

Author discusses kids who have it all — and fail

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Healthy, achieving children are every parent's goal.

But parenting is getting more and more complex, said Bruce A. Baldwin, Ph.D., psychologist, author, expert on lifestyle management and positive parenting.

Baldwin spoke to a standing-room-only crowd of more than 800 people at Grosse Pointe North High School's Performing Arts Center last Tuesday.

"Parents today often wonder why Dick and Jane didn't succeed despite every advantage," Baldwin said. "The kids are from good homes; they have good parents with good incomes, they live in good neighborhoods."

Baldwin is the author of a book on parenting, "Beyond the Cornucopia Kids: How to Raise Healthy Achieving Children."

He said today's children are influenced by two curricula:

- Formal academic school-based curriculum. "This is the easy one," he said. "It's easy to monitor. Easy to track."

- The hidden curriculum. "This is the one they learn from their parents — 24 hours a day — seven days a week — 12 months a year. This is difficult to monitor." The hidden curriculum includes such qualities as self-reliance, accepting responsibility, setting goals, completing tasks, being compassionate, exhibiting good manners, showing respect for people and property, and performing difficult tasks in demanding situations.

Baldwin described kids who aren't getting a positive dose of the hidden curriculum values as the Cornucopia Kids. The metaphor is the mythical horn of plenty, a cornucopia filled with material things that spill out and provide opportunities for an effortless pursuit of the good life.

Baldwin's definition: "A Cornucopia Kid is a child who grows up with the expectation, based on years of direct experience in the home, that the good life will always be available for the asking without the need to develop personal accountability or achievement motivation."

His method for teaching the hidden curriculum — and avoiding the development of Cornucopia Kids — is to eliminate the perception, by kids, that the good life is freely theirs.

Baldwin advises parents to control their indulgence and to develop methods of teaching kids, through experience, such desirable traits as responsibility, compassion, persistence, self-esteem, money management, and the rewards of working toward long-term goals.

In other words, he said, kids must learn that the good stuff must be earned.

"No parent has to apologize for being affluent," he said. "Parents deserve everything they've earned. But just because they have it, they don't have to turn it over to their children. Regardless of income, parents must consider whether they're providing the right kinds of experiences for their kids."

Baldwin listed 10 characteristics of Cornucopia Kids:

- They demand the best. No second-rate or second-hand toys, clothes or material objects are acceptable for these children. They'll tell their parents so.

- They need constant stimulation from external sources. Television, organized sports and well-planned activities must be available to these children, or they'll say they're bored.

- They don't complete projects. Once the novelty and fun wear off, they move on to new activities, new hobbies, new projects.

- They have a deep need for acceptance by others. Social relationships are superficial and are often purchased with gifts and material goods.

- They lack compassion. Children are selfish and lack basic good manners.

- They don't take care of material things — their own and others. Possessions that get lost or broken have always been quickly fixed or replaced.

- They are self-indulgent. These children lack self-discipline. Procrastination and work avoidance become habits.

- They are deceitful. They learn that half-truths, blaming others, excuses, manipulation and lies work just as well as facing responsibilities and telling the truth.

- They have performance problems. When the going gets tough, the Cornucopia Kids haven't the self-confidence to face challenging situations.

- They are oriented to the present. These children haven't learned to sacrifice immediate pleasures for long-term goals.

Baldwin advised parents to make their children personally accountable for their mistakes. "Don't bail them out. Make them pay for what they break. Make them finish things."

Manners training is critical for careers, for good marriages, for

What if . . .

. . . the five Grosse Pointes, each retaining its own identity, were united under one local government, one public safety department, one court, just as they are now part of one school district?

The idea of consolidation has been raised from time to time and has, on at least two occasions, been studied in depth.

Proponents say the consolidation of services would save money and promote efficiency. Opponents fear the loss of local control and a blending of identities.

Staff writer Nancy Parmenter studied the budgets of seven cities and talked to local officials, planners and other experts. She has written an in-depth account of consolidation — and if, in this era of the merger, it's possible in the Pointes.

Her report begins on page 8A.

Haves vs. have-nots

Sixth-graders Lara Sfira and Emily Benfer of Grosse Pointe Academy share a sumptuous lunch in their school cafeteria. Sfira and Benfer were on the "have" side of a thin fence that divided the cafeteria from the "have-nots." The lunchtime exercise was part of the middle school's year-long examination of the problems of the homeless.

Details of the experiment and reactions of the students are on page 16A.

War Memorial can't legally restrict use to residents only

Liquor license decision postponed until next month

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

The attorney for the War Memorial Association said Monday night that the center cannot legally bar non-Grosse Pointers from using the facilities, even though the residents-only policy has been enforced for 40 years.

The revelation concerning the dubious legality of the Pointers-only rule — which is primarily used to limit wedding receptions to local families — surprised a standing-room-only crowd at the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council meeting during a public hearing concerning the issuance of a Class C liquor license to the War Memorial or one other applicant.

After a lengthy hearing from residents and representatives of the War Memorial and Amigos Restaurant, the City Council was unable to garner enough votes to take any action on the liquor license request and agreed to table the decision until its April 17 meeting.

On Jan. 23 the War Memorial asked the council to make one of two of the city's unused Class C liquor licenses available for application. The council agreed and set the March 6 public hearing for applicants and residents to present their views on who should get the license.

Other than the War Memorial, the only other applicant for the license was Amigos Restaurant, at 18310 Mack. Owner-operator Ed Bourke said he has been seeking a liquor license for five years.

He said a restaurant on Mack is a better use for a Class C liquor license. He said that if granted the license he would have to find a new location on Mack in the Farms because his landlord does not want a liquor license operating on his property.

Bourke questioned whether a non-profit organization can have a public liquor license. And he added that he pays taxes, just like all the other businesses up and down Mack.

The War Memorial wants a liquor license so that it can have more control over the dispensing and consumption of alcohol on its premises. Currently, Pointers who are having wedding receptions at the center have to bring in their own liquor, dispense it and take the leftover alcohol home.

Other groups meeting at the center tell its members to bring their own liquor — or, "brown bag it." Organizations that would like to sell alcohol by the glass have to obtain a 24-hour license and purchase their own liability insurance, which can run as much as $1,500 for a single day.

War Memorial officials say a liquor license would put them in charge of all alcohol use and reduce liability to the center.

"In my judgment," War Memorial President Mark Weber told the council, "if there is going to be alcohol at the War Memorial, doesn't it make sense to put the alcohol in the hands of the professionals instead of the users?"

War Memorial Chairman John Lewis said, "We believe the community and the War Memorial wants to control the use of liquor."

Opponents of the War Memorial's liquor license request — chiefly the newly formed Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association Inc. — believe it would be wrong for the center on Lakeshore to get a liquor license since it is in a residential area.

The property owners association also maintained that the issuance of the liquor license is not permissible under the tax-exempt community facilities zoning under which the non-profit center operates.

Wilber M. Brucker III, a director of the owners association, referred to a recent Michigan Liquor Control Commission refusal to grant a Class C license to a Detroit development that wanted to open a cafe that would be restricted to the development's residents only. He said the LCC ruled that if the cafe was not open to the general public, then a liquor license would not be granted.

Brucker presented city attorney Charles Hammond a copy of the state attorney general's opinion in favor of the LCC. He said the LCC would refuse the War Memorial a liquor license because of the center's residents-only policy.

War Memorial attorney John M. Rickel said that while the center restricts its uses to Grosse Pointers, the policy is not legally enforceable. He said that under the center's incorporation as a

Pointer of Interest Marty Jennings

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

On a recent plane trip, Marty Jennings found herself in what has become a typical situation for her. She sat down, smiled at her seatmate and began to talk, asking most of the questions and carrying the burden of the conversation. Then something strange happened.

"The gentleman — whom I'd discovered worked as a dentist — began to ask me about myself. I was shocked. As a chaplain, I'm used to doing all the asking," Jennings said. "It took me a while to recover."

Jennings, a 25-year resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, has often called upon her ability to adapt to unusual situations. It helped her raise six children and remained with her 16 years ago when she decided to make a significant change in her life.

"At that time, I was in the charismatic renewal movement. I began to get a sense for helping people. Volunteering through my church, St. Lucy's, was the best way to do that," she says.

As a parish minister at a nearby nursing home, Jennings began to counsel a woman who had been unjustly committed to the residence. She obtained a psychiatrist for the woman, helping her prove to the court that she was competent to make decisions about her own care.

"Because the nursing home and the woman's family fought the decision, I was worried that my involvement might jeopardize my church's standing with the nursing home. So I stopped going and began to volunteer down at Detroit Receiving," Jennings recalls.

good relationships, he said. "Turn off the TV set. TV is a privilege, not a right. Kids should never have a TV set in their bedrooms because it isolates them. There's already a premium on family time today."

Baldwin advocated teaching children how to manage money; how to save; how to earn money for material possessions they want.

He drew applause from the audience when he recounted the priorities set by some very wealthy parents for their children. "These parents said, in effect: 'We're rich but you're not.'"

"Stop handing out money indiscriminately," he said. "Children should have chores. They should be helping out. Even if you have maids and butlers."

"Children should have enough money for certain fixed expenses — lunches, church offerings, school supplies or whatever the parents and children decide is necessary. Give them that amount — and a little extra."

"— not enough extra to allow the child buy everything he wants, but enough so that he must make choices about allocating his income. Then structure in some odd jobs so he can earn more."

After creating reasonable material expectations for children, Baldwin suggested matching dollar for dollar an 8-year-old's savings for a new bike. "If he earns some of the money for the bike he wants, he'll be proud of it;

he'll take care of it; and he'll learn money management besides."

Baldwin said good money management should be part of the hidden curriculum. Kids should have savings accounts and parents should mandate a certain percentage of the children's earnings that must be saved.

"Basically," he said, "parents have to say to themselves, 'I have it to give. The kids know I have it to give. But am I going to give it?' Be strong. Kids will never refuse something for nothing. If lines are going to be drawn, parents will have to draw them."

There's two payoffs for this, he said. "You'll be better parents."

"And you'll save a bunch of money."

Linda Schneider, president of the Grosse Pointe PTO Council, said she was pleased with community turnout at the Baldwin lecture.

"He was enthusiastically received," she said. "It's important to understand why we asked Bruce Baldwin to come here. People have been telling us that they're aware of the problems of substance abuse and alcohol abuse, but they've said 'give us the tools to do something.'"

"If parents practice the hidden curriculum of success, our children will be less likely to turn to alcohol and other drugs. They'll have the skills to deal with peer pressure."

Schneider said she heard positive comments from those who attended the lecture. "Baldwin's book seems to be a package of ideals that many of us hold — but he's verbalized them," she said. "They're common sense. Parents need to know that what they thought, was right after all."

Bruce Baldwin's appearance was sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Public Schools, the Grosse Pointe PTO Council, the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment and the Grosse Pointe News. In addition all public school PTOs contributed, as did Our Lady Star of the Sea School and University Liggett Upper School.

Correction

When we err, our credibility is at stake and we want to set the record straight. If there's an error of fact in any story, call the newsroom at 882-0294. Corrections will be printed on this page every week.

The anatomy drawing class listed in last week's paper listed the fee incorrectly. The demonstrations Thursday, March 9, and Thursday, March 16, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the War Memorial are $25 for one session or $40 for both sessions.

The mother referred to in last week's "I Say" column by reporter John Minnis called last week to explain a couple of inaccuracies she said appeared in the column.

She said she was not following the alleged sex offender as reported in the column. She said she was on her way home from running errands when she spotted a car that looked like the vehicle described in a letter sent home by the Grosse Pointe Public School System in January.

The mother, who said she didn't want her name used, said she slowed down to look at the man's vehicle, but the man spotted her and started following her.

For safety, she went straight to the Farms police station. She thought the man would stop following her, but instead he followed her right into the station. She said she went into the bathroom at the station for her safety, not knowing what the man would do.

She said she was at no time engaged in a surveillance of the man.

Verify situation wanted ads

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Those who place situation wanted ads on the classified pages of the Grosse Pointe News are being urged to take care.

Situation wanted ads are those in which someone advertises himself or herself to be hired, whether for babysitting or landscaping, or any number of occupations.

Last summer, those who advertised their babysitting services in that section of the paper began receiving phone calls from a woman who was interested in hiring them, according to Anne Silva, classified assistant manager.

The woman would give an address and a phone number and set up an appointment. The address was non-existent and the phone number was wrong.

She also took out an ad for babysitting services with the Grosse Pointe News and asked those interested to write to a box number at the paper. When she was billed by the Grosse Pointe News, the letter was returned because there was no such address.

The calls from this woman stopped, after the classified department figured out who was making them and warned her to stop.

The calls have resumed, Silva said, and she suggests people should check things out before going on an interview.

"People should call the number and verify the information before going anywhere," Silva said.

Grosse Pointes are home to two candidates for U.S. Senate

Dingeman runs on business sense

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Jim Dingeman says he is the candidate for all those people who are tired of "professional politicians." He calls himself a progressive conservative who will get his support from the people who own small businesses and "know what it's like to meet a payroll," and who realize that the government has grave problems which cannot be solved by rhetoric.

Born in Detroit, Dingeman has lived in Grosse Pointe since he was 5. His father, James H. Dingeman, was the mayor of Grosse Pointe Farms from 1975 until his death in office in 1986. ("He was the conscience of the community," Dingeman says of his father.) More members of his political family include a grandfather and two uncles who have served on the bench in Michigan. (One still does.)

"Even as a child I was involved with getting signatures and petitions," he said.

He has a degree from Hillsdale College and has worked in corporate finance in Detroit for a number of years. He is one of the owners of Griggs Steel Co. in Oak Park. It provides steel to tool and die shops throughout the country.

He also owns a water company in Colorado Springs, Colo., that provides municipal water. That company has been hailed as a model for the way it handles wastewater, and has been the subject of articles praising it.

In addition Dingeman is a pilot and a member of the Screen Actors Guild and has worked as a stunt man and precision driver in movies and commercials.

He has been active as a family man, too, he said. The twice-divorced father of seven children has coached Little League in the Pointes, and has been a member of Indian Guides for 18 years. He was active in Michigan's Victory '88, which helped put George Bush in office.

"In the last few years, I've placed more emphasis on family business," the 44-year-old Dingeman said. "I've reached a time in my life that with my background in finance, real estate, water and land development, small business ownership and raising seven kids that I feel I can bring a lot of experience into the political sphere. Last year I was encouraged to run by friends in the state and in Washington. I was really flattered."

Dingeman filed — probably the first candidate to do so for the 1990 election — last week.

He spoke at last month's state Republican Convention to introduce himself to the party, and said he received some good support.

Dingeman said he believes Michigan and the United States

It may seem a little early to be discussing the 1990 senatorial election, but to two Grosse Pointers — both Republicans who want Sen. Carl Levin out of office — it is just around the corner. The two men are considered serious candidates for the office, along with Richard DeVos of Grand Rapids and Bill Schuette of Sanford. They have different backgrounds — one is a businessman and one has had a long political career — and they're looking for their support from the great middle who they both say they represent. On this page are two profiles of the men and their views.

can benefit from Republican representation.

"I think we will have much more cooperation if we elect a senator who will interface with the administration, not fight it," he said.

"The state needs to be represented by someone who knows about cost-containment, with economically sound programs that have to make sense in both their benefits and their costs. I don't think we can afford (Sen. Carl Levin's liberal views," he adds. "We can't afford those (social) giveaway programs, and that's what they are, they aren't incentive programs, they're just giveaways."

So he has been and will continue to go throughout the state introducing himself to the people. "It's a slow process and that's why I have to start early to get my message out."

That message is that the government needs to be run like a business, "it's not a charitable organization," and that changes need to be made to make the country fiscally responsible.

"The areas of education, the war on drugs, the environment, and the defense question," Dingeman said, will be the country's highest priorities.

"We need to have good education available to everybody. I was lucky, I got a good education, but there are many people who cannot get one. That needs to be addressed. People also need to be educated on the free enterprise system."

Studies show that many high schoolers don't know what profits are, and Dingeman feels that if the country is to keep on top in business, its schools need to teach more than just the basics.

• Dingeman said he would be in support of using the military "in well defined ways" to help curb the flow of illegal drugs into the country. He also believes the message against drug use should be brought to children at a younger age with more intensive education. "The war on drugs is not a cliché. It is an absolute horror."

• The environment needs to be addressed with a realistic approach, Dingeman says. "We have to realize that we have created a tremendous time bomb in the environment which we will begin to solve now."

• The Defense Department needs to be looked at extensively, red tape needs to be cut, and support for so-called freedom fighters throughout the world should continue. "I'm in support of anybody who wants their independence, and the opportunity to dictate their own lives."

Another area that needs immediate attention is the nation's failing savings and loan industry, which is in need of an overhaul, with new safeguards instituted to assure that it never happens again.

Dingeman's children are in full support of his candidacy, and he said he consulted them extensively, assuring them that they will not lose their time with him. He plans on taking them on the campaign trail with him. "It will be a learning experience for both of us."

He believes his support will come from middle-of-the-road conservatives, who want the country run by people like them, not by the professional politicians. "The country needs participation by the entrepreneur politician. People will relate to me, and the experience I have, not only businesswise but in other areas. It's going to make more sense to them than some radical left-wing or right-wing approach."

Durant to run on political experience

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

W. Clark Durant III talks and acts like he's running for office, but when he gets right down to it, he varies between saying "when I run," and "if I run."

"It really is when I run, I just haven't announced it yet," Durant said.

He has a pamphlet "Meet Clark Durant..." which shows him in pictures with his family, and Republican stalwarts Ronald Reagan, George Bush and Jack Kemp. In the pamphlet is a short history and quotes from publications and individuals talking about his work and extolling his experience in government.

Those who have known him for a long time will notice something very different about his appearance, too — his trademark bow tie has been replaced by the more common variety.

"The sacrifices we make for the U.S. Senate," he joked. "There's one too many bow ties in the Senate," he added referring to Illinois Senator and 1988 Democratic presidential candidate Paul Simon.

"Most people view people who wear bow ties as college professors, but I want to be seen as a man of action," the 39-year-old Durant said. "And I don't want my bow tie in the way of discussing ideas."

Durant's ideas have been controversial, and have gotten him in trouble with the legal profession — of which he has been a member since he received a law degree from the University of Notre Dame in 1976 — but have also earned him praise.

In 1985, Durant was appointed chairman of the board of the Legal Services Corp., a federal program which provides free legal advice on civil cases to the poor; he had been with the agency since 1984.

He, quite controversially, told the government and the legal profession that while Legal Services was a good idea, in practice it was not doing what it was originally intended to and instead was making lawyers wealthy on federal money.

The president of the American Bar Association called for Durant's resignation, editorials were written pro and con about what he said, and his speech which called for the reforms was printed in the magazine, "Vital Speeches of the Day."

The ABA president eventually took back his call for Durant's resignation, but once again Durant found himself in hot water at Legal Services when he called for a reduction for funding of the agency. He said the funding cut would not make it any less effective.

After that a few Democratic congressmen charged that he had made a number of personal phone calls and taken trips on Legal Services money. During hearings on these charges, he was exonerated of any wrongdoing.

W. Clark Durant III

ing. In fact, it turned out the government owed him money.

"I think it's important to challenge the conventional wisdom and the status quo," he said. "In the same way I challenged my own profession, I will challenge the Senate on its hypocrisy."

The race for the United States Senate is his newest challenge. "The election laws are geared to protect the incumbents," he said. "But I think I can win. I wouldn't run if I didn't think I had a chance."

Durant said that although he is known in state Republican circles — he was national co-chair of the Jack Kemp for President campaign — the low name-recognition factor is not something he is worrying about.

He said he will be traveling the state for the next 16 months meeting with people, testing the grassroots support and identifying sources of support. He expects the campaign to cost at least $5 million.

"If I get out in front on the issues, the name identification comes with that," he said.

The issues that need to be addressed are those which have been talked about since the last election: education, drugs, jobs and support of the so-called freedom fighters throughout the world.

"In education, I would like to see more competition, and more parent choice in schools." He would also like to create better conditions to attract better teachers to the schools and promote better leadership by the administration.

• "Drugs are the scourge of our generation. We are losing a generation, and this drug problem should be treated as seriously as a threat to our national security." He is in support of the death penalty for drug kingpins.

• "We need to create more job opportunities." To be more competitive, Durant says there needs to be more free trade, because "free trade brings growth."

• "We must always be on the side of people who yearn to be free." That means helping the blacks in South Africa, funding the contras and the Angolan "freedom fighters" and giving moral and political support to those who are striving toward democracy.

But Durant says he is willing to listen to the people and see what their concerns are.

"I want to listen, and I want to learn," he says. "I think I am able to reach the great middle. I've been involved in politics my whole life. I think I can get the support in non-Republican areas because I've demonstrated a willingness to work with all sorts of people. I'm a populist. I feel you ought to do things when you can to make a difference in the lives of little people."

Durant said his best asset is his wife of 15 years, Susan. They have four children, ranging in age from 5 to 12.

He added that he consulted his family extensively on whether or not to run for office, and if it weren't for their support, he wouldn't have done it.

"It's going to be very tough on the family," he said. "But we talked about it a long time, and they support me."

"They understand that I'm looking to make a difference. I'm doing this not because I seek a job, but because I want to do a job."

Parents told: prepare kids for real world

Two quick conclusions came to mind last week as we left the North High School Performing Arts Center after hearing Dr. Bruce Baldwin discuss the joys and sorrows of parenting today.

