Grosse Pointe News typesetter/artist Robert M. Coe, 47, was killed about 2 a.m. at Alter and Lozier, one block west of Mack and about two blocks from Grosse Pointe Park. With Coe at the time was his brother, Thomas, who escaped unharmed. He testified in the trial.

"It went on a lot longer than I thought it would," said Thomas Coe, who used vacation time and personal days to attend the trial. "I now know what it feels like when defense attorneys make you feel like you're on trial.

Robert and Thomas Coe were in Detroit at the time to aid another brother, Charles, whose car keys had been taken during a mugging earlier in the evening near the spot where the shooting occurred. When the three brothers were unable to hot-wire the car to get it home, Thomas and Robert Coe went to a pay phone outside a party store on Alter at Lozier to call a wrecker,

While Robert and Thomas Coe were awaiting the tow truck, they were approached by Baldwin, who had walked out from behind the store. He pulled a handgun and demanded the Coes' money and wallets. At that point, Robert

During the trial, it was learned that Thomas Coe may have unknowingly sought help from tory sentence of life in prison the very house at which his without parole. The 19-year-old brother's killer, Baldwin, had been staying.

It was also learned during the trial that the gun Baldwin used belonged to the neighborhood for anyone who wanted to use it.

A tipster, who recognized Baldwin from a police composite sketch using physical details provided by Thomas Coe, gave police Baldwin's name. He was later arrested hiding in a home on nearby Maryland in Detroit. He maintained his innocence throughout the trial.

The defense attorney, David Redstone of St. Clair Shores, tried to show that Baldwin had been improperly identified. He pointed out that Thomas Coe's description of the gumman did not include a light mustache, which Baldwin wears. Also, Thomas Coe described the suspect as wearing a floppy hat. Several neighborhood residents testified Baldwin had never worn a hat in all the years they'd known him.

The case was also jeopardized by a key witness who had previously under oath identified Baldwin as the gunman. But when she took the stand before Detroit Recorder's Judge Wendy M. Although there are no set rules regarding how much to cut the assessment, most Shores homes were reduced 50 percent, with one home's assessment lowered 54 percent.

Hardship exemptions are only good for a year. A resident must reapply each year to qualify for the exemption.

"We have no specific guide-Foran. "Income, assets and value of property are taken into consideration, but its up to the board of review.'

The City had six hardship cases in 1993, Foran said.

Although the City did not indicate which properties received these exemptions, none had a reduction of more than 29 percent.

'We look to see if these are permanent situations," he said. 'Is it fair to be writing off the taxes for those living in large homes if they can change their situation."

The Grosse Pointe Woods property tax exemption application, taken from the General Property Tax Act, states: "The real and personal property of persons, who, in the judgment of the supervisor and board of review, by reason of poverty, are unable to contribute toward the public charges is exempt from taxation under this act."

Applicants must submit federal and state income tax returns, along with their property homestead credit form for tax relief. The Woods also looks at the applicant's assets when determining eligibility for the exemption.

Although the Woods did not identify properties that received hardship exemptions in 1993, a number of residents received substantial reductions, one of more than 63 percent.

with true cash values of more than $100,000," said Woods assessor Bill Knapp. "We feel that with the homestead tax credit, people should pay at least 3.5 percent of their income toward property taxes."

Knapp said that most of the applicants for the exemption were living in homes valued at under $100,000 and without other assets.

"It's hard to justify poverty for someone living in $300,000 home," he said.

Grosse Pointe Park does not have a set procedure for poverty and hardship exemptions, but no resident saw more than a 30 percent reduction, except for properties that suffered fire damage.

"It's done on an individual basis," said Park assessor Diann Lulis. "Anything that contributes to a person's projected income is presented to the board.

Lulis said there were between eight and 10 hardship exemptions granted in 1993.

The state has not written specific guidelines regarding cutoff figures and time lengths for poverty and hardship exemptions.

Park residents protest assessments By Jim Stickford

Staff Writer

Like night follows day, protests follow the release of the year's property value assessments in Grosse Pointe Park. Many Park residents spent much of last week appealing their property assessments, said Diann Lulis of the assessor's office. She expects, when the final count is complete, about 200 to 250 residents will have filed for review of her department's property assessments.

"There is no single reason why residents seek relief," said Lulis. "But I think a factor has been, until this year, the fact that Michigan property owners have borne most of the burden of taxes in the state. That has made them angry, and one thing they can do about it is to seek relief through a lower property assessment."

Lulis declined to estimate how many residents might receive a reduction of their assessments, but she did say that in previous years about onethird were granted relief.

Several residents interviewed for this article declined to give their names for the record, but they were willing to give their reasons for protesting, which basically boiled down to money.

"People often seek reviews because they have a hard time paying, or because they feel their assessment does not reflect the true market value of their property," said Lulis.

"We, on the board of review, try to judge each case on its individual merits. People should bring in evidence like pictures of their property and two comparable pieces of property, as well as evidence of the market value of those properties. They should also present their evidence in a clear and precise manner."

Another common reason why people appeal their assessment is the condition of their home.

Lulis said that "people often think they should be granted a reduction because they haven't done maintenance on their driveways, roofs and the like. Those are maintenance items that should be kept up, and the assessor's office operates on the premise that homes are in good to fair shape.'

On the other hand, homeowners aren't punished with a higher assessment if they keep the house in excellent condition. Assessments are only affected if something is added to the house like a garage or another bathroom.

"We don't reward people for not taking care of their house and we don't punish people for taking care of their home," said Lulis.

Assessors are licensed by the state and use a complicated formula that determines property values by averaging out the sales prices of homes in the city over a two-year period.

The sale of one home, said Lulis, doesn't affect the overall assessments in a neighborhood because a single sale is too small to influence the average.

But with the passage of Proposal A, assessors will be changing the formula for determining property values. This formula will make it easier for a single sale in a neighborhood to affect the value of homes in the neighborhood.

"Assessments didn't go up much in 1994," said Lulis. "But come 1995, they could change a lot on an individual basis based on individual sales.'

Village's Hadden's of London offers luxury for the thrifty

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

The first thing a customer notices when walking into Hadden's of London in the Village is the scent of the herbs, the potpourri, the soaps and perfumes that are sold there. It intrigues and lures the customer to explore what the store has to offer.

Hadden's specializes in the little luxuries, the bath oils, the special teas and the vintagestyle dresses that don't cost a lot, but make life better.

"When it comes to luxuries, a lot of people don't have $100 to spend on a pair of trousers," said Hadden's owner Jennifer Hadden. "But they do have $10 to spend on a special bubble bath to which they can treat themselves."

Hadden's was started by Jennifer's mother Barbara in 1986. Jennifer bought her mother out in 1990.

"I had never intended to work in the store," said Hadden. "I have a degree in journalism from Central Michigan University, and expected to be a journalist. My parents were moving to Arizona, and I had just moved back from there and worked in the store. I found out that I liked it, so in 1990 I bought the store."

"I was kind of surprised to get the loan," Hadden said. "I give them a lot of credit for loaning the money to a women who has never owned a business before and had almost no credit history. They've been great to me, and I have the loan almost paid off."

The shop is called Hadden's of London because it sells Crabtree & Evelyn toiletries, which do come from London. But not all the products are Englishmade.

The old fashioned hats are made in California the old way by milliners. Hadden began selling California-made Victorian-styled summer tea dresses when she took over. She also sells a variety of gourmet coffees and teas, as well as scented candles, a wide selection of potpourris and stuffed animals.

"A point I like to stress is that everything we sell is environmentally friendly," Hadden said. "Animals were not used in the product testing, and even the packages of most everything sold can be recycled. That's very important to me."

We also now sell boar's hair bristle shaving brushes and shaving soaps imported from England. By including more products aimed at men, I've been able to improve my business."

Much to her surprise, Hadden has found that she really likes working in retailing. She plans to continue to operate her store and looks forward to being in the Village for a long time.

Personal computers aid taxpayers

A personal computer can make filing a federal income tax return faster and easier this year, said IRS district director John Hummel.

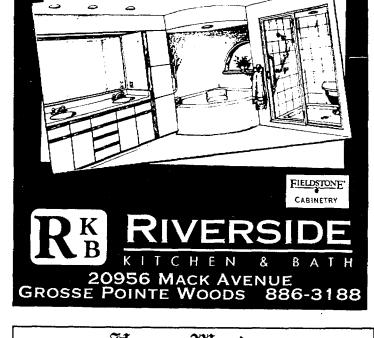

Form 1040PC can be prepared on a home computer using commercial software that has been tested and approved by the IRS. The 1040PC program only prints the lines that have entries, omitting all the unnecessary blank lines. The result is a three-column list that can cut a regular 12-page return to just two pages."

The electronic form can be processed quickly by the IRS. "And that means faster refunds, usually in about three weeks," he said. "The form even allows for refunds to be directly deposited into a bank account, which further reduces the time it takes to receive a refund.

The software does all the work. After the user types in the information, it does the calculations and gives the taxpayer the results. Then it's just a matter of signing the 1040PC answer sheet, attaching the W-2s and mailing the form to the service center.

Nearly 200,000 Michigan taxpayers filed 1040PCs last year. "We estimate that the numbers will continue to grow as more and more people take advantage of this fast and easy way to file their tax return, Hummel said.

Park city council finally passes an RV storage ordinance

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

After six years of debate. an ordinance restricting the parking of boats and RVs in Grosse Pointe Park was passed Monday night by the city council.

The council chamber was packed with residents on both sides of the issue. At one point in the debate, Mayor Palmer Heenan was forced to admonish members of the audience for making noise while others were speaking.

The debate centered around two proposed ordinances, one drafted by the city's planning commission and one offered by the city's ordinance review committee. The planning commission's recommendation called for banning RV (recreational vehicle) and boat storage on private property except in a ommendation was finally garage.

The ordinance review committee's recommendation called for some restrictions on the types of vehicles that can be stored on private property. The proposed ordinance would limit outside parking to vehicles that are 32 feet long or less and 12 feet high or less. The review committee's rec-

The council did vote after much wrangling over parliamentary procedure. Councilmembers Dan Clark, Robert Klacza, Vernon Ausherman and Palmer Heenan voted to adopt the ordinance review committee's proposal. Shirley, Kennedy and Steve Safranek opposed the proposal.

Grosse Pointe's Shadetree Council has drafted a letter requesting that the Pointes and Harper Woods take over the tracking of gypsy moths in their communities.

'We're an advisory committee," said Shadetree secretarytreasurer Donne Weinle. "Our purpose is to offer advice to the cities on how to handle the problem, and our advice will be that the cities hire a forrester to take care of eradciation efforts.'

The council will recommend that the cities act in concert to Citing a need for action, help eliminate the moths, she said, explaining that they need to act together because it does no good for one city to do something if another doesn't.

The council approved a rough draft of a letter asking the six cities - Grosse Pointe Farms, Shores, Park, Woods, City of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods - to hire someone who

Newborn saved by dispatcher

The cool-headed professionalism of a Grosse Pointe Park dispatcher may have saved the life of a newborn.

At 3:14 p.m. Saturday, March 19, dispatcher Genefer Dunham received a call from a distraught mother with an accent reporting her 7-day-old baby was not breathing.

Dunham dispatched emergency medical units to the woman's address, which she obtained from the department's caller ID system, and was able to calm the woman and talk her through infant CPR.

When emergency medical personnel arrived, the baby was breathing and was taken to Bon Secours Hospital.

"Dispatcher Dunham's composure and ability to communicate this vital information under extreme pressure are to be commended," said public safety director Richard J. Caretti in a departmental bulletin.

