$11 million

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — A new pool and community center could cost close to $11 million according to initial plans at which city council got a first look during its September meeting.

"This is our first time getting this kind of detail so we have a lot of information to process," Mayor Ted Kedzierski said.

The impetus for the project is a gift of $1.2 million the city received last year from the estate of a former resident. Carole Ann Williams passed away in May 2023 at age 84. She was a graduate of Grosse Pointe University School

Fewer teachers leaving GPPSS

By Ted O'Neil

THE GROSSE POINTES

— The number of teachers who have left the Grosse Pointe Public School System for reasons other than retirement has declined 35 percent compared to the year before the current board of education was seated.

"There has been some talk that we lose a lot of teachers in Grosse Pointe," Superintendent Andrea Tuttle said while giving an update on the numbers at last month's board meeting.

During the 2021-22 school year, 55 teachers left the district for non-retirement reasons. That fell to 52 in 2022-23 and 36 last year (see chart, right).

"All this rhetoric we've heard of teachers bailing, this tells a different story," Vice President Ahmed Ismail said.

Absentee voting begins on senior services millage proposal

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

THE GROSSE POINTES AND HARPER WOODS

— Absentee ballots for the November election beginning late last week were sent to Michigan voters who opted in.

In the Pointes, there are a number of local issues on the ballot, including the school board race, sinking fund millage and first-time proposal of a senior services millage.

The six-year, 0.35-mill levy proposal for senior services would bring in around $1.3 million annually, if passed by all five Pointes and Harper Woods. It also is required to pass in four of the six communities for it to take effect.

The millage would impact the average taxpayer to the tune of:

- ◆ $16 annually in Harper Woods,
- ◆ $42 annually in Grosse Pointe Woods,
- ◆ $64.70 annually in the City of Grosse Pointe,
- ◆ $65 annually in Grosse Pointe Park,
- ◆ $82 annually in Grosse Pointe Farms
- ◆ and $126 annually in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Though The Helm at the Boll Life Center brought forward the millage proposal and is the local provider of senior-focused socialization programs, evidence-

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — City council took the first steps toward selling unused land at its meeting Monday, Sept. 16, including one spot that could lead to new construction.

Council approved spending $15,600 to have both spots surveyed, then will examine that information before deciding next steps.

The more lucrative of the two is located on Sunningdale Park between Sunningdale and Lochmoor.

According to a memo from City Administrator Frank Schulte to council, the space previously was a dirt road the city abandoned in 1975 due to maintenance issues and the Sunningdale Park.

Eric Dunlap, the city's assessor, estimates each parcel could be worth up to $250,000. City Attorney Deb Walling suggested the parcels be sold via a bid process with the contingent each buyer must build a home on their respective lot within two years.

Dunlap said based on the surrounding home values, houses built there would be in the price range of $750,000 to $1 million, with each netting the city about based programming around fitness and wellness, and public health essential services such as Meals on Wheels, Medicare assistance, medical escorts and medical equipment lending, it is not the guaranteed receiver of any senior millage funds.

The millage language notes the levy would be funneled through an Active Adult Commission, made up of one designee per city and an additional at-large member, like the structure of the Grosse Pointe Public Library Board. The commission would serve as the policy-making body and have the power to direct funds to senior services elsewhere, if it so chose.

"We collect the money and contract The Helm to provide services through this governing board, which is a governmental entity," City of Grosse Pointe Mayor Sheila Tomkowiak noted when council approved the ballot language in June. "... Once that tax is passed, if it is, we're not required to contract with The Helm to provide those services. If we don't like what they're doing, we can contract with anybody. ... It doesn't make sense to go out and look for a different provider, but that's how it works."

"It's not The Helm millage," Helm Executive Director Krista Siddall said. "... We don't even know that we're going to get all this money. We're advocating for senior services. We also are the experts, we feel, in the community at providing the senior services. We're the only one around doing all of these essential services. But, again, I believe in this 100 percent, so if there's another organization that's doing senior services and wants to come forth, then fine."

A telephone poll of 400 registered voters in the Pointes and Harper Woods by market researcher Epic/MRA last September, found 60 percent of respondents would support a 10-year, 0.5-mill senior services millage. Upon input from the city administrations and councils, the official ballot language settled at a six-year, 0.35-mill levy.

"To me this is tyranny by majority," said Dick Schroeder, a senior and Park resident in opposition of the millage. "... Just the idea that this can be thrust on us by a majority to force us to donate to a nonprofit, that's key. I'm not preventing the 60 percent from writing a check, but they're forcing me, a guy who's on a fixed income now."

The Helm is seeking the millage to expand its offerings, but also to ensure a revenue stream as it anticipates a growing aging population and faces decreasing philanthropy trends.

"Eighty percent of our budget is from sources we can't control," Siddall said. "People say, 'Keep doing what you're doing.' And I keep saying, 'That's OK, but you can't control grants, you can't control foundations, you can't control philanthropy.'

"... Philanthropy as a whole has dropped since 2020, about 2 percent a year, and we don't know what philanthropy's going to look like in five years. So I need to say, how do I protect the organization? How do I protect our seniors in the community by having some income that I know is coming in to pay for these services?"

In 10 years, 25 percent of residents in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods are set to be 65 or older, according to projections by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

Currently, according to 2022 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates, as reported by the United States Census Bureau:

- ◆ 13.8 percent of Harper Woods residents are 65 and older,
- ◆ 18 percent of Park residents are 65 and older,
- ◆ 20.6 percent of Woods residents are 65 and older,
- ◆ 23.7 percent of Farms residents are 65 and older,
- ◆ 23.9 percent of City residents are 65 and older,
- ◆ and 28.8 percent of Shores residents are 65 and older.

Taxes generally are for the broad benefit of the community," Park resident David Boll — of no relation to the Boll family after which The Helm is named — said in opposition. "As soon as you start getting into niche beneficiaries, where does it end? ...

You're burdening the entire community for a niche beneficiary."

In 2023, The Helm served 97 Shores residents, 264 City residents, 309 Harper Woods residents, 353 Park residents, 357 Farms residents and 579 Grosse Pointe Woods residents.

Its membership in the same year was made up of 26 Shores residents, 91 City residents, 29 Harper Woods residents, 95 Park residents, 181 Farms residents and 133 Grosse Pointe Woods residents.

If approved by the Active Adult Commission, The Helm intends to use the millage funds to cover essential services it currently provides — Meals on Wheels, which provided approximately 26,000 meals in 2023; senior outreach and assistance; and health and wellness education and enrichment — as well as increase its evidence-based programming, which require expensive licensing and follow-up. Currently these include Enhanced Fit, Matter of Balance and Share, a program where newly diagnosed Alzheimer's patients are led through care planning with their families.

The Helm also seeks to "meet people where they're at," Siddall said, by bringing programming into the community, such as offering Medicaid counseling a couple weeks at the Ewald Library in Grosse Pointe Park.

Finally, it would open an adult day program in an Active Adult Activity Center separate from its current building at 158 Ridge, which already is at capacity offering between 200 and 250 programs a month.

Concern among those not in favor of the millage includes verbiage in the interlocal agreement establishing the Active Adult Commission, which reads, "Should the parties wish to secure a facility to own and/or operate an Active Adult Activity Center, each governmental body shall, by resolution, confirm their commitment to this effort and its respective funding. Upon approval of the required funding necessary to secure and/or construct an Active Adult Activity Center, the commission may contract, own, operate and manage a joint Active Adult Activity Center to provide activities and services for older persons in accordance with its purpose. Upon approval by the governmental bodies, the commission shall have the authority for the purpose of acquisition of a site and building or the acquisition of a site and construction of a building, as the parties hereto may agree in the future."

Siddall stated it is not The Helm's intention to purchase or construct a building either to replace The Helm's current headquarters or for the Active Adult Activity Center.

"That interlocal agreement came from examples of other interlocal agreements and the cities did a great job of putting that together and I think it allows for that, but we already have our building and we've put millions of dollars into this building," she said. "We're blessed that Henry Ford lets us lease it for $1 every month, so it's $12 a year."

"... More than likely we'll just be renting space (for the Active Adult Activity Center)," she added.

"We've looked at three or four different spaces right now and we haven't made a commitment. ... We're in talks with a couple different health (systems). We'd like to work with the health system, ideally, because we think that would be the best fit."

For those opposing the millage, another main point of concern is the setting of a precedent for other special interest groups, such as the Grosse Pointe Animal Adoption Society, to propose their own millages.

"The question is where does it stop?" Boll said. "First of all, it's a 501(c)(3). Why not the arts? Grosse Pointe Theatre? GPSO (Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra)? Early childhood?"

Though Kent and Leelanau counties have early childhood millages and there are several county animal shelter/control millages in place around the state, these are specific to counties and it is Michigan Act 39 of 1976 that allows for local units of government — such as a city — to levy taxes for services to older persons.

"Not every nonprofit organization can request a millage," Siddall said. "In fact, most can't. In Michigan, Act 39 of Public Acts of 1976 authorizes local governments to levy a millage for senior service. This law is specific and does not open the door for any other organizations to receive millage funds."

"Currently, 72 of 83 counties in Michigan have used the senior services millage and other small municipalities as well. Wayne County has not. In the absence of a county millage, local municipalities have been asked and taken action."

While The Helm does currently receive $14,000 from each Pointe and Harper Woods annually via a Community Development Block Grant, this is federal funding funneled through the municipalities and earmarked for senior services.

The total $84,000 is 6 percent of The Helm's annual budget.

Though contrary figures have spread on social media, Siddall reported 81 percent of the revenue that comes into The Helm goes directly to programming and services.

The purpose of the millage is to achieve a sustainable stream of income, Siddall said, and The Helm will continue to seek local and statewide grants, pursue donors and fundraise with its Meals on Wheels campaign, holiday appeal campaign, gala and other events.

"Our intention long term is not to have a millage," she said. "We'd like to have an endowment that would give us a sustainable stream of income. We do not right now. So our goal would be to get these things up and running, to be able to have that sustainable stream of income ... but also to think about moving forward, what does that endowment look like? How do we build that? What are we going to need to sustain this?"

"Those have been conversations that have been happening the last five years and we are working hard on that behind the scenes, too. I'm hoping that in six years, we don't have to ask for a

Racing For Kids honors three at annual Courageous Kid Awards

Racing For Kids honored three outstanding young people with its Racing For Kids Courageous Kid Awards at the 18th annual Racing For Kids to the Hill event Aug. 28. RFK created its Courageous Kid Awards in 2017, to recognize youngsters in the community who are dealing with serious medical conditions and challenges with inspirational strength, resolve and determination.

This year's award recipients are Adam Fisher and Louisa Pietrowsky of Grosse Pointe and Nicholas Gudenuau of St. Clair Shores.

Fisher, 13, was born with hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (thickened heart muscles). From birth, he was treated with cardiac medication, which he takes every day. He is under the care of pediatric cardiologists at the University of Michigan. He sees his doctors at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor once a year; undergoes an echocardiogram yearly and sometimes a cardiac MRI to monitor his heart. He has an automatic external defibrillator with him at all times in his red backpack.

Fisher is a smart, witty, brave and active young man, who works hard in school and participates in sports. He is in seventh grade at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic School; made the honor roll last year; and excels in math and science. He recently became a member of the National Junior Honor Society. He was a member of the Student Leadership Team last year as well.