The first was that many Grosse Pointe parents must be concerned about ways of helping their children meet the challenges of today's society when so many turn out not to pay such close attention to the speaker's advice.

Second, Baldwin's common-sensical advice for parents everywhere, and especially in the Pointes, was that they should help prepare their children for the real world and avoid converting them into Cornucopia kids by over-indulgence.

At the start, it is worthwhile repeating Baldwin's definition of a Cornucopia Kid: "A child with the expectation, based on years of experience in the home, that the good life will always be available for the taking without the need to develop personal accountability or achievement motivation."

As we've said, there are such kids in the Pointes. Yet with both parents often employed outside the home, it is often difficult for a busy mother and father to find the time to inculcate in their children the values and skills that they require to become healthy, achieving adults and win success in the real world.

Some parents even provide a "Cornucopia Cocoon," giving their children almost everything they want, only to find that the Cornucopia Kids suffer culture shock when they strike out on their own and discover the harsh realities of the commercial world.

Baldwin warned that parents should monitor not only the curriculum taught in the schools and the home but also the hidden curriculum that the child learns outside the home to make sure that the values of the home and the values of the world match.

To emphasize the importance of training in values and skills, Dr. Baldwin pointed out that a child's I.Q. has little to do with his after-school achievements and that, in fact, there is no correlation between a high I.Q. test score and success in the market place.

That being so, he recommended that parents stress character-building in the home. And he warned that parents have to be strong enough to deny children what they want when both children and the parents know that parents often have much more they could give.

What Dr. Baldwin was stressing, of course, was the importance of teaching self-denial and new values to replace the child's early motivation: to maximize pleasure and minimize pain. As a child grows older, he should learn to replace his aim of having fun, pleasure and immediate gratification with the more sophisticated system of postponing gratification and working toward achievement without immediate payoff.

Among Dr. Baldwin's other recommendations to parents were to avoid handing out money indiscriminately, setting allowances that are reasonably commensurate for the labor or chores performed, controlling the use of television and making it clear that its use is a privilege and not a right, and requiring that children learn good manners.

He also urged parents to set completion as a reasonable expectation in any endeavor, make children personally accountable for their actions, help them create reasonable material expectations and teach them sound money management, which means giving children the opportunity to earn and also teaching them to save some proportion of what they earn.

Well, there was much more good advice and common sense in what Baldwin had to say. But it is encouraging that so many concerned Pointe parents found the time to hear wise and helpful advice about the ways to raise healthy, achieving children without over-indulging them and creating Cornucopia Kids.

Consolidate the 5 Pointes?

Over the years the Grosse Pointe News has often proposed partial or full consolidation of the five Pointes into one municipal government, but this paper carries what we think is the most complete examination of the subject ever made.

It is the work of Nancy Parmenter, staff writer, who interviewed dozens of Pointe officials, talked with Michigan experts on municipal government, consulted scores of documents and sought the opinions of many Pointe residents about the possibility of merger.

Based on her study, her conclusion is that "maybe" the Pointes would be better off at least with respect to costs and taxes, if the five governments could be consolidated into one municipal government.

As we've learned in the past, however, neighborhood identity is important in all of the Pointes. Residents tend to be proud of their municipality regardless of where they live. As Dick Kay of the War Memorial and Ms. Parmenter: "Each resident thinks he lives in the best place in Grosse Pointe."

Ms. Parmenter's study shows that the Pointes operate under a combined general fund budget of more than $27 million this fiscal year for a population of about 52,000. That combined budget is higher than costs of two similar-sized communities, Farmington Hills and East Lansing, but much of the difference is accounted for by the Pointes' higher spending for the administration of five municipal entities, plus the higher costs of public safety and park maintenance.

In effect, the high costs in the Pointes reflect the high level of services the five municipalities offer to their residents. Those services, along with the excellent quality of the Grosse Pointe public schools, are among the reasons given for the popularity of the Pointes as a residential community.

In her study, Ms. Parmenter also emphasizes that the Pointes already engage in many forms of cooperation in providing public services. It ranges from the single school and library system to the incinerator authority as well as to programs for volunteer probation, youth assistance and a central police radio service. The latter brings about close cooperation among the police and fire departments, now consolidated in each of the Pointes into one public safety department.

Yet a number of cooperative proposals have been dropped in recent years for lack of support. They include such ventures as a district court, a shared forester, youth officers in the high schools, a central police dispatcher and central police lockup, unified parks and recreation and a senior housing study. All failed for lack of unanimity among Pointe governments.

One point was not covered by Ms. Parmenter's survey. If the Pointes were consolidated, they might find it easier to win legislative approval for restoring the community to one congressional district in some future reapportionment. In 1982, the Pointes were gerrymandered into two districts, both dominated by Democrats, a fact which has made it difficult for the traditionally Republican Pointes to win much voice in Washington.

Overall, however, we think Ms. Parmenter's study ought to offer Pointe residents constructive ideas about the possibility of consolidating their municipal governments. If the time for merger has not yet arrived, it could be more feasible in the future. It could even be seen as one means of offsetting the steadily rising costs of the schools, libraries and even the municipal services that Pointe residents prize so highly.

Nostalgia for an old friend

Buying a new car is usually a thrilling experience from the time you first note the new car odor until you take your first test drive, but there is nostalgia, too, for the old car you trade in on the new model.

Parting with the old car is like losing an old friend, especially when you recall the people you've taken and the friends and relatives who have been passengers. In our case, a 1975 Cutlass Supreme had ferried us from Michigan to Maine and Minnesota for family visits and vacations. It drove well and rode well, even over Michigan's so-called smooth highways.

When it was finally retired, it had been driven only about 63,000 miles but, like its owners, was beginning to show its age and wear apart at the seams. Again like its owners, the eight-cylinder motor still ran well even though its exterior showed the effects of battling Michigan's snow and ice.

Buying a new car is expensive these days—a fact that increases the nostalgia for the old one. The Cutlass cost just over $10,000, the new Pontiac Bonneville more than three times as much. The old one weighed 3,975 pounds, manufactured back in 1975 when cars cost about $1 per pound of weight. The new one weighs 600 pounds less, and while equipped with gadgets and computers never heard of in 1975, still doesn't ride quite as easily because of its lighter weight and shorter wheelbase.

Americans, it is said, still have an ongoing love affair with their automobiles. That's probably true. For many people, buying a car is one of the largest investments they make, aside from acquiring a home. And while it no doubt should be regarded as only a form of transportation, it often is seen as a family friend.

And what changes the car has wrought in our society. It gave average families mobility they never had before, made suburbia and exurbia possible and in the process helped de-populate the big cities, pioneered new methods of mass production and sales, created millions of new jobs and, among other things, helped produce the taxes that finance the streets and highways that city, state and local governments build and maintain to keep the traffic flowing.

No wonder a new car represents a continuing love affair as well as a symbol of modern industrial America. But the old one is still missed.

War Memorial should get liquor license

To the Editor:
 On Feb. 16, you published an article concerning a new residential group that is forming to fight the acquisition of a liquor license by the War Memorial. I believe that the War Memorial should be allowed to secure this license, once and for all, and end the uncontrolled use of liquor at this community center.

First of all, in order to have a liquor license, the War Memorial must also get liability insurance. This insurance places the burden of control of the consumption of liquor on the War Memorial and places them at risk of losing everything if they do not "follow the rules" carefully.

Secondly, with a liquor license, this establishment will be able to make additional money which, in the long run, can be used to improve the community center and what it can offer to its users. This will encourage more people to use the facility for various occasions which, in turn, will improve the image of the center and help them attract more community involvement.

Finally, since users are currently able to acquire a 24-hour liquor license for independent use or sale at the War Memorial, the only change that a permanent license would create is one of control. I believe that the War Memorial would follow legal regulations more vigorously than the independent users would.

Sales tax increase is terrific idea

To the Editor:
 I agree with the article on How Much Is Enough In School Taxes, printed the week of Feb. 24. A 50 percent increase in the state sales tax is a terrific idea to pay for the state's prior school property, tax relief, grams. By raising the tax, Grosse Pointe residents can get the better education it once had in 1983-84 school year.

Why was it hidden?

To the Editor:
 The one thing I expect from a newspaper is timeliness. The article I am referring to is "Park youth gets jail term for westside boy's death." I can hardly call printing the article one year after the accident was committed timeliness.

The father of the boy who died was appalled to hear that no one on our side of town had heard of the incident. I understand that maybe you couldn't print the name of the boy, but you could have printed the article and referred to him as "a Park youth."

I feel the boy's sentence was lenient enough as it was, and see no reason why it should be any easier for him. Would you please tell me why this was hidden from our community for so long?

Pass the salt

Salt is a four-letter word. It ranks up there with sugar, red meat, fried foods, fast foods, eggs, white bread and red dye No. 2.

You know that and I know that. The health police have so inculcated us with their gospel that it has come to the point where I've apologized to dinner guests for the strip steaks I served. At nearly $9 a pound now, that's strip as in strip your wallet of spending cash.

So except for rare occasions, I've given up the red meat, sugar, et al, but I will not loosen the death grip I have on my salt shaker.

Salt is not merely a seasoning, you understand, it's a way of life. It was being used as a seasoning and preserving agent before man became upright. The Greeks, Romans, Hebrews and Christians regularly used salt in their religious rites and it is still used in churches today.

It was used as a medium of exchange. And the word salary is derived from the Latin salarium, which referred to the salt allotment issued to Roman soldiers.

Forget that it's used in dyeing and in the manufacture of soap and glass. Forget that it's used in making prisms and lenses for instruments that study infrared radiation.

The plain fact is that it just makes everything taste better.

When my husband was in the hospital following surgery, the heart unit had a private dining room for its patients and family members. So every day after work, I would go down and for $3, I would have a Heart Smart meal with him.

The presentation would make any chef proud — dark green broccoli, orange sections on the entree, snowy white potatoes, colorful salad. It was like a painting — meant to be admired, but not touched. How anything that looked so good could be so devoid of taste is beyond me. I might as well have been eating cardboard.

That was also my first experience with a salt substitute. It was my last. Not only is that stuff bitter, it had a list of restrictions printed on the packet that would make anyone think twice before using it.

Face it, those tiny white grains have become ingrained in our consciousness. The Bible refers to the salt of the earth; Shakespeare wrote about the salt of our youth. We say someone is not worth his salt or we tell someone that some information should be taken with a grain of salt.

We salt away some money for a rainy day and then there's the all-capital letters SALT for Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. There may even be some Old Salts taking part in the SALT talks and I bet their talk is salty at times, too.

Now the health police want us to eliminate it from our diet. Just like that — all of those years of history swept off the table, out of the kitchen, banished forever. Now I know that for some people, salt is bad, and therefore, the people around me don't have to put up with any second-hand salt. I don't use it in cooking anymore, but what I do with my own plate is between me and my doctor and he has never brought up the subject.

I even bought some light salt once. It's mixed with potassium chloride and claims the user is only getting half the sodium of table salt. Light salt is a misnomer, however. You have to use it heavy to get enough to do any good.

So here I am, pro-salt in an anti-salt society. It may even come to salt and no-salt sections in restaurants. But I don't mind. I figure I'm at a point in my life where I need all the preservatives I can get.

Yesterday's news

Some Grosse Pointe News subscribers got a double whammy last week.

And hey — we don't want to be blamed for what wasn't our fault.

Editorial, classified and advertising was completed on time Tuesday evening about 6:30 p.m. as usual. Our proofed and perfected pages were delivered to the printer on time.

The paper is usually printed Tuesday night; mailed Wednesday.

Readers peruse the news at their leisure anytime after their mail carrier comes by on Thursday.

But oops. The printing press broke. That was one day's delay.

Then, by mistake, some copies of the Grosse Pointe News with a 48224 zip and some with a 48230 zip code were sent to the wrong post office. Another day's delay for those people.

That's why some of you didn't get your Grosse Pointe News until Friday or Saturday or Monday.

Our circulation and classified departments said they answered hundreds of calls from people who missed us. We're flattered.

One young mother said she always puts her twins to bed for a nap, then settles down to read the Grosse Pointe News. The twins were asleep and for Pete's sake, where was the News?

Another caller threatened to sue.

A man double-parked his car and left his wife waiting outside our office while he ran inside to find out what happened to his paper. "We just can't do our shopping on Tuesdays without reading the Grosse Pointe News first," he said.

Another caller wanted to come in and pick up a free copy of the paper.

We're sorry. We hope this never happens again.

How to get votes

While being interviewed by a Grosse Pointe News reporter at the Pancake House in Grosse Pointe Woods, W. Clark Durant III, attorney, (who has not yet declared that he's running for the U.S. Senate) was out gathering grassroots support anyway — just in case.

He left the interview — mid-sentence — and walked over to another table, where a young woman had been waiting with paperwork spread out on the table for quite some time.

She had just been joined by a man who appeared to be her boss.

Durant introduced himself. He praised the woman's punctuality and organization.

"I don't know what she makes," Durant said to the man, "but double her salary."

Grosse Pointes don't want to make the union legal —but working together is more in cities' style

They stretch like a necklace along the lake shore, the five small towns collectively known as Grosse Pointe. Five separate places, some say five separate characters.

Five city halls, five police chiefs, five park departments, five garbage pickups. That's a lot of tax to pay for five separate characters.

Is it worth it? Would we be better off with one consolidated Grosse Pointe? The answer, depending on whom you ask, is a resounding 'maybe.'

"It's time to look at consolidation, at least at some services," says John Prost, formerly a member of the Grosse Pointe Park City Council. "There's got to be a savings."

"We've studied consolidation every 20 years," said John Crawford, former Park city manager and now manager in Bloomfield Hills. But the studies gather dust in a drawer.

"With our history, my initial first blush (regarding consolidation) would be 'no,'" said Shores President Edmund Brady. "Each community has its own identity and has existed that way for all these years."

How important is this separate identity? Does it exist outside the minds of city officials? Is it worth paying extra money for?

Travel a mile outside the Grosse Pointes and no one will see any difference between the communities. People are more likely to be confused by talk of Shores, Park, Woods, City, Farms.

Inside the Pointes, people are likely to describe their city in boosterish terms like pride in community, tradition, close ties — qualities that apply to all the communities. "Each resident thinks he lives in the best place in Grosse Pointe," says Dick Kay of the War Memorial.

Word has it that the latest In/Out list has Birmingham Out and Grosse Pointe Woods In. Woods councilwoman Jean Rice believes in the differences between the Pointes.

"The Woods is up-and-coming," she said, "but people who live in the Farms, for instance, are very proud of it — it's a status symbol."

On the more painful side, and ignoring recent trends, is the negative assessment of the Park by some Pointers. "I'm afraid the other Grosse Pointes may regard the Park as their poor relation," said councilman Vernon Ausherman.

No one has ever measured the importance of community identity. In considering the advantages and disadvantages of consolidation, "it's a question whether neighborhood identity would take precedence over the possibility of saving on taxes," said one official.

"There's no right answer," said Harold Wolman, interim director of the Center for Urban Studies at Wayne State University. "It's a question of what people value. There are credible arguments on both sides."

Ultimately it becomes a political question — who wins and loses and do you like the outcome better than what you had before.

Cooperative efforts on the rise

Ask about evidence of the cooperation between the five Grosse Pointes and everyone mentions the mayors' prayer breakfast. But that is only the outward and visible sign of the inward and practical cooperation.

In reality, the governments in the Pointes recognize that cooperation for economy of scale is vital.

"When a function of government gets too expensive for a city to afford, you are driven to cooperation," said Park councilman Vernon Ausherman.

The communities have been bonded together for more than 20 years in an incinerator authority. More recently, they have joined in programs for volunteer probation, youth assistance and a central police radio service.

"The mayors get together on a regular basis," said Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm. "Every two months we meet to discuss things of mutual interest. Most recently, we've focused on problems at the incinerator."

The discovery that the incinerator ash contained toxic materials in a recent test has pulled the communities together to find a solution. There is general agreement among city officials that, in spite of its problems, the incinerator has been — and will continue to be — a benefit to the community.

"I think maybe we're headed toward a bigger, longer cooperative effort at recycling (to remove toxic recyclables from the incinerator waste stream)," Ausher said. "That authority has been to our advantage."

Park Mayor Palmer Heenan said the mayors' meetings have benefited everyone, particularly regarding the incinerator authority. "The cities are kind of helpless in a sense," he said. "We lack the scientific expertise. The legislature must tell us which way to go."

"But we're responsible for organizing our communities to accomplish these things."

Heenan said the level of cooperation has increased in the last few years. "There used to be a negative kind of competition where we wouldn't talk to the others," he said. "Now each of us gets wonderful ideas from the other communities."

"The mayors are all exciting people, proactive, aggressive. We compete to do the best for our communities — and to brag about them."

Although the five public safety departments, unlike the incinerator, remain separate functions, there is cooperation among them. "The interrelations between police departments has been wonderful," said Shores President Edmund Brady. "There's common coverage and backup and the chiefs work together for uniform handling of problems."

Of common concern, but not yet addressed jointly, is the lake shore, Brady said. The Shores has commissioned a coastal engineering study of accreted lands along the shore. Similar sand deposits are building up near the Farms Pier Park, the Yacht Club and Gaukler Point, he said.

The study will attempt to predict the depositing process, as well as provide useful information on water levels. All of the cities have had to alternately raise their docks and dredge their marinas because of fluctuations in lake depth.

"Our concern is, what does the future hold?" Brady said. "Is it an ebb and flow of Mother Nature? Is it predictable?"

Woods Councilwoman Jean Rice has often promoted joint efforts among the cities. A mere gleam in her mind's eye right now is possible pooling for insurance purchase.

"We're all talking about incredible increases in Blue Cross," she said. "If we all got together, maybe we could save money. But it's hardly on the ground yet."

Rice is also backing a cooperative program for assisted transportation. With matching funds from the state transportation department, the cities could provide rides to doctor or hospital for residents unable to drive themselves. A board to regulate the program already exists, but there are currently no funds.

"So far, this particular one has been easy," Rice said. "We haven't asked for funds, just agreement from everybody that this is a neat idea."

Cooperation on specific, limited programs is relatively easy to achieve. Every Pointe community was willing to join in a study on ways to prevent expansion of Detroit's City Airport. But cooperation has its limits.

"Some cooperation is starting from necessity," Rice said, "but the Pointes are so territorial. Each has such different concepts and wants to pursue its own identity."

"When you ask for cooperation in a really big way, they don't want to give it up."

Living together as one happy family

Three joint reports have all favored consolidation of the Pointes.

What difference would it make?

There would apparently be some tax savings simply from eliminating the duplication of administrative positions. There might be further savings through consolidating services into one location.

Look for some unhappy judges, mayors, city managers and police chiefs who would be out of a job. But don't shed too many tears.

"The loss of a job isn't a big consideration," says former Park City Manager John Crawford. "You have some pretty high-powered guys who could easily find another job. I did."

To maintain the same level of service, police and fire coverage would probably remain the same, with personnel and equipment stationed at the same five locations, and administration centralized.

But what to do with the five city halls?

We asked several urban planners whose firms do business with the Pointes to do a little dreaming about a combined Grosse Pointe. Two felt dreaming doesn't mix with business, and declined. The other two gave us some guidelines — but from opposite professional viewpoints.

There is disagreement in the profession about the viability of scattering city services in various locations: "I don't think, in terms of physical structures, that consolidation would be any problem," one said. "The fact that the buildings are scattered around the community isn't a problem; police functions, DPW, courts quite often are located away from the city administrative offices.

"And some of the older buildings aren't a problem either — rehabbing is generally cheaper than starting new."

"You pick the most flexible one and make that city hall. Then you put the police in one, maybe a library in one, sell off one or two as office complexes, maybe use one for county satellite services."

For a differing view: "None of the city halls today have adequate space to do the job (of providing all the city services)," said the other planner. "They work like a bell for the size job they have, but none of them are facilities that could serve as a central facility."

Asked if using one building for administration, one for police, one for the DPW would be a good idea, he said. "East Detroit tried that because they don't have enough land, and they're commuting all the time. It's very inefficient."

He said some functions, like police, fire and DPW, would have to be distributed throughout the city, however, even though their administration should be centralized.

"From the administrative standpoint, we could have a central city manager," he added. "We have several who could do the job nicely."

Replanning the Grosse Pointes from the ground up would be a Herculean task, he said. "It's easy to go to the textbooks and say what a stupid arrangement you have here, but we do a lot of things with commonality."

"There's no quick fix. You can't write a position paper on this in a month. It would take two years of serious study."

District court: Still controversial

NEARLY every Grosse Pointe

Pointe first looked into a district court. But it has been studied at least twice.

"The first time we looked at it, an audit firm study showed that it would be more expensive," said former Grosse Pointe Park City Manager John Crawford. "But some of the costs attributed to the municipal courts were questionable. The costs couldn't be accurately determined."

Three or four years ago, the Park tried the idea again, Crawford said. This time, participation would have been voluntary and the municipal courts would not have been abolished wholesale. The concept failed because of disagreement over how to select the judge and concern over financial participation by the other communities.

Crawford still thinks the idea is good. "I like to see the separation of the judicial branch from the municipal," he said. "It shouldn't be political."

Although auditors and accountants seem unable to determine the costs with any accuracy, Crawford is convinced that a district court would be economical.

"I don't know of a court in Michigan that loses money," he said. "Communities are concerned about losing local revenues, but most revenues are from parking, which they'd still have."

