. Clair Shores with Bon Secours' Run The Shores '85, set for Saturday, Sept. 14 this year.

Get deer applications

The Natural Resources Committee last week in Escanaba to set the number of Hunter's Choice licenses for the coming seasons.

Application forms for Hunter's Choice and Landowner Limited Hunter Choice deer licenses for designated areas in Michigan are now available.

DNR studies show the state's deer herd has increased, setting the stage for an outstanding hunt this fall. Over-winter deer losses were minimal and fawn recruitment excellent, according to the DNR wildlife division.

Hunter's Choice applications and a guide diagramming available deer management areas may be obtained at any DNR district or regional office, DNR's Information Services Center, Box 30028, Seventh Floor Mason Building, Lansing 48909, or through license dealers. Deadline for application is Sept. 24.

Hunter's Choice licenses — for either sex deer — will be valid for use during the regular firearm season from Nov. 15 to 30, and the muzzleloader season Dec. 6 to 15.

A Hunter's Choice license and a valid firearm deer license allows a hunter to take deer of either sex within the area/season specified on the license.

A Landowner's Limited Hunter's Choice and a valid firearm license authorizes the hunter to take a deer of either sex on their own lands, on adjoining private lands with the owner's permission, or on lands leased by the permit holder, lying within the area/season designated on the license.

GPSC takes fourth in Southfield meet

By Margie Reins Smith
Grosse Pointe Swim Club took a respectable fourth place at the USSM Age Group Long Course Swimming Championships in Southfield, August 10.

"We scored twice as many points as we usually do, and we entered the largest number of swimmers ever," said coach Scott Teeters. "It was the most successful summer we've ever had."

Grosse Pointe swimmers were outscored by Livonia Spartan Aquatic Club, which took first place with 808.5 points. Royal Oak Penguins were second, with 799; Birmingham-Bloomfield Atlantis was third with 661, and GPSC took fourth with 602.5 points.

Fifty-two club members from Grosse Pointe, aged 10 to 17, competed against 50 Michigan swim clubs in the four-day championship finals. "Eighty-five or 90 percent of our kids did 'best times' at this meet," said coach Teeters.

GPSC swimmers set new state records in three events at the meet, and the 13-14 boys won the high point trophy for scoring the most points of any team in their age group.

Ron Howard set a state record in the boys 15-16 100-meter backstroke with a time of 1:01.66. Sandy Smith set a state record in the girls 15-16 100-meter breaststroke, by breaking her own 1984 record with a time of 1:18.11.

The boys' 15-16 400-meter medley relay also set a state record time.

Ron Howard, Rick Leonard, Matt Smith, and Dickie Clarke swam the relay in 4:12.37.

Howard, Smith, and Katie Young traveled to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Aug. 12 for the Junior Nationals.

In addition, four GPSC swimmers with AAA qualifying times will attend a zone meet in Des Moines, August 7 to 11. Leah Puidokas, Jim Singelyn, Cammie Puidokas, and Zak Rogalski will join a contingent of 27 Michigan swimmers to compete against swimmers from Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

At the Southfield meet, Nancy Vettorello, 17, won first place in the girls 16-17 200-meter breaststroke. She placed second in the 50 free, took thirds in 100 breast and 100 free, fourths in the 200 free and 200 IM, and seventh in the 100 fly.

Tracy Cunningham dropped 29 seconds for a sixth in the girls' 16-17 1500-meter freestyle. She also took fourth in the 800-meter free and sixth in the 400 free.

The boys 13-14 800-meter freestyle and 400-meter freestyle relays were won by Ian Thompson, Bill Thompson, Ron Yokubison, and Greg Cooksey. For the boys 13-14 400-meter medley relay, Bill Thompson, Ian Thompson, Jim Singelyn, and Yokubison took home blue ribbons.

Katie Young, in addition to her Junior National qualifying first place in the 50 free, also took second in the 100 fly, third in the 100 free, fifth in the 200 fly, and two sixths in 200 free and 200 IM.

Kathy Kish, 15, placed in five events — the 1500, 800, 400, and 200-meter freestyles, and the 200 back.

Bill Thompson, besides his winning relay participation, also placed in eight individual events. Yokubison placed in six events.

In the 11-12 age group, Leah Puidokas placed in six events, including seconds in 50 free, 100 free, and 200-meter free. The girls 11-12 100-meter and 200-meter breaststroke. Stedem placed in a total of seven events. Cammie Puidokas placed in seven events.