Through Kids On The Go, Fisher has been able to play some of his favorite sports, including flag football. He is the son of Debbie and Jeff Fisher; has an older brother, Colin; and two cats, Guinness and Stella. His strong will and positive attitude, despite his limitations, continue to inspire those around him.

Pietrowsky, 10, faces every challenge with an indomitable spirit. She is fiercely determined and has an incredible sense of humor. She loves spending time outdoors, swimming and singing Taylor Swift songs. She and her brother, Sam, 13, both enjoy gaming, playing with their dog, Dolly, and going on big and small adventures with their parents, Tom and Andrea.

Diagnosed prenatally with a severe heart condition, Pietrowsky was born at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital where she began a series of open-heart surgeries and a continuous 232-day hospitalization. During that time she underwent many complications and dozens of life-saving procedures and surgeries, teaching her family patience, perseverance and gratitude. Once home, she was able to slowly wean off ventilator support by age 3.

With complex health and disabilities, surgeries, medications and therapies have been a big part of her childhood. She is a hard worker and takes on everything with enthusiasm.

From a very young age, Pietrowsky has helped advocate for other children with complex medical needs and disabilities by participating with the nonprofit Little Lobbyists. Last summer she was a guest at the White House celebrating the 34th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Locally, she participates in and helps promote the annual Grosse Pointe — now University Liggett School — and her father, Jack Williams, was Shores mayor from 1954 to 1964. He is the second-longest serving mayor behind Kedzierski.

The gift came with the stipulation that the money be spent on improvements to Osius Park. The current pool is 60 years old. The Grosse Pointe Shores Improvement Foundation will lead the effort to raise the rest of the money.

"We looked at a review that was done 25 years ago that said the pool had lived its life," Nick Palizzi of Baruzzini Aquatics told the council. "We can tell you 25 years later it has still lived its life."

Brighton-based Baruzzini Aquatics is designing the pool and has done projects for municipalities, high schools and colleges. Partners in Architecture is designing the community center.

"We had several on-site meetings and talked to the staff about the current facility's shortcomings and functional limitations," said Lauren Lee of PIA. "The layout now is not optimized for the staff's view."

Lee said the team approached the project with five points in mind:

- ◆ Accommodating leisure and competitive activities;
- ◆ Having a modern community center with a flexible layout;
- ◆ Improving safety and accessibility in and around the pool;
- ◆ Optimizing staff functionality and safety and;
- ◆ Administering funds with a value-driven focus.

Plans presented last month include an eight-lane, 8,000-square-foot pool with a lazy river and a zero-entry children's pool that includes elements similar to a splash pad.

A new, two-story community center would include offices, equipment storage, restrooms, showers and a concession stand on the lower level, with a second floor that can seat 96 people and be reserved for events.

City Manager Steve Poloni said the second floor would include a food warming area, refrigerator and freezer, but no stove.

"It's going to be a prep area for food that's brought in, rather than an actual kitchen to cook in," he said.

A breakdown of the cost shows $1.3 million for demolition; $3.4 million for the pool; and $5.2 million for the community center for a total of almost $10 million. A 10 percent contingency adds another $1 million. A one-story community center would cut about $2.6 million from the cost.

Palizzi said, however, the layout of the new pool would not allow for keeping the current clubhouse.

Lee said a timeline for the overall project, which could start a year from now, would include demolition in the fall, construction of the pool the following spring and construction of the community center that fall.

millage."

As the election gets underway, some questions surrounding the proposed millage remain, including who specifically would be appointed to serve on the Active Adults Commission or how it will equitably work if one or two cities don't pass it. Likely, those residents would be charged a higher, compensatory rate for use of The Helm's services, but ultimately the decision would be up to the commission, which isn't created until and unless the millage passes.

"The commission itself is such a fuzzy idea,"

Boll's wife, Kelly, said. "And the way this is structured, it's almost like the voters have to pass the millage in order to really know what's inside it."

For those with further questions, the Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters will host a panel discussion on the senior services millage from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8, at the Wayne County Community College auditorium, 19503 Vernier, Harper Woods.

Panelists will be Siddall; Prudence Cole-Klimisch, president emeritus of The Helm; and Thomas H. Jankowski, interim director of Wayne State University's Institute of Gerontology.

It's family first for lifelong Pointer, businessman

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

There's a good chance Jim Brosnan and his wife made eye contact during childhood.

"I grew up on the corner of Devonshire and Charlevoix in the Park," Brosnan said. "She's from Bloomfield, but while growing up, she spent a lot of time at her grandparents' house at the corner of Charlevoix and Three Mile."

That's only two blocks' distance.

"We may have ridden bikes past each other back when we were kids," Brosnan said.

Now they have two children of their own. But that's getting ahead of the story. There are a lot of steps in between.

Brosnan owns a design-and-build home and commercial construction business. So did his father. The lineage seems straightforward, yet isn't.

Brosnan took a belated and circuitous route to upholding the family tradition while establishing those of his own.

"My summers starting at 14 years old were spent working with my father," Brosnan said. "It wasn't really an option. When I was 20 years old, I didn't think I'd be doing it."

He's glad he did.

"I was working for a painter and decided to go back to college and have some kind of career in an office downtown," Brosnan said.

So it was off to the career-focused Wayne State University's business school where the average undergrad is 25 years old and likely juggling studies with a full-time job.

"I had work, responsibilities and bills, but I wanted to obtain a degree," Brosnan said. For income, he started picking up small construction-type jobs.

"It snowballed to where I got a business license, insurance and started hiring people," he said.

Like father like son, whether fateful or unintentional.

"I'll put it this way," Brosnan said, "by the time I graduated with a degree in management, I was in my 30s and already knew this is what I was going to be doing. I was in college as an adult. It made sense to take business classes while running a business. It started small and took on work."

Brosnan Builders now has six employees.

Work goes beyond construction and modernizing.

"We work on problem solving," Brosnan said.

Many houses in the Grosse Pointes are architecturally and historically significant, which implies the obvious: they're old, built decades ago to meet the wants of prior generations.

"One of the problems that needs to be solved is upgrading houses to make them compatible with today's lifestyle," Brosnan said. "People want open spaces, larger kitchens and bathrooms, leisure space, even mud rooms. We work with designers and craftsmen to meet the customer and fulfill their desires. Our main thing is to bring a new look to existing spaces or to create new spaces with additions."

He credited his commercial success to his father, John.

"I've learned most everything from him," Brosnan said.

His dad is supposedly retired.

The Brosnan family consists of, clockwise, Katie, Jim, Joey and Emily.

"But he shows up to work with us almost every day," Brosnan said. "It's a privilege that I get to work with my father and brother, Paul. I'm the owner, but my father and brother are a big part of it."

The company expanded recently into a larger building on Charlevoix, a remodeling project of its own. Forthcoming is a showroom with vignettes, samples and displays for customers to consider: cabinets, countertops, hardware, plumbing supplies and a space for customers to meet with designers and get a feel for what they want to do with their projects.

"Everyone has individual needs," Brosnan said. "People put a lot of thought into these projects and are trusting me to make sure they go smoothly in a fluid process with everything done in the right sequence. They're letting us into their home. That's why you want to make sure you do everything you can to be honorable, trustworthy and make sure everyone's comfortable and knowing they're in good hands."

Although Brosnan doesn't have childhood memories of his future wife, Katie, riding a bicycle, he remembers almost everything about the first time they met as adults.

"We met at a mutual friend's house for dinner back in 2011," Brosnan said. "She was wearing a blue blouse. She has really beautiful red hair. Green eyes. She's good looking. I thought, 'I like this.'"

He admitted looking at her more than listening to what she was saying.

"I guess I don't exactly remember what the conversation was about," Brosnan said.

Chatting, dating, marriage and children. First, a son, Joey, six years ago.

Three years later came a daughter, Emily, an anomaly among Brosnans.

"I have four brothers, three nephews and only one niece," Brosnan said. "It's what Brosnans do; they have boys."

Heading a family has been life-changing.

"When we were first married people would ask if we were going to have kids," Brosnan said. "My wife always said, 'Of course.' I would say, 'Well, I'd be fine'

Cough, Cough, Cough!!

By Joel Fishbain, M.D.

Tis the season to be COUGHING. Yes, we are fast approaching the season of highly contagious and eternally annoying respiratory virus infections. As we close our windows, return to school, have parties and travel for holidays, we are continuously and unmercifully bombarded by these microscopic parasites. Many viruses cause infection, but influenza (the flu), COVID-19 and RSV are usually the most worrisome.

The common theme among these nasty germs: They are most often spread by droplets -- those often visible and large wet particles you produce with coughing and sneezing that can travel as far as 6 feet and are numerous. Some of the viruses will even last long enough on surfaces to cause infection through contact and ingestion.

How can you protect yourself? Get vaccinated if a shot is available. Talk to your doctor and discuss any questions or concerns you have. "The flu vaccine gave me the flu!" This is not possible. You got the flu days before or while standing in line at the pharmacy or doctor's office where others have the flu.

AVOID going to work or school when you are sick so you don't expose others. AVOID any gatherings or exposure to others when you are sick. AVOID exposure by wearing a surgical mask in close quarters.

If you get sick, what should you do? If you are otherwise healthy without any significant respiratory illness, many of the over-the-counter symptom remedies, such as pain relievers and decongestants work well. You could also consider an anti-viral, but remember that antibiotics do not work against viruses such as flu, COVID, RSV and colds. Always call your doctor or go to an urgent care if you have concerns. It is important to enjoy the season and family but also to protect yourself and others. Be safe and have fun!

I SAY By Renee Landuyt

First time at the Big House

Imade it to the Big House. The one in Ann Arbor. I fulfilled a bucket list item I didn't even know I had. I can't believe it took me so long to go, but I'd never had tickets before so I usually watched the games on TV. But on Saturday, Sept. 7, that all changed. I went to the Big House and not just to the Big House, but I was on the sidelines and at the end zone to photograph the game. And I was ecstatic.

When I finally figured out where I was going, once I got to a gravel parking lot reserved for the media, which was not easy to find, I hung out and had something to eat because I left home very early that morning in order to avoid the crowds. It didn't work because there were people everywhere — 111,170 in attendance that day — and it was a long wait at some lights for the sea of people to cross. I sat in line on State Street for a good half hour to go a quarter mile to turn left. Once I was parked, I thought, this had better be worth it. Well, it was and it was so much more. I was like a kid at Christmas. I was cracking myself up with how excited I kept getting at each new thing I was experiencing.

I went through security and through the media door, through the rooms the media uses before and after the game, then I came to "the tunnel." When I started walking down the tunnel, I heard a man's voice call out, "Everyone to the side of the wall, along the wall please, football players coming through." I turned around and looked up and there was a wall of giant Texas players coming through the tunnel. These guys were tall and bulky and big. It was a bit intimidating to see this coming at you in a V formation. Even though it was the opposing team, it was still pretty exciting. Once they were gone, the Michigan marching band walked through. I looked for the two sisters I know from Grosse Pointe North High School who are in the band, but unfortunately didn't see them.

Then I walked onto the sidelines. I stood in awe taking it all in — the colors, the sights, the sounds. Wow, I breathed. I'm in the Big House! The roar of the crowd in person. The sea of maize because it was maize out day. The excitement of the fans. It was thrilling.