Resistance to a district court is probably political rather than financial, some officials believe.

"Most judges and attorneys are in favor of a district court, but the politicians aren't," said Park Councilman Vern Ausherman. "Lots of these communities find their little municipal courts quite profitable — and judges like to be judges. . . There are areas that compel consolidation, and the first one is district court."

"These little rinky-dink courts of ours are outmoded," Ausherman said he believes that five municipal courts cost more than one district court and that the state would pick up most of the cost.

The idea is disputed by some. "We've all fought district court — it's one of the best decisions we've ever made in terms of cost to residents," said Shores village President Ed Brady. "All five Pointes are running their local courts much cheaper."

Brady said he opposes the district concept because the state doesn't always come through with its financial participation, judges make decisions without regard for the local cities, and police would waste time sitting out of town at a court, waiting to testify.

There's a practical consideration, too. Cities may well feel that if they wait long enough, the state will mandate a district court, Crawford said. If the state mandates, it will pay the cost. Until then, there is no compelling reason to make the shift.

Getting cooperation is inconvenient

Cooperation among the five Grosse Pointes means more than just getting all five councils to agree with you. Any agency with a program to promote knows that it can mean hours of telephone calls and appearing at five separate council meetings to present your proposal.

If one council tears you down, it could mean the end of the program. At best, it means going around again, either with a modified proposal or to ask the other four if they are willing to go it alone.

"Unanimity is a definite stumbling block," agreed Farms Mayor Joe Fromm. "One city doesn't want to carry the burden for the others."

"The Park's been accused of dragging our feet sometimes," admitted Councilman Ausherman.

"I think we're a dirty name in the Shade Tree Council (for not going along with the concept of a joint forester), but in that case, we already had our own program in place."

Ausherman is no stranger to that type of disappointment himself. When he and Woods Judge Patricia Schneider shepherded a joint youth assistance proposal through the councils the first time, it didn't make it.

"We ran into snags," Ausherman said. "When the two smallest communities wouldn't participate, it fell apart." The program has since been revived under the auspices of the Family Life Education Council.

But the political difficulties are just part of real life, according to Councilwoman Rice.

"Those of us who have worked in this area before don't get that upset," she said. "You invest personal time in it and it gets quickly shot down — you have to say 'that's the game' and you find another way to play it."

"Sometimes the time just isn't right. For instance, I believe that when the gypsy moth gets here, there will be cooperation on a forester."

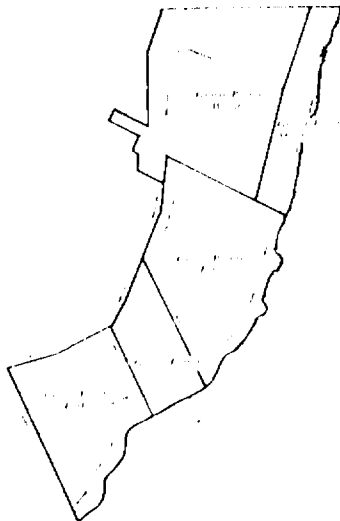

A number of cooperative ventures have been proposed and dropped over the years. Among them:

- district court;
- shared forester;
- youth officer in the high schools;
- central police dispatch;
- central police lockup;
- unified parks and recreation;
- senior housing study.

Five Grosse Pointes — Last of the big spenders?

The Grosse Pointes are operating under a combined general fund budget of more than $27 million this fiscal year. It could be argued that that's an exorbitant amount of money to spend on a population of 52,000. But it is also argued that it takes a lot of money to provide the high level of services the residents demand.

The village of Grosse Pointe Shores is known for the individual attention residents receive, from police checking and re-checking homes where owners are on vacation, to DPW workers collecting the garbage from residents' back yards. It's expensive, but when residents are queried about services in an annual questionnaire, the response, says the village president, is "overwhelmingly, keep it just like it is."

"We're service-oriented," said President Edmund Brady. "We really try to perform for our citizens. The residents want to go above and beyond to make sure the community is the best it can be."

Any attempt to compare costs of government to those in other cities inevitably comes up against the high level of services in Grosse Pointe. And any attempt to figure out whether consolidating the five cities would save money must deal with whether or not services would be kept at the current level.

There are no provable specific statistics on consolidation, although there have been studies of larger-area metropolitan governments like Nashville, Indianapolis and Miami/Dade. "The way the debate goes," according to Harold Wolman, interim director of Wayne State's Center for Urban Studies, "consolidation brings certain efficiencies."

"But the question on the other side is responsiveness."

"There's an argument that small is better — and that large areas are sometimes no more efficient than small ones. Fifty thousand has been pointed to — with some debate on both sides — as an optimal size urban area."

Consolidation hasn't happened very often in Michigan. According to the state Boundary Commission, only two areas have ever consolidated: Saginaw and East Saginaw in 1889, and Dearborn and Fordson in 1929.

The Grosse Pointe News looked at other Michigan cities in an effort to compare costs. We looked for similar population and land area statistics and for similar levels of service.

Cities with similar high levels of service like Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham are too small for valid comparisons, however; Ann Arbor and Livonia are too large. Communities like Redford Township and Muskegon match for population size, but do not deliver the same kinds of service.

We settled on Farmington Hills (a fast-growing area that is substantially larger, but with similar state equalized valuation) and East Lansing (equal land area and population, but nearly half of the head count is attributed to Michigan State University). The resulting comparisons are tabulated in the accompanying chart.

A combined Grosse Pointe is administration-heavy, with five heads of every department, plus assistants, deputies and support staff. The cities spend nearly $11 million on public safety alone, $2 million more than Farmington Hills and twice as much as East Lansing.

"In the future, we should look seriously at the consolidation of public safety departments," said former Park Councilman John Prost. "That accounts for about half the budget — there's got to be some cost savings."

There have been a couple of attempts to consolidate at least some of the police and fire departments. Former Park City Manager John Crawford said he tried to interest the Farms and the City in combining departments. Even though he offered hefty subsidies ($250,000, later upped to $450,000), neither city was intrigued. Both made the combining of police and fire into unified public safety departments a pre-condition for talks, he said.

Some have advocated a district court as a more efficient system than the five municipal courts. Figuring the actual cost of the municipal courts is difficult, as each city allocates the budget differently.

A study on a district court done about five years ago foundered when officials could not agree on attribution of costs. As a result, opinions are divided on whether a district court would be cheaper or more expensive than the municipal courts. (See box.)

Both East Lansing and Farmington Hills have district courts. Although Grosse Pointe's court figures are incomplete because the City folds the cost into the public safety department, it appears that local court costs are lower than either comparison city and only half as much as East Lansing's.

Residents yearn for unity

Dick Kay chairs the committee for strategic planning for the War Memorial. As part of its long-range planning process, the committee talked to key people in service organizations, government and the schools about their feelings regarding the future of Grosse Pointe.

"One thing that came out of that very clearly was the need for unity in the community," Kay said. "We see the school system and the War Memorial as agents for that."

Unity is definitely not to be confused with consolidation of services, Kay warned. "People want to talk about common problems, but they don't want merging."

What the committee found is an interest in senior citizen services, quality of housing, beautification and volunteerism. It found that people want their governments to cooperate to provide services.

Kay, who was principal of Kerby School and is retired, recalled with disappointment the former joint program that provided youth officers to the high schools. (The Woods continues to staff Grosse Pointe North, but that is not a joint effort.)

"That beautiful, wonderful relationship died in a power struggle," Kay said.

Those institutions that are community-wide can offer leadership in cooperation — and the War Memorial sees itself in that role.

"We've been a community-wide institution from the beginning," said President Mark Weber. "We want to provide a community-wide quality of life."

"There are common problems; there should be communications. What's good for the Park is good for the Shores; what's a problem in the Woods is a problem in the City."

The War Memorial is a highly visible community-wide institution; it is far from the only one. Others not organized by city governments include:

- schools;
- libraries;
- cable television;
- Neighborhood Club;
- an alphabet soup of agencies addressing social problems, such as SOC, FLEC, SAC.

EMS problems

To the Editor:

The Grosse Pointes' emergency medical services are inadequate and severely lacking in the ability to render advanced life support.

In this area, Grosse Pointe Woods alone provides the type of EMS that is deemed essential by the American Heart Association.

Oliver Wendt, Advanced Cardiac Life Support Program consultant for the American Heart Association, says, regarding the Grosse Pointes' EMS, "You have a million dollar community with a five dollar EMS system. In this type of situation, you have minimum effort where you need maximum."

According to the heart association, "In the setting of cardiac arrest, provision for the defibrillation must be made for all pre-hospital emergency systems. (This is not provided in Grosse Pointe except for the Woods.) When only CPR can be delivered initially and definitive therapy occurs only after arrival at the hospital, survival rates of 5 percent or less are usual. On the other hand, when pre-hospital defibrillation is available, survival rates for patients discovered in ventricular fibrillation range from 15 to 30 percent."

In the Park, the City, the Farms, and the Shores, only basic emergency medical treatment administered by emergency medical technicians is available. This includes making an assessment with vital signs, performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), administering oxygen, and other basic medical treatment such as bandaging, controlling bleeding, and splinting. Unfortunately, this is very often, not enough.

In any community, but especially in one such as Grosse Pointe, where the population consists in large part of elderly citizens and children, and much of the activity involves an abundance of athletics and water sports, advanced life support is a necessity.

Already this year, in one of the cities alone, EMS has responded to three cardiac arrests, and at least six complaints of chest pains (probable heart attacks). In at least one of the cardiac arrest cases, oxygen was not even administered and the transit time between arrival at the victim's home and the hospital was 14 minutes.

The American Heart Association says, "To maximize chances of survival, the delay from onset of cardiac arrest until CPR and definitive care should be kept as short as possible, ideally to less than four and eight minutes respectively." Definitive care includes such measures as oxygen, monitoring, early defibrillation and IV medications.

In the 1980s, no one suffering from chest pains should be transported without benefit of monitoring and the availability of early defibrillation.

In southeastern Michigan, some of the communities that are equipped to provide advanced life support are Birmingham, Southfield, West Bloomfield Township, Bloomfield Township, Waterford Township, Pontiac, Warren, Harrison Township, Shelby Township, and Richmond-Lenox. In comparison, many of these areas possess considerably fewer financial resources than the Grosse Pointes. However, they have made quality emergency medical service a priority.

While having advanced life support, as in Grosse Pointe Woods, is ideal, even a compromise to limited advanced life support would be far superior to our current deficient system and save lives.

Programs are available which provide on-site training of emergency medical technicians. In the Pointes our technicians are part of the fire department personnel. Training could take place at the stations without requiring any time away from jobs or overtime.

EMT-firefighters trained in limited advanced life support have advanced assessment skills and are able to defibrillate, intubate, and start IVs, among other things. This offers the victim a greater chance for stable transport.

It's time for a change. Grosse Pointe residents who are outraged by this inadequacy in emergency health care should immediately write to their city councils and fire departments.

Who knows how many lives have already been needlessly lost. Let's not lose any more.

Children were number one

To the Editor:

The "Opinion" column in the Feb. 23 paper, "How to save our own kids from excess," prompted me to write the following.

When Richard and I got married, we knew we wanted children. I knew that my career was going to be a fulltime wife and mother to our children.

On June 27th of this year, my husband and I will be celebrating our 30th wedding anniversary. We have so many reasons to celebrate.

Our children were always No. 1 priority in our lives. The big house, a fancy boat were not our priorities, these things, like others, were secondary.

Michelle, Mark and Robert were born fairly close together and it seemed as if we spent quite a few years in the "cry room" at our church.

Right now our children are in their 20s. They vividly remember the days I used to read to them. I read stories from "The Children's Bible," I read them poetry and fairytales and many other books that were their favorites. Their father was their horse and they requested many rides.

Our younger years were not necessarily easy. Richard worked overtime at General Motors, he attended college at U of D, and he was loaded with homework. Even with this overload, he had time for the children and me.

Regardless of what important event arose in our children's lives, Richard and I were there for them.

When you give of yourself to your children, the gift of love and affection is returned a thousand-fold.

We've set a good example and disciplined our children with love. We are getting a bit older, but our kids enjoy our company. They have backbone and respect for the world they live in. They all went to college.

Our oldest son Mark was a drummer in a wedding band; he paid for his own college education. Our two other children also contributed to their college education by money they earned at various jobs.

Nothing was ever handed on a platter to our kids besides good home cooking.

Our family is like a beautiful woven tapestry, all the stitches hold on to one another.

Trials are a part of our lives and so is happiness. We thank God for all our blessings.

Thirty years ago I thought my husband was my knight in shining armor, today I know he is.

Proposal would limit ability to fund schools

The Legislature wants to make all school districts dependent on the state. A ballot proposal, House Joint Resolution "B", passed the House 87 to 14 on March 2 and, by now, may have passed the Senate. I voted and spoke strongly against the proposal.

HJR-B would substantially limit the total ability of the Grosse Pointe School District to fund its own schools. The state would levy, and use for schools generally, part of our present millage. The mills we could levy on residential property and keep for our own schools would be limited to 17.72 basic mills plus up to 4 voted mills, to a total of 21.72. We now levy and keep locally 31.3575 mills.

We could also vote a local half-percent income tax. Even if an income tax were on a broad base of income and collection costs were reasonable, the yield of a half percent income tax is roughly estimated to be equal to only 3 to 5 mills of property tax. So the most we could levy and keep, property and income tax combined, would be equal to about 24 to 26 mills, a reduction in local revenue of approximately 5 to 7 mills.

William R. Bryant Jr.
State Representative

Plus, residents would be subject to a 9 mill state tax.

Plus, we would pay a 2 percent increase in sales tax, which is not federally deductible.

Plus, we could be told by the state to pick up education-related obligations now fully or partly paid by the state, in particular special education and social security costs.

Plus, with a 60 percent vote of the legislature, we could be denied any state funds for education.

I gave the proponents of this proposal every opportunity to make an acceptable proposal out of it. It appears, however, there are so many legislators whose school districts have been dependent on the state there is very little sympathy for, and an awful lot of envy of the wealthiest, independent school districts. For too many legislators the difference in spending between various districts is more the focus than the need to bring up the quality of the lowest quality districts.

This proposal is intended to be voted on at a special election this May 15. It will be necessary, if that election is set, to get every voter in our communities to turn out at the polls and vote against the proposal. This will be a tough fight, as I have warned all along, and one which will decide the future of Grosse Pointe.

There she found a great need for her services. She became more and more interested in finding ways to help others. Jennings was accepted into the Clinical Pastoral Education program at Mount Carmel, Mercywood Psychiatric and Harper hospitals, instruction necessary for those who wish to counsel patients.

After becoming a certified Catholic chaplain, she was employed by the Archdiocese of Detroit to work at Receiving Hospital as a chaplain. Jennings went on to complete requirements for her bachelor's and master's degrees.

"I was able to do that through what's called an 'unorthodox education' program, where I documented my life and work experience in order to complete my baccalaureate," Jennings says.

"Then with the help of Detroit-based facilitators, I earned my master's degree in wholistic counseling through Vermont College's unorthodox education program."

Wholistic counseling enables the practitioner to use three aspects of healing: the spiritual, the physical and the psychological. It is a combination which Jennings uses in her daily contacts with the poor and the sick.

While earning her degrees, the grandmother of two became interested in the work of the Sisters of Mercy.

"That was about five years ago. I liked the fact that the Sisters of Mercy were concerned about helping women and the poor. And when an opportunity came up to become an associate of the Sisters of Mercy, it just seemed like a natural relationship."

As director of Mercy Corps, Marty Jennings can match any willing volunteer to an area of need.

"bonding and networking with the sisters, giving support and sharing our lives with them." It is a relationship Jennings says is beneficial to both sides.

"I feel they have the same kind of goals I do in wanting to deal with the problems of daily life, like peace and justice and helping the poor. And we associates — there are 20 of us in Detroit — help the sisters do that."

"At the same time, that association helps me remember to be thankful for what I have and remember that the people I deal with — the poor — don't have even the basic things in life," she says.

"It's hard to live in Grosse

Pointe and not get caught up in the material aspects of life. It's absolutely unbelievable to deal with the poor and watch them deal with their lives with such dignity. Lots of them don't have anything, but what they do have, they share.

"And that's amazing to see."

Recently, Jennings was appointed assistant membership coordinator and director of Mercy Corps. The Sisters of Mercy established Mercy Corps as a way of linking agencies in poor areas of the United States with lay men and women desiring to give a year of volunteer service.

Mercy Corps volunteers make a one-year commitment and in exchange, receive room and board, medical insurance and a small stipend.

"They bring whatever skills they have: college education or some work experience," Jennings says. "More important than skills are motivation, dedication, enthusiasm and commitment to the gospel."

Various kinds of volunteers are needed for the Mercy Corps program, including secretaries, custodians, carpenters, social workers, teachers and teachers aides, nurses and anyone with a desire to serve the poor.

"The main thing we're looking for is someone with the enthusiasm to help the poor. We'll match the volunteer to the need."

That, as well as serving as a speaker for Mercy Corps and disseminating information on the program to newspapers and other media, encompasses Jennings' duties as program director. She is also a certified social worker and drug abuse counselor, a member of the National Association of Catholic Chaplains, the National Association of Mental Health Counselors, the National Organization for Women and the National Organization for Religious Women.

An obviously busy person, Jennings walks two miles daily, using the time on the road for prayer and reflection. Still, she is not immune to suffering from burn-out. That was the case at Receiving Hospital and why she was anxious to direct Mercy Corps.

"Did you know that there are 1,200 volunteers at St. John Hospital and Bon Secours? Yet at Detroit Receiving, there are only 45. I didn't really realize it at the time, but I was getting burned out at Receiving," Jennings admits.

"I thought that directing Mercy Corps would help me give others a chance to volunteer. I welcomed the opportunity to talk with people on serving the poor." When she does discuss that opportunity with others, Jennings is likely to tell them why they should volunteer to help the less fortunate.

"First of all, our Christianity calls us to such action. Second, it's healthy to forget about ourselves and our own troubles. And third, we receive such a blessing when we help others," Jennings says.

"One woman asked me, after volunteering, why I hadn't told her that it was such 'a blessing.' I told her that was our guarded secret. Really, though, it's just something one has to discover oneself."

Jennings' plans for helping the poor don't stop with Mercy Corps. She wants to start a support group for women and plans to counsel women of all ages and stages of life. It's her way of giving back what she says she has taken from life.

ing back what she says she has taken from life.

"I didn't accomplish the things I have alone. I had lots of encouragement and support from my support groups and prayer groups."

And Jennings says she's sure there are lots of other women like her, looking for ways to share their good fortune and feelings.

"Grosse Pointers are just as Christian as anyone else. They are just as interested and involved in helping others. They are caring and giving people, as a whole," she says. "But we can all afford to reach out just a little more."

non-profit, patriotic organization, the War Memorial cannot refuse a veteran use of the facility, regardless of residency.

"It's a public building. Anyone can come and use it," Rickle said. "Since 1949 the War Memorial has been a public building."

Wedding receptions are subjected the most to the Pointers-only policy. Rickle indicated that if a veteran from Dearborn insisted that his daughter's reception be at the War Memorial, and legal push came to legal shove, then the community center would have to let the non-resident use the facility.

Hammond said he has not researched the legal issues concerning the granting of a liquor license to a non-profit organization such as the War Memorial. He said much of the restrictions on liquor licenses are based with the LCC.

"If the conditions are being imposed by the liquor commission, then the applicant wouldn't get the license no matter what we do," Hammond said of Brucker's legal arguments concerning a liquor license for the War Memorial.

Brucker presented a request from the Grosse Pointe Property Owners Association that the hearing be postponed for 60 days. A request for 60 days was also given in writing to the council by the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, which is next to the War Memorial and well within the LCC restriction that a liquor license cannot be granted to an establishment that is within 500 feet of a church unless the church approves.

The property owners association wanted more time to research the legal implications of the liquor license request and to gather its own supporters in opposition to the War Memorial liquor license.

The church is undecided whether it will approve of the liquor license or not.

Among the residents speaking at the public hearing — excluding officials from the War Memorial and the property owners association — three spoke in favor of the liquor license for the War Memorial and four spoke in opposition to it.

Mayor Joseph Fromm said he received 100 letters from residents supporting the War Memorial's request and no letters against it.

Besides Brucker, property owners association directors speaking against the liquor license were Lee H. Wulfmeier III and James Gram. Wulfmeier said he lives four doors from the War Memorial.

"I have seen no problems with the way things currently exist at the War Memorial," he said. "As the saying goes, 'If it's not broken, don't fix it.'" He said he feared that regardless of the center's current intentions, it may decide to expand its functions in the future if it had a liquor license.

Following the hearing, Fromm asked Weber whether the War Memorial would still be willing to abide by self-imposed restrictions if granted the liquor license. Weber said the center is willing to work with an advisory board of city, War Memorial and residents to establish and monitor the center's alcohol policies.

A motion by Councilman John Crowley and seconded by Emil

Berg to postpone a decision for 60 days failed, with Fromm and council members Gail Kaess, Bruce Rockwell and Greg Berend casting the no votes. The seventh member of the council, Harry Echlin, was out of town on business.

A motion to grant a 30-day postponement failed by a 3-3 vote.

"I feel any further delay is divisive to the community," Fromm said.

Finally, sensing there were not enough votes to decide the issue Monday night, Fromm indicated he would favor postponing a decision until the April meeting, and the council agreed with a 6-0 vote.