After unsuccessfully trying to pry open the front and rear doors, the burglars broke a rear window and crawled into the kitchen. The second-floor bedrooms were ransacked and more than $5,000 worth of jewelry, a computer and game cartridges were taken.

Designer sees Manoogian project aiding Detroit's comeback

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

D.J. Kennedy, owner of Kennedy & Co., can't wait to get started on the renovation of the Manoogian Mansion, Detroit's official mayoral residence. He has already met with Mayor Dennis Archer and Trudy DunCombe Archer and has visited the 67-year-old Italianesque mini-mansion on the Detroit River.

"I was really surprised when I toured the Manoogian," Kennedy said. "Structurally and mechanically, the house is in good order and has been wellmaintained.

"It was decorated about 20 years ago. Any house needs to be re-done after 20 years. The yard is magnificent.

Kennedy had not begun work on the mayor's house as of March 20, but he said the Archers would like to move this summer. "We're shooting for early summer," he said.

'The Archers are going to live there and they want it to be a comfortable house, geared toward entertaining. I guess that's my style. That's perhaps why I got the job."

Kennedy grew up in Bloomfield Hills, graduated in 1974 from the Kendell School of Design in Grand Rapids, then worked for two different interior designers in Franklin.

By 1980, he had formed his own company and set up an office in his home in Franklin. He moved to Grosse Pointe in 1981.

"Boating drew me here," he said. "It seemed like I was constantly driving across town to be on my boat. I also like the architecture in Grosse Pointe and I thought there was an untapped market here."

Kennedy has purchased decorated — then sold — seven houses in the Grosse Pointes since 1982. Typically, he finds an architecturally significant house that's down-on-its-heels, one that has been neglected or abused or ignored. Clinton rebuts some but not all allegations

President Clinton made a masterful defense against GOP allegations about misconduct in the Whitewater affair in last week's press conference but still left some questions unresolved.

In addition, new questions continued to arise about the ethical conduct of both the president and his wife in issues related to the Whitewater case.

In only the second primetime televised news conference of his presidency, Clinton sought last Friday to turn the Whitewater tides away from his administration but was upstaged by Rep. Jim Leach, an Iowa Republican.

Leach, after a long speech on the House floor just hours before the presidential press conference, also distributed what he termed documentation for ethical and financial misdeeds in connection with the Whitewater case.

The president admitted only that he had mistakenly claimed credit for a federal tax deduction for some $20,000 he had loaned his mother to help her buy a home, but contended that Whitewater had been given exaggerated importance by the press and the GOP.

At the outset, he enumerated the successes of his administration and then added, in reference to Whitewater:

"None of this, in the light of history, will be as remotely important as the fact that by common consensus we had the most productive first year of a presidency of anyone in a generation."

Yet the national polls probably surprised even the president by showing that his press conference had helped him rebuild his popularity rating to 57 percent. A majority of the people also blame many Whitewater accusations on politics and news media exaggerations.

Leach, although a moderate Republican, has become the chief GOP critic of Whitewater, and obviously sought to influence the 1994 congressional elections by attacking what he called "the arrogance of power – Machiavellian machinations of single-party government."

However, Leach weakened his own charges to some extent by failing to provide evidence or documentation for several of his most serious charges.

Early on, the GOP got little media support for its attacks on the Whitewater affair, but, pressed by the news media and the GOP, the charges now are getting more attention, in part because the Clinton administration has failed to pursue a sufficiently open policy.

Yet The Economist of London, sometimes called the best weekly newsmagazine in the English language, recently offered a model of restraint in covering Watergate without indulging in the exaggerations of some U.S. news media.

In a leader (editorial) under the headline, "A president damaged," The Economist's March 12 issue (prior to the presidential press conference) offered its readers a factual account of why the American public finally "has snapped to attention" over the Whitewater mess.

First, however, it was careful to note that "Neither Mr. Clinton nor his wife has yet been charged with wrongdoing," and that "Both insist they have done nothing wrong." And then it added: "The basis for the Whitewater 'scandal'

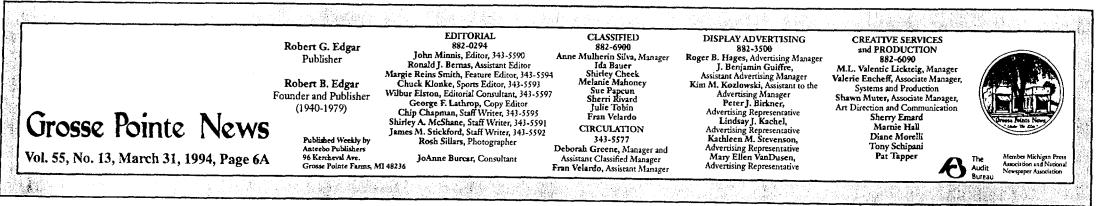

"The basis for the Whitewater 'scandal' may yet turn out to be no more than it appears: a failed property investment made in partnership with the chairman of a failed savings and loan, who subsequently lent the Clintons money to pay off campaign debts."

Yet The Economist sharply criticized what it regarded as "undoubtedly unethical and certainly stupid" actions by the Clintons or the administration either to cover up or play down the mistakes made both in Little Rock and in Washington.

And while it welcomed the decision by Congress that it has a duty to investigate, the magazine warned that "it must do so carefully, fairly and in a way that does not get under the prosecutor's feet: criteria it has not met in the past."

The editorial closed by suggesting that many Americans "will be relying on Congress to make its best efforts, as a responsible check on the executive, to help get the mess out, exorcised and over with."

In our view, The Economist's cautious and factual approach commends itself as an example for the often over-eager American news media to follow.

Murderer faces a life term

The killer of Robert M. Coe, 47, a member of the Grosse Pointe News production staff gunned down on a Detroit street Sept. 9, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree.

That finding by a Detroit Recorder's Court jury will require that 19-year-old Detroit resident Richard Darnell Baldwin be sentenced to a life term unless he wins a reversal of his conviction on appeal.

If that sentence is carried out, however, it will permanently remove a killer from the streets but that result obviously will provide little solace for Coe's family, friends and co-workers at the Grosse Pointe News where he had served as a typesetter/artist for four years.

Yet if the conviction stands, perhaps the justice so quickly obtained in this case also will serve as a warning and a deterrent to others who too often have taken lives as well as loot in attempted street holdups.

The murder occurred about two blocks from Grosse Pointe Park inside the Detroit city limits. Coe and his brother, Thomas, had been called to help a third brother who had been mugged earlier to be gunned down in Detroit in the last four years. The first was Benjamin Gravel, a businessman who was killed by a gang of youths on a street leading to Jefferson Avenue near the old Chrysler plant after he had left a yacht club.

But justice in that case is moving more slowly. Two youths who as juveniles had confessed to the killing are still appealing a state Supreme Court order that they be remanded to district court for re-sentencing to life as adults.

In the Coe case, however, the Detroit police department apparently had done a first-rate job by circulating a police composite sketch from which a tipster was able to identify Baldwin. The police then followed up with additional evidence that convicted Baldwin.

An astonishing fact that emerged from testimony during Baldwin's trial before a Detroit Recorder's Court jury was that he had used a "community gun" available to anyone who wanted to use it.

That sounds like the frontier justice of the old West when, in the absence of official lawmen, citizens banded together to deliver vigilante justice.

near the spot where the murder occurred.

Robert Cole was shot and killed after Baldwin had pulled a gun and demanded the brothers' money and wallets.

He was the second Grosse Pointe man

Fortunately, however, the Detroit police were equal to the challenge in this case and ended the foolish idea of using a "community gun" for any purpose.

Improving racial relations

A song in a Broadway musical once used the theme, "You have to be taught to hate," in order to stress the importance of racial tolerance.

Now the Grosse Pointe and Detroit public schools have entered into a positive relationship, with the assistance of the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe, to try to build bridges between children of differing racial backgrounds.

In a multicultural society such as ours, it is important for children and adults alike to learn more about the contributions that people with differing racial and ethnic backgrounds make to our state, nation and community.

Equally important, such experiences will help youngsters learn that they have much in common with each other, a fact that always helps mitigate any differences that arise.

Accomplishing such aims should be one of the achievements of the relationships now being developed between the Trombly and Kerby elementary schools in Grosse Pointe and a Detroit elementary school housed in Detroit's Golightly Educational Center.

Just prior to Easter seems to be an excellent time for this "child-to-child" relationship to be furthered by the Grosse Pointe third-graders' first visit to the Detroit educational center as a follow-up to their earlier pen-pal relationships.

The Racial Justice Center is planning to continue the bridge-building relationships by sponsoring additional visits back and forth between the schools as well as joint field trips and an art "scavenger hunt" at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

We hope all participants enjoy their experiences in their bridge-building efforts - and have a lot of fun in the process.

big Arkansas bench and an unfriendly crowd that included even President Clinton and his family proved to be too much for the Wolverines in their battle for a third straight Final Four basketball berth last Sunday.

Michigan fans should be buoyed by the fact the underdog Wolves never gave up after trailing badly in the early going and got within two points of Arkansas in the closing minutes before losing, 76 to 68.

Michigan basketball's future hopes also should be buoyed by the decision of Lake Shore's superstar, Travis Conlan, to enroll at Michigan next fall.

Conlan led his team to a state Class B championship with a 38 to 37 victory over East Grand Rapids last week that capped an undefeated season of 28 straight wins.

The victory also gave Lake Shore the first state basketball championship ever won by a Macomb County boys' team.

Let's hear it for the Wolves and the Shorians!

Shun misleading statements about schools

To the Editor:

The extremist call by Jim Perry, on behalf of the Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe, for the ouster of Superintendent Ed Shine and all current Grosse Pointe board of education trustees, except Sears Taylor, is reckless and grossly misleading. The decision of the board of education to accept the fact finder's report and recommendation is fiscally responsible and will result in long-term savings to the school district.

Acceptance of this report by the board was in exchange for the union's acceptance of the incentive plan proposed by the board. The incentive plan provides teachers with over 10 years of service, the option to resign their position in exchange for a financial compensation package payable over 10 years.

The board projects that if 85 teachers take advantage of the plan, the district will save $59,000 in the plan's first year, even after immediately hiring replacement teachers. An additional $1.2 million will be saved in the second year of the plan and a total saving of $15 million will be realized over the 10-year period.

The fact finder's report also results in an additional saving of $238,000 over the next four years due to the union's concession to provide probationary teachers with a PPO health plan at a significantly lower cost and to expand the probationary period from two to four years. These long-term cost savings are the result of innovative collective bargaining and serious negotiations by a number of those "overpaid and unnecessary administrators" that Mr. Perry and his group want to eliminate.

It is indeed time for action. It is time for the citizens of Grosse Pointe to work together to preserve and protect the high standards of educational excellence that so distinguish this community. It is time for all segments of our community to support the responsible and good faith efforts of the board of education and the superintendent to contain costs, promote systemwide stability and maintain quality.

Don't be misled by the divisive, negative misinformation disseminated by the group Mr. Perry represents.

Letters policy? To the Editor:

It is my understanding that the Grosse Pointe News has refused to print recent letters to the editor because of their subject matter, despite the local nature of the issues raised in them (i.e., the Magnet program and differentiated programming). I find it disturbing that a newspaper of your caliber would stiffe the exchange of ideas and opinions in our community in this manner.

In the interest of full disclosure, the Grosse Pointe News should precede its letters to the editor column with a statement describing its censorship policy. Readers in our community have a right to know that the letters to the editor published in your paper have been carefully screened for content.

William P. Shield Jr. Grosse Pointe Park

Editor's note: You've been misinformed. As is the case with most newspapers, we limit the number of letters printed on the same topic, but no subject matter — except for abortion and gun control issues — is banned from the letters pages.

Also, readers must admit, both sides of Magnet/ gifted programming issues have had more than generous space on the letters pages in the past.