I walked around to the side where the Michigan players would be once they came out of the tunnel and waited. The announcement came and there they were, waiting to run onto the field and touch the banner that hangs halfway across. The Michigan marching band starts playing and the team runs out, jumping high to touch the banner with anticipation and excitement. They are determined to do their best and win the game. You can see it in their faces, in their attitudes. I was so excited to be watching this in person.

As the teams did the coin toss, I stood on the sidelines checking camera settings, trying a few shots then readjusting the settings. While I was looking down at my camera, I saw a guy's shoes next to me that were blue with a bit of yellow on them and I thought, "Cool shoes." As the quarterback warmed up and I figured out the camera settings I wanted, I noticed the shoes again so I looked to my left and my eyes went all the way up to the guy's face standing next to me (he is 6 foot, 4 inches) and I said, "Cool shoes." My eyes lingered on his face for about three seconds as my brain clicked on the fact he looked familiar and when it dawned on me who it was I said, "Oh, hey. How's it going?" He chuckled as he watched recognition cross my face and responded, "Pretty good." It was Michael Phelps.

As we stood next to each other on the sidelines, we chatted off and on during the 10 or so minutes in between people constantly coming up to him and asking to take a photo with him. Phelps was very gracious about the interruptions and kind to everyone who asked. Of course, I got a few photos of Phelps, but they were strictly for work — no selfies — and a few photos others asked me to take of them and Phelps.

A similar thing happened at halftime when I walked over to the Texas side and I saw a long desk with sportscasters talking about the game at halftime and a number of TV people working. I looked through the crowd and I saw a guy in the middle of the table, but it was a bit of a distance away. I asked the couple next to me, "Why does the guy in the middle look like Matthew McConaughey?" They laughed and said, "Because it is Matthew McConaughey." That was all I needed to hear to make my way through all the people like a cocktail server in a crowded bar. I wanted to get a photo, but as soon as I got to the front they all stood up because they were done with the live halftime report. I waited around a bit and finally managed to get a few shots of M c C o n a u g h e y . Apparently, he's a big Texas fan.

Despite the fact that he was rooting for the wrong team, he also had people coming up to him asking if they could have their photo taken with him. Both of them, McConaughey and Phelps, seemed pretty down to earth and were nice to everyone. I heard Derek Jeter was there, too, but I didn't see him.

What a great time I had. I met new friends, saw a few people I knew, people at the stadium were gracious and what a bonus it was to be able to talk with Michael Phelps. I can't wait to go to the Michigan vs. Michigan State game later this month.

subside and they will attempt to cushion the slowdown in economic activity. This is meant to mitigate effects like slower job creation, slower wage growth and a loss in consumer confidence.

Despite the boost from lower interest rates, it's likely the economy will continue to slow down, as monetary policy works with long and variable lags. A dip into recession — a period of shrinking economic output — only seems like a narrow possibility.

If it's been a while since you've checked in, now might be a good time to sit down with your financial advisor and review your financial plan, particularly where it pertains to debt, risk and retirement.

Education has made tremendous strides and we should all celebrate the recent improvements, growing student enrollments and improved teacher retention. Hasn't been like this in years.

Grosse Pointe FarmsQuestioning supervision policy*To the Editor:

I was disappointed to learn that the Grosse Pointe public high schools would be continuing their overreaching policy of disallowing non-high school students and possibly non-Grosse Pointe public high school students to attend sporting events without a parent/guardian (four kids per adult, not very generous as many families in Grosse Pointe have 2.5).

Get the factsTo the Editor:

I was disappointed to learn a few misinformed folks are trying to mount opposition to the millage that would support senior services in our community.

Every voter has a right to their opinion, but I would ask folks to dig deeper, learn the facts and not base your vote on misrepresentations and falsehoods.

FACT: The Helm annual payroll is $629,000. This is not excessive. We employ 17 talented, dedicated people who have the education and experience to professionally run our organization and provide services and guidance to senior citizens, including an experienced executive director, licensed master social workers, resource navigators, Medicare/Medicaid experts and programming specialists. We are blessed with nearly 400 volunteers vital to the delivery of in-house and outreach services.

FACTS: In 2023, we

- ◆ delivered 25,919 meals to homebound seniors;
- ◆ scheduled 16,660 rides on PAATS buses to medical appointments and grocery shopping;
- ◆ conducted 2,337 sessions of classes, presentations and workshops attended by nearly 1,300 individuals;

◆ responded to 5,000 requests about various aging-related topics;

- ◆ distributed 1,880 pieces of medical equipment, hygiene products and liquid nutritional supplements to more than 440 people;
- ◆ saved 748 seniors more than $300,000 on their drug plans through free Medicare counseling.

FACT: We have over 50 in-house programs monthly, including exercise classes, blood pressure screenings, movies, support groups and computer tutoring.

FACT: 81 percent of our revenue — not the misreported 70 percent — goes directly to essential services and programs for seniors. We are a Platinum nonprofit provider with full transparency on GuideStar.

FACT: Our demographics are rapidly changing.

According to SEMCOG, in 2020, adults 65 and older slightly outnumbered school-age children. By 2030, 25 percent of all residents will be 65 and older and by 2050, those 65 and older will be nearly double those 5 to 17.

I have served on six for-profit and seven nonprofit boards. Not one is better or more effectively run than The Helm. We are fortunate to have successful professionals from many disciplines, as well as doctors, lawyers and other community advocates who provide valuable input, guidance and are generous and active volunteers.

I have lived in this community 70 years and can attest it is a great place to grow up. I strongly believe it should be a great place to grow old.

I've been meaning to call and thank you for the Grosse Pointe News fishing contest.

Three of my grandsons have won $50 and one gift certificate from Fishbone's over the past two to three years. And all have had pictures in your paper and each has had a savings account because of the wins.

The picture (below) is of my grandson, David Fikany, age 11. He won the Grosse Pointe Farms kids fishing rodeo by catching a 40-inch muskie. He was fishing with a cast on his arm from a fractured elbow. In spite of that, he really caught the fish and it took two of us with two nets to land it. He had an audience of at least 150 kids and parents.

He also won the largest smallmouth caught from a boat this year one week.

Again, thank you and the other sponsors for organizing the weekly tournament.

Detroit twins arrested as part of landscape equipment theft crew

METRO DETROIT — Leon Lindsey and Levi Lindsey, 25-year-old twin brothers from Detroit, last week were arrested and charged with 23 felonies in connection with numerous thefts of landscape equipment following a several-months-long multi-jurisdictional investigation.

The brothers are suspected to be responsible for at least 40 thefts since May, according to City of Grosse Pointe Detective Mike Narduzzi, including from the City, Farms, Park and Woods.

"The suspects would wait until the workers were in rear yards or out of sight (and) then steal as much lawn equipment as they could from the landscape trucks and/or trailers," according to a release by the Harper Woods Public Safety Department, which served as the lead investigative body. "In numerous incidents, the suspects would steal the entire landscape truck and trailer when the keys were left in the vehicle. The suspects had buyers for the stolen equipment lined up and would sell the stolen equipment for profit."

The Lindseys were arraigned Monday, Sept. 23, in Harper Woods and face a charge of conducting a criminal enterprise, which alone holds a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

Leon Lindsey was given a $150,000 cash bond and Levi Lindsey a $100,000 cash bond.

"After the arrests of Leon and Levi Lindsey, a search warrant was executed at their residence in Detroit," the release stated.

"Approximately 50 items of lawn equipment, all believed to be stolen property, were recovered. Detectives are in the process of identifying ownership of the suspected stolen items. Several additional suspects have been identified and additional arrests and charges are anticipated."

The Lindseys' preliminary examinations are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 9, in Harper Woods 32-A District Court.

$10,000 in taxes. In response to a question from Councilman Kenn Gafa, Walling said council could waive the construction requirement if an adjacent property owner wanted to buy a lot.

Councilman Michael Koester also asked Walling to think about potential arguments from nearby neighbors, citing legal issues that delayed construction on the Deeplands property in Grosse Pointe Shores.

"I'm not sure what standing they would have to stop the city from selling land properly zoned for single-family housing when they live in single-family housing in the same area," she said.

"Hopefully it doesn't get to that, but we should be prepared for the stink when it does come up," Koester said.

The second parcel is a public easement off

Bournemouth near Raymond.

"It was intended to be a roadway leading to Ascension St. John Hospital, but they never expressed any interest in opening it," said Brigitte Smith Wolf of McKenna.

"The surrounding property owners have since encroached on it by moving their fences back."

One option would be to sell sections to the surrounding property owners for $1,000 each plus fees to cover closing costs and the survey, making the parcel unbuildable. Or the city could sell it as one parcel for between $60,000 and $70,000.

Koester suggested the city also consider turning it into a pocket park.

"The south side of our city is really lacking in parks," he said. "Putting some playground equipment there would be more beneficial."

Council will revisit the matter after the survey is complete.

FAMILY:

either way.' For us, the most fulfilling event by far in our lives is raising a family."

They pal around together.

"My son and I watch football, go to movies and roughhouse," Brosnan said. "And, yet, he's mom's little boy, so my wife has a lot of special time with him. He's helpful. He's curious and motivated to learn."

Brosnan said it's wonderful having a daughter.

"She so sweet and caring," he said. "It's a whole new world for me because I grew up with brothers. It's easy to make her laugh. She's very happy. We are happy with our family."

He gives due credit.

"It comes from Katie all the way," Brosnan said. "She's done a wonderful job raising them. She tries to foster a way of living whereby they want to learn and experience new things. Katie and I are raising our boy and girl to be close. I know as they grow they're going to start going off with their own friends, but now, at the young ages they're at, I couldn't ask for anything more."

For Brosnan, it's all about family; the one in which he was raised, the one he's helping raise and the families for whom he is hired to improve their homes.

Another focus is a nonprofit organization he co-founded with a friend a few years ago called the Sober Support Coalition based in St. Clair Shores.

"We own houses that men live in who are just getting into recovery from alcohol and drug addiction," Brosnan said.

There's a difference between the coalition and other nonprofits fighting addiction.

"The Sober Support Coalition is getting people who have gone through treatment and are in the early stages of their recovery," Brosnan said. "They are looking for employment; they need to get a driver's license; they need to deal, maybe, with medical or legal issues. Maybe they want to get back into college."

The coalition has transitional coordinators that remove obstacles from recovering addicts trying to merge back into society.

"Coordinators work with these men and women to kind of put together road maps showing how to fulfill some of these obligations or achieve some of these goals," Brosnan said.

"The data we've compiled is showing that if we can help people with these issues, they can focus and be more successful. If they are more successful, our community as a whole is more successful."

Goals include ending the cycle of substance abuse, recovery and relapse.

"We want to see people focus on making sure they maintain their sobriety," Brosnan said. "Then, we can help them with some of these other issues so they can become contributing members of society."

Run, Walk n Roll, to support the C.S. Mott Palliative Care Program. She also enjoys participating in Kids on the Go programs throughout the year.

Gudenu, 6, was diagnosed with B-cell acute lymphoblastic leukemia the day before Thanksgiving 2019, when he was 17 months old. He had been a spunky baby, walking before his first birthday and talking extremely well. One day, he stopped walking, started saying "ouch," then began developing fevers and finally received the diagnosis.