The controversy over a liquor license for the War Memorial has been going on for at least a decade. Most recently, the War Memorial made two unsuccessful bids to get a liquor license in 1986.

Even after 25 (yikes!) years,

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

When one of the girls who attended Charlene Wexstten Tylan's slumber party on Feb. 25 left her home, she was told, "No boys."

But this time, it was her daughter, not her mother, who issued the warning.

Times have changed since the last time Charlene Wexstten threw a slumber party. For one thing, most of the gang is married with little girls of their own who ask if they can sleep over at their friends' houses.

The last time this gang gathered pillows and blankets, makeup, cameras, records, munchies, cigarettes, jammies and teen magazines was in 1964. Before college, marriage, divorce and gray hairs.

"We used to have such a ball at these things," Tylan said, about the yearly slumber parties she had at her parent's house on her birthday. "I always thought it would be fun to do it again, and I wanted to get the whole gang together for my 40th birthday, but I never got around to it. Then when my mom put the house on the market, I thought, I have to do it.

"Sort of a last hurrah."
So Tylan began searching for the girls who used to come over to her house in late February in the early '60s. It was harder than she thought.

"I kept hitting dead ends," Tylan said. She would trace members of the group to places of employment only to be told they didn't work there anymore. Some businesses forwarded the messages, some didn't know where they moved to, and some, because of remarriages, couldn't be traced.

Some haven't laid eyes on one another since they graduated.

"I was worried they wouldn't want to do this," Tylan said. "But they thought it was a great idea. When we came together, it was just like old times. The friendships were even closer."

When Tina Talbot walked through the back door, she said she felt like she was 17 again, Tylan said.

Evelyn Wexstten, Tylan's mother, who used to have to referee the sleepovers, got smart this year and spent the night elsewhere. "I figured they're 40 years old, they should be trusted."

But she did make a list of rules which the girls had to follow. First, they weren't allowed to freeze anyone's bra; they were not allowed to run anyone's pajamas up the flagpole; and no men — unless they were over 18 and under 50.

They didn't do each other's hair, or make up the ones who fell asleep early to look silly. They talked about boys and girls — their own — about illnesses, gray hairs, husbands and old friends. They filled one woman's sleeping bag with foam pellets and had a cake fight. They ate, and listened to music ("It's My Party" by Mary Gore was the theme for the evening), smoked, looked at old pictures, ate, sang Grosse Pointe High School's alma mater, ate and played Trivial Pursuit.

Everyone brought memorabilia — year-

Alice Thomas, in 1964, at a typical Wexstten slumber party: food, records and jammies.

girls just wanna have fun

books, Blue Devil pins, and copies of the high school newspaper, The Tower, park passes and diaries. One woman's scrapbook contained the box from the first carton of cigarettes she ever bought — the price tag read $2.55.

One highlight of the evening was when their former shorthand teacher, formerly Laura Jakobowski, called and talked with each of the girls. Jakobowski had been invited, but couldn't make it.

Another woman who couldn't make it sent a proxy — a stripper who entertained the troops. One woman commented that he was younger than her children.

What else changed?

"For one thing, the floor was a lot harder," Tylan said. "And some of the girls snored now. One slept on a four-inch foam pad. I eventually got on a bed because I couldn't take it. We went through more coffee than pop, too."

When Tylan's daughter decorated the house, she put up initials GPSH, for Grosse Pointe South High, but when these ladies graduated, it was GPHS, for Grosse Pointe High School.

But sleep, as is usual at slumber parties, was optional. One by one the ladies on the living room floor drifted out of the conversation. The last one dozed off at 6:40 a.m.. The last got up at 9:30 — yes, a.m. Tylan got her last "Happy Birthday" sung to her in her mother's house at 5:30 that morning.

What did the husbands think? Tylan's husband was "not too enthused," she said. Bob White, whose wife Alice attended, thought it was a great idea, and Ron Breitenbecher, whose wife Margaret went, said that because he wasn't invited, he was going to go home and pout.

"It brought back a lot of good memories; the relationships were closer," Tylan said. "I just wish my dad could have been there. He liked the slumber parties better than the kids did."

In the morning, when Evelyn Wexstten returned to her house, she noticed the biggest change of all.

First of all, the house smelled like cigarette smoke — before the girls would sneak them. And secondly, and most importantly, the house was clean.

Tylan said they can't wait to do it again. But with more people next time.

DO YOU BELIEVE THIS? A BUNCH OF 40-YEAR OLDS (AND OTHER ASSORTED AGES) HAVING A SLUMBER PARTY?!? A NICE REUNION FROM ALL MY BIRTHDAY SLUMBER PARTIES WE HAD ALL THROUGH JR. HIGH AND HIGH SCHOOL.

MOM'S HOUSE (THE SITE OF ALMOST ALL OF THOSE CELEBRATIONS) IS UP FOR SALE. SO THIS IS OUR "LAST HURRAH", FITTING SINCE IT'S ALSO OUR 25TH CLASS REUNION YEAR TOO, FOR AT LEAST MOST OF US.

SINCE I'M NO RICHER NOW THAN IN HIGH SCHOOL (AND MAYBE A LITTLE POORER), WE'LL ALL CHIP IN FOR PIZZA AND GO OUT FOR BREAKFAST (EN MASSE) IN THE MORNING. I'LL BRING POP, CAKE, AND ICE CREAM. IF YOU HAVE ANY SPECIAL REQUESTS, LET ME KNOW. IN ORDER TO IMPRESS EVERYONE, PLEASE BRING YOUR FAVORITE SNACK, DESSERT, OR HORS D'OEUVRE (AND ITS RECIPE). BE SURE TO BRING THE FOLLOWING:

- PILLOWS, BLANKETS, BACK BRACES
- YOUR PRETTIEST P.J.'S (AFTER ALL WE'LL WANT A GROUP PICTURE!)
- OLD RECORDS, MEMORIES
- PICTURES, OLD AND NEW (WE WANT TO CATCH UP, TOO)
- AND A WELL-RESTED CHEERFUL DISPOSITION. GOD KNOWS, WE MAY NOT GET ANY SLEEP!

ice Thomas White, Cathy Caracausi Wooten, Dawn Prater Sperry, Sue Prater and Pam Turner McMackin. The cake read "The best antiques are old friends." Tylan added, "And that's true."

North shows it has a big heart

Grosse Pointe North High School held a special Winter Spirit Week Feb. 6-11 and raised more than $1,400 for four charities.

"Have a Heart" week began with each of the four classes selecting a charity to sponsor. The classes had one day to decorate showcases and use various fundraising techniques to raise their money.

The freshmen class worked for the Humane Society; the sophomores raised funds for Children's Hospital; the junior class picked the Leukemia Society; the seniors went all out for the Heart Association.

The spirit week included fundraising sales and drawings, election of an all-male Valentine's court, and the raffling off of dates with upper classmen volunteers. On Friday, there was an all-school pep assembly to honor all of the winter sports participants and to cheer each class for its hard work. The announcement was made that the junior class had raised the most money during their day.

The week ended with a dance Saturday night. More than 350 students turned out to celebrate Valentine's Day and to join in on the announcements of all the winners. The Valentine's court was introduced and the King of Hearts (Ben Gaskin) was crowned.

Student Spotlight

Peter Anthony Brown

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Peter Anthony Brown, a seventh-grader at University Liggett School, as a sample of a stream-of-consciousness poem written for an English class. He is the son of Peter and Mariela Brown of Grosse Pointe Shores.

Personal Inventory

I know I'm 12.
I am very confident.
I believe in God.
I'm sometimes expected to be 18.
I am not old enough for my liking.
I have one brother who is 10 but doesn't always act it.
My favorite color is green.

I love corduroy, hockey and tennis,
But games and matches are too short.
I like art,
But I don't enjoy playing an instrument.
I like to slow dance.
I hate having my emotions stepped on.
I am sensitive.
The word "rickshay" appeals to me,
And so does my brother.
I like his name.
French is impossible.
I like to talk,
But not on the phone.
I enjoy singing in the shower,
And tapping on walls under water.
I hate the name Deborah.
I will get smarter as life goes on.
For now, I like Peter Anthony Truman Brown.

Essay winners

Three students from St. Claire of Montefalco School have been named local winners in the 20th annual America & Me Essay Contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

They are Aaron Radelet, first place; Jamie Moyer, second; and David Soranno, third. All three received award certificates for their achievement. As the school's first-place winner, Radelet's name will also be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

His first place essay now advances to the state level from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected. A team of finalist judges will determine the top statewide winners.

The top 10 statewide winners, who will be announced in May, will receive plaques and U.S. savings bonds from $500 to $1,000. In addition, they will be honored at a banquet in Lansing and at a meeting with Michigan's top governmental leaders in late May.

8 students named Skillman scholars

The Skillman Foundation has awarded a grant of $71,333 to cover full scholarships for eight University Liggett School students designated as Skillman scholars for the 1988-89 school year.

They are Tony Hill, Andrea Graham, Rae Goolsby, Abimbola Afariogun, Karow Gordon, Melanie Robinson, Crystal Martin and Masai Wa-Omari.

Criteria for the scholarships emphasize outstanding academic performance. The Skillman Scholars program enables minority youth residing in the metropolitan Detroit area to attend designated independent schools.

Senior Tony Hill has been named a Skillman Scholar for four consecutive years. Hill values the small class size at ULS, the closeness between the teachers and students, and the challenging degree of difficulty of many of the courses. A varsity cross country and track runner at ULS, Hill also participates in Blue Key (the student service club) and debate.

Juniors Graham and Goolsby have held Skillman Scholarships for three years each. Graham is a member of the Student Council, Chorale, Chamber Ensemble, and track and field team.

Goolsby, who volunteered as assistant coach of the ULS middle school girls' basketball team this year, is a varsity track runner who holds two school records in the high jump relay and the 4x100 meter relay.

The three sophomore Skillman Scholars are Afariogun, Gordon and Robinson. Afariogun, who says that math is his favorite subject, is a member of the French, Spanish and Chess Clubs, and a tri-varsity athlete.

Gordon, a member of the Chess Club, also participates in football, basketball, and track and field. Robinson who belongs to the Chorale and French Club, was named the fourth-place winner in the Detroit area for the National French Contest last year.

The two freshman Skillman Scholars are Martin, who came from Ludington Magnet Middle School in Detroit, and Wa-Omari, from Detroit's Bates Academy. Martin has already joined the Outing, French and Dance clubs. Wa-Omari intends to be a three-season athlete in high school, playing football, basketball and baseball.

ing to learn what other teachers do in the classrooms and to see how their students perform on these exams. Whatever insights I gain, I hope to share with my colleagues to increase the effectiveness of the foreign language curriculum in Grosse Pointe."

"Mr. Franco's selection as a Reader is an honor to South High School and the Grosse Pointe School System," said Russell P. Luttinen, acting principal of South.

16 South students qualify for state DECA conference

Thirty Grosse Pointe South High School students participated in the Distributive Education Clubs of America District Leadership Conference on Jan. 21, at Roosevelt High School in Wyandotte.

South students qualifying in Advertising and Display services were Heather Adragna and Meegan Connolly while Elissa Shore and Meghan Smith placed in Finance and Credit. Apparel and Accessories at the Supervisory Level had one winner, Amy Bell, while Jeff Gouda and Alex Turner finished qualifying in Food Marketing.

Michele Kovalcik was a finalist in General Merchandising and three students, Sandy Leal, Beth Mackenzie and Peter Ulrich were qualifiers in this category. In General Marketing, Matt Dillenbeck and Karen Trefzer were finalists. Hotel and Motel finalists were both Adam Prokop and Tony Durakovic qualified in Vehicle and Petroleum Marketing.

Students experience haves vs. have-nots firsthand

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Middle school students at Grosse Pointe Academy got food for thought as well as their usual luncheon fare in the school cafeteria last Tuesday.

Each child chose a slip of paper from a basket. Those who drew "have" were directed to the south side of the cafeteria and were immediately treated to an elaborate make-your-own salad bar, as much pizza as they wanted, milk, pop and an ice cream bar. They were allowed to sit wherever they wished and move around their side of the cafeteria to socialize with friends. A tape player provided music.

Those who drew "have not" were directed to assigned seats on the north side of the cafeteria. They were told to remain seated and not to touch their lunches until instructed to begin. Their tables were set with a bowl of rice, a pitcher of water, a bowl of raw carrots and some bread. In some cases, only four pieces of bread were available for a table of six students.

A thin fence separated the two halves of the cafeteria.

No students were allowed to cross the line represented by the thin fence.

It took the students less than five minutes to figure out what was going on. Some comments overheard from the have-nots:

"What are they eating over there? Is it pizza?"

"It's pizza!"

"This isn't fair."

Many speculated about whether the have-nots would get pizza the next day — or would get some good food later in the afternoon — to make up for the unfairness of it all.

The haves, for most of the lunch period, enjoyed their privileged status. Some asked teachers if they could share food with the have-nots. The answer was no.

According to Sheila Connolly, middle school principal, the exercise was one of several activities designed to help middle schoolers explore the plight of the homeless.

"Our goal is to educate students," Connolly said, "by introducing them to the homeless problem through magazine and newspaper articles and outside speakers; by presenting a number of learning exercises in order to help them digest the severity of the problem; and by encouraging students to commit to community service."

So far, four speakers have visited the Academy to talk to students about the homeless. Neal Shine, senior managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, spoke of the symbol of the "thin fence." He told students they must never forget the thin line between their comfortable lives and the lives of the homeless.

Belinda Jones, director of Off the Streets, told students about her program for runaway homeless teenagers.

Detroit City Councilwoman Maryann Mahaffy gave students an overall view of the homeless problem and offered several solutions.

Judy Hall, national director for Traveler's Aid, presented some insight into the effects of homelessness on children.

After Tuesday's lunchroom experience, each student was assigned to a small discussion group to talk about the implications of the experiment.

Scott Tily, academic dean for the Academy, teacher of math and computer coordinator, asked his group how they felt about the experience.

Sixth grader Eric Taylor was angry. "The teachers kept the haves from crossing the line," he said.

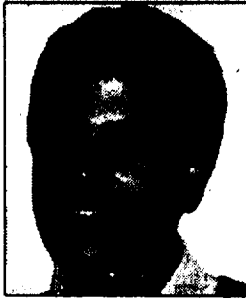

Seventh grader Lawrence DeLuca said, "We're not really experiencing this. When we get home, we're going to eat. Basically, we've all been on the have side. We don't know about the have not side. Not really."

Amanda Lawrence, a seventh grader who was seated on the have side of the cafeteria, said people at her table wanted to help those on the other side, but they weren't allowed to. "I felt sorry for them," she said.

About the exercise, she said,

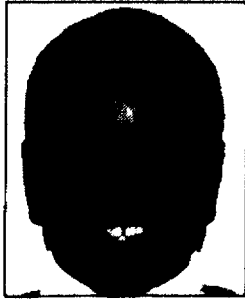

"We're more aware. But just knowing about (the have-nots) isn't going to help them. Now we've got to get out and do something."

Cadillac getting its act together; taking it on the road

It is OK again, the Wall Street Journal recently reported, to be seen driving a Cadillac (or a Lincoln) in Beverly Hills. The fact that a major national newspaper thought it significant that the "standard of the world" which had for decades endured the "penalty of leadership," was once again socially acceptable among America's royalty is an indication of how far the mighty had fallen.

But it is also an indication that Cadillac is getting its act together again, bidding to retake its former position at the top of the automotive heap. And that is good news for the entire American auto industry, because Cadillac has always had an influence far beyond its sales numbers. What has been good for Cadillac has been good for the American industry.

A couple years ago, the talk at the Cadillac new-model press preview was about Lincoln's popular and humorous TV commercials which took a dig at General Motors' look-alike styling by portraying a parking valet's problem in finding a patron's new Cadillac. (He brought back a Buick and an Oldsmobile before finding the Cadillac.)

Cadillac's executives did not find it amusing. They were angry, not because the ads were unfair but because there was too much truth in them.

"In the old days, you could tell a Cadillac from two blocks away," said one frustrated Cadillac executive. "Now you have to read the nameplate to tell a Cadillac from a Chevy." But that was then and this is now. Parking valets won't have much trouble finding Cadillacs in the lot any more as the '89s are distinctive and they look like Cadillacs.

In January, sales of Cadillacs were up almost 8 percent from a year earlier, while total domestic car sales were off more than 4 percent.

The '89 Cadillac line is an indication of how much things have changed. The Fleetwood and De Ville models are unmistakably Cadillacs; not really as big as Cadillacs past, but they look like they are. Powered by a digitally fuel-injected 4.5-liter V-8 and equipped with leather interior and anti-lock brakes, the De Ville cost around $30,000, which compares well with most of its European luxury rivals.

The Eldorado and Seville are tastefully styled driving machines with crisp handling in the European sports sedan tradition. Handling and suspension improvements, particularly with the Touring Sedan package, give these cars a purpose beyond their beginnings as styling exercises.

The Eldorado is a coupe and the Seville is a four-door version of basically the same car and they are powered by the same V-8 found in the De Ville. Prices are in the $30,000 neighborhood, with the Touring Sedan package adding close to $6,000.

Gone is the much maligned Cimarron, which was actually a very pleasant little car by the time it died, but it looked too much like a Chevrolet Cavalier and had no appeal to Cadillac buyers. In its place is the Allante, a small, expensive (high 50s) two-seat roadster with body by Pininfarina and world-class performance (the performance is American by Cadillac and much more successful than the Italian styling).

After a shaky start, the Allante got some important upgrading for '89, including a new 200-horsepower tuned-port-fuel-injected 4.5-liter V-8, 16-inch wheels, a "smart" suspension system anti-lock braking and variable-assist power steering, all of which combine to give the driver total control of a very serious high-performance car.

The peculiar manufacturing arrangement for Allante, under which bodies are assembled and painted in Italy by Pininfarina, then shipped by air to Cadillac's Detroit-Hamtramck Assembly Center for completion, may strike some as wasteful and gimmicky, but if one is seeking exclusivity -- and many in this market segment do -- then this is one way of achieving it.

In any event, Cadillac did not become "standard of the world" by building cars like everyone else. The name became a synonym for class and quality which has been picked up by other businesses because of a tradition of excessive attention to detail started by Cadillac's founder, Henry Leland.

Autos

By Richard Wright

Leland's machine shop had been supplying Ransom Olds with engines for his Curved-Dash Oldsmobile, built in a plant near the Belle Isle Bridge right after the turn of the century. Leland had worked out some improvements on the Olds engine, which he offered to Olds, who was enraged and rejected any changes.

Leland took the engine to a meeting of directors of the Henry Ford Auto Co., who were disbanding the company because the irascible Ford had withdrawn from it. The directors were so impressed with the engine they decided to build a car using it. They wanted to name it the Leland, but Leland declined and suggested naming it after the founder of Detroit, Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac.

Production began in 1902 and the "one-lunger" Cadillac with Leland's small and efficient engine quickly became the biggest selling nameplate in the United States. In 1908, the Royal Automobile Club of London awarded its Dewar Trophy to Cadillac for its achievement of interchangeability of parts.

Cadillac became part of William Durant's new General Motors Corp. in 1909 and in 1912 it again won the RAC's Dewar Trophy, this time for the first car to incorporate electric starting, lighting and ignition in a single system. The club also declared Cadillac "Standard of the World."

In 1915, Cadillac made history again by becoming the first production car powered by a V-8 engine.

In 1917, Leland and his son, Wilfred, left GM in a dispute over whether the corporation should build war material for Great Britain, and formed a company to build aircraft engines. After the war, in 1920, they began building a new luxury car, named after another historic hero, Abraham Lincoln. The Lelands later sold it to Ford Motor Co. and the Lincoln is now Cadillac's major domestic rival. Both were started by the same man.

In 1928, Cadillac became the first maker to install safety glass windows and introduced the synchromesh transmission. Two years later, it became the first producer of a car powered by a V-16 engine.

One of Cadillac's more curious innovations was the tailfin on the Harley Earl-designed 1948 models, a styling gimmick that changed the shape of the American car. The tailfin, along with the high-compression V-8 introduced in the '49 Cadillac and Oldsmobile, launched the revolutionary '50s, an era of great excess and great progress.

During the hard times of the '70s, Cadillac's star seemed to be setting, as was the American industry's in general. Under seige by the government, oil crises and imported cars, the American makers' reputations were tarnished. Cadillac, as a traditional industry leader, seemed to bear the brunt more than most.

So it is particularly heartening that Cadillac is once again building distinctive cars and doing innovative things.

The 1989 Cadillac Sedan De Ville: Distinctive again.

Woods lawyer bound over to Circuit Court

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

The Woods lawyer charged in the December death of a Mason woman while allegedly trying to elude police was bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court last week to be tried for second-degree murder.

Police say Dennis Allen Peppler, 36, was fleeing an officer at high speeds Dec. 8 at 2:50 a.m. when the car he was driving crashed through a fence at the Grosse Pointe Academy at Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Kenwood and slammed into a tree. The woman, Diana June Gaedke, 32, died instantly.

At the time of the accident, Peppler was wanted on a $50,000 bench warrant out of Detroit Recorder's Court for failure to appear on a cocaine possession charge brought by the Grosse Pointe Woods police last July.

At the March 3 preliminary examination in Farms Municipal Court, Peppler's attorney, Robert Cleary, argued that his client was incorrectly charged with second-degree murder. He said Peppler would have to have had malice for Gaedke in order to be charged with second-degree murder.