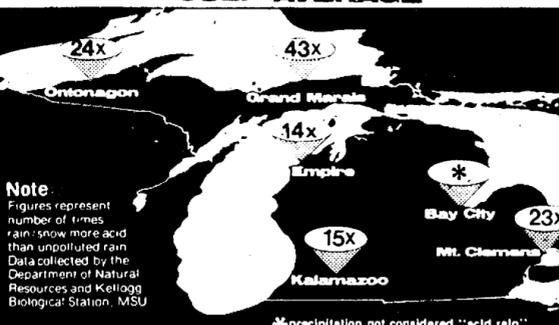

Registration for the fall session of the Grosse Pointe Swim Club will take place at Grosse Pointe North Monday, Sept. 9, and Tuesday, Sept. 10, at 7 p.m. Parents must be present on one of these days to register their children and pay club fees.

For more information about the GPSC, which is co-sponsored with the Grosse Pointe Department of Community Education, call 343-2178 from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. any weekday.

MICHIGAN ACID RAIN WATCH

A public service of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs

JULY AVERAGE

"Acid rain" is rain, snow, fog or dry deposits containing significant amounts of nitric and sulfuric acids. Acid rain or snow is formed by the combining of moisture and pollution (sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides) from burning coal and petroleum products.

Acid rain is measured on a pH scale. Unpolluted rain has a pH of 5.6. The lower the pH, the higher the acid and the greater the potential for damage.

Many scientists believe that persistent acid rain at pH levels over 8 times the acidity of unpolluted rain will damage man-made structures, fish, lakes, streams, crops, trees and soils, particularly in sensitive areas such as the western Upper Peninsula. Acid rain may fall hundreds of miles from where it is created.

Park falls one game short of Series

History repeats itself. The Grosse Pointe Park Babe Ruth All Stars found that out to their dismay last week in Owensboro, Ky., where they fell one game short of a regional title and a berth in the Babe Ruth World Series.

Three weeks ago, the Park rebounded from a seven-run deficit with a 12-run last inning rally to beat Dowagiac for the state title. Last Wednesday, the Ruthers entered the regional finals as the only unbeaten squad, needing only to beat Elgin, Ill. once to gain the World Series in Jamestown, N.Y., and having two chances to do it.

The Park held a 17-8 lead going into the sixth inning when the roof caved in. Before the dust settled, Elgin had taken a 20-18 victory in a game that took four hours to play, forcing the second game, which didn't begin until 11 p.m.

The first game was a horror that local fans in attendance will not soon forget. Home place umpire Bill East handed out 39 walks — 22 to the Park and 17 to Elgin — in what has been called the worst officiated game in many years by some Parkers. There seemed to be no strike zone, with East rarely calling strikes unless the batter swung at the ball.

Even victorious Elgin manager Bob Nelson remarked, "I blame the score on the umpire. His strike zone was too tight. These two teams are better than a 20-18 score."

The Park scores 10 runs in the second inning on four hits and eight walks. In all the team garnered only eight hits in the long-playing walk-a-thon, which some coaches believe might qualify for the Guinness Book of Records.

Doug Lucas and Bryan Jones walked four times each, while Matt Montagne and Nick Saros each drew three free passes.

Lucas, who had pitched seven innings two days earlier in a decision over Lexington, Ky., started the contest, but gave way to Saros in the third. Saros in turn yielded to Ferit Nazarko, who lasted less than an inning. Manager Paul Pellerito brought Lucas back in, but he was unable to stem the tide as Elgin squeaked out its victory.

In Game Two, two Elgin pitchers combined to throw a no-hitter as the Park lost 4-1. The Parkers' once-potent bats could muster no support for pitcher Marcus Wysocki, who was pitching with one day's rest.

Elgin bartered its nine hits, five walks and one Park error into four runs, which was more than enough to win the game, the regional crown and the berth in the World Series.

Despite the setback in the final game, the Park team went farther than any other Grosse Pointe team has ever gone in Babe Ruth play.

Apology

The News apologizes to the members of the Grosse Pointe Park Babe Ruth All Stars for the numerous misspellings in the list of team members' names in last week's edition.

'Cuz it's One, Two, Three Strikes You're Out . . .

Tiger Stadium has been the site of many a memorable strikeout.

Nolan Ryan once struck out 17 Tigers to go with the no-hitter he pitched on a hot July afternoon. His best came when Tiger Norm Cash went to bat with a table leg. Old Norm took a couple of good cuts, but against the power pitching of Ryan, Cash just didn't have a you-know-what to stand on.