March 31, 1994 Grosse Pointe News Seniors Seniors 15A Spring's here with its persuasive charms — so enjoy

On Sunday, March 20, spring arrived - and not a minute too soon

We had endured the coldest winter in memory, and we are ready for spring. It's not sweater weather yet. March winds can chill, and sometimes the dampness of April makes it difficult to remember that it really does bring May flowers. But a warming sun is a promise of better days ahead and with it a renewal of life in all growing things, the blessings of spring.

To get in the mood, you might like to read a delightful all-time favorite children's book also treasured by adults: "Spring is a New Beginning," by Joan Walsh Anglund. Small in format, it is illustrated with pictures that look like miniature paintings. The prose, soft and musical, leads the reader on a tour of nature's signs of spring. It reminds us that if bare, brown earth can burst forth fresh, green and bedecked with flowers, if trees, black and bare, can clothe themselves in verdant glory, if frozen waters can work and churn until the ice breaks, then we, if we so desire, can join in the celebration of spring and like nature call forth all those forces that have lain dormant during the months of winter. Winter inactivity is a seasonal syndrome. Not many want to leave a cozy home to go out into winds that nip and bite. Slippery walks and icy roads are a real threat to arms. legs and hips. The prospect of spending weeks in splints, casts or traction makes the welcoming arms of a favorite chair into a haven from all harm. Newspapers, magazines and books become silent friends that bring the outside world inside. The phone provides social contacts as we check our friends doings and exchange latest gossip. The television becomes entertainment. By twirling the dials we can watch old movies, concerts, symphonies, operas and soap operas, those thrill-laden episodes that keep audiences in touch with the pluses and perils of the rich and glamorous.

By Marian Trainor

If all this sounds self-serving, it is; but that's what winter is about, a time to relax and recapture one's inner resources in the quiet of the season.

Spring will not tolerate such lassitude. Seductively, it flaunts itself in our windows. It demands that you examine first-hand the tender shoots of spring flowers, look at the trees and watch buds unfurl, smell the sweet, fragrant air and let a soft wind show you how caressing it can be.

Spring has its own lively theme song, made up of the shrill treble of scolding birds returning from southern sojourn, the staccato of misty rains and the bass thunder of exploding ice on the rivers.

Despite spring's persuasive charms, there are those who refuse to be stirred by it. There are those who have become so mesmerized by the wooly routine of isolation that they are reluctant to cast it aside.

There are some, tired of life, who argue that there are no new beginnings in their late years. "Youth has the world ahead of them, they argue. For us, the world has passed by. What is the point of arousing never come to fruition?'

Life is meant to be lived at any age; each day should be between old and young; in nature, life renews itself in the spring.

the mind of thoughts that spawn like mushrooms in a dreary hours. Spring is a time to catch up on life's neglects rather than mourn them.

It is not easy to come out of the inactivity of winter into the opportunity of spring. It takes courage but as Art Carney remarked in "A Doctor's Story," "Being old is not for sissies."

Old habits, feelings and thoughts are like security blankets. They are counted on to see us through the days and nights. They are ours. They are us. It's hard to give them up.

But life changes like the season as long as we are part of the momentum, we must accept and change. It took a lifetime to become what we are, but because of added years we can become more of what we are.

Spring is a new beginning. Do what you wanted to do now. Don't fall back on that old bromide, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks." Old dogs are not old people. It is doubtful that the "old dog" could have been taught any tricks when he was young.

People are living longer and what was once thought of as "rocking chair" years have become years that should not be wasted. The "rocking chair" can wait for later - much later.

Without effort, courage, determination and willingness to keep going, life collapses into a dull repetitive scenario.

Earl A. Mossner

When the Detroit Athletic Club went up against the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club in a bowling tournament four weeks ago, Earl Mossner was in rare form.

He was rolling some of the highest scores he had achieved in ages.

Mossner, a member of both clubs, was competing for the DAC that night and his friends on the opposing team were not too happy with his remarkable performance.

Some of them began plotting to throw his ball into the lake after the tournament. Mossner caught wind of the plan and secretly switched his ball with that of an opponent.

When the ball was tossed into the lake, Mossner calmly informed the prankster that he had just tossed away his own ball.

It was the kind of ironic story Earl Mossner loved to tell.

Mr. Mossner, 54, a partner in the law firm of Conway and Mossner, died Wednesday, March 23, 1994, at Bon Secours Hospital in the City of Grosse Pointe, from complications of a stroke he suffered two weeks earlier.

"No one loved life more than Earl did," recalled his partner, Mike Conway, "and he lived life fully.'

Mossner shared a life of travel and entertaining with his wife of 32 years, Joan.

They made friends everywhere they went, often inviting new acquaintances from their travels to visit them in their Grosse Pointe Shores home.

Last Christmas, they entertained a couple they met in Turkey and delighted in sharing holiday traditions with their guests, who had never experienced a Christian holiday before. Another time, they invited the entire cast of "Les Miserables" to lunch when the troupe was performing at the Fisher.

Although they had no children of their own, Joan and Earl served as honorary aunt and uncle to many children of their friends and relatives.

Mr. Mossner was devoted to DeLaSalle Collegiate, where he was on the board of trustees.

He graduated from Notre Dame University in 1961 and from the University of Detroit Law School in 1965.

Not that I actually expect real reforms. The most we'll do is tinker around the edges and wait for total catastrophe to strike. Americans can't deal with major social change unless a crisis is imminent. We certainly wouldn't have gotten Social Security without the Depression.

That is, after all, the way Michigan has dealt with school finance reform.

A lot of whining is going on about being forced to pick one unpalatable tax or another in the March 15 election. The whiners have conveniently forgotten that for 20 years, tax alternatives were regularly dished up to the voters - and we reg-

A better plan would have raised both the sales and income tax a little, instead of relying on one. But nobody asked me.

Does Lansing have a beltway - or just an inside-the-beltway mentality? Consider the idea that a vote for Proposal A was a vote for Gov. Engler. Please. No one outside the Capitol believes that. Do those people really expect him to win his next election by a margin of 2to-1, as Prop. A did?

Just by asking around among my friends, I know better than that. Plenty of Engler fans voted against A, and plenty of foes voted for it.

Yesterday marked the end of a month dedicated to women's history. Maybe you didn't notice . . .

One women's historian goes around to schools challenging students to name 20 famous American women, not counting athletes and entertainers. Most of them can't come up with five.

Small wonder. I didn't think I could, either, but I had to try. Maybe you'll want to, too.

No athletes. That lets out people like Wilma Rudolph and Bonnie Blair. No entertainers, so no Dinah Shore or Washington. And if we're going to be serious about the historical part, then our choices shouldn't be living - so no Martha Griffiths or Mae Jemison or Jeane

Law school scholarships available

The Ida and Benjamin Alpert Foundation has announced its annual competition designed to award scholarships to Michigan residents attending law school.

Wayne County Probate Judge David J. Szymanski, member of the foundation's board of trustees, said scholarships range from $500 to $3,500."

Applications for the scholarships must be submitted by May 16. Finalists will be selected to write essays.

Applications may be obtained by contacting Szymanski at the Probate Court, 1303 City-County Building, Detroit, Mich. 48226, or call 224-5668.

PALPable referendum

To the Editor:

8A

I am writing to express my agreement with William Rutledge's letter in the March 17 issue of the Grosse Pointe News regarding the Dr. Kevorkian and PALP (People Achieving Legislative Power) petitions.

Obviously, a referendum is very much in order so that the citizens of Michigan can express themselves on whatever free choice will be an option when one is faced with a terminal illness and desires the assistance of a physician in exercising that free choice to end the suffering.

The PALP petition, it should be noted, provides for a one-house Legislature with proportional representation that would sit for no more than six months of the year. It would simplify district boundary lines, promote greater accountability to the public and, hopefully, ensure a larger number of citizen-legislators. The proposal could conceivably result in true citizenlegislators who could not receive state-financed retirement benefits and privately-financed slush funds or get mid-term salary increases. This proposal could also result in as many as 100-plus unemployed politicians in Lansing.

Of course, if one has been pleased with the performance of our Legislature during the past year, there is thus no reason whatever to sign this petition.

For anyone who is interested, however, petitions may be obtained from the PALP Ballot Committee,

New medical liability reforms take aim at cost of lawsuits the state's new medical liability reforms that go into effect signed into law a package of April 1 will clamp down on the bills designed to strengthen the number and size of lawsuits against physicians and improve patients' access to health care.

The 1993 Medical Liability Reform Act, passed last May after seven years of effort by a 70-member coalition, will limit non-economic damage awards in medical liability lawsuits. In addition, it requires potential claimants to file a pre-suit notice to encourage quick resolu-tion of disputes. Other measures include stricter qualifications for expert witnesses and a reduced statute of limitations for minors.

Along with the liability re-

Physicians in Michigan hope forms, the Michigan Legislature passed and Gov. Engler physician licensure and discipline system.

Under the new licensure and discipline system, physicians will pay an extra $90 in license fees to be used exclusively for investigating complaints against physicians. The discipline process also was streamlined and the new law provides immunity for "whistleblowers."

"This round of reforms was a hard fought battle, but we believe they are necessary to help bring Michigan's litigation costs under control," said Dr. Gilbert B. Bluhm, president of the 11,700-member Michigan State Medical Society. "We believe these reforms will help us attract more new doctors to Michigan and help us keep the one's we have."

The reforms are a strong step in the right direction, but they certainly are not a panacea.

"We should be optimistic, but we shouldn't assume that these reforms will eliminate liability problems," said Dr. Thomas R. Berglund, president and chairman of doctor-owned Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Co., the largest medical professional liability insurer in the state.

"It'll be two to four years before we can evaluate the effect," Berglund said.

44 floods hit state in 1993

Michigan experienced five flash floods and 39 other flood events last year, causing over $300,000 in damages.

A rapid winter thaw and heavy spring rains could lead to flooding in some areas of the state again this year, according to representatives of a statewide coalition formed to encourage flood safety.

"Michigan's most recent severe flooding events were in 1975 and 1986. Current record high ground moisture conditions, however, have made the probability of flooding the highest in the last 40 years," said George Hosek, a member of the Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness.

To focus attention on flood safety planning, Gov. John Engler has declared March 27 through April 2 as Severe Weather Awareness Week in Michigan. Residents are encouraged to familiarize themselves with flood safety procedures.

Consumers should be aware that regular homeowners insurance policies do not pay for flood damage, coalition members representing the insurance industry said. Coverage is available through a federal program: however, only about 10 percent of structures subject to flooding are actually insured against the risk.

Currently there are about 670 Michigan communities participating in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) and 18,000 policies in force. To purchase flood insurance, residents must live in one of those participating communities. Coverage can be obtained through most licensed property/casualty insurance agents.

To determine if flood insurance is available in your community, call 1-800-638-6620.

In addition to obtaining adequate insurance protection, residents should take the following precautions in anticipation of flooding:

• Learn the best route from your home or place of business to high, safe ground in case you have to evacuate in a hurry.

• Prepare and maintain a list of personal property to substantiate losses covered by insurance.

• Familiarize household members with turn-off procedures for gas and electricity.

Air masses clash, twisters result

Last year was a very quiet year for severe weather in Michigan. Although there were a total of 11 tornadoes reported here in 1993, no one was killed as a result. Those tornadoes, however, destroyed or damaged property valued at $1 million.

Northern lower Michigan was hit the most by tornadoes in 1993, according to information released by the National Weather Service recently. However, every county in the state has experienced at least one tornado since 1950.

Counties experiencing tornadoes last year were Allegan, Arenac, Barry, Crawford, Delta, Genesee, Mackinac, Macomb, Ogemaw and Otsego.