Gudenu had surgery two days after diagnosis to place a mediport in his chest and then began cancer treatment. Dec. 31, 2019, after intensive treatment, chemotherapy, countless lumbar punctures, blood and platelet transfusions, he had no evidence of disease.

Although there was no evidence of the leukemia, treatment went for several more months. Gudenu fared well through it all with minimal side effects. The worst part was going through cancer treatment during a pandemic. The year 2020 was the start of two years of treatment and was challenging for a toddler who was neutropenic and not able to fight infections in the midst of a pandemic. He was in and out of the hospital for treatments that often lasted weeks at a time. Only one parent was allowed in the hospital and when he did get to come home, Gudenu was forced to talk to loved ones on Facetime or through the glass on the front door. It was hard on him not getting to socialize like a normal toddler and led to some anxieties he has had to overcome, but he works hard to manage and conquer his fears.

In September 2021, Gudenu was able to start 3-year-old preschool while working around his treatment schedule; now he is in first grade. He loves kids and even talks daily about how many children he wants to have and of one day becoming a "surgery surgeon for kids." He has been off treatment since March 31, 2022. He enjoys playing flag football, karate and video games with his older half brother and sister. He lives with his parents, Erica and Leonard.

"Racing For Kids has been making hospital visits to wonderful children like our Courageous Kids for the past 35 years," said J. Patrick Wright, CEO of Racing For Kids.

"Our concerns for 'our kids' reflect the overall child healthcare concerns of the Grosse Pointe community. That's why the Courageous Kid Awards are such a popular part of the Racing For Kids to the Hill events."

Racing For Kids will make $500 donations to charities of choice to honor each of this year's award recipients. Past recipients who attended this year's ceremony and assisted with the trophy presentation were Matthew Nyenhuis and Griffin Wright.

Tuttle said a lot of the movement comes down to supply and demand.

"I've been in education almost 30 years and early in my career teachers typically stayed in one district their entire career," she said. "That was for several reasons, including loyalty, but also education was unlike other professions where experience mattered. If you left for another district after five or 10 years, you had to start back at step one (on the pay scale)."

Now, however, Tuttle explained, because there aren't enough teachers to fill all vacant positions, districts are engaging in what she called "salary wars" to attract new teachers.

"Teachers are getting the recognition they deserve," she said. "We're seeing a lot more transition."

Of the 27 new teachers in GPPSS this year, for example, just three are in their first year, while 12 come to the district with double-digit years of experience, including six with 20 or more years in the classroom.

"You can't help the retirements because they earned that," Tuttle added. "But as for those leaving for non-retirement reasons, we're seeing a positive trend since 2021-22."

Board Secretary Lisa Papas, a music teacher in Hamtramck Public Schools, said she saw a "great exodus" of teachers that year.

"COVID drove a lot of people out of the profession," she said. "I also know a lot of people who will retire and go to work in a different district."

Papas added she also knows teachers who leave the profession before retirement and go to work in the private sector.

"They'll leave education and go into a training position because they have the ability to teach," she said. "They are prized employees."

Schools celebrate Neighbor Day

St. Paul on the Lake Catholic School and The Grosse Pointe Academy teamed up for Celebrate Neighbor Day for Project Lunchbox. Students from both schools gathered in the cafeteria at St. Paul the morning of Friday, Sept. 27, to bag lunches for several organizations, including a soup kitchen. The Academy sent third- and sixth-grade buddies to the partner project to work with St. Paul students. Together they packed more than 200 lunches. The sandwiches were donated to St. Leo's Soup Kitchen and Franciscan Ministries.

Water studies urge bigger pipes

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK

— Guideposts for conducting the city's upcoming water reliability study are all over the state.

Reliability studies are required by Michigan environmental officials. A handful of completed studies that are posted on their respective municipal websites contain recommendations for water system improvements to which Park Manager Nick Sizeland looks forward.

"We're hoping to see recommendations to up-size pipes in a couple areas of the city and/or adding a new water main, maybe down a major street," Sizeland said. "I imagine recommendations for looping will be included."

Recommendations of those types would confirm work Park officials already are doing.

The first new water main replacement project since the 1980s concluded last year on upper Mack Avenue. This year, larger mains are being installed under portions of Beaconsfield and Maumee.

Members of the public works and public safety firefighting departments also are partnering with the city's consulting engineers to develop a risk mitigation plan to be based on an analysis of the water distribution and fire hydrant network.

When the city council contracted its consulting engineers, OHM Advisors, earlier this summer to conduct a water reliability study, company principal Patrick Droze foresaw some of the results.

He anticipated hydraulic models and real-world measurements of water flow would support a recommendation to increase the quality of water service by adding another connection on Mack to the regional supplier, the Great Lakes Water Authority.

The study will consist of measuring the city's current water capacity in comparison with anticipated future demand.

"Capacity is the ability of a water supply to plan for, achieve and maintain compliance with drinking water standards," according to the state environmental department website, michigan.gov/eagle. "A supply must achieve and maintain all three (plan, achieve and maintain) to be considered to have adequate capacity."

In Berkley, a suburb similar in age to the Park, the most recent water reliability study found deficiencies due to old and undersized pipes, just as Park officials have been talking about in their own jurisdiction.

The Berkley study also recommended looping the system, a conclusion Sizeland expects from OHM.

Looping means to open the sealed-off part of a dead-end water main and link it with the rest of the network. Doing so increases circulation, flow and pressure. By increasing pressure, looping has firefighting advantages, something Park officials want to accomplish.

In Traverse City, the authors of a water reliability study recommended building bigger mains.

In Marine City, installing bigger mains and looping dead ends were primary recommendations to increase water pressure and flow.

TERRY COLLINS FOR SCHOOL BOARD

The Wonk. The Numbers Guy. Every great Board needs one—Grosse Pointe has Terry.

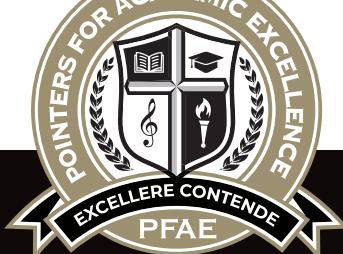

Terry played a pivotal role in steering our District toward financial stability. In 2023, he officially became Trustee Collins and took on the critical role of Treasurer. His partnership with Board leadership and the Administration was essential in guiding the District to a balanced budget.

Without Terry's strong dose of financial reality, our District was on a path toward major cuts to both our dedicated staff and cherished student programs. We can thank Terry for avoiding that outcome.

In his day job, it's no surprise that Terry is a financial supervisor, overseeing teams that ensure every dollar is spent wisely. Accountability is his cornerstone, and he's committed to making sure our District's funds go where they matter most.

Terry isn't just about numbers. He's also a devoted husband, father, and grandfather. Two of his grandchildren are proud Ferry Falcons! To Terry, and his wife Jessie, kids always come first.

Terry has called Grosse Pointe home for 23 years, and his dedication to this community runs deep. Let's keep Terry Collins on the Board—his numbers don't lie!

SideStreet resumes weekday breakfast hours

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

CITY OF GROSSE POINTE — Following its 14th anniversary in The Village Sept. 1, SideStreet Diner this week reopened for breakfast on weekdays.

"Pre-pandemic hours are what we're going back to," said Meghan Spicer Josefosky, who owns the business with her cousin, Sheila Taylor-Frunek. "It has literally taken us four years to get back to our regular hours, just based on trying to hire staff and trying to get back to normal."

Hours now are 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, as well as 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

"We finally got enough staff," Josefosky said.

"It's been very difficult to hire staff and now we think we have enough staff that's trained and experienced enough that we can resume business as usual."

Post-pandemic staffing shortages have remained an ongoing struggle across the restaurant industry, but with the ability to reopen for breakfast, Josefosky said the trend may be shifting.

"I feel a little change in it, yes, absolutely," she added. "I feel a little uptick in applications and experienced applicants."

Since the pandemic, weekday hours at SideStreet have been 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"Breakfast people, they have very specific patterns and schedules and habits," Josefosky said.

"We just couldn't put the staff through those kind of grueling hours — with the staff we had, we couldn't cover all the hours — so I know our breakfast people had to find another place to go and I'm hoping that we'll get some of them back."

"I think everybody is still trying to get back to normal, including consumers."

SideStreet Diner is located at 630 St. Clair in the City of Grosse Pointe.

"We're a women-owned, women-run business," Josefosky said. "We made it through the pandemic and we made it through our parking lot closure last summer, so we're feeling good about this. This is a trend toward a really great 2025."

TUESDAY NOV. 5TH VOTE YES! FOR THE GPPSS SINKING FUND

WHY IS THIS IMPORTANT?

The 2024 Sinking Fund is critical to preserving GPPSS's beautiful, historic buildings while also enhancing safety, security, and infrastructure across the district for our students and staff. This fund ensures our schools remain safe, functional, and up to date for at least the next decade.

KEY USES OF THE SINKING FUND:

- Safety & Security: Modernize security systems, including secure entry access, updated cameras, and improved IT infrastructure.*
- Technology: Keep our classrooms equipped with the latest technology, ensuring our students have the tools they need to succeed.*

PRESERVING OUR COMMUNITY'S CHARACTER:

The Sinking Fund helps preserve Grosse Pointe's walkable neighborhoods, where schools are within reach and buses aren't necessary. Moross Greenway updated with new art

New sculptures dot islands between Mack and I-94

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Though newly installed, there's already been quite a buzz about some of the new sculptures gracing the greenspace along Moross, from I-94 to Mack Avenue.

Members of the Moross Greenway Project — a nonprofit whose volunteers not only care about the aesthetics of the community, but also its ecology — said the bear and dog sculptures that recently joined the horses and other sculptures are attracting attention from passersby.

In recent weeks, 13 new sculptures have been added to the islands, with a 14th to be installed later this month, bringing the total number of public art pieces to 25.

"The object is every year to rotate out about half the art," said Roger Garrett, a Grosse Pointe Park resident and arts committee chairman, who oversees the installation. "It's getting more and more attention, which makes it easier to get in contact with more artists."

Twice a year, sculptor Ken Thompson of the Midwest Sculpture Initiative solicits images from hundreds of artists for consideration.

"We looked at 165 images last year," Garrett said. "With 100-foot-wide islands and traffic going by at 40 mph, there's a limit to the size of pieces. Nothing less than 6 feet would even show on the island. So we start with 165 and eliminate more than half immediately."

"... This year, it's a virtual who's who of Michigan sculptors," he added. "It's a broad spectrum of artists, from notable artists as far back as the early days of the Cass Corridor to current times."

Among them are Robert Sestok, "quite a well-known character and a teacher of sculpture from way back," Garrett said.

A piece by award-winning sculptor Russell Thayer has been installed, while award-winner Ray Katz's work "has been with us from day one," Garrett noted.

"We go all the way to current artists, including the latest and greatest, which is Scott Hocking, the darling of the sculpting world," he added.

Each piece typically graces the islands two years, Garrett said, though "a couple have been up since the very beginning. John Piet's sculpture is permanent and we're probably going to purchase a couple more."

All of the sculptures are rented for the duration of the exhibition. Apart from Piet's "Full Swing," all of the sculptures are for sale; the organization receives 20 percent of the sale price.

"It's been a fun project," Garrett noted. "It's been encouraging to see it look better and more finished every year. Support is growing slowly; it grows a bit every year. And it's promoting the whole idea of public art."

How it started

The Moross Greenway Project was conceived in 2004, by Sheila O'Hara.