Another memorable strikeout came when Mark Fidrych whiffed Reggie Jackson three times in one game. It was the classic case of young whipper-snapper beats crafty old veteran — or in this instance, Vienna Sausage outfoxes Ballpark Frank in the battle of the Baseball Hotdogs.

But my favorite strikeout came during a rain delay. One wiry, slightly tipsy fan leapt over the centerfield wall, somersaulted to the infield, did a parody of a batter at home, slid around third base and cartwheeled back out to the lower deck bleachers — dodging hefty security guards and Detroit's finest all the way. That's a "K" in my book, any day.

At the Old, Ballgame . . .

Like I said, if you can find a better pastime, find it. The fights, the chants, the cost and wait are all part of it. But the game's the thing. And in Detroit, that's enough. In my book, there's nothing nicer than a warm Friday night at Tiger Stadium. Unless it's a hot Saturday night at the game. Now, there's where the action really is. . .

MHS opposes dove hunting

Michigan's first dove hunt, scheduled to begin this fall, will not take place if the Michigan Humane Society can stop it in the courts.

In a law suit filed against the Michigan Natural Resources Commission and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Aug. 2, the authority of the NRC to create a new hunting season without prior legislative approval was challenged.

The Human Society says the NRC and DNR flagrantly disregarded the majority of Michigan citizens and taxpayers who sent the NRC many thousands of letters protesting the dove hunt.

The manner in which Michigan's mourning doves were reclassified as game birds from song birds back in 1980 was underhanded, to say the least, according to the Humane Society. The change, inserted in an omnibus hunting and licensing bill never received appropriate legislative discussion; yet it technically paved the way for the NRC so it could establish a dove hunting season without specific legislative approval, the Humane Society claims.

"By the DNR's own admission, there are no biological justifications for hunting doves, and Michigan's sportsmen groups have admitted in public testimony that they want to kill doves 'for target practice,'" according to MHS director David Wills.

The Michigan Humane Society, with more than 30,000 members and donors across the United States, has been deluged with pleas from across the state to take action against the proposed hunt. The Hu-

R. J. Jack Smalling of Ames, Iowa is looking for Hal Campbell Hudson, a former major league baseball player who once lived in Grosse Pointe and Detroit.

The 14-cent postcard Smalling sent requests information on Hudson, including a current address of home or work. If Hudson is deceased, a date of death and the name of next of kin is requested.

The reason for the request is in regards to a player research project, according to the post card.

Anyone with information, (or if you're reading this, Hal) send the information to Smalling at 2308 Van Buren Avenue, Ames, Iowa 50010. You can also call Smalling at 1 (515) 232-7599.

San Francisco Ballet

The company will perform Friday, Aug. 16, at 8 p.m. and Saturday, Aug. 17, at 2 and 8 p.m. at Meadow Brook. For tickets, call 377-2010.

DFT opens 25th season

Detroit Film Theatre's 25th season of first-run, short-run and world classics will open Friday, Aug. 16 with the Detroit premiere of the 1984 Spanish comedy, "What Have I Done To Deserve This!"

In Spanish with English subtitles, this tale of the adventures of an oddball family in modern Madrid will be shown at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 16 and 17, and at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 18, in the DIA auditorium.

Tickets at $2.50, and DFT's season discount coupon books at $17.50 for ten admissions valid for up to one year from date of purchase, are available in advance at the Art Institute ticket office and at the door. For information and Detroit Film Theatre's weekend movie listing, call the Art Institute ticket office at 832-2730, during regular business hours.

Other Detroit premieres include Elaine May's legendary comic melodrama "Mikey and Nicky," starring John Cassavetes and Peter Falk (Sept. 6-7); director George Stevens' tribute to his father "George Stevens: A Filmmaker's Journey" (Sept. 13-14); and "Dim Sum: A Little Bit of Heart" (Oct. 18) a new film by Wayne Wang.

Parisian company to perform here

Theatre Grottesco, a new international acting company based in Paris, will perform "The Insomniacs" Friday and Saturday, Aug. 23 and 24 at the Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson, phone 868-1347.

Showtime is 8 p.m. and tickets are $5. The Attic Theatre is co-hosting performances of "The Insomniacs" and will sponsor actor workshops to be taught by the Theatre Grottesco Company. Call Donna DiSante at 875-8285 for more information.

This unique company of actors incorporates elements of Commedia dell'Arte, European clown and street performance into a modern style of black humor and burlesque.

'Follow That Bird' is enjoyable summer fare

By Marian Trainor

Kids yes, but adults clapping because Big Bird of Sesame Street fame is finally rescued from Miss Finch who heads up the Miss Feathers adoption agency that seeks to place homeless birds with "their own kind for their own good?"