Tornadoes generally develop from severe thunderstorms. Although not all severe thunderstorms spawn tornadoes, twisters are more likely to occur when there is unseasonably warm and humid air at the earth's surface and cold air at the middle atmospheric levels, with strong upper-level jet stream winds.

In Michigan, this clash of air masses is more likely to occur in the spring and in the southern lower part of the state, according to officials from the National Weather Service.

Tornadoes develop and move rapidly, often with little notice or forewarning. When a tornado watch is announced, residents should gather a first aid kit, flashlight and portable radio. They should stay tuned to local radio and television stations and be ready or prepared to take shelter. A watch means that conditions are right for development of a tornado.

YOU CAN ADVERTISE TOO!

Calculate your daily fat target the easy way

Fat counts! And there's plenty of advice these days on eating less fat and why that's important.

Whether it's to lose weight, control cholesterol, or just to eat healthier, you've probably found yourself reading food labels and studying fat content of the foods you buy.

But if you've found yourself unsure as to how much fat should be part of your daily diet, there's now an easy way to find that figure.

Just take your weight and divide it by two. That number is a rough target figure for how many grams of fat you can consume each day on a healthy diet. You may need to fine-tune that number for your individual activity level and health goals, but it's an easy starting point.

The relationship between high fat diets and weight gain is one with which most of us are familiar. But in recent years health groups like the American Institute for Cancer Research and the American Heart Association have urged limiting daily fat consumption to 30 percent or less of overall calories, not for weight control, but because of the links between high fat diets and increased health risks.

A no-fat diet is not the answer. At least some fat is an essential part of a healthy diet.

But determining how many grams of fat you should be eating can be difficult, since body size and activity level affect your body's dietary fat needs. That's where this easy method of setting a fat target comes in: Dividing your weight by two will give you a number that's about equal to the number of grams of fat you should be eating to hit that target of 30 percent of calories from fat.

If, for example, you weigh 160 pounds, about 80 grams of fat would have you at the 30 percent target, assuming you're a healthy and fairly active person. If you want to aim for a low fat diet, then keep your grams of fat between that target figure and about two-thirds of that number.

If you're currently overweight and want to use limiting fat as a way to lose weight, figure what your healthy weight should be. Then divide that number by two to see about how many grams of fat you can eat each day. It will be less than the amount of fat for your current weight. And since fat is such a concentrated source of calories, cutting the fat is also an easy way to cut some calories.

You may also want to adjust this fat target figure based on how active you are. If you have a desk job and don't get much exercise, take another 10 to 20 grams of fat off the half body weight figure. Or, if you have an active life and get lots of exercise each day, you can add 10 to 20 grams of fat to the fat target of half your weight.

Keeping track of daily fat consumption should not become a time-consuming, burdensome task. But try using this method of half your body weight to find your approximate fat target, and you may find that it then becomes easier to track your high fat foods each day and see how close you're getting to that target.

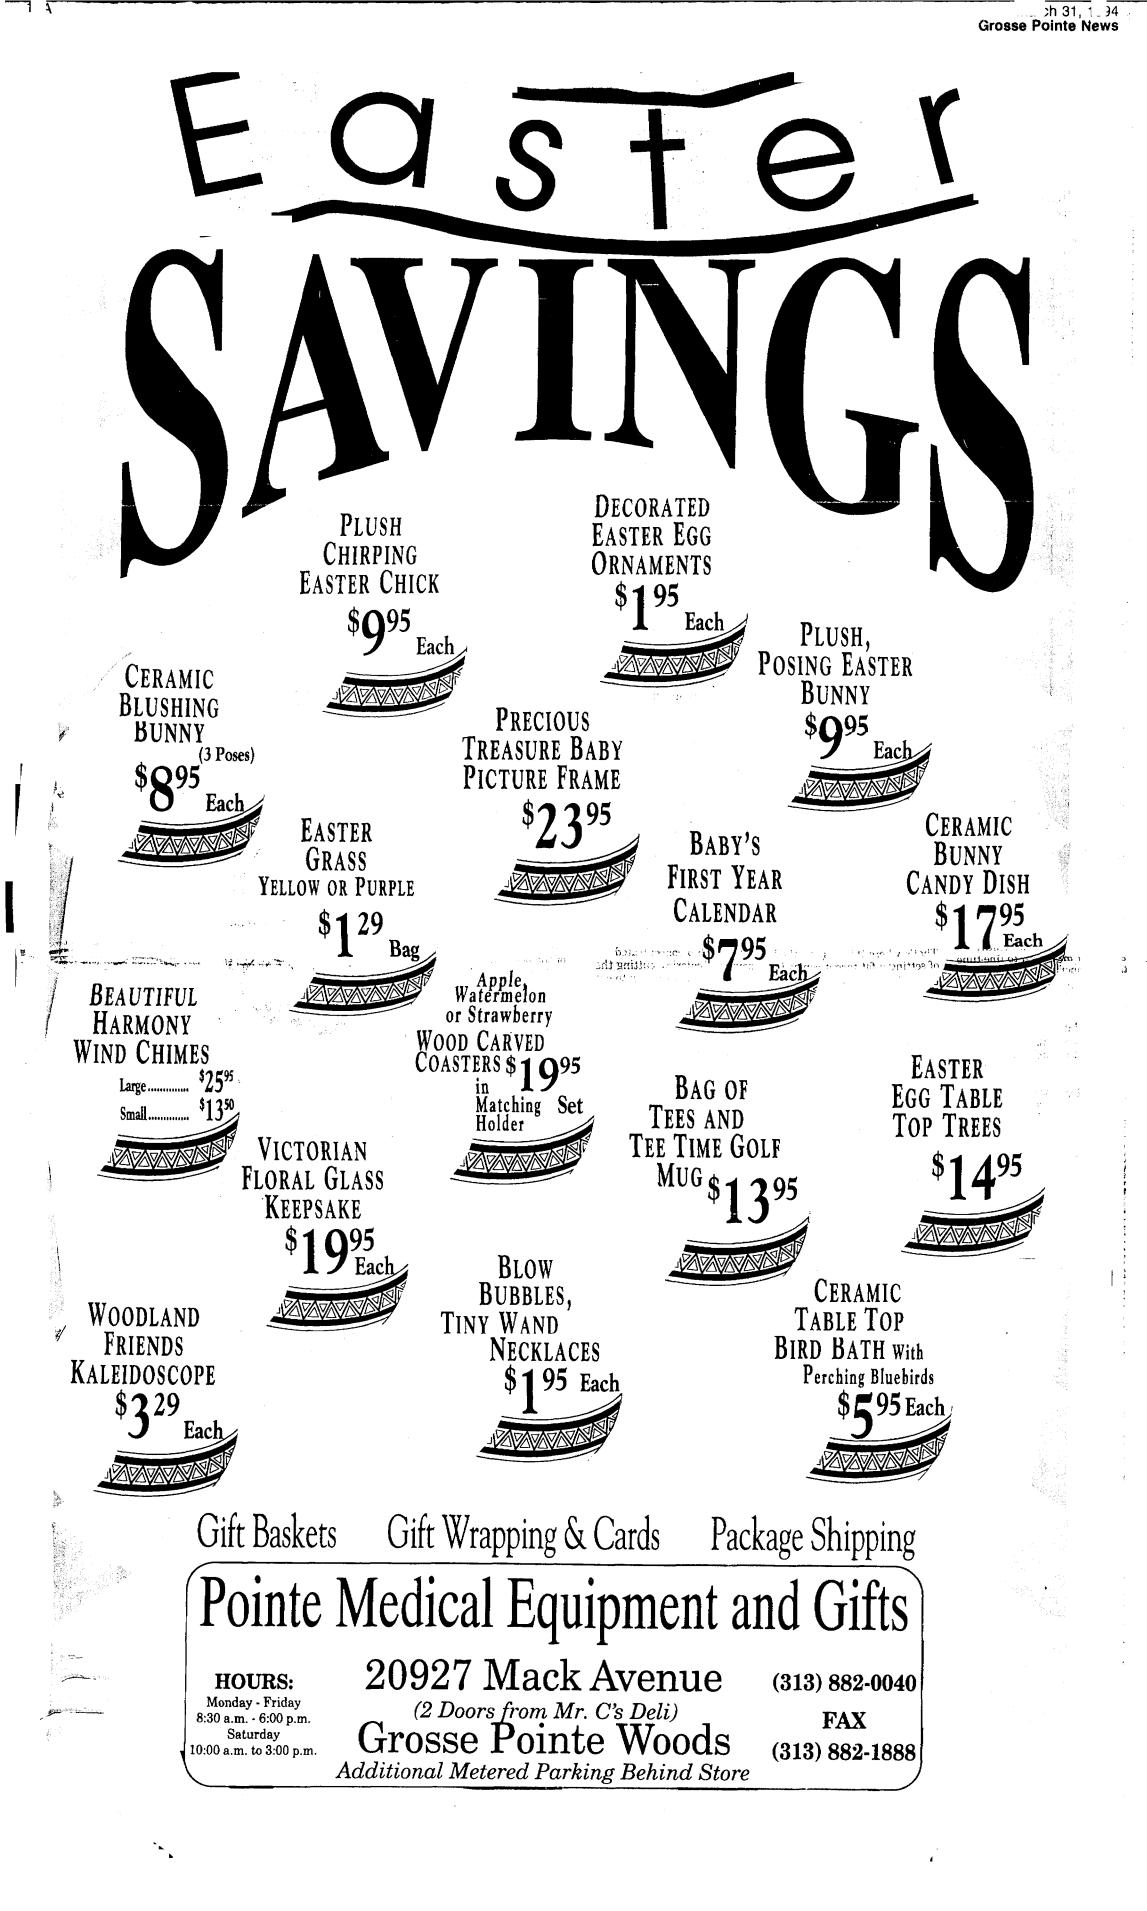

You can learn more about fat and the role it plays in your overall health with a free copy of the booklet, "All About Fat and Cancer Risk." For your copy send a stamped (52 cents postage), self-addressed, business size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. FC, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Safety researchers from General Motors and the University of Michigan are engaged in a joint study on the safety of pregnant women in vehicle crashes which includes development of a pregnant female crash dummy. Here, U-M's Dr. Mark Pearlman, left, and Dr. David Viano work with a fetal insert dummy simulating a seven-month unborn child. Measurements will be taken on acceleration of the fetal head and chest as well as pressure applied to the abdomen in crash testing. The two objectives of the study are to learn more about what happens in the uterus as the result of trauma in a vehicle crash, and to possibly devise new safety restraint systems that are specifically for pregnant women.

The 1994 Ford Aspire: a little car that acts big new subcompact Aspire, my thought was that its odd name came about because it was intended for buyers who aspire to own a real car someday.

'They didn't finish the car." I remarked, staring at its truncated body (only 152 inches long overall, it is nonetheless larger than the Festiva it replaces). I knew that was a cheap shot when I said it, but did not realize how far off the mark I was until I took it on a several-hundred-mile trip into outstate Michigan.

Much to my surprise, the tiny car performed very well on the highway, with pleasant ride, good handling and ample if not spacious luggage space. And the interior is as comfortable or more so than much bigger cars.

Driving the Aspire has caused me to rethink my longheld Detroit assumption that big cars are best for long trips, because they have a better ride, more power and ample luggage room. But by incorporating upto-date suspension technology, the Aspire - and its rival at Chevrolet, the Geo Metro have overcome much of the advantage a longer-wheelbase car has in smoothing out the ride. I found the Aspire to be a very pleasant highway car.

Autos

Detroit has never tried to keep a secret of its disdain for small cars. The Big Three's first compacts, in response to the VW Beetle, were downsized versions of their standard Detroit iron, done with their left hands and with the idea of going as cheap as possible.