Farms Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora said another test for malice was whether the suspect's actions were with a "wanton and willful disregard that the likelihood of the actions will cause great bodily harm or death."

Rumora said that, based on police testimony and a Michigan State Police accident scene investigation, there was sufficient evidence that Peppler was driving the car, which belonged to the Mason woman, that he was trying to elude police, that he was traveling at excessive speeds, that he had an alcohol content level more than 2-1/2 times that required to be considered legally drunk, and that the woman's death was a direct result of Peppler's driving of the car.

Rumora then bound Peppler over to Circuit Court on the second-degree murder charge, which carries a maximum life sentence if convicted. Peppler's arraignment in Circuit Court will be

Historical society begins membership drive

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society began its annual membership drive March 1. The society was founded in 1945 and has more than 500 members who support its activities through contributions and dues.

The group's goal is to preserve Grosse Pointe's rich heritage by increasing awareness of its history and by educating its residents through lectures, workshops and field trips.

New members are welcome. The society is restoring the Provencal-Weir house, believed to be Grosse Pointe's oldest. It also presents educational programs which include field trips, lectures and preservation seminars for owners of older homes.

Bronze markers are presented by the historical society each year to homes, buildings and historic sites in the Pointes.

A photographic survey documenting the Pointes is one of the ongoing projects sponsored by the society. It also presents the Dr. Frank Bicknell Educational lecture each fall.

Membership benefits include receiving Moorings, the group's publication; notice of special events; reduced fees for field trips, lectures and tours; opportunities to volunteer; and access to the society's archives, which include items dating back to early maps of French Canada to present day Grosse Pointe-related memorabilia.

Annual dues range from $5 for students to $1,000 for a lifetime membership, payable over a three-year period. Contributions are tax deductible.

For a membership application, call 884-7010.

For more information, call Lisa Gaudelot at 882-5001.

March 17.

Peppler has pleaded not guilty to the charge and claims he was not driving the car at the time of the accident. He has said in the past that he was asleep in the passenger seat during the duration of the incident.

Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Diana Odrobina called Farms Lt. Mark Brecht as her first witness during the preliminary examination. A preliminary exam is designed to determine if there is enough evidence for the suspect to be tried on the charge. The intent of the preliminary exam is not to determine innocence or guilt.

Brecht testified that he was parked on Kercheval in the Hill at about 2:30 a.m. Dec. 8 when he clocked an eastbound late model Ford Probe traveling 52 mph in the 25 mph zone.

He said he turned his vehicle around and went after the car in pursuit with the emergency flashers operating. The Probe turned north on Kenwood, which had dead ends. The Probe stopped, and while Brecht was getting out of the scout car, the Probe took off again, turning around in a circular drive and swerving to get around Brecht's car, which he had managed to get into the middle of the road.

Brecht said he shined his spotlight on the Probe to illuminate its interior and identify the occupants. He testified he clearly saw Peppler driving, with the woman in the passenger seat. "I was within 5 or 6 feet of the car," Brecht said. "I could see the expressions on their faces."

He said the Probe was accelerating rapidly and left the pavement as it crossed over Kercheval without braking. Brecht said he got his car turned around and was traveling up to 65 mph and the Probe was still pulling away southbound on Kenwood.

The officer said he had sight of the Probe until it got to Grosse Pointe Boulevard, where he lost view of it. He said he had a clear line of vision to the left, but didn't see the car, so he assumed it turned right.

When Brecht got to the intersection of Kenwood and Grosse Pointe Boulevard, there was no sign of the Probe in either direction. Brecht believed the Probe was traveling with its lights off when it got to the intersection. He called in for assistance, and officers from all the Pointes joined in the search.

Brecht said he returned to Kenwood and Grosse Pointe Boulevard and was driving slowly with the car window down when he heard a man moaning. While trying to determine the source of the moaning, he found the Probe had crashed through the fence on the Grosse Pointe Academy grounds at the foot of Kenwood. The hedges along the fence had prevented Brecht from seeing the car from the road.

Brecht said he found the car smashed into a tree. He said Peppler was sitting in the driver's seat with the door open and his feet on the ground. Peppler had one shoe on and was holding his head and moaning.

He said a woman with blond, shoulder-length hair was doubled over in the passenger seat. She did not make any movement or sound, Brecht said. There was a hole in the passenger side windshield, where he assumed the woman's head went through and came back in. There was a lot of blood on the passenger side of the car.

He said there was a huge gash across the woman's neck and one of her feet was almost severed off at the ankle. He said the woman gave no vital signs. "It was apparent to me and the EMT at the scene that she was deceased," Brecht said.

He said there was blond hair dangling from the hole in the windshield, which was stained with blood. A pair of women's shoes were found on the passenger side of the car.

Dr. Steven C. Rossmore, who was the emergency room physician when Peppler was taken to St. John Hospital following the accident, said a blood test taken from Peppler at 3:37 a.m. showed a blood content level of .265. Legally drunk is .10.

State Police Sgt. Lawrence Richardson, an accident scene reconstructionist, said the front end of the car was pushed in 1 foot when it hit the tree. Using measurements of the Probe's skid marks and mathematical formulas, Richardson calculated that the car was traveling 63 mph when it hit the curb. He could not estimate how fast the car was going when it left the ground after hitting the curb, flew through the fence and slammed into the tree 20 feet away.

At impact with the tree, the car's headlights flew out of their sockets. One headlight was found 100 feet south of the tree. Richardson said he believed the headlights were off when the car hit the tree since the lights' filaments were not stretched, which would have happened had they been hot. Laboratory investigations revealed that the lights were probably not on, but the evidence was not conclusive.

While cross-examining Richardson, Cleary asked the investigator if he conducted a kinetic study to determine by the motions of the occupants of the car where they were sitting prior to the accident.

Richard said he didn't and when asked why, he said, "Basically, at the time I felt it was so blatant what the people's positions in the car were."

He said it was clear that neither passenger was wearing a seat belt. Cleary asked if the woman would have died had she been wearing a seat belt, but Rumora disallowed the line of questioning, saying that whether the woman had seat belts on or not is not relevant.

The autopsy of Gaedke indicated that she died from the gash in her neck that cut her left jugular vein. The gash was caused, police believe, when her head came back through the window when the car came to a stop after bouncing off the tree.

Following the testimony, Cleary moved that the charge against his client be reduced. He argued that a previous Michigan case that the prosecution was relying on for justifying the second-degree murder charge did not apply to his case.

Rumora, however, found that while the cases aren't identical, there are enough similarities to use the case as a precedent while considering the Peppler case. Furthermore, he said that the facts that the deceased was a passenger, that she didn't have a seat belt on and that she had been drinking are not defenses and have no bearing on the case.

Peppler must now face another arraignment and preliminary examination in Circuit Court before a trial can be scheduled.

Workshop on sexual abuse planned

One of the nation's leading authorities on sexual abuse will conduct a two-day public workshop on the subject at Oakland University Monday and Tuesday, March 20-21.

Nicholas Groth, Ph.D., a clinical psychologist who for more than two decades has worked with both victims and offenders in cases of rape, incest and child molestation, will conduct the workshop to be held in Varner Hall on the University's Rochester campus.

During the workshop — jointly presented by Life Cycle Family Counseling Department — Groth will explore the myths and misconceptions about sexual assault as it applies to the offender and the victim, the impact of abuse on the child victim, and differences between normal sexual activity among adolescents and the assaultive behavior of juvenile sex offenders, and the psychological treatment and strategies for dealing with sexual offenders.

The cost of the two-day workshop is $85. Reservations may be made by calling 348-5584.

Woods' new fire rating among best in state

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

The fire protection rating for Grosse Pointe Woods was upgraded one point, effective March 1, ranking the city among the top 7 percent of all municipalities in Michigan.

The rating by ISO, or Insurance Services Office, is one of the leading factors used to calculate insurance premiums. A better rating means fire insurance costs will be less for those in the city.

"That is very big news for the city," said City Administrator/Clerk Chester Petersen. "This puts Grosse Pointe Woods in the top 7 percent of the 534 incorporated villages, cities and townships in the state."

The improved rating from a Class Five to a Four makes the Woods' rating the lowest of all the Pointes and Harper Woods. Grosse Pointe City, Farms, Shores, Park and Harper Woods have Class Five ratings.

According to ISO Commercial Risk Services Inc. of Southfield, which conducted an intensive survey of factors affecting the Woods firefighting ability the last year, the change from Class Five to Four primarily affects typical commercial properties.

The rating improvement will reduce insurance premiums about 5.4 percent for commercial wood-frame buildings. Masonry buildings will save 6.1 percent, and fire-resistant buildings will pay 1.5 percent less in insurance premiums.

The actual reduction in premiums will also depend on variations in construction, occupancy and private fire protection. The rating, of course, only affects those insured by companies using the ISO property insurance premium calculations.

The improved rating does not affect premiums for properties with sprinkler fire systems or residential properties with homeowners type policies.

Public Safety Director Jack Patterson said the better rating is due to 10 years of efforts by the city to improve its fire inspection, prevention, training and fighting capabilities.

"It takes a little of everything," he said.

The ISO rating takes into account virtually everything that can affect a city's ability to fight fires as well as prevent fires. Areas studied include:

- The amount and dependability of water available to fight fires.
- The number, size and condition of fire hydrants.
- Amount and condition of firefighting equipment.
- The number of trained firefighters available and ongoing training programs.
- Fire department record keeping and fire inspection and fire prevention practices.
- Response to alarms.
- Fire service communications.
- Building codes.

Grosse Pointe Woods has 43 public safety officers, who are all trained in firefighting, and a 25-member public safety auxiliary, which has received some fire training.

Patterson said the auxiliary officers do not do the actual firefighting, but they are a great help to the public safety officers in pulling hoses and doing many of the other chores necessary to efficiently fight a fire.

"We're still working on improvements," he said. Patterson credits much of the continued striving to improve the ISO rating to Petersen's persistence.

In October 1985, Petersen sent a three-page memo to police and public works personnel listing 19 improvements that should be in place before the city requested a new ISO survey be conducted. The city's last survey was done in 1972, which resulted in the city's Class Five designation.

Some of the improvements recommended by Petersen included:

- Ordinances specifying minimum water-supply pipe sizes and hydrant spacing.
- Implement an ongoing hydrant inspection program.
- Eliminate water-line dead-ends.
- Inspect each building in the city more often, and conduct voluntary home fire inspections.
- Update building codes and prohibit certain types of wooden shakes and shingles.

Patterson said the city also added two new fire trucks to its fleet.

Rec center almost finished

The Grosse Pointe Park recreation center, known as the Charles S. Tompkins Recreation Center, will be completed this spring, according to the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation.

Construction and renovation of the old bathhouse has been completed and the foundation is in the process of ordering furnishings. Landscaping will be done when weather permits.

With all new windows providing a view of the lake and a large patio, the center may be used for a variety of activities. For information, call the city offices at 822-6200.

A pre-dedication party is planned for spring. Donors of a yet-to-be-determined amount will be invited to the pre-opening.

Following that, there will be opportunities for public viewing.

Geographer to speak

Dr. Robert J. Goodman, local geographer, will present the third of his winter programs, co-sponsored by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Schools. "Through the Eyes of a Professional Geographer" will be a program on Japan, on Tuesday, March 14.

The series began Feb. 28 with a program on China. The March 7 program was on India.

While he taught at Japan's Nara University, Goodman had opportunity to interpret and photograph the emerging industrial complex that produced Japan's challenge of the American dominance in international economics. His presentation will underscore the Japanese ability to accomplish almost impossible tasks with a limited resource base.

Goodman is professor emeritus of geography and has taught at Wayne State University over a period of 36 years. He received the Excellence in Teaching award from WSU and the Distinguished Teaching award from the National Council for Geographic Education.

His regional courses are illustrated by slides and motion pictures.

Presentation will be in room 23 at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside. Fee for each session is $8. Call 343-2178 for more information.

Another teen party dispersed

Woods police broke up another party last Saturday night at which there were alcoholic beverages and 100 to 150 teenagers.

Two officers found the youths inside and in the rear of a home in the 700 block of Hollywood at 9:56 p.m. According to police reports, open beer cans and liquor bottles and plastic cups were strewn about the front and rear yards.

When the officers entered the backyard, some of the youths went into the home while many others hopped fences and took off through neighboring yards.

The 18-year-old who lives at the home said his parents were out for the evening and the party got out of hand. Police stood by until all the youths had left. None of the teenagers appeared intoxicated, police said.

The officers then notified the boy's father, and the youth was told a Woods police youth officer may be contacting him.

In a related incident, a party goer later reported that her purse had been stolen at the party. The purse was recovered, but $38, a credit card and a $20 electronic calculator were taken.

Mental escapee found in Park

A mental hospital escapee was captured by Park police recently.

On Feb. 19 at 2:32 a.m. a patrol unit spotted someone in the alley at Mack and Wayburn. The person was wrapped in blankets.

When police approached, the suspect fled.

After a foot chase the officers caught the suspect. A further check revealed the suspect had escaped from the Ypsilanti State Mental Hospital.

Researchers are calling it the "diet miracle of the '90s." Anorex 2000 with "E.A.B. # Entrepreneurs of the '80s: Likely to be young — and female

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Young women are no longer doomed — or content — to languish in the typing pool.

Many have entrepreneurial ambitions — and are achieving their goals by owning their own businesses while still in their mid-20s.

Gretchen Morris, 26, has owned Metro Messenger, a Grosse Pointe Woods-based delivery service, for less than a year.

Terrie Alfonsi McLauchlan, 27, has been co-owner of Sir Speedy Printing Center in the Woods since January 1987.

Morris said she doubled her business billings the first six months after she bought it. McLauchlan said her company ranks among the highest 100 franchises in the nation in dollar volume.

Morris said there are probably 25 or 30 local companies that she considers her competitors.

Gretchen Morris

"We're not the cheapest," she said, "but we offer service."

Metro Messenger is a same-day delivery service. Morris employs three delivery people: herself and two part-time drivers.

"That's two more than when I bought the company."

Some corporations hire Metro Messenger to deliver mail and packages daily. If they used their own people for daily deliveries, Morris said, it would cost the average firm about $30,000 a year.

"This is the estimated cost of hiring someone to do what I do: the salary, benefits, car and gas."

"If they don't need me, they don't pay for me."

She is licensed to deliver in seven counties, but cannot carry medical supplies and drugs. "Insurance costs are my biggest item. I carry cargo insurance as well as liability, bonding and health insurance."

Morris has a 7- by 12-foot office at Harper and Allard, where she does records and billings. She's on the road about 40 hours a week; a normal work day is about 10 hours, she said. "I work most weekends in the office."

"Metro Messenger was teetering on the edge of taking off. I saw that I had all the skills to make it successful: a background in marketing, a super sense of direction, a distaste for being late, a love for driving and for meeting new people."

"It was the perfect opportunity. The former owner was moving out West. It was the right thing at the right time."

Morris said her mother is a silent partner in the business. "She provided financial help and lots of encouragement."

Morris graduated from the University of Michigan in 1985 with a bachelor's degree in American culture. She worked for three years as an account executive for a small public relations firm, doing print production work, ad placement and national PR campaigns.

"But owning my own company gives me freedom to make my own decisions, my own mistakes. I'm responsible for my decisions. It's scary, but when I'm right — the feeling is incomparable. I've learned from some bad decisions. Mostly they were errors in pricing," she said.

Morris' wish for the next 10 years is that Metro Messenger grows large enough to continue the service they're giving — but not too large to become decentralized.

"I'd like to have offices in different cities and states — franchises. But I'd want to keep the same service and goals. If Detroit needs this service, probably other cities do too."

In addition to daily business mail and packages, Morris said she has delivered such diverse items as a wheelchair and wedding presents. "I usually don't know what's in the packages."

McLauchlan purchased Sir Speedy from her parents in January 1987. Her brother, Tony Alfonsi, 29, is co-owner.

"When you own a business," she said, "you bring work home."

You work weekends. I worry about machinery breaking down, about paying bills, and so on.

Terrie Alfonsi McLauchlan

But the perks are nice too. I can schedule my own time."

McLauchlan said she golfed one morning a week last summer and she recently went to Chicago.

Her work experience began at age 13, she said, when she and her brother worked at a Dairy Queen. She graduated from Grosse Pointe North in 1979, where she took dental aide courses. She worked for a dentist for three years.

She went to Macomb Community College for a year, then transferred to Wayne State University, but quit to work in the printing business for her father. She has also been a part-time exercise instructor.

McLauchlan said being young and female is not a problem, although it's unusual to find a woman in the printing business.

"At first," she said, "people would walk into the store and ask for one of the adults."

She said the firm employs eight full-time people and does a variety of printing and typesetting services: letterheads, envelopes, newsletters, party invitations for clubs and families, copying and graphic design.

"If we can't do a job, we'll find someone who will."

For the next 10 years, McLauchlan said she doesn't want the business to grow too large.

"I'd like to keep it small enough to be manageable. I want to deal with customers — not sit in a back office somewhere, managing."

Radon conference for housing pros

Professionals in property development, transfer and management are invited to get the facts about radon and what it means in their day-to-day activities at the "Radon & Michigan" conference to be held at the Ritz-Carlton, Dearborn, March 13-14.

Several well-known experts in specialized fields, locally and from across the country, will present reasonable and professional approaches on how to overcome the radon problem.

For housing professionals who are concerned about whether an unfavorable radon test — or lack of a test at all — can hold up a property transfer or discourage a prospective buyer/tenant, this program will deliver the facts clearly and concisely.

This is a one-day program repeated twice — Monday, March 13 and Tuesday, March 14. The fee is $75 which includes refreshments, a luncheon and conference coursebook.

For registration and additional information, contact G. Alex Johnson or Pat Duncan of the American Lung Association of Southeast Michigan at 559-5100, weekdays.

Jack Crusoe, director of Placement Services at WSU, said: "This is our second year of co-sponsoring the job fair for Michigan college graduates. Last year was an outstanding success, with more than 2,000 students and 100 employers taking part. This year, we expect even more."

Crusoe points out that one of the major attractions of the job fair is the opportunity for graduates to be interviewed by several employers in one place, under one roof.

Graduates can get a headstart on the fair by signing up for special early registration. This offers the chance to get resumes in to participating employers before the start of the event.

The Job Fair will be run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in H Building on the Oakland Community College campus. Advance registration is $10; on site registration, $20. Lunch is provided along with free parking.

Epilepsy center receives grant

The Epilepsy Center of Michigan has received a $11,600 grant from the Metro Health Foundation to purchase medical transcription computer equipment.

"Keeping accurate records on the more than 2,000 persons receiving direct medical services at the Epilepsy Center is essential," said President William R.D. Martin of Grosse Pointe Shores. "Maintaining these records on word processors, which had frequent breakdowns, was a continuing headache for our medical transcriptionists."

ECM's clinical services for children and adults are located at 3800 Woodward in Detroit's Medical Center. These medical and psychological services are provided to people with, or suspected of having, epilepsy. The center, a statewide organization, received funding from the United Way of Michigan.

Metro Health Foundation is a private Detroit grant-making foundation which makes grants to Michigan organizations for health care and in health-related fields.

Pointes build up

It seems at any time, a new house is being built in Grosse Pointe and an observer may wonder which of the five cities is growing at the fastest rate.

A quick check showed that there is no trend in residential home building in the Pointes. When one peaks, one falls.

It appears, however, that in the last five years, the Farms has grown the most with 75 homes built.

These figures do not depict the new commercial construction or additions to existing residences.

Farms court clerk pretrial adjourned for two weeks

By John Minnis
Staff Writer

Former Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson's argument that the evidence against a Farms court clerk charged with embezzlement was the product of an illegal search and seizure was denied by a Harper Woods judge last week.

The illegal search and seizure charge was one of two legal questions posed by Patterson at a preliminary examination March 1 during his defense of Farms Court Clerk Michelle Morgan, 24, who was charged last month with embezzling $55 in public funds.

Morgan pleaded not guilty to the charge in Harper Woods Municipal Court Jan. 26 after Farms Municipal Judge Matthew Rumora disqualified himself from the case. Morgan has been suspended without pay since Nov. 9, when the incident is said to have occurred.

Patterson's other legal question, which caused the preliminary exam to be adjourned to March 15, was whether Morgan was subject to a state statute that makes embezzlement of public funds a felony.

According to a strict Michigan statute, embezzlement of public funds in excess of $50 by an agent or servant of a public official is a felony with a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

After failing to convince Farms Municipal Judge Roger J. LaRose that the evidence against Morgan was the result of an illegal search, Patterson argued that his client is not an agent or servant of a public official and therefore was improperly charged with the felony.

Diana Odobina, the assistant Wayne County prosecutor handling the case, saw no reason why Morgan would not qualify as a servant or agent of a public official.

LaRose commented that according to one interpretation of the statute, Morgan, who was court clerk at the time of the alleged money theft, could herself be considered a public official.

He ordered the attorneys on both sides of the Morgan case to prepare briefs arguing their positions on the public official argument and submit them to the court by March 13, two days before LaRose will decide the issue.

If LaRose agrees that Morgan was properly charged with the felony, she will most likely be bound over for trial in Wayne County Circuit Court.

At the preliminary exam, the prosecution called two Farms Municipal Court employees who said they found two civil-infraction files and cash inside Morgan's purse.

Elsie Zielinski, who was the court's traffic clerk at the time, testified that she became suspicious on the morning of Nov. 9 when she accidentally found a pile of traffic tickets in their civil-infraction folders, which are about the size of a legal envelope, on Morgan's desk.