"She got off on 94 one day and was appalled at seeing the islands overgrown and covered with trash," Garrett said.

"From the beginning, it always was about taking care of the landscaping and the community so it looks well-cared-for, so it looks loved," O'Hara said in a 2022 interview. "It's for the environment. We planted trees on the island and up and down Moross in front of houses. It's to clean the air, to shelter a house from the heat, to filter water — it all made sense. We had a vision. People told us, 'You're crazy. It's never going to happen.' But we didn't lose our faith or tenacity."

After the look of the land was improved, O'Hara felt it was time to add something more.

"Five years ago, Sheila called me up and said, 'We're ready for art,'" Garrett said. "We started with 10 pieces."

Though still involved with the organization, O'Hara recently stepped down as president, making way for Ed Gotfredson to fill her shoes.

"Moross Greenway Project is seven of us," Garrett said. "It's grassroots. It's all because Sheila couldn't stand looking at trash. We look a little better every year with more art, better art and better maintenance."

Keeping it clean

The small but mighty board of the Moross Greenway Project relies on outside help to keep the islands in pristine condition. The organization pays Backer Landscaping to cut the grass on the islands 25 times a year.

Additionally, since August, board members have begun meeting at 5:30 p.m. the first Monday of each month to "spend an hour or so picking up trash," Garrett said.

"Though the amount of trash is definitely down, it doesn't take much to make it look messy," he added. "But there's definitely less trash, just due to the fact the islands are mowed and landscaped and there's art."

"Wayne County just took down, thanks to (Grosse Pointe Farms City Manager) Shane Reeside, eight or 10 dead trees and ground down the stumps. That's a huge help."

Help is always welcome — and recruited during spring and fall

Holding on to independence

Mobility-friendly interior renovations provide precious autonomy

By Grosse Pointe News Staff

A space of one's own is a major part of a long and happy life. Maintaining a cherished independent living space contributes to well-being and provides motivation to stay young for many couples and singles. Yet the time may come for everyone when they must decide if living on their own continues to be safe and feasible.

Mobility issues often make it hard for seniors to traverse their own homes — but a few small ingenious renovations to make a home safer and more accessible can make all the difference.

Red Baron Enterprises, in St. Clair Shores, is one local source that provides many of the construction and handyman services needed to help keep aging seniors in their homes. Installations like accessibility ramps and grab bars, along with bathroom and other renovations, can mean freedom. Chris Redziniak, an owner at Red Baron, said he and his team are happy to help people transform their home spaces to be more usable. Remodeling bathrooms and kitchens are some of his favorite projects.

If you or someone you love is in need of increased home safety, here are a few ideas we've compiled that can provide a positive impact.

- Install lever door knobs. Verywell Health notes that nearly half of all people age 65 and older have arthritis or another rheumatic condition that can make it difficult to grip and turn door knobs. Lever-style door knobs or door knob extensions make it easier to open doors. Extensions are roughly five-inch levers that can be installed over an existing door knob, making it easier to grab and pull down. Installing a different entry door knob is a simple job for a handyman service and can make everyday life much easier.

- Raise the outlets throughout the home. They're easily overlooked, but outlets, particularly those outside the kitchen, tend to be close to the floor. AARP notes that's no accident, as outlets are generally placed at a height equal to the length of a hammer to save time with measuring when buildings are being constructed. Outlets close to the floor can be difficult for seniors with mobility issues to reach. Relocating the outlets a little higher off the floor can make a home more accessible for seniors who have difficulty bending or getting down on one knee.

- Renovate the bathroom. Seniors with mobility issues should know that bathrooms can pose a particularly dangerous threat. The Centers for Disease Control note that roughly 3 million older adults are treated for fall injuries in emergency departments each year. Replacing a step-over shower with a zero-step alternative can reduce the risk for falls, as can walk-in tubs. Grab bars along shower or bath walls and a chair inside the shower can make it easier to bathe and towel off safely.

Redziniak has consulted with homeowners over countless bathroom remodels of all kinds. Discussing needs and objectives is the first step.

On the do-it-yourself side, easy adjustments like non-slip safety mats inside and outside of tubs and showers can ensure safe footing when bathing. Be cautious of decorative rugs that can be trip hazards and look for any floor coverings that provide slip-free top surfaces and undersides.

- Safety-proof the kitchen space. A lot of time may be spent in the kitchen. The fact that water is used in food preparation and cleanup can mean spills that lead to falls. A well-adhered slip free sink mat or full-floor rug can absorb the occasional water droplets and protect seniors from slipping on slick flooring. Be sure all edges and corners are securely attached to the floor with carpet tape or velcro.

Seniors with memory issues should refrain from using ovens and burners. It's best to get some help with meals if there is any danger present for an elderly person to use sharp tools or heat sources.

There are many more options for prepared meal delivery than ever before — from Meals on Wheels to Door Dash, Uber Eats and meal plans like Home Chef or Hello Fresh — and they are well worth the price for seniors who have the means and wish to remain independently in their homes.

- Revamp entryways and staircases. Many seniors struggle with activities like walking up stairs. A recent study by Total Fitness found that 14 percent of men and women over 65 who regularly engage in moderate exercise still find it challenging to climb up and down a flight of stairs. Seniors facing similar challenges can install a ramp at their home's outdoor entryway so they can comfortably go in and out, whether walking upright or in a wheelchair.

Inside, a chair lift can ensure seniors are not struggling to move from one floor to another in homes graced with stairs. There are many types to choose from — and lifts can be customized to ensure that it blends nicely with the existing architecture and decor, from various levels to winding staircases. Forbes recommends Handicare chairs from Lifetime Mobility.

A lot of hard work and love goes into home ownership, and people who have lived in the same space for a while undoubtedly have countless memories within the walls of their homes. Seniors with mobility issues can make their homes more accommodating through an assortment of simple, yet effective renovations so they can enjoy their beloved homes for years to come.

For your accessibility needs, Red Baron Enterprises is experienced in customizing homes, including performing improvements for those with mobility issues. For more information, contact Red Baron Enterprises at (313) 408-1166 or visit redbaronenterprises.com.

A zero-step walk-in shower, above, provides easy access for seniors who have difficulty with knees or hips. The flat entry and seating accommodate mobility issues.

An enclosed shower area with toilet or bidet seating is another option for seniors who have difficulty standing throughout a shower.

Senior Expo returns to Assumption Oct. 17

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

The 2024 Senior Expo, hosted by Assumption Cultural Center, promises a wealth of information for older adults, including 55 vendors representing all service areas of interest to the aging population.

Seniors are invited to learn about the latest and greatest in healthcare, finances, fitness and more during the expo, which takes place 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 17, at Assumption, 21800 Marter, St. Clair Shores.

"It's an amazing event — a well-attended, amazing day for the seniors, the vendors and the speakers," said Terri Murphy, chairwoman of the Senior Expo Committee. "It's always a huge success — lots of energy, lots of happy seniors, vendors and nonprofits. Everybody gets a lot out of it."

"We are always honored to host Senior Expo," said Joan De Ronne, Assumption Cultural Center administrator. "It is an annual gathering of every sector of the community to honor and focus on our extraordinary senior population. It is a celebration with so many exciting offerings and exhibits going on. And our special guests take time to make the day even more memorable."

Among this year's special guests is keynote speaker WDIV-TV anchor Devin Scillian.

Devin Scillian has shared his career with us at previous expos and is back by demand with his great group, Arizona Son," De Ronne said.

Added Murphy, "He was so popular last year. He's so enthusiastic about coming and speaking. He brings so much enthusiasm and energy to the event."

After his keynote address, Scillian will perform with Arizona Son, during a luncheon sponsored by Henry Ford Health. The concert is sponsored by A.H. Peters Funeral Home.

"This is one of the few expos that gives a free lunch," Murphy said. "Henry Ford graciously for the last few years has stepped up and sponsored it. And there's lots of giveaways in the vendor room. Our vendors are very generous."

The Senior Expo Committee has been working out the details since the start of the year. Those details include a variety of exhibitors offering giveaways and information about healthcare, recreation, self-improvement, retail products, managed care, physical training, financial and legal advice.

Workshops include "Food is Medicine," "Ask the Elder Law Attorney," "Medicare Counseling," "Ask the Physician" and more.

Onsite health screenings include spine evaluations, blood pressure checks, knee pain/arthritis/physical therapy screenings, mini chair massages and other screenings.

"The health screenings are really good," Murphy noted. "People may not always check these things, so this is a good spot to check on your health through screenings."

A community resource center includes useful information about the VA, Medicare and other organizations.

The Courtyard Senior Super Tent, sponsored by The Rivers, includes exercise and fitness evaluations, balance and fall risk assessments, recumbent bikes and other activities.

"There will be an arts-and-crafts person passing out crafts for seniors, too," Murphy said. "The day goes quickly, because there's so much to offer in that period of time."

Attendees are presented a "passport," which explains the itinerary for the day, she added.

"It allows them to see what's going on, at what times. There's a map, because it's a big venue. It will help people navigate the venue and know what's going on."

Attendees also will receive a resource guide, which serves as a valuable reference of services available throughout the metro area.

"You may not need it today, or your loved one might not need it today, but you will walk away with a resource guide that has not only our current vendors, but it's a guide that people go back to all year to look for services — home care, assisted living, hospitals, nonprofit organizations, support groups," Murphy said. "The resources you'll pick up from the vendors through the event are great, but we also send you home with this guide."

The guide was developed by seniors, but a place where people who work with the aging population can network and learn from each other.

Though the event officially kicks off at 8:30 a.m., Murphy said doors will open around 8:15 a.m.

"People line up early, but they don't need to," she said. "There's plenty of room."

However, she added, as more than 1,500 seniors are expected to attend, the parking lot at Assumption does get full, so she suggested people take advantage of free shuttle service courtesy of Cranberry Park/ShorePointe Village, Hope Senior Home Care, Corewell Health, Harper Chiropractic Center and American House Lakeshore.

"We bring in new members from time to time to get fresh ideas," Murphy said. "It's a great committee — they work hard. Everybody puts so much time and effort in."

"... It's a fabulous day of fun and resources to use now or just to know about for the future."

Added De Ronne, "Don't miss it."

St. Nicholas Christmas

EVENT

Disbelief is a common emotion felt by parents as they are told their newborn has failed their hearing screening. As 95% of deaf children are born to hearing parents, many parents struggle at first with the unknown of what the future may bring for their child.

Rounding out its thirty-first year of serving Deaf and Hard of Hearing children and families, the Holley Institute at St. John Hospital is well equipped to help parents who feel this way. The Holley Institute is a nonprofit whose mission is to provide life-enhancing programs for those experiencing hearing loss, vision loss or deafness.

The St. Nicholas Christmas Event will be hosted on Saturday, November 30th at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and we are counting on your support to raise critical funds for children and families who need the high-quality programs offered by the Holley Institute. We hope to see you at the event as we come together as a community to show our support to those who need it most. We assure you, your gift large or small, will make a tremendous impact in the lives of Deaf and Hard of Hearing children in a world that all too often forgets their unique needs.

Thank you for your consideration,

Second Time Around

By Margie Reins Smith

Hanging out with Tom

A couple of years ago, while we were deep into that seemingly endless COVID quarantine, I questioned myself.