By Richard Wright

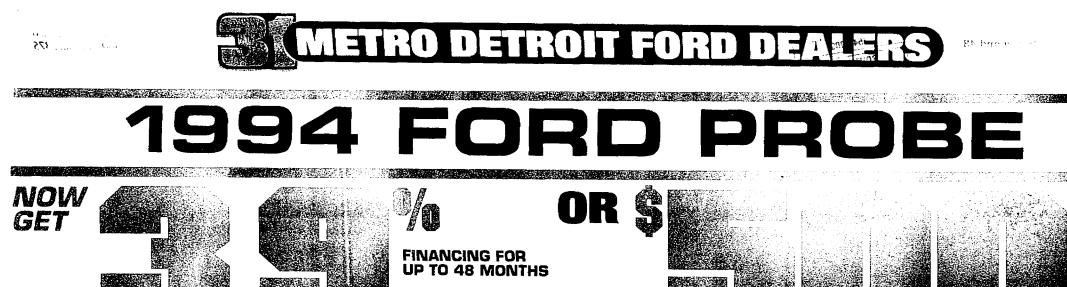

But now that attitude seems to have evaporated. Chrysler put a lot of design effort into its new Neon subcompact. And while the Ford Aspire and the Geo Metro are not exactly domestic products - the Aspire is built by Kia of South Korea,

That translates to adequate performance and 30-plus miles per gallon in the three-door with automatic transmission. (EPA figures are 36 city and 43 highway.)

The Aspire is seven inches longer than the Festiva, but it is still only 153 inches overall, smaller than a Neon (171 inches). Luggage space of 14.9 cubic feet seems ample for two and although it will accommodate four passengers, you wouldn't want to travel very far with more than two.

The Aspire is the least expensive car to offer dual air bags as standard equipment. It is also covered by Ford's Roadside Assistance Program, which provides 24-hour aid for emergency situations at no addi-warming tourism not only for 11.5 percent so far this year over last, with Easter sales brisk.

"Our customers, weary of Michigan's below normal temperatures in January and February, are ready for an Easter escape to warm weather," said AAA travel agency director Diane Willard. "The most popular choices are Florida, Carribbean destinations and cruises." All-inclusive tours - packtion and lodging in the price are the agency's most soughtafter travel product as consumers search for the best value for their vacation dollar. Tour sales for the first two months of 1994 were up 40 percent over last year, Willard said.

Milder temperatures at Easter also mean travelers are ready to hit the highway, too.

"We saw a decline in member requests for Florida routings in January, primarily be- see are the second and third cause treacherous road conditions forced the closure of main highways in Kentucky for several days and that's the disaid. "However, in February, we received 11,613 requests for requests are running higher than average as travelers plan Easter vacations."

"Behind Flor-from last year – and March ida, Michigan routings are the second most requested by members and we expect state tourism growth to exceed 5 percent this year.'

Cabin fever is one contributor to the strong Easter season and the yearlong improved picture predicted for the state's travel industry.

This year's Easter period officially begins at noon Friday (April 1) and runs to midnight, Sunday (April 3). During the 1992 Easter holiday period (the latest data available), nine people died in nine crashes on Michigan roads. Four of the crashes were alcohol-related.

tional cost to the customer, including fuel delivery, battery service, tire changing and towing.

Power steering is optional. Our test car did not have it and, although steering is no problem, it is surprisingly resistant for such a little car. Power steering also has a tighter ratio and is probably a good option to order. Anti-lock brakes are also optional and also a worthwhile item.

Our Aspire was no flash off the line, but cruises easily at interstate speeds. At up to 75, it did not even seem to be breathing hard, but approaching 80 your engine speed is topping 4,000 rpm and there's not much left.

Front suspension utilizes MacPherson struts with coil springs, while the rear axle is a torsion beam suspended by coilshock units. The interior design is excellent, despite the extensive use of plastic. Seating is comfortable and instruments are easy to read. The uncluttered instrument panel includes a tachometer in the mildly sportier SE trim. Passenger room is good, surprisingly so in the rear.

The Aspire is a nice car for the price, but the competition is not standing still. Chrysler has launched the Neon, a handsome small car that has a bigger car sense to it in only a slightly higher price range. A Ford spokesman said, however, that when the cars are fitted the way most buyers want them, the Aspire will have a more substantial price edge.

And Chevrolet promises a new Metro (or Metro replacement) is on its way.

More than 5,000 are expected to 'Race for the Cure'

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

Trudy Marchetti was diagnosed with breast cancer in March 1992, one week before Detroit's first Race for the Cure, the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation's fundraiser and consciousnessraiser.

Marchetti's doctors recommended a mastectomy.

She postponed surgery for a week so she could participate in the Race for the Cure.

The following year, competing as a survivor, she won the race.

Marchetti is ready to run again this year. She'd like another win. But even if she loses, she's a winner.

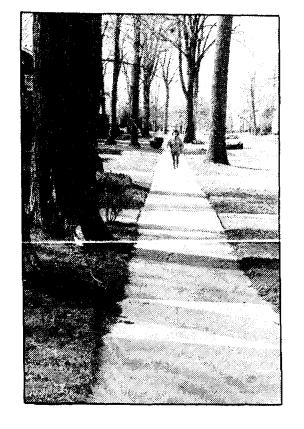

According to Michigan Cancer Foundation statistics, nearly 7,000 Michigan women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year and 2,000 will die of the disease in 1994.

Marchetti encourages others to run, walk or stroll in a fundraiser devoted to continuing breast cancer research, education and screening programs in southeast Michigan.

The third annual 5K run/ walk/racewalk and one-mile fun run will be held the morning of Saturday, April 9, on the grounds of the Detroit Zoo. Detroit's race is one of 48 nationwide.

The benefit/consciousnessraiser is expected to bring more than 5,000 people of all ages and athletic abilities together to promote breast cancer awareness, encourage early detection and celebrate survivors like Marchetti.

"Some people come to race, others come to walk and some just come to watch," said Jane Hoey, assistant director of breast cancer community outreach and education for the Michigan Cancer Foundation-Prentis Comprehensive Cancer

Center. "Everyone is welcome to come out and support breast cancer awareness."

Marchetti has been running for eight years. She started out biking; then walking.

"I was walking faster and faster; then I started running," she said. "I like to run on Lakeshore. I used to cross-train with weights, but after my surgery I had to give up the weights. So I just run more."

Marchetti averages 30 to 45 miles a week. "It varies. It depends on what the body and the mind are in the mood for," she said. "Running is something you either love or hate. I love it."

Marchetti had her first mammogram when she was 39. Five years later, after a routine mammogram, her doctor said the results showed what he called "some calcification."

"A friend of mine said it was probably nothing," Marchetti said. "I wasn't too worried. My gynecologist said to have a biopsy. I went on vacation in February and waited until I got back in March to have the biopsy."

Three days after the biopsy, her doctor called to say he found some cancer cells.

"He asked my husband and me to come to the office the next day," she said. "I still wasn't alarmed. When he described the surgery, however, I said to myself, 'wait a minute; this is serious.""

After running the first Race for the Cure, Marchetti underwent a modified mastectomy and reconstructive surgery. Because the cancer was removed at an early stage, she didn't need chemotherapy or radiation.

"Chemotherapy scared me more than surgery," Marchetti said. She attends meetings of WATCH, a support group made up of 60 or 70 women who have had breast cancer. She Race proceeds will be used by the MCF-Prentis Comprehensive Cancer Center to fund breast cancer awareness and early detection programs.

"Many low-income women fall through the cracks after original mammograms show abnormalities," Hoey said. "In many cases their insurance doesn't cover additional testing to confirm cancer diagnoses, only treatment after the diagnoses are made." Other programs funded by Mary Anne Goodnow of Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Timothy Goodnow of Grosse Pointe Farms, married Mark Daniel Calzolano of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Calzolano of Cherry Hill, N.J., on Dec. 11, 1993, at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart at Notre Dame, Ind.

The Rev. Daniel J. Issing officiated at the 3 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Summit Club in South Bend, Ind.

The bride's gown featured a portrait collar, a silk satin bodice decorated with beads and pearls and a full silk tulle skirt. Her beaded headband held a cathedral-length tulle veil. She carried a cascade of red roses, ivy and holly.

Gleaners cleans up at Women's Power Breakfast March 16

The Women's Power Breakfast on March 16 was held at the Detroit Club, a place traditionally identified as the stomping grounds of Powerful Men. The by-invitation-only benefit raised $15,000 for Gleaners' Capital Fund Drive.

Southeastern Michigan's powerful businesswomen and volunteers (120 of them) got together for a breakfast underwritten by Prudential Securities and to hear a talk by Christine Vladimiroff, president and CEO of Second Harvest, a nationwide consortium of food banks.

Gleaners was founded in 1977 to serve the hungry in southeastern Michigan. Food, which is donated or sold for a low price, is then provided to 184 member agencies, which, in turn, identify Detroit's neediest and hungriest. Gleaners distributed more than 13 million pounds of food in 1993. Gene Gonya is president of Gleaners Community Food Bank.

Co-chairmen of the benefit were Trudy DunCombe Archer, Lisa A. Ford and Dulcie Rosenfeld.

Others who attended: Michelle Engler, Lynn Ford Alandt, Linda Kughn, Alberta Tinsely-Williams, Kay Hunt, Teola Hunter, Pearl Holforty, Terry Merritt, Ruth Glancy, Marlene Borman, Susan Moiseev, Anna Diggs Taylor, Cynthia Ford, Nettie Seabrooks, Barbara McClure, Patti Knox, Andrea Rommell Dickson and Dr. Bettye Arrington-Martin.

Gleaners is seeking to raise $3 million in the private sector for the following projects:

• The consolidation of its operation from three rental facilities into a headquarters in Detroit.

• The addition of 7,200 square feet of refrigerator and freezer space for food storage and the expansion of its loading docks and dry storage space.

Community

The Pastor's Corner Shared traditions By the Rev. Gordon S. Mikoski

Associate Pastor, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

I deeply appreciated last week's column by Rabbi Jonathan V. Plaut as I found it to be informative and insightful. He marvelously interpreted for the wider community that which is at the heart of the Jewish religious tradition. I also appreciated his column because it reminded me of the very close ties between our two religious traditions. For too long Christians have driven an artificial wedge between Jesus and Judaism, and therefore between Christians and Jews.

Let it never be forgotten that Jesus, no matter what else may be said of him, was a first-century Jew. He was steeped in the history and values that Rabbi Plaut so aptly articulated.

In addition, a great deal of Jesus' teachings and teaching methods seem to have been strongly influenced by rabbinical teachings of his day. Furthermore, most of Jesus' initial followers were Jews and it is likely that, with the exception of some religious leaders who perceived him to be a threat, he was viewed in a favorable light by a large portion of the Jews in early first-century Palestine.

In light of the long and ugly tradition of Christian anti-Semitism, in which Jews have unfairly been portrayed as "Christ killers," it is necessary in my judgment for such elementary facts about Jesus and his earliest followers to be emphasized. Let me be clear, there is simply no place for anti-Semitism in Christianitv.

At Easter, when the differences between Christians and Jews are brought into sharpest relief and unavoidably so due to differences in the way Jesus is ultimately appraised by the two traditions, let me suggest that there is also a great deal that is shared.

If Easter is not about divine intervention into human life for the purpose of liberating people from cruel and harsh slavery, then it isn't about anything at all. Divine love for human beings is so great that decisive action is required from God's side. Liberation from forces that dehumanize and disfigure is what Passover and Easter are all about.