Zielinski said the folders, which had money and checks stapled to them, were lying face down on Morgan's desk. Furthermore, the folders were covered by a large green folder. She said she discovered the folders while looking for a pen.

She said she became concerned because Morgan should have turned all the tickets and fines to Zielinski, the traffic clerk. When she discovered the folders, Zielinski said she immediately notified the court administrator, Paula Mack. Mack told her to leave the files as they were and to see what Morgan would do with them.

Later in the morning, Morgan sorted the traffic folders that Zielinski had discovered and gave all of them to Zielinski except two folders, which had $25 and $30 cash stapled to them, Zielinski testified. She said she asked Morgan whether that was all of the files and Morgan told her it was.

Again, she reported to Mack that two folders were missing. Later, while Morgan was out of the office, Zielinski found the two folders face down and underneath manila folders in one of Morgan's letter baskets. Zielinski said Mack again told her to leave the files where they were.

Zielinski testified that after the morning's court session was over at about 11:15 a.m., Morgan came into the court office, and Zielinski said she saw Morgan looking underneath the manila folders where the two missing civil-infraction files were. Zielinski said she felt sick when Morgan went right to the missing files to check if they were still there.

While Zielinski, Morgan, Mack, Rumora and Marge Foster were having lunch, a man showed up at the court office to pay a civil-infraction fine. Morgan volunteered to take care of the matter, even though it was the traffic clerk's responsibility, Zielinski testified.

Foster is Morgan's sister and is a former court administrator. She is now the city treasurer for Grosse Pointe Farms.

While the others were in the court lunchroom, Morgan was the only person alone in the adjacent court office. After lunch, Zielinski and Mack discovered the hidden infraction files had been removed from Morgan's basket but were nowhere to be seen in the office.

Mack testified that she sent Morgan out of the office to get some photocopies so that she and Zielinski could search for the files. They looked in the office, Morgan's trash basket and coat. Mack testified she found the files in Morgan's purse.

Mack then talked to Farms detective Lt. George VanTiem, who told her to get a city official. Mack told City Controller Carroll Lock and Rumora what she had discovered. Lock then decided to confront Morgan immediately, Mack testified.

Mack said she placed Morgan's purse in front of Morgan and asked her twice if the missing files were in the purse, to which Morgan said no. Mack testified that she then told Morgan twice to look in her purse and tell her if the files were in there. Morgan looked in her own purse and said the files weren't there. Mack said. Finally, while Morgan was looking in the purse, Mack said she just reached in the purse, pulled the files out and asked, "What are these?"

She said Morgan expressed surprise and wondered how the files got in her purse. Zielinski said Morgan came screaming into the court office demanding to know why Zielinski was framing her.

Patterson charged that Mack, as a government employee, was prohibited by the Fourth Amendment from going through Morgan's personal property without a search warrant. He said government employees, especially those working at the direction of law enforcement officers, have the same limitations as police officers in conducting searches.

Patterson said a warrant should have been obtained before anyone looked in Morgan's purse, and since a warrant wasn't obtained, the search was illegal and the evidence in the case not be allowed.

LaRose disagreed. He said Mack was not acting as an agent for the police when she looked in Morgan's purse. He said law enforcement officers are restricted in searches, but not the general public employee.

He ordered the two civil-infraction files and the court's Nov. 9 log-in sheet be admitted as evidence in the case.

Patterson did not have Morgan testify.

The testimony in a preliminary examination is not offered to establish innocence or guilt, but is used to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to justify going to trial.

Monte Nagler used his one-degree spot meter to determine exposure in this shot of Moose Pass taken near Valdez, Alaska. A wide range of tones and textures was obtained by using this method.

Exposure Meters: How to use them

In my last two columns, I discussed how an understanding of exposure will help you immensely to improve your pictures. Today, let's round out the discussion on exposure with an explanation on exposure meters and how they help you, too.

To begin with, there are two types of light meters — incident and reflective.

Incident meters measure light coming from the source regardless of the subject. Readings involve aiming the meter, with an incident light "collector" attached, toward the light source from the subject's position. Many professionals in a studio environment will use incident light readings.

The more common reflective light meters measure light reflected by the subject. This takes into account the color value and reflectivity of the subject as well as the brightness of the illuminating source.

Most scenes have an average amount of light and dark areas which will produce a properly exposed negative. But suppose you're in a situation with large masses of bright or dark areas such as photographing Aunt Mildred against a bright sunset. The bright sky will "tell" the meter which in turn "tells" the camera to shoot at a small lens opening. The result is that Aunt Mildred will appear to look dark in the final picture. Solution: Move in close, take an exposure reading off Aunt Mildred and use this setting when you take the shot.

There are two basic designs of light meters. First is the popular through-the-lens meter where the metering system is an integral part of your camera. These may be programmed to read all the light coming into the viewfinder (average weighted) or a concentration of the light in the middle of the viewfinder (center weighted).

Second are the hand-held meters. Some read light from the entire scene. Others are sophisticated, one-degree spot meters used by serious black and white photographers who employ zone system practices.

Here are some tips to help you in the use of your meter:

Through-the-lens meters on your 35mm camera will automatically adjust for any filters you may place on the lens.

Once your meter indicates a certain aperture/shutter speed combination, remember that any other corresponding combination will give you correct exposure. Only the appearance of the final photograph will be altered.

Change the battery once a year whether you have a hand-held meter or one built into your camera.

But, alas, you forgot to change the battery and your meter is dead. Is all lost? Not at all! Simply remember this handy rule: On sunny days, set your aperture at F-16 and your shutter speed at the speed closest to the ASA of your film (1/60th for ASA 64 film). A perfect exposure will be yours. Then, for bright overcast, open up one stop. Normal overcast, open up two. Heavy overcast or shade, open up three.

Now that you've been exposed to exposure for three weeks, it's time to get out your camera and expose yourself to the many exciting photographic opportunities that await you.

Bryant opposes latest school finance reform bill

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The most recent Michigan school finance reform plan, passed by the House 87-14 last Thursday, will probably pass in the Senate this week, according to Rep. William R. Bryant Jr.

"But it's a bad plan," he said. "It would leave the future of Grosse Pointe schools up to the Michigan Legislature — instead of Grosse Pointers." Bryant voted against the proposal.

The plan would raise Michigan's sales tax from 4 to 6 percent; cut property taxes by about one-third; and provide about $500 million a year additional money for public schools. Part of local property tax revenues would be placed in a pool to be redistributed to poorer school districts.

Bryant said the plan penalizes out-of-formula school districts like Grosse Pointe, which has more money. At first glance, Grosse Pointe's per-pupil spending would be increased under the plan, but Bryant said it's deceiving, because it's for the first year only.

"This is a one-year carrot with a big stick behind it," he said.

Bryant said that many legislators are focusing on narrowing the spending gap between rich and poor school districts, which in some cases range from $2,500 to more than $7,000 per pupil.

"We should be focusing on the districts that are in need," he said.

If the Senate passes the bill, it will be placed on the ballot in mid-May as an amendment to Michigan's Constitution. Bryant said it will probably not be approved by Michigan voters.

"How can you get enough yes votes when this is clearly an overall tax increase?" he said. "It's an increase in sales tax. Sure, it's a decrease in property tax. But it's a trade-off of a deductible property tax for a non-deductible sales tax."

Bryant added that middle and upper-middle class suburbs will not vote yes on a proposal that will effectively destroy their own school systems.

"Grosse Pointe (schools) are essentially independent of the state," he said. "We raise most of our revenue. This proposal would make this impossible."

Park truck stolen; suspect arrested

A suspect thought to have stolen a pickup truck belonging to the city of Grosse Pointe Park was arrested three days later.

The pickup was taken from the Park's garage area on Jefferson some time between 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. Feb. 24. The truck was used in a theft of materials from a construction site at 11 a.m. the same day in Oak Park. The pickup was found that day at 12:30 a.m. in the 12900 block of Jefferson.

At 11:15 a.m. on Feb. 27, a Park officer in an unmarked car saw a suspect loitering in the 1000 block of Maryland. The officer began surveillance and saw the suspect trying doors of parked cars.

The suspect was arrested, and police believe the suspect is the individual who had earlier taken the city's truck.

The Woods police also reported a stolen vehicle last week.

A black 1980 Oldsmobile Cutlass two-door was taken from the front of a home in the 2000 block of Hunt Club March 1 between 12:15 and 7:15 p.m.

Making music fun

Symphony brings program to the pupils on March 18

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
 Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

The schools will be alive with the sound of music next Saturday when the Grosse Pointe Symphony presents its first "Young Persons Concert."

The March 18 concert is set for the Grosse Pointe North High School Performing Arts Building at 2 p.m.

The concert is presented in cooperation with the Grosse Pointe Public Schools. It will feature pieces geared toward introducing the young listener to the orchestra — a concept that the Grosse Pointe Symphony's board of directors has been kicking around for a number of years.

"We've been talking about doing something like this for a while," explains Grosse Pointe Symphony president Patricia Young. "We were intending to do it, and wondering how we'd pay for it."

Then Young got a call from a Grosse Pointe music lover who wanted young people in the community to enjoy the orchestra first-hand.

"She wanted to make sure that it happened — yet remain anonymous. Her generous grant made this concert possible," Young says. "And it has made us anxious for the concert to be a success for these nice people."

The Grosse Pointe Symphony isn't bashful about admitting that, like orchestras around the country, it worries about dwindling audiences.

The hope is that by bringing the music to the audiences of the future — school children — the number of music-lovers will increase.

"Our theory is that if the kids get to experience the symphony orchestra first-hand, they'll learn to love it," Young explains. "Too often, adults talk about going to the symphony the way one talks about going to the dentist. It isn't made attractive to them."

SO THE GROSSE Pointe Symphony and the schools, led by K-12 music department head Barbara Dourjalian, have gone out of their way to design a program to attract the interest of busy Grosse Pointe youngsters.

Felix Resnick will conduct the orchestra and WQRS-FM radio personality David Wagner will serve as narrator, guiding the audience through the variety of music played.

The program will feature music familiar to kids, such as the theme from the movies "Rocky" and "E.T." as well as Liadov's "A Musical Snuff-box" and Anderson's "The Typewriter," which may not be as well-known, but should fascinate young listeners.

"The music Felix Resnick selected is full of humor and fun," Young says. "Plus, it helps the kids to be able to identify with 'one of their own' — Grosse Pointe South High School senior Rebecca Hunt, who will solo with the orchestra."

Hunt, a French horn player, is a product of the Grosse Pointe schools. As the winner of the symphony's Nester Scholarship competition last spring, she has been playing with the orchestra all year.

Young says that both those involved with the symphony and the schools are excited about the March 18 concert.

The schools' Dourjalian helped the symphony develop the program in terms of the target age, type of music and length of the program. The symphony did the rest, with board members and chairs

Young, Johanna Gilbert, Ted Gudsen, Audrey Jennings, Ralph Miller, Mary Nolan, John Prost, Gerald Stoetzer and Mark Weber working on the project.

FROM DOURJALIAN'S PERSPECTIVE, the concert will be helpful in getting Grosse Pointe school children to think about studying instrumental music.

"I think that the concert is a real positive move and I'm happy to help participate," she says. "The kids are at the age — third, fourth and fifth grade — where they think about studying music. The concert will be good reinforcement in that respect."

Wagner's narration will also assist the concertgoers in their enjoyment and understanding of the music, Dourjalian adds.

"For the music to be done on the kids' level is great. But it's fantastic that we'll have Dave Wagner telling the kids what to listen for. Kids need this kind of concrete reinforcement to help them listen and learn."

And, if they happen to have a little fun while they're learning, that's OK too, the symphony's Young says.

"I think that the kids who come to the concert are going to have fun and be glad they came. Best of all, they'll remember the concert and want more. And if they bring mom and dad back for another concert, that's good, too."

"Those memories are important. I can recall my first concert when my parents took me to the Masonic Temple. I remember the music, the concert hall ... the whole day," she adds.

"And if I could tell parents one thing, I'd say that if they want to do something for their kids that'll make an impression, this is it."

Tickets for the first Grosse Pointe Symphony "Young Persons Concert" are $4 for adults, $3 for students/senior citizens. They may be purchased at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial or Village Records and Tapes; or by sending a check payable to the Grosse Pointe Symphony to Box 36276, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48236. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for faster service.

Colorful seed catalogs are harbingers of spring

There are all kinds of images connected with the month of March. Lions and lambs. The bridge between winter and spring. The voice of the turtle-dove. And perhaps best of all, the images conjured up in our minds by the arrival of seed catalogs. For some of us, that's the official sign of spring.

Beautiful catalogs are available at the Grosse Pointe Garden Center for serious study or just wishful thinking as one looks away from the piled-up sheets of ice on the frozen lake to the hundreds of brilliantly pictured flowers, fruits, vegetables and foliage of the catalogs.

All the usual things are there, better than ever, somehow. And there are some pretty unusual things there, too.

From one catalog it is possible to order radish seeds to grow unusual radishes which are white on the outside and red on the inside, or ones which are black on the outside. Or, wonder of wonders, to grow a Japanese radish guaranteed to weigh in at an incredible 15 pounds.

Then there's a variety of corn which grows to 20 feet. And did you know that in the back pages of this catalog you may find a choice selection of insects and worms to be ordered and placed in your garden to devour the predator insects which may try to take up residence? (For $25, 1,000 earthworms will write their way to your mailbox).

All the prize-winning vegetables from asparagus to zucchini, herbs of every use and scent, fruits from which to make jewel-like jellies or fabulous pies, are here in these seductive pages. And in the sections devoted to flowers, the temptation is strong to order everything, even when our gardens are city lots or windowboxes rather than several acres.

We also welcome the crisp blossoms of the crocus as a harbinger of spring. Crocus is a relative of the iris and is native to Egypt and the Mediterranean region. It is often pictured in ancient Egyptian carvings and was a favorite flower all through the countries of the ancient world.

It was often used at weddings in Greece because it was supposedly the flower symbolizing the nuptials of Zeus and Hera. In Rome, the crocus was used to make a cordial considered to be a tonic for the heart, as well as a love potion. Crocus blossoms were strewn on the water of the pools and fountains in the court-yards of Roman houses.

Returning Crusaders brought the crocus to Europe and the saffron obtained from crocus became the most popular and expensive spice used. Saffron was also used to make a blond hair dye which became very fashionable. In fact, that used up so much of the available saffron that in the 11th century, England's King Henry threatened severe punishment to ladies who used saffron for hair-coloring. Understandably, then, the rage for blond hair declined and Henry could again count on a good supply of his favorite spice.

In the European flower calendar, March is represented by the violet. The Chinese calendar calls for the tree peony, also the symbol of love and affection. And the Japanese calendar insists the cherry blossom is the flower for March.

In ancient Egypt, "Pert" is the season of spring and is called the season of flowers. That's how it is designated in the medieval Calendar of Seasons, so all the calendars are correct.

When those returning Crusaders came home wounded from the fray, it was the women of the family who administered medical attention. Since doctors were scarce, medical knowledge, mostly herbal in nature, was considered an essential part of the education of women. It is easy to understand how "a becoming and honorable herbary" grew into a necessary feature of a walled castle's grounds.

The plants grown by housewives, aside from herbs used in the kitchen, included flowers like the honeysuckle, lavender, lilies, marigolds, peonies, roses and violets. These were important ingredients in the compounding of medicines and the distillation of flower waters.

In England and France, especially, the still-room (short for distilling room) became part of every well-equipped household. Such gardening as the restricted grounds of a walled castle permitted was always under the direction of the lady of the house. Indeed, throughout history gardening has been classed as a domestic art.

All the vegetables commonly used in the Middle Ages were grown in these gardens, including onions, cabbages, turnips, parsnips and that odd-looking relative of the cabbage, kohlrabi.

Incidentally, did you know that the small city of Hamburg, Mich., near Ann Arbor, calls itself the "Kohlrabi Capital of the World?" Every year, Hamburg puts on a week-long kohlrabi festival with parades, kohlrabi dinners, a formal ball which is the social event of the year and of course, the crowning of the Kohlrabi Queen.

Speaking of kohlrabi, the seed catalogs tell us that one package of kohlrabi seeds will plant a 40-foot row and that very early spring is the best time to plant. It's a cool weather plant of ancient lineage still much used in Europe and one that has been popular in China for centuries.

'A night in Vienna' thrills Grosse Pointe debutants

In the words of Clemens A. Coreth, the Chicago-based Consul General of Austria, "It was the most beautiful event of its kind outside Vienna." For a pair of 16-year-old Grosse Pointers, it was simply "the thrill of a lifetime."

On Feb. 25, University Liggett School sophomores Katrina Linthorst-Homan and Yohanna Maribel Sucezek, made their debut with seven other Detroit-area girls who trace their family background to the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. The occasion was the 42nd annual Straussball of the Austrian Society of Greater Detroit.

The girls' escorts were Brian Weinhaus and Gerald Sinz. An additional 25 couples, including debutants of previous seasons, formed a Court of Honor to honor the debutants and their escorts. The court included Grosse Pointers Hedi Sucezek, Tracy Tompkins and Susan Kolodziejczyk with their escorts John Southall, Jeffrey Prus and Jason Parol.

The Straussball was a dazzling event attended by nearly 2,000 family members and guests. Following a fanfare by the 22-piece symphony orchestra, the Grand March, Polonaise and Exhibition Waltz were played. The Court of Honor entered the decorated ballroom at Cobo Hall, to the strains of Strauss' "Radetzky March." The debutants and their partners then entered, dressed in ornate, hoop-skirted gowns and white-tie and tails.

The picture that presents is bound to interest local young people who can trace a parent or grandparent to one of the lands historically associated with Austria: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland or Germany, etc. The Austrian Society welcomes new members. Those interested in applying to participate should contact Alex or Maribel Sucezek at 885-0793 for information on the requirements and training involved.

Perhaps by next year, more Grosse Pointers will be ready for a "thrill of a lifetime."

And the French . . . will be saluted throughout this year by Americans in recognition of the Bicentennial of the French Revolution.

Gov. James Blanchard has proclaimed May 9 as the beginning of a year-long series of cultural events in Michigan, which will involve various Franco-American associations and area universities.

The four opening events of the year in Detroit will be a French-American Chamber of Commerce function on May 9; a Detroit Institute of Arts celebration on May 10; a musical tribute by the Michigan DUO Society at the Detroit Institute of Arts on May 11; and a Bicentennial Gala Dinner Dance by the French Institute/Alliance Francaise at the Red Run Country Club May 12.

Among the local people involved in "Michigan's Salute to France" this year is Dorothea Vermeulen of Grosse Pointe. For further information on any of the events, call her at 886-9102 or contact the French Institute at 644-3564.

Heart-y laughs . . . were the order of the evening Feb. 18, when comedian Phyllis Diller entertained at "A Special Valentine's Evening with Phyllis Diller" to benefit the American Heart Association of Michigan.

The Fairlane Club in Dearborn was the setting for the black-tie event. Proceeds raised will be used to help the association improve the lives of heart attack and stroke victims. Grosse Pointers Don and Dale Austin were among those in attendance.

Now showing:

"Midwest Landscape - Part II" is on exhibition at the Joy Emery Gallery now through April 15. The four artists whose work will be shown are Stephen Duren, Harold Gregor, Keith Jacobshagen and Lucille Proctor Nawara.

The works reflect the artists' view of landscapes from Illinois farm country, the Great Plains of Nebraska and rural Michigan.

The gallery, at 131 Kercheval Ave., exhibits modern and contemporary 20th century art in all media. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursdays until 8 p.m.

Small choir, big undertaking

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

English composer John Rutter has composed choral works on both a large and a small scale, as well as those for orchestra and for television scores.

His "Requiem" is a recent composition that is attracting attention throughout the country. Rutter skillfully blends Latin and English into the composition, including many traditional parts of the Mass for the Dead (such as Agnus Dei and Sanctus) as well as Psalm 23 ("The Lord is My Shepherd") and Psalm 130 ("Out of the Deep Have I Cried Unto Thee").

The piece is a big undertaking for any choir and especially for a small group such as the Senior Choir of St. Paul Lutheran Church.

But that group will present Rutter's "Requiem" at the 11:15 a.m. service on Sunday, March 12, at the church, 375 Lothrop at Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms. Performing with the choir will be soprano soloist Susan Kvale and an orchestra composed of Krista Grix, harp; Lisa Bauer, flute; Linda Bauer, organ; Anne Thomalla, glockenspiel; Don Trout, cello; Nick Buckos, timpani; and Martha Gregory, oboe.

The 20-member St. Paul Senior Choir is directed by Steven SeGraves. A graduate of Wayne State University, SeGraves is the choral conductor at Chippewa Valley High School. He has studied conducting with Brazeal Dennard and was formerly assistant conductor of the Wayne State University Glee Club and Chamber Singers, serving under Harry M. Langsford.

'It is quite an ambitious effort, but the group has risen to the occasion.'

— Steven SeGraves

The idea to present Rutter's "Requiem" came from SeGraves. He had the music at Chippewa Valley, brought up the notion to the choir and the church and got a resounding "yes" all around.

"It's a fairly new work and we thought it might be a neat way to help attract new people to the choir," SeGraves said. "We're always looking for people who would like to join us, either all year-round or just for special projects like this one."

The relatively small size of St. Paul's choir didn't discourage SeGraves from presenting "Requiem."