"Self," I asked, "if I were quarantined for several months, but could choose one person, living or dead, to be with me in the quarantine, who would I choose? Family members excluded."

My first choice would be Thomas Jefferson. Second choice: Steve Allen. Third choice: Orson Bean.

I'd want to be sequestered with Thomas Jefferson or Steve Allen because they were polymaths.

"Wait a minute," you say. "Who the heck is Orson Bean?"

First, the polymaths:

A polymath is a person who is interested in an infinite range of topics and wants to learn more about everything. Leonardo Da Vinci was one. Benjamin Franklin was another one.

Jefferson studied astronomy, mathematics, architecture, music, horticulture, anatomy, civil engineering, physics, botany, French cuisine, wine-making and paleontology (before the term was even invented) and more. He could read and write Greek, Latin, French, Spanish and Italian.

He invented things. He conceived a new kind of plow that could be used on hills. He invented the dumbwaiter, a calendar clock and a polygraph that could make copies of documents. He played the violin. He was one of the first farmers to practice crop rotation. He collected books and was up to 6,487 volumes by 1814, when the Library of Congress purchased the whole shebang.

He grew 330 different kinds of vegetables and 170 different species of fruit in his gardens at Monticello. He was the author of the Declaration of Independence and the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom. He designed Monticello, his beloved home; the Virginia State capitol; and the University of Virginia's rotunda.

Besides all these topics to talk about and learn about while sequestered with Tom (surely, we'd be on a first name basis if we were quarantined for such a stretch) ... from what I've seen of the portraits painted during his lifetime, I think he was a pretty good-looking dude as well. That would be a plus.

Steve Allen also was a polymath. Not only was he a well-known comedian, he pioneered a new idea for television programming — the late-night talk show. He hosted "The Tonight Show" beginning in 1956. The concept caught on and is still going strong in a dozen variations more than six decades later.

He was known for ad-libbed off-the-cuff humorous banter with his guests and for recurring comedy skits. Remember the man-on-the-street interviews with Don Knotts and Louis Nye?

Allen played the piano and composed some 8,500 songs, including "The Gravy Waltz," "This Could be the Start of Something Big" and the theme music from the movie "Picnic."

He acted. He played Benny in "The Benny Goodman Story." He wrote 50 books on topics ranging from politics to who-done-it mysteries to a cookbook for cats. He also had a highly infectious laugh. I would like to be stuck in a long quarantine with Steve Allen. Laughing myself silly.

I'd like to be sequestered with Orson Bean because he was witty and funny and interesting and a terrific storyteller. He was a comedian; an actor on TV and on the stage in the '60s, '70s and '80s; a writer and producer; a game show participant and host; a raconteur; and probably the wittiest TV personality I can think of. Some may remember his long stint as a panelist on "To Tell the Truth."

Orson Bean had a witty answer, a humorous story or an original anecdote for just about any topic that came up. He was refreshing. Original. If I were stuck with him for six weeks, I'd have a constant cramp in my side from laughing.

Thomas Jefferson, the third president of the United States, is still my favorite, however. John F. Kennedy once invited a group of Nobel laureates to a dinner at the White House.

"This is probably the greatest gathering of intellect here in the White House," Kennedy said, "— since Thomas Jefferson dined here, alone."

Farms orthopedic surgeon celebrates 100

Longtime Farms resident Dr. L. Carl Sultzman celebrated his 100th birthday Saturday, Sept. 7, with 65 of his closest family and friends.

"He smiled the whole time, from before the party until after the party," his daughter, Marjorie Sultzman, said. "He said he intends to be here for 10 more years."

Carl Sultzman was born in Hannibal, Mo., in 1924, and moved to Michigan for his residency before settling in Grosse Pointe Farms in 1962, where he still resides.

As an orthopedic surgeon, he was chief of surgery at Saratoga Hospital and pioneered arthroscopic knee surgery for Detroit firefighters and police officers in the '70s.

"At Harper, Children's, Saratoga and Cottage hospitals, my father always took the stairs and he skied regularly until 2018, at the age of 93," Marjorie Sultzman said. "He ate very well because my mom (Frances Sultzman) was a dietitian and they were married for 45 years."

Carl Sultzman has six children — Betsy Veillon, Chuck Sultzman (Sharron), Marjorie Sultzman, Nancy Sutton, Carl Sultzman (Irene) and David

Sultzman (Linda) — 14 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by his daughter, Marilyn Masurat.

Alongside Sultzman's love for skiing with his family and the Grosse Pointe Ski Club, he also loves to travel. He has been to six continents and currently is planning a winter trip to Key West.

"He's just been an awesome father with a very personal, great bedside manner of a doctor," Marjorie Sultzman said.

— Laurel Kraus

Sultzman met his great-great-granddaughter, Sonora Kay Marcalow, from Gill, Mass., during the party.

Harper Woods appoints trustee to GPPL board

The city of Harper Woods appointed Greg Bowens to serve as its representative on the Grosse Pointe Library Board of Trustees. He was sworn in at the Sept. 26 board meeting at the library's Woods branch. Bowens replaces George LaPastora, who resigned from the library board when he moved out of Harper Woods.

Bowens was Detroit Mayor Dennis W. Archer's press secretary and now owns Bowens & Co. He's the founder, past president and current executive board member of the Grosse Pointes & Harper Woods NAACP Branch. A U.S. Navy veteran, he attended Morehouse College and received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English from Wayne State University.

The next Fall Garden Work Day takes place 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Oct. 12. Volunteers are asked to meet in front of Mt. Pleasant Missionary Baptist Church, 21150 Moross.

Typically volunteers are asked to bring their own work gloves and dress for the weather. Boots are recommended, as the islands could be wet this time of year.

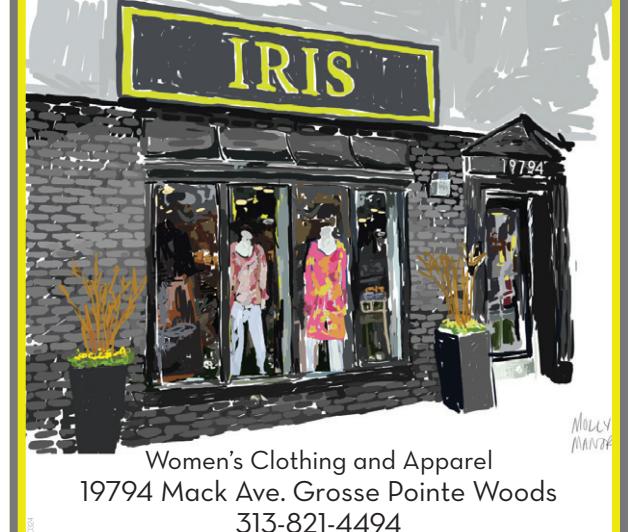

"We get a pretty decent turnout," Garrett said, noting the Moross Greenway Project provides trash bags, safety vests, water and other supplies for volunteers.

Board members will be on hand to guide volunteers and answer questions.

"We would love more support," Garrett noted. "Aside from the art, we maintain and do plantings and do garden bed maintenance, cutting the lawn. All of it is done with donated money."

"We'll take donations wherever we can get them," he added. "Every penny donated goes directly into the project; there are no overhead expenses."

Chris Gentile

Christopher Gentile, 83, of Grosse Pointe Farms, passed away peacefully Monday, Sept. 23, 2024, with his family at his side.

Chris Gentile

Chris is lovingly remembered by his wife, Cecilia Palen; her daughter and grandson, Christina Danieli and Andrew Harmon; his daughter and son, Christine Kline and Michael Gentile; his daughter-in-law, Nadia Tremonti; son-in-law, Ken Kline; grandchildren, Jack Kline, Lilly Kline, Andrew Kline, Zaira Gentile and Carina Gentile; brother, Jon Gentile; sister-in-law, Janice Gentile; niece, Gloria Gentile; and grand-niece, Angelica Gentile. Chris was predeceased by his parents, Lorenzo and Betty Gentile; as well as his brother and sister, Jeffrey and Michelle Gentile.

Chris was born Feb. 18, 1941. He loved his family and especially his six grandchildren. He also loved photography, running, racquetball, golf and skiing. He was a member of the Ford Thunderbirds Ski Club.

In later years he enjoyed feather bowling as a member of the Cadieux Café feather bowling league.

Raised in Grosse Pointe Farms as the oldest of three siblings, Chris graduated from Austin Catholic Preparatory in 1959, and from John Carroll University in 1963.

The son of radio personality Larry Gentile, Chris' wit and charm led him to a long career in advertising and marketing at Young & Rubicam. Working closely with automotive dealers in the Detroit area and across the country, he developed trusting connections and strong relationships with his clients. All through this time, Chris' passion for new technologies, computers and innovations of any kind kept him on the leading edge of the industry for more than 30 years.

Frances Mary Fredal

A celebration of Chris' life will be held at 9:30 a.m. Friday, Oct. 4, at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, 157 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, followed by lunch at noon at the Cadieux Cafe, 4300 Cadieux, Detroit.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Chris' memory may be made to Special Olympics of Michigan, bit.ly/3N8jZdL.

(Ann LaCroix), Susan Tuinier (William) and Patricia Fredal (Gianluigi Visentin). She was predeceased by her daughter, Diane Colquhoun (Jeffrey) and was a nurturing grandmother to 15 grandchildren: Katherine, David, Rebecca, Thomas, Charles, Joseph, Madeleine, Michael, Peter, Tessa, Christiane, Gillian, Brigitte, Tommaso and Isabella; as well as five great-grandchildren: Elizabeth, Callie Rose, Lucas, Owen and baby Lucy Lou, whom she now cradles in heaven. Frances also is survived by her sisters, Norma Burnham and Dorothy Bloomhuff.

Born April 3, 1930, in Detroit, to Alice and Eugene Arditto, humble immigrants from northern Italy, Frances grew up in Grosse Pointe the middle of three sisters. She learned old-world skills from her beloved mother and became the creative force behind countless projects, from hand-smocked baptismal gowns, high school musical costumes and bridesmaid dresses to knit Christmas stockings, canned tomatoes and chocolate-dipped macaroons.

Frances attended St. Clare de Montefalco Grade School and graduated from St. Paul on the Lake High School in 1948, where she shined athletically on the girl's varsity basketball team, was elected class secretary and crowned "Queen of the White and Blue Ball." While studying dental hygiene at the University of Detroit Jesuit, she met Joe Fredal, a dental student, who swept her off her feet at the spring dance, serenading her as a pianist and singer. They married one year later at St. Clare de Montefalco.

Fran and Joe ventured to rural Utica to start a family and dental practice, sharing the dream of bringing state-of-the-art care to the community. With lives anchored in Christ, they raised six children in a lively home on picturesque Cottontail Lane in Shelby Township. As the North Star of their family life, Fran filled the home with laughter and tradition, in a kitchen that never lost its warmth or ancestral flavors. As her children grew and left the nest, she returned to work alongside Joe as his dental hygienist for an additional 10 years.

A woman of great independence, she pursued her own personal intellectual and physical growth throughout her life. She faced challenges with determination and grace, always exploring new ideas and encouraging a love of reading. Some of her best friends included authors she met through their works, such as A.A. Milne, Pascal, Joseph Pearce, Solzhenitsyn and J.R.R. Tolkien. Fran's determination to stay active was unwavering. She played pickleball with enthusiasm well into her 80s and continued her daily walks through the neighborhood and along the shores of Lake Michigan.