Celebrating the historical intervention and ongoing work of the One who hears our cries and responds with tender compassion is at the heart of each celebration. For Jews that means remembering the Exodus from cruel taskmasters in Egypt under Moses' leadership; further, it means living in such a way as to promote liberation for all who are oppressed.

For Christians that means remembering Jesus' death and resurrection which sets people free from the bondage to sin and death; and it is about living in such a way that love overcomes all manifestations of sin and death, whether personal or corporate.

To my Jewish neighbors I say, "May your Passover celebration be blessed!"

To my Christian brothers and sisters I say, "Alleluia! He is risen!"

'Heidi Chronicles' scales new heights

By Ronald J. Bernas Assistant Editor

A play about enlightenment – feminine or otherwise – is usually one of two things: preachy or contrived.

Wendy Wasserstein's Pu-litzer Prize-winning "The Heidi Chronicles" is both. But it's also funny, warm, moving and maddening. And it's extremely well done at the Hilberry Theatre where it plays in repertory through May 6.

'Monkey Trouble' shines for all ages

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Up to now, Curious George has reigned supreme with the younger set when it comes to monkeys and monkey tricks. The antics of George have been followed in books, films and videos, and he sits proudly in toy shops knowing he will soon be the favorite stuffed toy in someone's collection. But now George has a rival - a cute capuchin monkey — the star of "Monkey Trouble." Rated PG, "Monkey Trouble" is a film that may be enjoyed by viewers of all ages. That includes adults, who will go away pondering how the monkey, whose real name is Finster, was taught to perform at almost a human level. He gives an amazing performance.

Intelligence-wise, Willy, the whale star of "Free Willy," was pretty impressive but monkeys are much smaller and more charismatic. A life-size stuffed Willy is apt to be more frightening than endearing.

Finster, who will soon have the new name of Dodger, has a shady background. His owner, Azro (Harvey Keitel), a swarthy hustler who works the Los Angeles Venice Beach boardwalk, has taught him to pick the pockets of the crowd that gathers to watch him perform cute tricks.

Under the guidance of Azro, he has also become adept at burglarizing homes. In one of his nightly forays he enters the home of Eva Gregory (Thora Birch) who lives with her mother (Mimi Rogers), her stepfather (Christopher McDonald) and her baby brother. While ransacking the house, he has time to observe family life. He likes it. He is so impressed that he decides to run away from surly Azro and take up residence there.

Eva is a troubled child who has difficulties both in grade school and at home. She vehemently resents her baby brother. She would really like to have a dog, but her stepfather is allergic to furry animals.

She makes a fuss about getting ready for school in the morning, leaves her room in chaos, sits at a table by herself at dinner and has a sign on her door that says "Keep Out."

In one scene, her mom and stepfather play with the baby and sing "The Itsy Bitsy Spider." When it comes to the line "washed him all away," she substitutes her brother's name. "You don't mean that," her parents say. She answers, "No.

We could shoot him.' Meanwhile, the monkey has found his way back to the neighborhood and is waiting in a tree. When he sees Eva walking home from school, he jumps down. Startled at first, she quickly recovers, takes him in her arms and decides to keep him. Stuffing him in her backpack, she sneaks him into her room.

Eva (Thora Birch) and her new best friend Dodger, a pocketpicking monkey, star in the family comedy "Monkey Trouble.'

A series of funny incidents follows that involve Eva's maneuvering to hide her pet, whom she calls Dodger.

Eva's father wonders why he is sneezing, her mother wonders about Eva, who has become cooperative, and Azro wonders where his monkey is and how he can appease a couple of crooks who are depending on the monkey to help them loot a house. Time is running out when he spots Eva carrying the monkey in her bike basket. Eva doesn't see him but the monkey does and tries to hide.

7B

Suspense, humor and parentchild relationships are highlights of this scene, which ends on a happy note.

Thora Birch is a natural preadolescent heroine who demands and conceals her grievances by rebelling. Keitel makes the most of his scruffy bad-guy organ grinder role. Finster is immensely humanlike in his comic escapades, facial expressions and chatter.

As Eva points out when she compares him with pictures of adults: "He's no different from them." A cute comic film, "Monkey Trouble" should have them.' no trouble becoming a favorite.

when Heidi (Roxanne Wellington) attends a high school dance with her friend Susan (Lynnae Lehfeldt). There Heidi meets Peter Patrone (Christopher Newman), a dreamy boy who Heidi falls in love with.

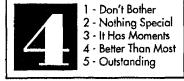

In high school, all Susan wanted in a boy was one who could twist and smoke at the same time. But Heidi wanted more. She finds it - so she thinks - in Scoop Rosenbaum (Kerry McInerney), an arrogant, radical left-wing journalist she meets at a Eugene Mc-Carthy rally.

The play follows Heidi's search for self-knowledge through female consciousnessraising groups to her work as an art historian and essayist. She is awash in disillusionment. She fought for women's equality, yet it brings her no more happiness than the previous restricted generation.

Heidi is not able to connect with the sisterhood of the feminist movement or the materialism of the 80s. She doesn't know where she is or what she wants to be. She is, in her own words, a highly informed observer, capable of enjoying nothing, and becoming a part of nothing.

The play, because of its broad scope, is told in a series of disiointed scenes which explore Heidi's situation, but which create no forward momentum. And that's one of the faults of the play. The other main drawback is that the scenes are hit and miss.

While the scenes between Heidi and the two men in her life ring true, ironically it's the female bonding scenes that seem forced. Those scenes are filled with "types," not characters, and they play like epi-

Prize-winning comedy.

And even though the play is just over 5 years old, it seems dated. The subject has been watered down by every sitcom, television movie and talk show that's explored the issue since then.

The Hilberry cast, led by Wellington, does a wonderful job with the script, despite the fact that most of the actors were struggling with acne in the 1970s when women like Heidi were struggling with fulfillment.

Wellington and Newman have a great chemistry together - their final scene brought spontaneous applause from the audience - and their relationship is more believable than that between Wellington and McInerney. But that is more the fault of the script than of the acting or the direction

Speaking of direction, the scene changes could use a little speeding up, and because there's no plot of any sort to keep the audience alert, the play needs to go at breakneck speed to keep the interest up.

A word to the wise - there is quite a bit of foul language in the show (to which I heard objections at intermission), so keep that in mind in purchasing tickets.

But all in all, Hilberry has come up with yet another winner this season.

Alma Smith and Friends

Alma Smith will appear at the Jazz Forum on Wednesday, April 6, in celebration of her more than 50 years as a professional musician and entertainer. She began her career as a teenage pianist in the early 1940s. Soon after, she toured the United States with a group known as The Counts and the Countess before settling in California for several years, where she appeared in many musical film shorts or "soundies."

Jazz Forum concerts are held at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee, and begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $9 in advance, $10 at the door. Reservations may be made by calling 961-1714.

New Denver airport is still grounded

8B

Can you imagine the logistics involved in opening a completely new international airport? Of moving all operations from a currently operating airport to a new one several miles away?

That is just what is going on in Denver these days and it has proven to be a big-time headache for all involved.

At least three opening dates have had to be changed. Right now, it's set for May 15.

I have flown in and out of Denver's Stapleton Airport twice in the past few months. Each time I was greeted with a plethora of information about the new airport and about how the next time I flew in, it would probably be to a different place. Obviously, that hasn't happened yet.

My sister and brother-in-law, who live near Denver and travel frequently, are acutely aware of these problems because they keep wondering if they are going to fly out of one airport, only to fly back to another (when that happens, shuttles will return you to your car at the old airport).

What is rather strange about all this is that Stapleton 'Airport is really quite nice and seems perfectly adequate to handle its air traffic. So it is not surprising that many Denverites aren't too pleased about the taxes which have been spent on this monumental project.

By some, it is referred to as "Pena's Folly" – after the former mayor, Frederico Pena, who pushed through the construction legislation several years ago on a promise it would create jobs.

Be that as it may, amid much fuss and grumbling, this new airport will finally open

For example:

• The underground rail system that links the terminal and three concourses is like those in Atlanta, Miami and Tampa.

• The much-touted baggage handling system, which is supposed to deliver luggage to carousels before passengers get there, is already in use in Frankfurt.

• And the main terminal's white fabric roof, shaped like a series of mountain peaks, looks atrium-like architecture of the like the roof on the Vancouver six-floor main terminal is domi-

Approximately $3.2 billion has been spent to bring all of this to fruition. The airport covsize of Manhattan. It has five runways, three concourses and 84 full-service gates arranged in a "flow-through" pattern that will allow aircraft to land, taxi to a concourse gate and take off all in one direction.

Its FAA control tower, at 327 feet, will be the tallest in the world, requiring 20 minutes to climb the 548 stairs to the top. And it will be pretty. The

And at night, the tips of ers 53 square miles: twice the the fabric roofs' peaks light up, a sight that civic poosters hope will become a Denver signature landmark — much like the swoops on the front of the opera hall in Sydney, Australia

> The much-touted baggage system is already both a boon and bane to this enterprise. It cost $186 million and uses some 4,000 toboggan-like vehicles on 21 miles of track in underground tunnels. If it works, it should be terrific. Unfortunately, the inability to get it up and running was the reason for the most recent delay in opening time.

It is supposed to provide high-speed service by relying on UPC bar-code labels to assign luggage to the individual carts. The current promise is that passengers arriving at Concourses A or B should find their luggage at carousels eight minutes later.

However, tests in early March revealed several glitches in the system. For example, in a test run by Continental Airlines (the second-largest user of the airport) only 35 percent of the bags wound up in the right place after laser bar-code readers apparently got the wrong message.

The rest piled up in what was described by one observer as a mock horror movie, as it might be done on "Saturday Night Live," titled "The Isle of Lost Luggage." United Airlines had a similar experience in an earlier test.

So the two airlines, whose leasing arrangement with the new facility gives them veto power over the opening, nixed the March 9 debut. Now the pressure is on the manufacturer of the luggage-sorter to meet the new May 15 date.

Now Denverites will be able to boast that they have the largest and most modern airport in the world - big enough to contain Stapleton, Dallas-Ft. Worth and New York's JFK -but do they need it?

The new airport's capacity is 55 million passengers a year; current projections call for only 34 million to be serviced during its first 12 months. By the year 2020, after planned expansions, it will be able to handle 110 million. For its sake, I sure hope United and Continental stay healthy.

Meanwhile, local residents are preparing for the longer drive to the airport - some 23 miles - which is connected to the airport by a new road named, appropriately, Pena Boulevard.

Cynthia Boal-Janssens' Travel Trends column runs on attended with a second ray of propagalternate weeks in this section.

Denver's new airport will be able to handle 55 million passengers annually

Grosse Pointe kids have a friend in Cooper

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Rumor has it that when Dick Cooper had surgery recently the doctors found green and gold blood running through his veins.

His minivan is painted in Grosse Pointe North green with Norseman heads accentuating the trim.

To say that Cooper is North's biggest booster would be a huge understatement. He's the

That's why he got one of the surprises of his life last week when Grosse Pointe South athletic director Jo Lake presented him with a framed Blue Devils' letter and certificate.

That would have been like John F. Kennedy presenting Nikita Khrushchev with a key to the White House.

"It was almost like being in church," he said.

Not to be outdone by the student organization which was behind the Cooper's Square idea, North's Parents Club had a portrait of Cooper made and it hangs on the wall near the school's main office.

"I think they hung it there to save energy," Cooper says with a laugh. "With the glare from my bald head, they don't need as much lighting."

Cooper got started taking pictures at North events when his oldest son Chuck was a student there. It continued when daughter Karen and youngest son Scott were active in various activities and became such a part of Cooper's life that he never stopped.