"Sometimes, in the middle of rehearsal I wonder if I didn't bite off more than I can chew," he said with a laugh. "It is quite an ambitious effort, but the group has risen to the occasion." Most volunteer choirs will pay a soloist for special productions. St. Paul hasn't done that with "Requiem." Everyone is doing this as a labor of love, a sign of devotion," SeGraves said.

"Plus, we have some wonderful musicians and the choir appreciates that. It shows in our rehearsals."

Last Saturday's rehearsal was particularly encouraging, the 26-year-old choir director said.

"I'm very pleased at how we're coming along. We really are sounding great and we're quite excited about Sunday."

The all-volunteer choir at St. Paul was formed shortly after the founding of the church, some 118 years ago. The Senior Choir, along with the Cherub Choir of preschoolers and the Junior Choir for elementary school children, provide music at the 9 and 11:15 a.m. services. The congregation is served by the Rev. J. Philip Wahl.

The council is not a censor; it is a body of reviewers which disseminates information. The group's motto is "Support the Best. Forget the rest."

These questions will focus on areas of the library system that will have future action possibilities. Consensus, "agreement among a substantial number of members, representative of the membership as a whole," is an important tool of the League. It helps both state and national boards in developing position statements, according to Kitty Walters, LWVGP Vice President for Program.

In preparation for consensus, members read articles in the local newsletter and the "Michigan Voter."

Participants will also enjoy home-made desserts. The public is invited.

Joyeux anniversaire!

Kenneth Drake of Grosse Pointe had a birthday last month... and all his classmates at Brownell School helped him celebrate.

This celebration had a definite Gallic flavor because the class is French V, taught by Sheila Ingwersen. Because octogenarian Drake is something of a "teacher's pet" - not to mention a favorite with his Community Education classmates - Ingwersen, her husband Rick, Drake's wife Ruth and class members conspired to surprise the retired public relations man with the party Feb. 27.

Classmates enjoyed French bread and cheese, fruit and cake, while French music played in the background.

"It was a real surprise," Drake said. "The party was really a wonderful, wonderful thing for them to do. Quite unexpected, but wonderful."

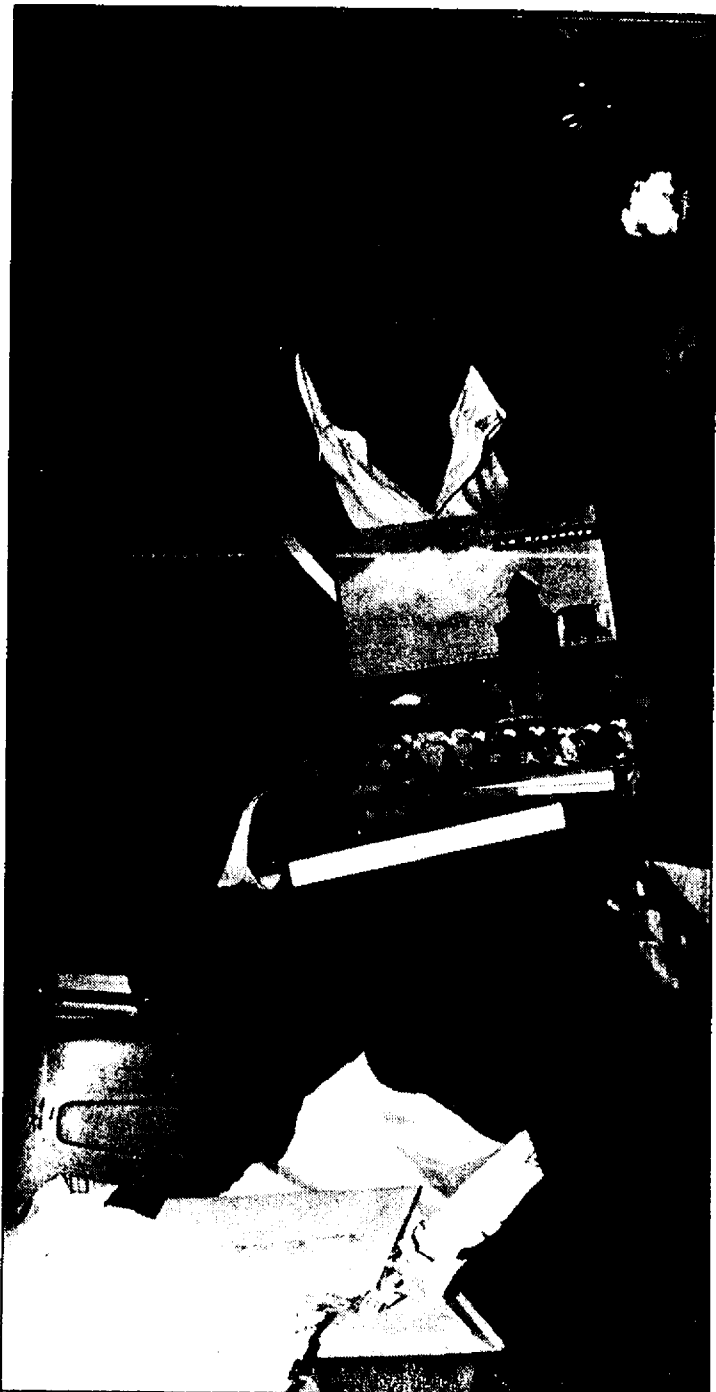

Drake has taken French classes on and off for years, including high school, college and Berlitz courses. He has attended Community Education Department French classes for 10 years. This year alone he is in French V and French II.

Drake recommends the French courses to anyone - and not just because serious French students who happen to turn 80 are treated to birthday parties.

"I have 24 French texts and storybooks in my library. I am supportive of such organizations as the Alliance Française de Grosse Pointe and the French Festival. So I am obviously in favor of things 'French,'" Drake says.

"I think that anyone - no matter their age - would enjoy learning French and becoming fluent in what is a very beautiful language."

Is there a lawyer in the house?

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Power in numbers. It's a fact of life that individuals working as a group can bring about changes no one person could accomplish.

Senior citizens know this. Working together, they have achieved a measure of social and economic security through political action and membership in various groups. Recipients of Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid have all benefitted from the watchful vigilance of those who make their voices heard at the least hint that benefits might be curtailed.

With 29 million older persons in the U.S. (1,039,000 in Michigan) accounting for 12 percent of the population, there are other developments. The medical profession is having a second look at the aging process and the treatment and possible cure for ailments common to older people. Courses in gerontology are now part of the medical curricula in many schools.

Now the legal profession is looking at the legal problems and concerns of older citizens.

The November 1988 Michigan Bar Journal addressed such issues in its section, "Law and the Aging Process." The section contained articles by experts in several fields on topics such as guardianship, health care planning, older clients and divorce, medical decision-making, estate planning, counseling older clients and on the aging process in general.

The articles are exhaustive, covering every possible point of law in relation to the particular area of expertise. Important and valuable reading for lawyers, they are also interesting resources for anyone who has a concern with the areas discussed.

The point is that it is reassuring to know that informed legal help is available if needed. Lawyers across the nation are developing specialized expertise in the ethical and substantive areas which are necessary to meet the needs of older clients.

According to Thomas V. Trainer, chairman and coeditor of the journal, such practitioners should have knowledge of such legal areas as estates, trusts and taxation, government benefits and administrative practices, health law and substitute decision making.

The practitioner must have an understanding of how these areas of law interact in particular cases. He or she must be able to advise and plan for disability as well as death and must remain currently informed about the bewildering array of statutes and regulations governing benefits upon which many older clients rely.

With such a background, an older person faced with a problem would feel secure that he or she is getting the best possible advice. They would know that their attorney would be able to deal with estate planning for death or incapacity, medical care and nursing home matters, consumer disputes, private pension problems and public benefit programs.

Unfortunately, these needs are not always met because older persons may fail to recognize when legal problems exist or may have difficulties such as the inability to pay for legal representation or a loss of physical or mental health.

In 1985, the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging surveyed Michigan's older population concerning a broad range of social, economic and demographic matters. The most serious problems reported by the survey audience were poor health, inadequate income and the inability to maintain their homes.

The survey audience was asked a number of questions about legal matters. Sixty-five percent reported they had a will. Approximately 22 percent of the respondents reported they had experienced one or more legal problems within the last year in areas of housing, private insurance, wills, family pressures or finance and taxes.

Only 15 percent of those affected received legal assistance for their problems, although half of them reported problems were with Social Security, Medicare or Medicaid - government programs which provide the major source of income and health coverage for older persons.

Seventy percent of the respondents said they would use a low-cost or free legal service if available. And in a list of 28 services the seniors said they'd like to see offered in their communities, legal assistance was ranked fourth, following transportation, home-delivered meals and home health care.

Such a survey makes a clear statement of the need Michigan's older citizens have for competent legal assistance.

The increases in the latest Consumer Price Index will likely mean more shoppers will be searching for good buys at the supermarket this month.

Pork looks to be a key "best buy" contender in the meat department as hog slaughter this year is 2 percent greater than it was a year ago. Supplies have tightened a bit since the first of the year, but the current lower prices are expected to continue this month. Loins, butts and hams are leading the featured list.

The latest U.S. Department of Agriculture cattle inventory report shows all cattle numbers (calf, beef cows, heifers and steers) higher than expected. This is surprising to most analysts and many of them question some parts of the report. Enough of the figures do check out, making it likely that beef prices will not rise this month — and could very likely decrease.

The most attractive prices of the year for tender beef steaks, especially sirloin, are likely to occur in March. Also look for features on rib-eye and strip steaks. Once warm weather gives any hint of returning and remaining, grill covers will come off and retail prices for the more desirable steaks will increase. Consumers with excess freezer storage and cash will want to take advantage of this buying window that occurs about this time each year.

Egg prices now are doing what they do every year before Easter — moving upward. Prices increased substantially during February.

In the produce department, look for high prices on most salad items to continue. Lettuce production areas in California and Arizona have had anything but vegetable-friendly weather.

The majority of tomatoes will come out of Mexico this month. (By April and May, Florida will be the main source.)

Contrary to popular opinion, fruits and vegetables produced in foreign countries and imported into the United States are checked for chemical residues and must meet our federal standards.

Basketmaking class set for April

The Association of Michigan Basketmakers (AMB) will hold its annual spring event, "A Basketmakers Holiday," on Saturday, April 1. The one-day presentation will take place at the Macomb Community College Campus, located at 44575 Garfield Road in Mount Clemens.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This event is an ongoing effort by the 1,200-plus AMB membership to perpetuate the art of basketry, as well as to educate the public about this ancient art form. Admission is free.

Attendees will be treated to educational basketry lectures and slide presentations, basket-making demonstrations and more. Special make-it and take-it mini classes will be available for beginners and children; a small fee will be charged.

In addition, AMB member basketmakers will be selling their hand-crafted baskets, basketmaking patterns and other basketry related products.

Spring craft show is Saturday

"Breath of Spring" represents a key event in the Ladies Guild program of fund raising activities. All of the proceeds will go to Lutheran High School North programs.

Life is good

OK. So my car has another 250 miles on it, my feet are sore and my butt has yet to awaken from the rest it received on the bleachers throughout the state.

Last week North, South and University Liggett School embarked on the second half of the season, a.k.a. the state playoffs.

So, off I went to hockey rinks, basketball games and volleyball matches. In between I found time to listen to the Pistons games, Wings games and even caught a bit of Bruce Williams on Talk Net.

I didn't have much time to visit with well-wishers throughout my excursion, but did express my thoughts in one gesture (careful) as I passed everyone -- I waved. It was difficult to attend every game, but it was easy to wrap myself in the blanket of athletic events that took me from St. Clair Shores to Allen Park back to Notre Dame High School.

I know I looked crazed at times, but does that give anyone an excuse to accuse me of being a sports junkie? I understand that my two-inch screen TV, my radio and my endless bulk of sports pages may not amuse some of you. However, when you have to split your loyalties sometimes the only way to stay attuned to it all is to keep one ear peeled to the radio, one to the game on the ice and the eyes on all the action. I did come out of it with a bad case of crossed eyes, however.

Maybe it was a bit of culture for me traveling abroad. Allen Park has a nifty little place to get a burger and about half way down I-75, there's a 7-11 that's always a favorite stop. Allen Park isn't a place you'd like to spend a week there one day, unlike Toledo of course, but you have to see the world when following local teams. The SCS Civic Arena has sub sandwiches that curb the appetite and Notre Dame's popcorn ranks up there with Orville's.

Believe it or not, it wasn't difficult to balance the schedule. The hardest thing for me to work around was the explanation I gave one police officer when I was eating my dinner in my car outside a rink.

Apparently, the officer thought I was a pilferer of some sort when he saw my dome light flickering on and off. A car thief I'm not, but a little apprehensive I am when an officer of the law approaches and asks, "What are you doing?"

"I'm eating my dinner, SIR!" I said quickly. I think he believed me, but he then asked why the light was going on and off. "Because my sandwich is falling apart, my pop has tipped over and my stats, rosters and programs are soaked and I'm trying to wipe things off." I said with a bit of humor. The officer said, "Sounds like you've had a long day." If he only knew it was a long 10 days.

I wouldn't have it any other way, however. I enjoy my job and all the rinks, gyms and courts I step into or onto. March Madness is noted for its extensive basketball schedule, but it's also tough when you have to attend volleyball and hockey, to boot. Not to mention the bout with the law.

Another difficult situation I couldn't get out of was fulfilling my Lenten obligation of attending church. But, when I went to watch hoops at Notre Dame, I figured the Big Guy was there watching over me and assuring me he would grant absolution.

District champs!

Blue Devil hoopers celebrate 1st title since 1981

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Don't plan the ticker-tape parade and don't pull out the party favors just yet because the South Blue Devils' basketball team is not ready to make a run down Kercheval.

After beating Southeastern, 61-55, to win their first district hoop title since 1981, the Blue Devils weren't thinking about waving to their contingent. Instead, they were focusing on the next step in this successful season.

South, which has now won 18 straight, got 19 points from senior forward Andy Ament, including nine of the team's last 10 points, to pull away from the pesky Jungaleers and advance to the first round of regional play against DeLaSalle at East Detroit. (The game was played Wednesday, March 8).

South scooted into the finals with a 65-58 win over Finney in the first round. In that game, Ament hit for 29 points and Chris Rowan added 18. Andy

'The district championship is definitely something to cherish.' — South's George Petrouleas.

Ayrault had eight rebounds and Joe Caldwell dished out 12 assists. The win over Finney avenged a 35-point loss in last year's playoffs.

"The district championship is definitely something to cherish," said South coach George Petrouleas. "The kids were vibrant and lively after the game, but after a while they all started talking about beating DeLaSalle. They knew that it was just another step for us."

The Devils (20-2) turned a two-point halftime deficit (25-23) into a 42-37 lead with 1:52 left in the third quarter after going on an 8-0 run. They then hung on to a 44-39 advantage at the end of three quarters.

"Going in we knew we had to get on top and stay on top," said Petrouleas. "We knew that Southeastern wasn't a good come-from-behind team."

Perpetuated by a stingy defense and a full-court press, the game belonged to the Devils throughout the second half.

"The key for us was when we went in to the locker room at the half and talked," Petrouleas said. "All we told the kids was no matter how poorly we played in the first half, it was still only a two-point ball game."

"To open the second half we began pressuring them and created some turnovers," Petrouleas added. "We got the ball and then finished it off at the other end by scoring a basket. We also forced them into fouling us and we made our free throws."

Speaking of free throws, South struggled to hit only 25 of 45 (55 percent) on the night, including a miserable 9 of 18 in the first half.

"When you look at those statistics, it's deceiving," Petrouleas said. "If we were to make those it wouldn't have even been a contest. But, since it was a close ball game those misses were magnified."

South had more than its share of free-throw attempts in the second half (27) and connected on 16 of those.

"It made a big difference," Petrouleas said. "They were forced to play catch-up and by doing so they began taking some chances and it resulted in us going to the free throw line. It's obvious how important it is to make those freebies."

To start the game, South endured Southeastern's run-and-gun game and trailed by only two, 13-11, at the end of eight minutes. In that time, South's Andy Ayrault, who finished with 13 points and 11 rebounds, scored six points. Rowan tossed in 12 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

"One of our goals was to pound the ball inside," Petrouleas said. "It took some time for us to do it, but eventually we did. They really didn't have anybody that could match up with our big guys so we had to take it inside."

At the same token, the inside game was also a nemesis for the Devils in the first half.

"I didn't make an actual account of this, but I did make a mental note that we missed at least five or six uncontested shots," Petrouleas said. "We would get the ball inside or grab the rebound and put it back up, but we would miss."

South outrebounded the Jungaleers 43-33.

Also in the second half, South began to pull away by "finishing up" after breaking the press.

"We continued to break pressure, but the difference was hitting the baskets when we got down there," Petrouleas said. "If we didn't hit those, I think it would have been much of the same that we saw in the first half."

Southeastern controlled the tempo from the beginning, but South eventually incorporated its scheme despite the Jungaleers' unsuccessful attempt at playing keep away in the second quarter. Southeastern tried to retain possession by going into a deliberate offensive attack when it sensed South coming on.

"I think it hurt them more than it hurt us," Petrouleas said. "The longer the stall offense goes, the more susceptible they become to turnovers. Our kids showed great patience and poise by not panicking."

Southeastern turned the ball over three times while trying to stall.

"We have stressed all year that good defense creates good things on offense," Petrouleas said. "We wanted to work hard on defense and did. Eventually, that's what picked us up and got us going."

Southeastern outscored South, 8-2, to take a 19-13 lead with 5:43 to play in the first half and Petrouleas thinks it was caused by the inability to get into an offense.

"There were times there when we were playing out of control," he said. "But fortunately our defense hung in there and did the job. It was tough for us not to get caught up in their transition game. For the most part we stayed out of it, though."

Against Finney, Rowan held his own as he poured in 18 points. As a team, South shot 48 percent (23-48) from the floor and 75 percent (18-24) from the line.

"It was the first time in the last 13 games that we shot under 50 percent from the floor," Petrouleas said.

But you don't fix it unless it's broke.

The winner of the South/DeLaSalle game will play the winner of the Southwestern/Lake Shore game in the finals at 7 p.m. March 10. The game will be held at East Detroit High School.

Knights can't capitalize in 3-1 loss to DCDS

By Rob Fulton

Simply put, the University Liggett School boys' hockey team wasn't outplayed anywhere but on the scoreboard in the regional finals at Yack Arena March 6.

ULS, which finished the season 20-2-3, was eliminated from the Class B-C-D playoffs after losing to Detroit Country Day School (DCDS), 3-1.

The Knights advanced to the finals after beating Allen Park Cabrini, 5-2, and Cranbrook, 4-3.

In those games, ULS was led by Andrew VanDeweghe's three goals, including the game-winner over Cranbrook. Also in that game, ULS battled back from a 3-1 deficit.

Against DCDS, Jesse Kasom netted ULS' first goal with only 49 seconds gone in the first period. That lead was relinquished when Aaron Sims and Marty Pronovost beat ULS netminder Mark Sullivan to give the Yellowjackets a 2-1 lead after one period.

Sullivan faced 26 shots.

"I knew that first period was going to come back and haunt us," said ULS coach John Fowler. "We had some great scoring opportunities, but we didn't put the puck in the net."

Sims sealed the win with his second goal of the game at the 3:05 mark of the third period.

"After their second goal we could have just called the game," Fowler said. "It could have been called not for the lack of chances, but for the lack of capitalizing. We had so many good opportunities, but we failed to deliver."

ULS drilled DCDS goalie Jeff Robinson with 28 shots, but couldn't get over the hurdle that Fowler believed would have changed things.

"We needed another goal, that's obvious," he said. "The longer we went without scoring, the more we started to press and the stiffer we became."

Slowing down DCDS not enough for ULS

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Two quarters of "perfect basketball" wasn't enough for the University Liggett School Knights' basketball team March 2, as it was bounced from district play by Detroit Country Day School (DCDS), 53-38, at St. Clement High School.

The loss also snapped ULS' 11-game winning streak, causing them to finish 17-4 on the season.

ULS failed to advance past round one of the district tournament for the third straight season, but there's good reason for that. In 1987, the Knights faced No. 3 ranked St. Clement and one year later drew top-rated St. Martin DePorres. This year the snake continued its unintentional bite by matching ULS with DCDS, the state's top team in Class C.

"It's been very tough for our kids," said ULS coach Chuck Wright. "They have worked so hard and not to win in the district playoffs is discouraging, but I think it'll make it that much sweeter the day we do beat a team like Country Day."

Swimmers finish 10-1; best record in 3 years

On Thursday, March 2, the University Liggett School varsity swimmers finished the best season in their three-year history with a dual meet victory over Marine City High School and Marine City Holy Cross.

The Knights finished 10-1.

As has been the case in other meets this year, ULS needed a first in the final event to defeat Marine City, 112-105. Holy Cross finished with just 46 points.

"I am pleased with the team's performance this year," said ULS coach Liz Stavale. "The kids really came through when we needed them."

Many swimmers performed very well all season, and assistant coach Tom Horsley stated, "Freshman Greg Behling was truly outstanding for us."

With a strong team returning next season, ULS should be able to continue its winning ways.

Despite strong efforts by hitters Brooke Hohmeyer and Lynn Sinkel, and setter Shirley Kim, the Lady Knights lost to Ann Arbor Greenhills, 15-6, 15-5.