To her grandchildren, Fran was the stylish, indulgent and technologically savvy Grammy who made Christmas magical and offered guidance through both the joys and demands of life. She cherished hosting family visits up north at the home she and Joe built on Grand Traverse Bay, where memories of evening bonfires, Lake Michigan sunsets and Petoskey stone hunting were made.

In her marriage to Joe, the two truly became one. After his passing, Fran carried on patiently for 24 years, knowing her purpose was not yet fulfilled. Her life was one of service and kindness. Returning to Grosse Pointe to be closer to her children and sisters, she found joy in becoming a devout member of St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, volunteered at Bon Secours Hospital, connected with the St. Paul Widows Group, rekindled old friendships and forged new ones. Her family says, "Mom, we love you and we will miss you dearly."

Above all, Frances was a woman of reverence who loved her Catholic faith and the inexhaustible ways it led her to Christ. Most of all, she loved His gift of the Eucharist.

Visitation will occur from 4:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 3, with a 4:30 p.m. Rosary, at Verheyden Funeral Home, 16300 Mack, Grosse Pointe Park. A funeral Mass will be held at noon Friday, Oct. 4, at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, 157 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in memory of Frances to the Solanus Casey Center and Guild, solanuscasey.org/donation/, or the Capuchin Soup Kitchen in Detroit, cskdetroit.org/more-than-about-food.

spelling "Acidman" across the front of it.

Their initial meeting is rather cold, not the emotional hugs and kisses one would expect from such a reunion. As it turns out, Lloyd is a mad genius who's lived alone with his beloved dog Migo for years. He greets his daughter with cool indifference and the stoicism remains for the length of her visit. He spends his days creating loud, throbbing techno music with his synthesizer and found objects. In the evenings he searches the sky for aliens, who he's convinced have been communicating with him. Lloyd is known in town as a crank, which explains why some hooligans felt compelled to spray "Acidman" on the side of his abode.

"Acidman" is listed as a science fiction film but I think that's a bit misleading. If it were up to me, I'd title it "Contact. (Sort of)." Fortunately, wiser heads in Hollywood prevailed and it goes by its more apt name.

When I say it's not a true sci-fi flick, I mean there are no actual aliens, no rocket ships, and no epic space battles on distant galaxies. The entire film takes place on Planet Earth, and that's a good thing. "Acidman" was co-written by Alex Lehmann and Chris Dowling and was directed by Lehmann. Like a couple of his other significant films "Paddleton" and "Meet Cute," it focuses on the two lead characters, who are on screen for roughly 90 percent of the time.

The movie stars Dianna Agron and Thomas Haden Church. I'm not familiar with Ms. Agron but I've seen and enjoyed Church in a number of films where he played supporting roles. This is his first lead and he delivers an award-worthy performance. It promises to be his breakout role and I look forward to seeing a lot more of him in the very near future.

Maggie (Agron) is a 30-something engineer who's decided to pay a visit to her estranged father Lloyd (Church). She hasn't been in contact with him since she was a young girl and it took a great deal of effort to locate him. We learn that Lloyd walked out on her, her brother and mother years ago and is now living off the grid.

Lloyd makes a beat-up shack his home and it's a bit of a surprise when Maggie pulls up in front of it. It looks like something from rural Appalachia and she's amused to find graffiti up the night sky.

It's an exciting and joyful moment that put a big grin on my puss!

This movie is unlike anything I've seen before. It's definitely what I would call nuanced. Don't expect a lot of action, just a great deal of measured and meaningful dialogue. I like to call this type of film a "talkie." It's another one of those films you feel compelled to watch a second time, right after the closing credits. As a bonus, the scenery is stunning. I suspect it was filmed in the Pacific Northwest.

Note to parents: About the only thing objectionable in the movie is a bit of swearing. So while it's unrated, I'd probably give it a PG-13.

Currently streaming for free on Kanopy with your library card. Also on Tubi, Plex, Pluto TV, The Roku Channel, and other services.

My rating system:

★ A real stinker. A movie that is so bad, you're embarrassed to admit you've seen it, but you have to rate it nonetheless.

★★ So-so. Not a total waste of time, but you would have been better off reading a good book.

★★★ Pretty good. In fact, if there weren't any other movies in your queue, you might watch it again.

★★★★ One you'd recommend to friends.

★★★★★ So good you'd actually go out and buy it!

If you're looking for something more refreshing and not so caffeinated, try an Italian soda, which come in flavors such as prickly pear, huckleberry and ginger lemongrass, as well as classics like grape, raspberry, strawberry, lemon and lime. Some of the most popular sodas are sugar-free lavender, peach and pomegranate with lime.

Personally, this soup girl loves that roasted poblano.

Every morning, Jack hops on their Facebook page to post the daily soups and any seasonal specials they may be offering. Their Lent specials are some of my favorites. Mmmm ... crab cakes!

With plenty of seating inside and out on the patio during the warm season, they go out of their way to make sure their cozy cafe has a theme with its Christmas tree, which features continuously changing decorations throughout the year. And, during the Christmas season, Karen's crafts make for some excellent gift-giving ideas. Where this woman finds the time I have no idea, but her talents exceed the kitchen.

Sanitation is the one constant in the lives of all winemakers. Growing grapes and making wine are both remarkably grimy occupations that call for attention to details that go down to microbial levels.

The universal mandate is to keep the winery and all equipment operating-room immaculate. Nothing can ruin a wine faster than a tiny bit of spoilage. An entire year can be wrecked by a failure to keep everything free of microbes.

None of this is romantic. Indeed, little of the winemaking process is Opening lead — king of clubs.

When there are two playable trump suits, it is certainly normal to select the one with the greater number of cards in it. To outnumber the opponents in trump by the largest possible margin is surely a reasonable aim, but there are occasions when it is better not to do so.

Today's deal from a national pair championship provides an example.

A slam was reached at more than half the tables, but whether it was made depended on whether the contract was six hearts or six diamonds.

Those pairs who got to six hearts had no chance. They had to lose a spade and a club and go down one. The temptation to play in six hearts (worth 1,430 points) rather than six diamonds (worth 1,370 points) proved irresistible to these pairs, and they paid a heavy penalty for their greed. But those who opted for six diamonds — on the sequence shown or one similar to it — were well-rewarded.

Making six diamonds was no problem. With 11 tricks to start, all declarer had to do was to ruff a club in dummy to produce a 12th trick.

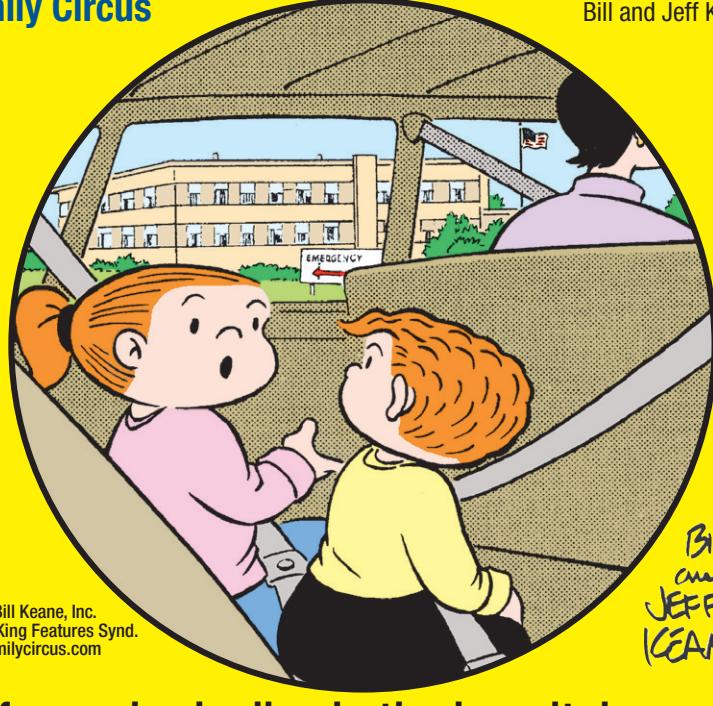

This extra trick was not available to the pairs who played the hand in hearts. The trump suit with nine cards in the combined hands thus did not prove as propitious as the trump suit with only eight cards.

There is nothing extraordinary about this, as it is axiomatic that hands with a 4-4 trump fit are generally more productive than those that offer a choice of an alternative 6-3, 5-3 or 5-4 trump fit. One frequently gains a trick by playing in the 4-4 fit.

Blue Devils keep rolling with key win over Roseville

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

If it wanted to be in the best position to win yet another MAC White Division championship, the Grosse Pointe South varsity football team knew last Friday night's game against Roseville would be key. The Blue Devils hosted the Panthers Sept. 27, and got a crucial victory that may help them secure a division title, taking down Roseville 38-21.

"The best practice always comes in a game," South football head coach Chad Hepner said after the victory. "We're going to come out of this game as a better football team just from having gone up against them and having that type of adversity and talent on the other side of the ball. It can certainly start some momentum, but that's kind of been building already all season long."

While the teams combined for nearly 60 points at the end of the night, there were zero points scored in the first quarter as the defenses seemed to prevail early on. It was not until early in the second quarter when the scoreboard moved, seeing South take a 7-0 lead on a touchdown pass from Jack Lupo to Sam Rouleau.

After the Blue Devils scored the first points of the night, Roseville answered back. The Panthers pounded the ball down the field on a drive largely led by the legs of senior running back and University of Illinois commit Desmond Straughton, who found the end zone at the end of the drive. A two-point conversion put Roseville on top 8-7. South got a field goal with just over a minute remaining in the half to go up 10-8 going into halftime.

South was able to build on that small lead during its first drive of the second half when a rushing touchdown by Lupo made it 17-8 in favor of the Blue Devils. Roseville answered with back-to-back touchdowns of its own, both rushing scores by Straughton, which helped the Panthers take back the lead and go into the fourth quarter in front 21-17.

When it looked like the momentum favored Roseville, South did not back down. The Blue Devils regained the lead with just under nine minutes remaining on a touchdown pass from Lupo to James Michelotti. South's defense was able to keep the Panthers at bay in the final quarter and the heroics of senior Lex Willson helped the Blue Devils secure the win.

Willson punched it into the end zone on the ground with about six minutes to go for a score that made South's lead 31-21. South got the ball back in the final two minutes with the lead and, while searching for a first down to salt away the game, Willson found a hole and ran 60 yards to the end zone to cap off the 38-21 win.

Sarah Koval has been running as long as she can remember. The Grosse Pointe South senior is now a captain of the girls varsity cross-country team with which she has spent her entire high school career and is in the process of collecting some of her best results yet, finding success in a sport and way of life that runs in the family.

"My mom had always been into running and I was always into it with her and going on runs with her," Koval said. "In middle school, I was more into basketball. Once high school started, I decided to get back into (running) my freshman year and since then I've just never done anything else."

Defense helps carry North to victory over Woods-Tower

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

The Grosse Pointe North varsity football team hoped that getting its first win of the season, a 42-0 victory against Sterling Heights in Week 4, would give it some much-needed momentum going into Week 5. The Norsemen's Week 5 matchup saw them facing Warren Woods-Tower on Saturday, Sept. 28, and they were able to pick up another MAC Gold Division win by taking down the Titans 35-12.