Rumor has it that when Dick Cooper had surgery recently the doctors found green and gold blood running through his veins

To say that Cooper is North's biggest booster would be a huge understatement. He's the

That's why he got one of the surprises of his life last week when Grosse Pointe South athletic director Jo Lake presented him with a framed Blue Devils' letter and certificate.

That would have been like John F. Kennedy presenting Nikita Khrushchev with a key to the White House.

"I always kid the South peo-fighting after the game. It ple that the reason they're in really upsets me when there the pictures is because they got are problems because there are in the way of my camera," Cooper said.

You couldn't get that kind of attention at a more-struc-tured assembly," Gauerke said. The reaction nearly left Cooper speechless.

"It was almost like being in church," he said.

Not to be outdone by the student organization which was behind the Cooper's Square idea, North's Parents Club had a portrait of Cooper made and it hangs on the wall near the school's main office.

Cooper got started taking pictures at North events when his oldest son Chuck was a student there. It continued when daughter Karen and youngest son Scott were active in various activities and became such a part of Cooper's life that he never stopped.

The interaction with other people is more important than all the book learning in the world."

Tracy leads Harvard to Final Four

Harvard's hockey team is playing in the NCAA Final Four in St. Paul this week, thanks to the efforts of Grosse Pointe Farms resident Tripp Tracy Tracy, a sophomore goalie for the Crimson, allowed only one goal in his second straight tournament game last weekend as Harvard beat New Hampshire 7-1 in the East Regional in Albany, N.Y.

Tracy made several difficult saves in the first half of the game while the contest was close. During one two-minute span of the first period, Tracy stopped the Wildcats with a pad save, a deflection with his stick and a poke check.

Harvard took a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Brian Farrell and Steve Martins, but New Hampshire's Dean Woodman made it 2-1 early in the second period. The Crimson broke the game open in the third period on goals by captain Sean McCann, Perry Cohagen, Chris Baird, Jason Karmanos and Corey Gustafson.

Tracy takes a 12-3-2 record into the Final Four. He has played 10 straight games without a defeat, including a 5-1 victory over Brown in the ECAC semifinals at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Harvard, which finished the regular season ranked No. 3 nationally, improved its record to 24-5-3. The Crimson, who won the Eastern College Athletic Conference regular season and playoff titles, face Lake Superior State in a semifinal game today, March 31. The game is on PASS at 2 p.m.

Cooper interacts easily with the students from both schools.

Gauerke said the students appreciate Cooper as much as he appreciates them.

Grosse Pointe Rangers split with Canadian foe

The Riverside Rangers of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association slipped past the Grosse Pointe Rangers AA Mite squad 3-1 to split the home-and-home series.

Grosse Pointe won the first game 4-3 as both teams won on the road.

Riverside's goalie held off a fierce Grosse Pointe attack led by Peter Kalinowski and Erik Justin Graves' second-period goal, assisted by Kenny Wieczerza and Andrew Amato, kept the game close for Grosse Pointe until Eric Wycisk knocked in an insurance goal for Riverside late in the third period.

The Grosse Pointe win was powered by two goals apiece from Graves and Schleicher. Wieczerza, goalie Greg Smith, Marc Callert and Kalinowski collected the assists.

The series was a good test for Grosse Pointe, which opened its Little Caesars Amateur Hockey League playoffs with an 8-0 victory over the Livonia Knights.

Dennison for advice during halftime. He laughs about the players that would go to the bar after games and fill up on large amounts of thick English beer.

The Royals are in the 12team Budweiser Basketball League. Budweiser put $12 million into the fledgling league, which is split into three divisions. Ayrault was in the highest level - the first division.

"It (the league) is the bottom of the ladder. Some players hope to hook up with another country (in Europe)," Ayrault said.

Only two Americans are allowed on each team. Americans who have played in the league for six years are considered nationalized.

"In my last game we played a team that had seven Americans and they beat us by 50 (points)," Ayrault said.

The American players are paid 80 pounds a week to conduct clinics for kids in order to increase interest in the game.

But Ayrault didn't leave England with only bad experiences.

He said it was fun to travel and to go for the cultural experience and he admits he didn't expect to make a lot of money.

'You go in blind. You don't know how their money system works and how everything else goes," said Ayrault. "They speak English. I can't imagine if it was a foreign language."

He and his teammates got along well. The players asked questions about Detroit and were very interested in his background and America.

Ayrault, 22, is back home in the Pointes and is finishing his degree at Wayne State. He has 2 1/2 semesters left and plans to graduate with a major in graphic design and a business minor.

And his basketball prospects? "I'm coaching a team at church. My basketball career is pretty much over, but I'm staying in shape," Ayrault said.

Spring cleaning tips to keep going

While many people start their cleaning projects with a great deal of enthusiasm, all too often they run out of time or energy long before they're finished.

Here are a few tips you may find helpful:

1. Start by becoming organized. List the cleaning supplies you have on hand and those you need to purchase. In addition to all-purpose cleaners, waxes and polishes, consider specific cleaners for specific surfaces such as glass, wood, ceramic tile, brass and silver.

2. Check the household inventory for items such as a dustpan and broom, sponges, dustcloths, scouring brushes and rubber gloves. Make sure the vacuum cleaner is in good working order and extra bags are on hand.

3. Start with the major areas, such as the basement, garage, workshop and maybe even the attic. Then clean other small storage spots, such as closets and cupboards. Once these spaces are cleaned and organized, there may be room for items that need to be stored from other areas of the house

4. Carry supplies in a lightweight caddy with many compartments. It saves time and eliminates running back and forth to get something you have forgotten.

5. Alternate strenuous stand-up tasks that require a lot of movement with quieter, sit-down chores. For example, unload a closet shelf, then sit down to sort things out.

6. Avoid fatigue by taking rest breaks.

7. If a large block of time isn't available for a marathon cleaning session, break the tasks down into one- or two-hour blocks. The results will be the same whether all the cleaning is finished in one session or several and variable interest rate is the first thing to consider when choosing a home loan. A fixed-mortgage sets interest at the same rate for the life of the loan. A variable rate mortgage changes on an interim basis, as national interest rates fluctuate up or down. Depending on the economic environment and the amount of time you plan to carry the loan, choosing between these two options can make a big difference financially.

Consult with your lender before making a decision on which type of loan you'll use. Even though it seems logical that a fixed rate would be best during a time of low interest rates, several variable rate loans can offer maximum cap and payment advantages that could save you money.

Adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) are currently the most popular variable rate loans, and are a fine option for those with a transient lifestyle. ARMs offer a low interest rate (usually lower than the market average) at first, then the interest rate fluctuates with the market after a pre-designated period of time - usually a few years.

If you choose a "fixed" rate mortgage, there are several time periods of payment to choose from, such as 10, 15, 25 or 30 years - the latter being the most popular. However, the shorter the period of a fixed loan, the less time it takes to build equity. If you plan on staying in your home for more than a few years and can afford it, consider opting for the shorter term mortgage; it's not as expensive as many potential homeowners might believe.

For example, the monthly payments for a 15-year fixed rate mortgage are usually around 20-plus percent higher than those for a 30year mortgage. That's not bad if you consider that you will cut the time it takes to fully own your home in half. The shorter-term loans may carry slightly higher interest rates or require more points or higher standards for approval.

Many factors can affect your decision - your job security, income, how long you expect to stay in the house you're buying, and what you expect the economy to do in the future.

Look at all the choices available, work closely with your lender and real estate agent to work through the calculations - then make the best, informed choice for your financial future.

Household Help

Q. I have a downstairs bathroom that has perpetual problems with cracked and loose ceramic tile. I don't know when the tiles were installed, but most of them are in fairly good shape. Fortunately for me, there is a box of tiles in my basement that match the bathroom. Can you brief me on the easiest and quickest way to replace them?

A. Just having extra tiles that match your bathroom floor is more than half solving your problem. Ceramic tiles are very brittle and fragile.

The only tools required for this repair are a hammer, cold chisel, wide putty knife, new adhesive and a small 2x4 wooden block. Always wear eye protection when doing jobs involving flying debris.

Start your job by chipping and lifting the old tile and be extra careful not to chip or crack a good tile. Also, remove the old adhesive or grout with a scraper. Clean the area thoroughly, and be sure the surface is fairly smooth. Before you install your new tile, apply the adhesive with a grooved effect, if your putty knife or trowel doesn't have it on its edge. Next, set your tile in place, making certain that the edges match the existing tiles around it. Carefully and lightly tap the tile firmly with a block of wood. Once firmly set, remove any excess adhesive that oozes from around the edges of the tile.

Q. I would like to paint a small area of concrete to blend with the rest of an exterior wall. The patch I repaired has aged for several months, and I need to know the proper steps and procedure. Can you assist me with this job?

A. You can simply begin by purchasing a commercial concrete and asphalt cleaner for about $4 or $5 in a one-quart bottle. Follow the manufacturer's directions on the label and be sure to remove all dirt and any other foreign residue with this product. Allow the surface to dry completely before applying your exterior finish. Use the first coat as a primer, let dry overnight, then paint your second and final coat.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

DOUBLE DUTY — Dual-purpose furniture is not a new idea. Some of the 18th- and 19th-century examples seem strange to our 20th-century eyes. The sofa that becomes a bathtub, the desk that becomes a cot or the upright piano that turns into a double bed would not sell in a furniture store today.

A novel table made in England in 1926 was sold recently. The table has a slanted top that was used as a writing desk. It opens in several places to show small drawers for writing utensils. At the bottom of the desk is a pullout slide and a sewing box with a pleated silk bag to hold the fabric. It must have been a special order for a customer. It was made by Richard Slade Junior of Cheltenham in Gloucestershire, England. This unusual piece is priced over $10,000.

Q. I recently purchased a metal ashtray at a tag sale. It looks like a fireplace. Set into the top is a piece of reddish-brown stone next to the engraved words, "This is an exact copy of the fireplace in Hitler's former home...from which the marble piece inset is an actual part taken from there one month after V-E Day." There is more history on the bottom and the words, "Compliments of the Weatherhead Company 1946."

A. We spoke to Albert Weatherhead. The marble was taken from Hitler's home after World War II. Three men, including Weatherhead, were sent to Germany to investigate manufacturing methods immediately after the war. They obtained 30 pounds of the marble and used it in an advertising ashtray in 1946. You have an unusual advertising piece.

Q. I have an authentic Shaker chair with a name stenciled on the back. My problem is that there is a number near the top of the back leg and I have never seen a chair marked that way before. Does it detract from the value?

A. Furniture made by the Shakers, a religious group in the United States in the 19th and 20th centuries, is bringing high prices. The chairs are so popular that many copies have been made and recent reproductions are available.

The neat, well-organized Shakers had a number for each room. The chair was marked so that it would be kept in the correct room. You may be able to get more history on where your chair was made by trying to match up the chair number with known museum examples. TIED IN KNOTS: Boring hours at sea inspired the sailors of the 19th century to make gifts for those at home. They used whale bone and other materials that were obtainable. The carved ivory and bone pieces, known as scrimshaw, were made in the days of whaling at the beginning of the 19th century.

A lesser-known craft that was popular in the last part of the 19th century was knot work. It was a type of macrame. Sailors were able to tie all of the nautical knots as part of their work. Some sailors used this skill to make small boxes, baskets or other useful objects. The finished knot work pieces were covered with tar, varnish or paint to keep the string rigid and to protect it from wear. Pieces of knot work are rare and small items sell from $300 to $600. They are considered a form of folk art.

Q. How old is the design that we call an easy chair?

A. Early seating furniture was made of wood. The upholstered chair was introduced in the 1700s. In the 18th century, wings were added to the chair to keep drafts and excess heat away. The makeup used by ladies at that time had a wax base so any direct heat from a fireplace could melt it. The wing chair or easy chair went out of style in the early 19th century. It did not regain popularity until the 1880s.