It happens. To begin with, many adults have become fond of the Sesame Street characters from watching them with their children. Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, Count von Count, Bert, Ernie, Cookie Monster, Mr. Snuffleupagus, Kermit the Frog, Bob, Gordon, Ollie, Susan, Maria, Linda and Luis. Also there is a perfectly integrated action between the humans and make-believe characters. Add to this cameo appearances by Chevy Chase as a bubbling TV news character, Waylon Jennings as a singing truck driver, Sandra Bernhard as a waitress in a brunch restaurant called the "Don't Drop In," Joe Flaherty and Dave Thomas and a couple of sleazy promoters and you have enough adult humor coupled with action and adventure to engage the interest and involvement of adults.

While adults will have a wonderful time rooting for Big Bird, children of all ages will be enchanted.

It all begins when Miss Finch convinces Big Bird that he is out of place on Sesame Street and belongs with other birds.

Big Bird bids a tearful goodbye to his friends and goes to live with a bunch of dodos, Daddy Dodo, Mommy Dodo and Donnie and Marie in the town of Ocean View, Ill. It doesn't take long for Big Bird to discover his mistake. He is completely out of place with "his own kind." Birds of a feather do not necessarily belong together.

Avi Dodos live in a high-priced aviary subdivision complete with a riding mower that keeps getting away from them and a swimming pool. They read Newsweek. It's quite a contrast to the lively multi-ethnic sidewalks of New York.

While the dodos sleep, Big Bird makes his escape, determined to get back to Sesame Street.

"It took two hours by plane to get here," he tells himself. "It will probably take three hours to walk back."

It is much longer and many adventures later before he gets back to his friends.

In the meantime, Miss Finch and Big Bird's friends are alerted to his disappearance. They all start off to find him - Miss Finch to bring him back to "where he belongs" and his friends to bring him home to Sesame Street.

Big Bird gets a lift on his way with a friendly truck driver, narrowly escapes capture by Miss Finch, but is finally waylaid by the Sneeze Brothers who paint him blue and exhibit him for money.

Big Bird's friends have some adventures of their own. Bert and Ernie lose control of their plane and have to fly upside down, there is a free-for-all in the restaurant when the waitress takes an order for tossed salad literally and a down-to-the-wire chase when Big Bird is hauled away in a truck just as he is about to be rescued.

Like all good films, "Follow That Bird" has several vignettes both humorous and touched with pathos that are memorable.

There are some good songs in it, too. Among them are "Easy-Going Day," "Upside Down World" and "No Road Too Long."

While the satire on undue emphasis on the proper social setting is obvious, more noteworthy is the message of the importance of friendship and love to whoever we are and wherever we live.

"Follow That Bird" is made to order for an enjoyable summer afternoon when you and the kids are looking for a great way to spend a couple of hours.

'Waiting for Godot' opens tomorrow

Trumbull Avenue Performing Arts Studio and Gallery opens Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot" Aug. 16 through Sept. 1. Performances run Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m.

Beckett's classic tragi-comedy explores two men's hopeful search for the elusive messenger, Godot. "Waiting for Godot" will be performed on the new arena stage at Trumbull Avenue, the only one of its kind in the Detroit area.

Timothy Love, a former member of the Hilberry Repertory Company, and Michael Barron, also an alumnus of Wayne State, are co-directing the production.

Jose Quintero, a Midwestern actor, is portraying the role of Estragon. He has worked with the San Quentin Drama Workshop (noted for working with Beckett himself), the Alice Liddell Theatre Company and is co-founder of The Willow Playhouse in Chicago.

Other cast members include Perry Mallett, owner of Trumbull Avenue; Tom Stanczyk, a Wayne State theater major and Christopher Newell, a Wayne State film maker.

For information and ticket reservations, call 832-7853. Tickets are $5 with discounts available for students, senior citizens and groups.

230 STEPHENS RD.
GROSSE POINTE FARMS
Now that you have seriously decided to down size to a beautiful 2 bedroom, 2 bath ranch, you must see this very uniquely situated home at the top of the Hill, but only 2 steps in from the attached garage. If you want quality and large rooms, this is it!
The home has a super sized dining room - 18'x16', library, family room and a kitchen to delight even the non-cook. The 1st floor laundry room is light and airy with adjoining half bath. The garage has hot and cold running water and is heated.
Now, as if that wasn't enough, it also has a carpeted basement party room with full stainless steel wet bar, a complete compact kitchen, lav and indoor barbecue. This home rates a "10".
Put this on your list and stop by on Sunday or can be shown by appointment.