On March 2, the Knights faced Oakland Christian and were tagged with another loss. Sylvia Ristic and Diann Imbriaco had nine spikes and 12 sets, respectively.

In district play, the Lady Knights were beaten, 15-8, 15-4, by a tough Lutheran East team.

Ali Frederick and Katrina Linthorst-Holman led the Knights.

Southeastern steals game from Norsemen

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

For the first time in his six-year tenure with the Grosse Pointe North basketball program, Coach George Olman finished the season under the .500 mark.

In 1983-84, Olman finished 8-13.

Olman, whose team lost four straight heading into the district playoffs at Notre Dame, found himself in a tough coaching predicament as his team bowed out of the tourney with a 64-56 loss to Southeastern.

The loss to the Jungaleers was North's 11th, against 10 wins this season.

Southeastern stymied North and prevented the Norsemen from setting up a half-court game, and consequently had to follow the row that Southeastern hoed.

"Going into the game we wanted to control the tempo, execute against their defensive pressure and rebound with them," said Olman. "We played too much transition basketball and that stopped us from getting into a set offense."

From the get go, Southeastern applied a full-court press that North was prepared for, but was constantly bothered by.

"They (Southeastern) were showing us everything we had worked on in practice," Olman said. "The first thing (to break the press) we were to look for was there, but we just weren't looking for it. We were trying to dribble through everyone, instead of passing."

When they did foil Southeastern's attack, the Norsemen wouldn't cash in on opportunity.

"When we would break pressure, we found ourselves in a 3-on-2, or 3-on-3 situation and instead of pulling the ball back and setting it up, we would continue with the transition game," Olman said. "That's a great way to play when the ball is going in, but we weren't hitting our shots."

North shot 47 percent (21-44) from the floor, three points above its season average, and hit 12 of 19 free throws (63 percent).

"Sixty-three percent from the line is high for us," Olman said, "but in an eight-point game you should be making them."

Southeastern's full-court pressure and transition game continued to give North fits in the second half as it struggled to get out of the niche Southeastern created: a 33-29 deficit at the intermission.

"At halftime we made some adjustments for our press offense by moving some guys to the outside, but we still weren't looking for them," Olman said. "We wanted to get ourselves into a set offense, but we didn't have anybody who could take us out of the transition game."

Junior Charlie Stumb, who eventually fouled out, and senior point guard Derek Lawson, combined for 27 points, and senior center Scott Clein hit for 11 points, the only Norsemen in double figures. Matt Brady, who sat out the first quarter with a lingering Achilles' tendon injury, entered in the second quarter in which North outscored Southeastern, 19-16.

In the final 16 minutes, North showed signs of life thanks to its defense.

"Many times we'd come down and play good defense," Olman said, "and we'd create a turnover or grab the rebound. But, then we'd get into the transition game and miss shots. That wasted our defensive efforts."

Although they couldn't manage to control the tempo and successfully crack the pressure, the Norsemen did outrebound the Jungaleers, 25-17.

Not being able to follow its own map was the biggest let-down for North, but Olman also attributed the loss to the fatigue factor.

"I think we were physically tired and that led to mental mistakes," he said. "We just never got untracked and had to play with their game plan."

Charlie Stumb led the Norsemen hoop team with 14 points in a losing effort to Southeastern.

Hockey

"Once we got down, our hands became a little harder and we had some pucks bounce off our sticks," Fowler continued. "It just wasn't our night for hockey."

One minute into the third period, DCDS picked up a minor bench penalty and ULS went on the power play. That was killed by the Yellowjackets. ULS got a second chance a few minutes later, and the result was much the same.

"The game was on the line," Fowler said. "We set it up a couple of times, but they cleared us out. It was difficult for us to settle the puck down and work it around."

It was also tough for Fowler's top line of Shannon Nowowiecki, Doug Wood and VanDeweghe to get untracked.

"I think the upshot of the whole game was that they were effectively checking our first line," Fowler said. "That line rarely put a few good passes together because DCDS was all over it."

As Wood and Nowowiecki go, so go the Knights. However, Wood's mobility was hindered after he sustained a severely bruised ankle at the end of the first period. He eventually returned to the lineup, but it was obvious he was not at 100 percent.

"Having Doug going only half speed really hurt us," said Fowler. "He was effective, but wasn't dominant. I don't think it affected the entire team because our second line was working hard. I was hoping they could cough up a goal, but it was just not our night.

"I'm taking nothing away from DCDS, however. They just played a better game than we did," Fowler added.

By reaching the regional finals, ULS was one of eight B-C-D teams chasing the state title.

"I am very proud of the way the kids played," Fowler said. "Not just against DCDS, but the whole season. Everyone on this team worked hard. It's a little discouraging to lose when you get this close, but the kids should be holding their heads high. They've done a fabulous job this season."

Lady Blue Devils edge North, get spiked in volleyball final by Regina

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

South volleyball coach Cindy Sharpe's team came one step away from being crowned a district volleyball champion, but it will still retain the rights to the proverbial city championship.

The Lady Devils (20-8) advanced to the district finals at South, but will go no further, thanks to Regina, a top-10 team.

Regina, the defending district champ, beat South 15-12, 16-4, to advance to regional play at Kimball March 11. South, which defeated rival Grosse Pointe North, 17-15, 15-7, in the opening round, cruised past Southeastern (15-4, 15-1) in the semifinals, but eventually ran out of intensity and emotion in the finals.

"Intensity and emotion can carry you through, but you have to create the opportunities and have enough left physically in the end," said South coach Cindy Sharpe. "Players have to use emotion to run momentum. That's the essence of volleyball, but we just didn't have it in the end."

Sharpe couldn't attribute her team's weak finish to anything, not even the grueling games with North.

"I was more concerned about North than I was Regina," she said, "but I don't think we used up all our emotion and intensity with the North match. If anything it helped us prepare mentally for Regina."

North/South matches are traditionally a battle. North snapped an eight-year hex earlier in the year by beating South, but this time around the Devils prevailed to win the war.

"It was a big match for us," Sharpe said. "The girls wanted to win that one pretty badly because they (North) beat us to start the season. My biggest concern was playing well enough to win. I didn't want our emotions and intensity to get the best of us."

With North out of the way, South, which won the Eastern Michigan League at 12-2, could focus on Regina and hope to avenge its 1988 district final loss.

"The games were very close," Sharpe said. "We played very well, but we didn't have quite enough happen for us. To win it, I think we would have needed a few more blocks, a couple better sets and a couple better hits. If we could have got those, then things could have been different."

Although South came out of a tougher bracket than Regina, the Devils weren't affected by it. Sharpe anticipated Regina may be a little flat because they only had to go through the motions against Denby (15-1, 15-6) and Osborn (15-3, 15-7), but that was not the case as the sleeping dog awakened.

"Regina didn't have to do anything against those teams," she said. "Regina didn't have a tough match until the finals. Again, I think it was to our advantage to play a tougher bracket."

"Unfortunately Regina just didn't sleep long enough," Sharpe stated.

Chris Schulte, who now owns nine of 16 South records, led the team with 15 kills and Traci Lee had 11. Emily Ayrault had seven blocks against Regina and GERALYN Bocci had five blocks. Ann Gross also "played well."

"All season long we have played well against teams like Regina," Sharpe said. "Regina was obviously more physical than we were, but I thought we were well prepared. I just couldn't draw enough out of them (the kids) physically in the end."

Spiewak sits out; North bows out

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

With his top player sidelined with a shoulder injury, North volleyball coach Charles Buhagiar watched his team fall to South in the district tournament, 17-15, 15-7.

Mary Spiewak, who Buhagiar has relied on throughout the season, suffered the injury two days before the playoffs, forcing Buhagiar to reshuffle his lineup.

"We had to change our offense and defense because Mary wasn't there," he said. "She plays all the way around. She hits from the front row and passes from the back row. It took two people to replace her."

The absence of Spiewak was obvious as the Lady Norsemen struggled to get into their offense.

"Our passing was good, but the problem was that we didn't do anything with the ball," Buhagiar said. "We played pretty well, but we just let down and never really ran our offense. I think South just played better because they ran their offense. We also gave them too many free balls and too many second chances."

Buhagiar claims that the lack of offense may have contributed to the lack of intensity.

"It's easy to stay fired up when you're hitting the ball," Buhagiar said. "It's hard to get excited and stay excited when you are hitting the ball all over."

Buhagiar, conceding that his team was outplayed, was disappointed only because he's witnessed better performances.

"I thought we could have played better," he said. "We have played better. South really played well, though."

North (14-6, 4-4) was led by Kelli Gianunzio, Kerry Peters, Jane Rice, Laurin Schultz and Kari Andrewes.

Trying to reflect on his first season as the Norsemen volleyball coach, Buhagiar stated his fondest memory was beating South for the first time in eight years, but he was more pleased with his team's turnaround from a year ago.

"Last year I think their record was just the opposite of this year," he said. "This year we had a three-game losing skid, but came back to finish the season with four straight wins."

"The girls turned themselves around very well," Buhagiar continued. "They came along during the season and I think you can contribute that to the fine leadership we had on this team."

Gianunzio and Spiewak were voted to the All-Macomb Area Conference team.

Norsemen pick up third strike from Southgate Anderson

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

After losing twice to Southgate Anderson during the regular season, one would think the Grosse Pointe North hockey team would be done with the Titans.

Wrong. The third time was only a charm for the Downriver team as they shutout the Norsemen, 4-0, March 2.

In the state's toughest hockey regional at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena, the Norsemen used a two-method system to try and upend the state's top-ranked team, but it didn't work as North was eliminated from the playoffs.

North, which finished 15-6-3 overall, earned the right to play Anderson (23-0-1) after eliminating Wyandotte Roosevelt, 10-5. In that game, John Ferguson paced North with two goals and four assists. Tony Giumetti added a hat trick and Peter Mourad scored twice.

Anderson, which racked up 16 goals and limited North to only two in their first two games, capitalized on two crucial errors that ended the second period and dictated the rest of the game.

North, trailing only 1-0 with 11 seconds to play in the second period, yielded a second goal and then played the first two minutes of the third period short-handed.

"That was definitely the difference," said North coach Mike Manzella. "We were going to head into the locker room down by only a goal, but we gave up a weak goal and took a penalty. It turned things around."

The game took a quick turn because North was carrying the play in the second period and it was obvious they were about to strike. When they didn't, it was still obvious the momentum would carry over into the final period.

"I just kept telling the kids it was going to come," Manzella said in reference to beating Titan netminder Richard Nagy. "We hit the crossbar once and had plenty of quality shots on goal. Instead of going into the third period down by only a goal to the state's best team, we dug ourselves a hole."

With the second period expired, North had to go to work on the 2-0 deficit. Anderson, which is supported by three of the Metro East League's top scorers, picked up a quick power-play goal early in the third period and that's when the trek uphill became even more of a battle.

"That third goal did a lot of damage," Manzella stated. "Let's face it, when they got that third goal the game was a little out of reach."

Manzella believes the game was out of reach because of the talented Titan squad, which added the fourth goal midway through the final 15 minutes.

"Realistically, they outmuscled us," he said. "They are so strong and so talented."

Senior tri-captain Giumetti, supports Manzella's statement.

"They've got some big defense-men," Giumetti said. "Their defense-men cleared us out after we got off a good first shot, but we needed two shots to beat them and we just didn't get them."

The Norsemen recorded 22 shots on goal and Matt Kreig stopped 27 Titan shots.

Because Anderson forechecks and backchecks so well, Manzella and his staff worked diligently during the week to implement a two-fold counter-attack just for this game.

"We knew we could pass the puck from defensemen to defense-men," Manzella said, "because Anderson overloads one side so we wanted to break the puck out by simply reversing it immediately."

According to Manzella, that worked effectively, but so did plan B.

"Anderson sends three guys in to flood the zone so when they dumped the puck in we wanted to make sure we got the puck out of the zone under any circumstances," Manzella continued. "We were taking away their offense in our defensive zone. We only worked on it for two days and I think the kids executed very well."

Although it's difficult to slow a hockey game down, the Norsemen geared for a slower game that would involve more team defense.

"Going in we knew we would give up more shots than we'd get," said Manzella. "We knew we had to slow the game down and play strong defense. We did that for two periods, but then I think we lost a little bit of our concentration. We had our chances. We just didn't put the puck in the net."

Manzella, whose team advanced to the state finals in 1987 only to lose to Alpena, had hopes his team would make a return trip, but maybe it peaked too soon in the season.

"No, I really don't think we did," said Giumetti. "We had a rough two games before the regional, but for the most part I think we played at a very consistent level all season long."

"It's disappointing to lose this one," Giumetti said. "Especially after being so close to winning it all my sophomore year. I really felt we were close to getting there again. We just didn't capitalize on some of our opportunities."

Amigo

Billed as "Mexico City's newest and hottest young musical group," the 24 young entertainers who make up the touring Amigo ensemble will present a high-energy program of song, dance and instrumental music at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts at 7 p.m. on Sunday, March 12. Tickets at $10 for adults and $9 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday.

Dancers to present 60th spring concert

The Wayne State University Dance Company will present its 60th annual Spring Dance Concert at the Community Arts Auditorium Friday, March 10 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 11 at 2 and 8 p.m.

WSU Dance Department faculty and students produce two full programs of dance each year. In addition to formal theater productions, the company performs in schools and community centers throughout the metropolitan area.

Featured in the concert will be "Time Piece," choreographed and staged for the Company by guest artist-in-residence Lynn Wenning Bank, who received her WSU bachelor's degree in dance in 1982.

She is currently an assistant professor at Creighton University in Omaha. She has been awarded for choreographic excellence both regionally and nationally by the American College Dance Festival Association.

Eva Jablonowska Powers, director of the WSU Dance Company, will join Tom Frank and James Lentini, a new member of the WSU Music Department faculty, in collaboration on a new work.

Slide projections of photographs by Frank will create a background and playground of movement with abstract design for Powers' choreography with six dancers. An original electronic score by Lentini titled "Chautuga" completes a triple aesthetic of movement, sight and sound.

Tickets are available at the Dance Department located at 125 Matthaei or at the door. Admission at the door is $6, or $5 for senior citizens, MDA members, students and advance sales. For group rates or more information, call 577-4273.

'Scarlet Pimpernel' at Hilberry through April 15

"The Scarlet Pimpernel," the classic adventure tale by Baroness Orczy, adapted for the stage by Beverly Cross, runs at the Hilberry Theatre through April 15, in repertory with "Wild Honey" and "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail."

Beverly Cross's spectacular adaptation of the Baroness Orczy original was first seen at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, London, starring Donald Sinden as the Scarlet Pimpernel. Other adaptations include the recent television production with Jane Seymour and the earlier screen version with Leslie Howard.

The story is one of thrills and chills as the dashing Scarlet Pimpernel risks everything to snatch helpless innocents from the jaws of Madame la Guillotine in revolutionary-torn, 18th century France.

Heading the cast is James Vezina, veteran Hilberry actor, as the Scarlet Pimpernel, Marilyn Mays (Best Actress, Detroit Free Press, 1988) as Marguerite and Tony Dobrowolski (Detroit Free Press Kisicki Award, 1988) as Chauvelin.

The production is directed by Anthony Schmitt, who received last season's award for best directing from both the Detroit Free Press and The Detroit News.

For ticket information, call the Hilberry Theatre box office, Cass and Hancock, at 577-2972.

'Mighty Quinn' is entertaining

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

The wild beat of island music creates an exciting background for "The Mighty Quinn." Set in a Caribbean island that resembles Jamaica, it's a story full of surprises.

A light-hearted whodunit, it involves a ghastly murder, island politics, Washington interference, voodoo and some slick sleuthing by Xavier Quinn (Denzel Washington), chief of the local police.

Quinn, who is referred to by the islanders as the "Mighty Quinn," is serenaded on occasion with a Bob Dylan song of the same name.

His job is to maintain peace on the island. Tourism is a big business there and every effort is made to make it a pleasant retreat where visitors can relax and enjoy themselves without any worries beyond that it might possibly rain.

When an important businessman who has been decapitated is found floating in the hotel pool, there is a big rush to cover up the crime. Over Quinn's protests, the body is taken to the airport to be flown out before an autopsy can be made.

It is expedient to name a suspect, so Maubee (Robert Townsend), a high-spirited dreadlocked native, is tagged for the murder although there is no evidence linking him to the crime.

Maubee is Quinn's boyhood friend and while he is a ne'er-do-

eral intriguing characters, among them is a rumpled American who arrives suddenly on the island.

Another is an island witch, Ubu Pearl (Esther Rolle) who smokes a pipe, practices voodoo and keeps a trunkful of poisonous snakes. Ubu is a character you will not soon forget.

Like all good murder mysteries, "The Mighty Quinn" has a surprising ending.

Each member of the cast performs with an engaging ease, particularly Denzel Washington who was nominated for an Oscar last year for his portrayal of Stephen Biko in "Cry Freedom." Low-keyed and intense as the police chief, he moves easily into the playful role of a loving husband and the fun-loving friend of his mischievous boyhood friend, Maubee.

Robert Townsend who wrote, directed and starred in his own comedy "Hollywood Shuffle," outdoes himself as the errant Maubee. He has just the right timing and comic touch to keep the character funny without turning it into a caricature.

The film is enhanced by its inclusion of life on the island and shots of the exotic scenery.

It is likely that the hypnotic beat of reggae music that is heard throughout the film and featured in many scenes will be a drawing card.

The scenery, the music and the performances of Washington and Townsend make "The Mighty Quinn" worthwhile.

Film

With the help of the coroner, Dr. Raj (Keye Luke), he discovers that the victim was dead before he was decapitated and put in the pool.

Besides trying to prove his friend's innocence, Quinn has another problem. He has to find Maubee and when he does, keep him out of range long enough to find out if he has any knowledge of the crime.

Based on a novel, "Finding Maubee," "The Mighty Quinn" is stacked with many levels of actions from a high-level cover-up to the reconciliation of a marriage on the rocks.

The marriage problem is Quinn's own. He is married to Lola (Sharyl Lee Ralph), who complains about Quinn spending too much time trying to vindicate his friend. Her real worry should have been the beautiful wife (Mini Rogers) of the owner of an elegant hotel who would like to add Quinn to her list of conquests.

In the course of Quinn's investigation, the audience meets sev-

'Kinjite' is pure, Grade A sleaze

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"Kinjite," according to the film's subtitle, is a Japanese word meaning "forbidden subjects." That's an appropriate tag for this picture. Unfortunately, that's about the only thing that's appropriate for this picture.

"Kinjite" is not entertainment. It is Grade A trash, fueled by racial stereotype and sexual deviation. Everything repulsive and distasteful in society is documented in this picture. The underbelly of civilization is glorified in the name of entertainment.

The same things that make us turn off the evening news in disgust — the same things that make us ill when we read the morning paper — are packaged in "Kinjite" as entertainment.

The same things we're calling tragic and terrible in the world are being called fun here. That's the assumption, isn't it, when audiences are paying to watch something? Between handfuls of popcorn and gummy bears we're supposed to watch innocent children being molested and otherwise abused by the bad guys.

We're supposed to watch pimps and others — including the same innocent children — sniff lines of cocaine with the same nonchalance they eat their dinner.

We're supposed to watch excessive violence played out as justice. Here's a cop who forces the bad guy to swallow a watch whole. Here's a small girl — snatched from her grade school playground — who's forced to give herself to a sleazy businessman.

This is entertainment? Oh sure. Movie types would have us believe this is OK simply because it's a Charles Bronson movie. After all, what are we supposed to expect from a Charles Bronson movie? As long as he does the few obligatory scenes in which he laments the terrible state of the world, most of the other proceedings in the film are justified, right?

Wrong. Granted, there have been other cops and robbers movies. There have been other movies where, for various artistic purposes, the morally degenerate are given a higher standing than they might deserve. And there is a small genre of movies that serve a societal good by shocking the audience into action.

"Kinjite" does not fit into any of those categories. Its paper-thin plot and cheap production values are indication enough that the film aspires to be nothing more than a quick money-maker.

It's funny how we can sit on our societal high horse and criticize Bob Probert for getting involved with drugs. Or Ted Bundy for being a serial killer. Or Bob Guccione for publishing what some call pornography. But when we close the newspaper or turn off the evening news, "Kinjite" is what we're watching for escapism.

At the risk of being more philosophical than I have a right to be, maybe there's a sociological phenomenon at work here. If this is what we're calling entertainment now — if it truly is what we want to see on our movie screens — then society has no one to blame but itself for the deviant losers it sometimes produces.

Caddies win

Daniel Blair and Laura Bova of Grosse Pointe have each received an Evans Scholarship from the Evans Scholarship Foundation.

Blair, a senior at South, and Bova, a senior at North, were golf caddies at the Country Club of Detroit and the Lochmoor Club, respectively.

The scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis considering caddie record, the need for financial aid to attend college, and their high school academic record.

The scholarships are one-year grants which may be renewed for up to four years with an estimated value in excess of $10,000. Evans grants include full tuition and housing, usually at one of the 14 major universities where the Foundation owns and maintains Evans Scholar Chapter Houses.

The scholarship program was initiated by famed amateur golfer Chick Evans in 1930.

Both scholarship winners will be attending Michigan State University this fall.

Letter winner

Sara Wasinger, a graduate of Grosse Pointe South, has earned a varsity letter in soccer from Bowdoin College in Maine.

Bowdoin is a liberal arts college with 1,350 students.

Wasinger was a prolific scorer for South's girls' soccer team.