Of the five touchdowns the Norsemen scored in the game, three of them came either from the defense or special teams. The first defensive score resulted in the first points of the game, with sophomore Peter Rheaume intercepting a Titans pass and taking it to the end zone to put North up 7-0.

"The defense finally played like we had expected them to play this season," North football head coach Joe Drouin said. "...We had great defensive practices all week, and I think it showed in the way the game went... That's the way we expected the defense to play all season, and I think they've finally started to settle in."

Woods-Tower scored a touchdown on its next drive, but a missed extra point attempt helped the Norsemen stay up 7-6 at the end of the first quarter.

North built on its lead in the second quarter, this time with a touchdown on special teams. As the Titans attempted to punt, they fumbled the snap and the ball was recovered by North's James Shefferly and taken to the end zone. That made it 14-6 in favor of North and that remained the score going into the halftime break.

The Norsemen got their first offensive touchdown of the day in the third quarter. Deon Doe connected with Dayton Doe for a touchdown pass that made it a 21-6 lead for North going into the final frame.

Defense and special teams continued to be the name of the game for the Norsemen as they looked to seal the win in the fourth quarter. Leo Perettie returned a punt for a touchdown to extend North's lead to 28-6. Later in the final quarter, a Dayton Doe interception return for a touchdown helped the Norsemen put the game away. Already down 35-6, a late touchdown for Woods-Tower only made the deficit slightly smaller, but North already secured the win.

"We're still having our growing pains," Drouin said. "...There's still the feeling that the ship is not righted yet. We want to win the Gold...I tell the kids to have the Tiger mentality. The Tigers don't want to lose and we need to show that Tiger grit."

The win brought the Norsemen's record so far this season to 2-3 overall and 2-1 in MAC Gold Division play. North is back on the road in Week 6 for another division game as the team visits Lake Shore High School. That game is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 4, at Lake Shore.

Liggett soccer falls short against Shrine

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

The University Liggett School varsity boys soccer team entered its match Thursday, Sept. 26, against Shrine Catholic having only one blemish on its record this season. The match, which had implications for who could make it to the CHSL Cardinal Division championship, was heated and tightly contested. However, Shrine prevailed in the end by a slim 2-1 margin.

"It's hard to create a playoff environment

before the playoffs start, but I think we kind of got a taste of it," Liggett boys soccer coach David

Dwaihy said. "...In the last few years, we've been on the winning side

in a lot of those games in the regular season and don't have much experience when we're in a tight game in the playoffs. It's hard to manufacture that type of preparation, so even though we lost, I felt like it was a good loss."

Liggett's only goal of the game also was the first goal of the game. Michael Darlington scored for Liggett in the game's 16th minute to put the team ahead 1-0. Shrine answered back quickly, scoring in the 18th minute to tie the game at 1-1. The score remained deadlocked going into halftime.

As the second half started with the teams still at a stalemate, eventually one had to break through. It ended up being Shrine, who scored again in the 58th minute to take the lead 2-1.

Shrine's defense remained stout for the next 20-plus minutes until the end of the game. Liggett had several chances to even the game after going down, but Shrine was able to hold off the Knights until the final horn sounded.

The loss brought Liggett's record this fall to 9-2-2 with just a couple of weeks remaining in the regular season. The Knights hosted Detroit Western Monday, Sept. 30, and were able to win 4-0.

The team is back in action next week as it travels on the road to face Orchard Lake St. Mary's Monday, Oct. 7. That game is scheduled to kick off at 6 p.m.

North tennis looks to maintain momentum from MAC championship run

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

Grosse Pointe North varsity boys tennis has always been a proud program, but there were feelings the past couple of decades about a standard of success for which the Norsemen were still striving. One of the main goals in reaching that next level, the Norsemen saw, was winning an outright MAC Red Division championship, a feat the team finally achieved this fall.

"When we beat Romeo the week before, we knew we had guaranteed ourselves at least a share of the title," North boys tennis head coach John VanAlst said about the team going into its division-clinching match Sept. 16. "... One of our goals was also to beat Grosse Pointe South. We were warming up and everyone felt confident. They weren't nervous and it was really exciting as a coach to see. We had a couple of early wins and then South got some wins. There were three singles matches that all went to three sets. The energy was really exciting."

Sept. 16, the Norsemen faced off against cross-town rival Grosse Pointe South. The match came down to singles matches, with South's Matthew Holowinski being victorious in No. 1 singles, but North getting a win in No. 2 singles with Troy Lipscomb.

The match ultimately ended in a 4-4 draw, which was not quite the result North was looking for against its rival. However, the realization that a draw clinched the team's first outright division title in three decades was more than enough to lift spirits.

"The kids were super pumped even though they were a little disappointed that we only tied South, but it didn't get lost on them that we did earn the title outright," VanAlst said. "It was a great day, even with a little bittersweet ending, but it was a fantastic day for the Norsemen."

According to VanAlst and his coaching staff, the last time it is on record that the Norsemen won the division outright was 1994. Playing a big role in getting North to its long-awaited goal has been the veteran leadership of the team.

A majority of North's

"We have seven seniors and all have really stepped up their game and are having fantastic seasons," VanAlst said. "They're getting the job done on the court. Off the court and in practice, these guys are pushing each other. They're getting extra hits outside of practice. We practice six days a week and they're still out getting hits outside of practice and matches, so it's really setting the tone for these underclassmen."

The Norsemen are happy with how the veteran leadership has been paving the way for the underclassmen who soon will take over some of the top spots on the team. One of them is freshman Ajay Sarnaik, who has particularly impressed his teammates and coaches with his growth and ability throughout the season.

"At the beginning of the season, he was a little bit intimidated and overwhelmed," VanAlst said about the freshman.

"Now, he's found his game and his confidence. He's got his rhythm going and is doing everything a coach could ask for with his growth as a player."

The division championship is now in the rearview mirror, and North is looking ahead to finishing out the final stretch of the season strong. The team secured an 8-0 victory over Dakota last Thursday, Sept. 26, but fell 7-1 against Birmingham Seaholm on Monday, Sept. 30.

The big focus now is competing strong at regionals, which North hosts Wednesday, Oct. 9, and hopefully making it to the state finals. With spirits high all fall and having their names at the top of the MAC, everyone at North feels like the momentum is not stopping.

"Once we put that MAC Red behind us and just start riding the wave ... I feel good about going into the regional in a couple of weeks," VanAlst said.

Knights clinch CHSL title in shootout victory over Marian

The University Liggett School varsity field hockey team faced off against Marian last Friday, Sept. 27, in a game to decide the Catholic League championship. The Knights emerged with the CHSL title, taking a thrilling 4-3 victory over Marian in a shootout. Constantina Bournias, Avery Welsh, Maisy Huebner and Ally Orlick all scored for the Knights, while Elizabeth Dickey's performance in net helped the team secure a victory.

"Going into the game, I kept telling the girls to remember how we are a much stronger team now than we were when we played them in August," Liggett field hockey coach Amanda Amine said. "...We're playing our best field hockey of the season heading into October and the state tournament, so I am looking forward to seeing what else this group can accomplish."

The varsity field hockey teams from Grosse Pointe South and Grosse Pointe North faced off last Tuesday, Sept. 24, in their annual Stick It To Cancer Charity Game. The Blue Devils ended up victorious 3-0 in last Tuesday's game with two goals by Scout Webber and one by Andee Baker.

but even with the freshman coming in this year, we've created special bonds," she said. "We warm up together and talk about their day and how they're doing in school. The people that I run with during meets, we always talk before the race and get each other pumped up."

That bond goes beyond Koval and her fellow runners. It also extends to the coaching staff, led by head coach Steven Zaraneck, who Koval believes has provided the best leaders and mentors she could have asked for.

"Coach Z especially has helped me learn so much as a human outside of running and just being a good person overall," Koval said. "... Coach Louise (Davey) is always helping me with personal things and friends and she's always there. Coach Mac (Shawn McNamara), I love going to him for anything about stretching or injuries. He's the perfect person to go to."

Koval's leadership and dedication to the team is not lost on her coaches either. As the Blue Devils strive to continue collecting trophies and eventually compete for regional and state championships later in the season, those at the helm of the program for South are confident Koval will continue to lead the way.

"Sarah, over her four years at South, has developed into an exceptional talent," Zaraneck said. "More importantly, she adopted our system of team first since her freshman year. She is a superb team leader showing, through example, that hard work pays off, doing everything properly is important and that supporting her teammates comes above all else."

Wolverines survive late scare from rival Minnesota

By Mike Adzima

Sports Reporter

No matter how teams seem to have been performing lately, a special atmosphere surrounds a rivalry game in college football. That atmosphere was present even on a rainy day in Ann Arbor Saturday, Sept. 28, for the 106th meeting between the University of Michigan and the University of Minnesota.

The Wolverines entered the game riding high off of a thrilling win over USC the week before, while Minnesota was looking to bounce back following a loss to Iowa. The Golden Gophers nearly pulled off the upset, giving Michigan a slight scare in the second half with an attempted comeback, but the Wolverines still managed to come away with a 27-24 win to retain the Little Brown Jug Trophy.

"It was a tale of two halves," Michigan head coach Sherrone Moore said. "We played really well in the first half and not as well in the second half. ... We didn't execute at the level we needed to."

The first half was indeed all Michigan. Kalel Mullings started things in the first quarter with a 27-yard touchdown run, a fitting follow-up to his breakout game against the Trojans a week before. Mullings helped put the Wolverines up 14-0 in the second quarter with another rushing score.

Michigan continued to pull ahead in the first half, taking a 21-0 lead on a touchdown pass from Alex Orji to Tyler Morris. Minnesota's only points of the first half came in the final seconds before halftime, when a long passing play set up the Gophers in position for a chip-shot field goal, making it 21-3 at the break.

That end of the first half was almost an indication of how the second half would swing to favor Minnesota. Michigan added three more to its lead with a field goal to open the third quarter, but then the Gophers began to storm back in the final frame.

Minnesota's comeback attempt was led by sophomore running back and Detroit native Darius Taylor, who scored Minnesota's first touchdown of the day early in the fourth quarter, making it 24-10 still in favor of Michigan.

The Gophers' defense then forced Michigan to punt and a 60-yard return for Minnesota helped set up another Taylor touchdown to make it a one-score game. Michigan added another field goal to extend its lead to 10 points, 27-17, but Minnesota was not ready to lie down yet.

Gophers quarterback Max Brosner led the charge down field in a drive that ended in a 12-yard touchdown pass to Daniel Jackson to get Minnesota within three points. However, an unsuccessful on-side kick attempt for the Gophers gave the ball back to Michigan, allowing the Wolverines to run out the clock and end the game.

The win brings the Wolverines to 4-1 so far this season and 2-0 in Big Ten Conference play. Despite winning its last three games, Michigan still feels like there are plenty of questions surrounding the skill and potential of this year's team. A weak second half against Minnesota did not do much to provide answers.

"When you feel like you have a lead and you build on it and have momentum, then come out in the second half and let a couple of things get away from you, it just feels different," Moore said. "We got the win, but we're not happy and not satisfied with how we got the win."

After beginning the season with five consecutive games at home, the Wolverines venture away from Ann Arbor for their Week 6 matchup. In a rematch of the 2023 College Football Playoff National Championship Game, Michigan visits the University of Washington to take on the Huskies Saturday, Oct. 5. Kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. with the game being broadcast on NBC.