Q. My dinner dishes are white with a flow blue design of birds, leopards and scrolls. A round mark on the bottom shows a potter at the wheel, the date 1790 and the words "Anglo-Saxon, JG, Late Mayers." Are the dishes really 200 years old?

A. The potter mark in a ring was used from 1885-88 by James Gildea, Burslem, Staffordshire, England. Anglo-Saxon is the name of the pattern. A dinner plate in this pattern is worth $35.

Seeds won't grow? Look out for damping-off

Q. I tried growing flower and vegetable seedlings in my basement for the first time. They did well at first, then some suddenly wilted, fell over and died. The stems were black and shriveledlooking. What caused this? How can I prevent it from happening again?

A. The problem is damping-off, a fungal disease of seedlings caused by common soil fungi. Damping-off can also cause seeds to rot and seedlings to die even before they emerge from the soil. To prevent it, grow seedlings in a sterile medium, such as a commercial peat-vermiculite mix, in sanitized containers. Water to keep the growing medium moist but not soaked. The high humidity and warm temperatures, often used to speed germination, can contribute to damping-off. So can deep planting, overcrowding, overwatering and overfertilizing. Once established, damping-off can spread through seed flats very quickly. Discard affected plants at

Q. I know that a forsythia can be forced to bloom by taking dormant cuttings and bringing them into the warmth. What are some other plants that I can do this with?

A. Some excellent choices of plant material to be forced in March are: apple and crabapple, redbud, magnolia, lilac, honeysuckle, hickory, spirea, dogwood, beautybush and mock orange.

Choose branches that won't affect the natural shape of the bush or tree. Look for swollen flower buds that are usually a bit larger than the leaf buds. Bring the branches inside and put them into a bucket of warm water, keeping them misted and in dim light with temperatures 60-72 degrees. Use the twigs and branches mixed in with greens and other spring flowers for a beautiful spring display.

Reverse mortgages: Drawing on pension from your home

Michigan's older homeowners will be among the first in the nation to have a new option for receiving federally insured reverse mortgage income, according to a company that specializes in the field.

Steven Baer, president of Senior Income Reverse Mortgage Corp., has announced that his Chicagobased firm is now offering its government-backed financial product to homeowning Michigan seniors seeking extra retirement funds for necessities or pleasures.

A reverse mortgage is a special financial instrument that enables senior citizens age 62 and over to remain securely in their own homes for life with full ownership rights while converting some of the value of their homes into tax-free, guaranteed monthly retirement income or cash reserves. Unlike a regular mortgage, the monthly reverse mortgage check goes to the homeowner from the company, and imposes no qualifying income or credit standards. No repayment is required until the last co-owning senior dies, sells or moves from the home. Normally, repayment of the cash received, plus various charges, is made with proceeds from the sale of the home by the estate, with all remaining equity and home appreciation going to the heirs.

Baer said, "Older people in Michigan can now use our product to tap the wealth in their homes for any of their spending needs without selling. It's like turning your home into pension income. We're serving hundreds of clients across the country who are using their monthly reverse mortgage income to help with such necessities as home health care, prescriptions, property taxes, home repairs, mortgage payoffs, and credit card bills. Others are funding pleasures like travel, dining out, new cars, family reunions, and gifts for loved ones. I expect Michigan seniors will be just as creative."

Baer said interested seniors can obtain a free consumers information kit on reverse mortgages by calling Senior Income at 1-800-774-6266. The kit shows that the amount of money available is a function of the person's age, home value, location and the applicable interest rate.

A 75-year-old couple with a $100,000 home in the Detroit, Flint or Toledo metropolitan areas, for example, today could receive a monthly check of about $590 for the next 10 years, or $370 for as long as either partner lives in the home. Or, they could obtain about $49,000 to pay off an existing mortgage, to do some remodeling, or to keep available in a cash reserve account growing at an annual rate of about 8.25 percent. The same couple could do just as well in Leelanau County, but could obtain a maximum in other parts of the state ranging from $30,000 in rural areas to $41,000 in the Grand Rapids area. However the money is received, no repayment is made until the owners leave the home. There is no minimum required home value.

Although groups like the American Association of Retired Persons have promoted the reverse mortgage idea around the country for a number of years, Senior Income is the first company in the nation organized exclusively to provide older homeowners with federally insured reverse mortgage income, backed by the Federal Housing Administration.

Baer said his company also is the first anywhere to offer seniors the option of receiving a cash bonus linked to the lowest interest rate available for a reverse mortgage. Nationally, the bonus can mean roughly $500 to $8,500 over a normal reverse mortgage, plus the lowest annual interest rate available in the country at 5.06 percent as of March 7. The tradeoff for the bonus, said Baer, is that less equity would likely remain for heirs at the end. In addition to Michigan, Senior Income is expanding into neighboring Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Grants, subsidized loans available for home improvement

Most homeowners are unaware that regardless of their income there are federal, state and local programs that will help them repair and remodel their homes.

Government at all levels recognizes that neighborhoods are the basis of life in our country. When a neighborhood deteriorates, many things happen both physically and socially. When the homes look shabby, a neighborhood seems more attractive to crime and criminals. An area in decline is like a spreading cancer. As homes become shabby looking and in need of maintenance, the residents lose their desire to keep up the neighborhood. Streets become receptacles for trash, schools lower their standards and very quickly the selling price of homes in the area drops sharply. This accelerates the cycle of degeneration.

To keep and maintain the nation's housing and neighborhoods, governments at all levels have programs to give homeowners money (that does not have to repaid) for repairs or to lend them money at below market levels or at no interest. In many areas utility companies will either do energy conservation work free or at low cost and in other places will lend homeowners money at no interest to pay the contractor of their choice for the necessary work. In addition there are tax incentives to promote efficient energy use.

These programs are not restricted to low-income people, slum areas or urban neighborhoods. Owners of single or multi-family dwellings are eligible. While the grants do not have to be repaid, most of the loans offer low or no interest, long terms and low payments.

Some of the other home improvements covered under these programs are: attic and wall insulation, new windows, outerwall siding, security doors and locks, window guards, sidewalks and masonry work, bathrooms and kitchens, electrical and plumbing, new roofs, gutters, and downspouts. Consumer Education Research

Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group formed in 1969, has just published the 208 large-page, 1994 edition of "Consumers Guide to Home Repair Grants and Subsidized Loans" ($16.95 plus $3 postage and handling from CERC GRANTS, 350 Scotland Road, Orange, NJ 07050 or 800-872-0121), which lists over 7,000 sources of loan and grant programs offered by federal, state and local government, utility companies and others, as well as typical programs offered and how to qualify. Form letters for inquiries to these loan and grant sources are included along with detailed instructions on determining your debt-to-income ratio for eligibility.

Robert L. Berko, executive director of CERC, said, "Some programs have no income ceiling and others allow income of as much as $50,000 per year or more. There are even programs for which tenants are eligible and many allow loans to poor credit risks. In many areas, people with disabilities can receive grants to pay for needed repairs, such as access ramps and widening of doorways."

Modest plan is embellished with country front porch

By W.D. Farmer

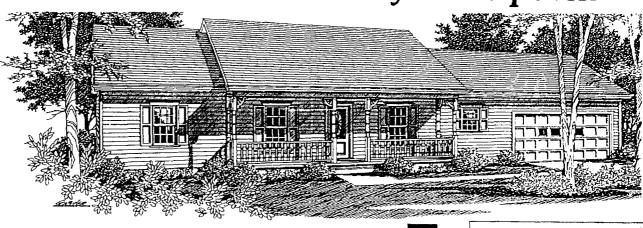

A covered front porch joins a foyer entrance that connects with the great room or the formal dining room in this country-style home.

The deluxe master bedroom suite is a major highlight. It is the ultimate in luxury and comfort as compared to most modestly sized homes. It features spaciousness, a tray ceiling, compartment bath with double vanities and unending closet space. The remaining two bedrooms and guests share a central bath.

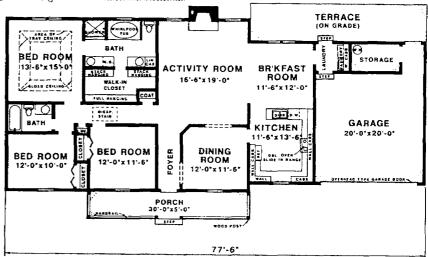

The great room and breakfast room will accommodate a large family and the kitchen has abundant cabinets, work surface and built-in appliances. The laundry room links to the garage entry.

The plan is available with crawl space, basement or slab foundations.

The country exterior features a genuine front porch complete with wood rail and the exterior finish is horizontal wood siding.

The plan is No. Z-701. It includes 1,792 square feet of heated space and is a computer generated plan. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information, write W.D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc. P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

How to take nightmare out of packing, moving

By Dough Stranaham

Divisional President Century 21 Great Lakes Inc.

You're elated — you've just closed on your dream house. Now it's time to move. It isn't until you throw open the closets, pull out the drawers and unlock the storage unit that you realize you have more material possessions than a traveling circus.

The key to a smooth move is organization. Here are some simple tips to help you keep your sanity during this tumultuous time:

• If you decide to hire a professional mover, get more than one bid. Rates vary depending on how many hours and how much manpower you will need. Make the same inquiries about truck rental rates.

• Invest in good boxes, with appropriate dividers. Purchase plenty of newsprint (without ink) for wrapping. Both are available from moving companies. Blankets, linens and towels are also good for protecting breakables. Divide them into categories — kitchen, bedroom, bathroom, etc. Label the contents of each box on the outside and where the items belong.

• When packing dishware, start with a bed of crumpled newsprint: Use double-thick newsprint and stack four to five plates with paper in-between and "stand" them on their edges. With pots and pans, nest smaller items inside larger ones. China and stemware should be wrapped individually. Place glasses upright, not sideways.

• Clothes can remain on hangers and hung in wardrobe boxes. Suitcases and large garbage bags also make good transporting units.

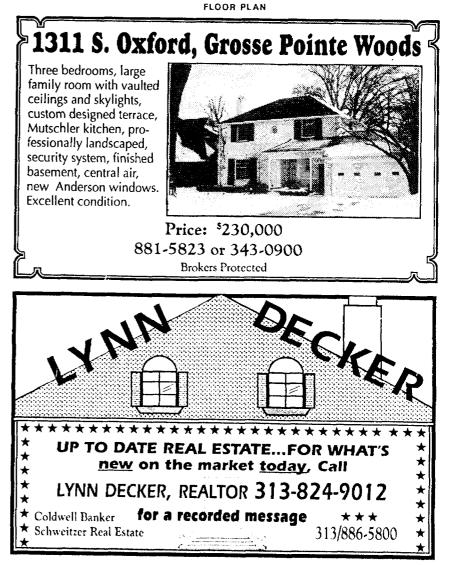

• Put all valuables — jewelry, birth certificates, marriage license, car titles, etc. — in a separate place that stays with you so they don't get lost in the shuffle. Hand-carry valuables and other fragile treasures.

• Two weeks before moving, prepare your change-of-address cards. Notify your post office, bank, utilities, insurance and credit card companies. Don't forget to have your medical records and children's school records transferred, if necessary.

• When your old house is empty, conduct a thorough inspection. Check closets, crawl spaces, the attic, basement and all nooks-andcrannies. Have another person do a subsequent inspection.

• Clean your new house before moving in. It's always easier to clean it when empty. You'll have a clearer vision of the subtle features that need more attention.

Although moving is often traumatic and exhausting, it can provide a rewarding sense of accomplishment. After all, you're usually going somewhere better than where you came from. Think of it as a new beginning, a fresh start or a "moving" experience.
